"Will the workers of France consent much longer to be the instruments and the accomplices of the most sinister enterprise which any reactionary government was ever guilty of undertaking against the independence of the peoples?"

Five Thousand Socialist Locals to Unite in May Day Demands

(Special Correspondence)

Chicago, Ill.—Five thousand meetings—attended by at least 1,000,000 working men and women—on the same day, to help keep 'Gene Debs from going to prison for ten years!

This is the great undertaking planned for International May Day, May 1, by the national Socialist Party, that is meeting with a hearty response from the 100,000 dues paying members of the Socialist Party.

Great Machine on the Move.

"This is really the first time in the history of the Socialist Party of the United States that the entire organization has attempted to function on the same day for the same purpose," declares Alfred Wagenknecht, director of organization and propaganda in the National Office of the Socialist Party who is directing the effort.

"Every Socialist and every Socialist local will function in an organized way on this day. The great machinery of the Socialist movement will work in harmony everywhere, in response to the greatest appeal ever made to it. The struggle to keep Debs from going to prison is making history in the onward march of American socialism. The thought and energy of the party have been crystallized into united action by the great danger that threatens the movement's most beloved spokesman."

The official call for the meeting was sent out in 10,000 letters to Socialist locals and branches throughout the country. It was also published in 10,000 copies of The Bulletin, the official monthly publication of the party. Even the smallest and most obscure local is urged to hold a protest meeting.

"Under no consideration should you fail to hold a meeting," says the call, "even if it is only a meeting of the members of the party. Get a hall if you can, and in most instances you can. But if you cannot get a hall, then hold a meeting in the home of a comrade. Have a meeting, no matter where it is held. Have a meeting!"

The task of rallying at least 5,000 speakers for this day is one of the most stupendous problems the party has ever confronted. All of the nationally prominent Socialist speakers will be called upon, to be sure. But these will be supplemented by speakers at the command of state and local organizations. Every man or woman Socialist who can talk will be on the platform that day.

"In order to make every program a rousing success, however," announces Director Wagenknecht, "we are preparing and sending out a special program of speeches by convicted Socialists. These comrades cannot be present, of course, at these meetings, so some good reader among the local comrades will read the speeches."

Director Wagenknecht announces that such May Day speeches have already been secured from 'Gene Debs, Kate Richards O'Hare, Rose Pastor Stokes, Adolph Germer, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Kruse and Irwin St. John Tucker. Efforts are being made to get others. An attempt will also be made to get telegrams from Socialists already in prison. Amos L. Hitchcock, former Socialist member of the Cleveland, O., school board, in the Atlanta, Ga. prison; Emil Herman, member of the party national executive committee, in the McNeill's Island prison, Puget Sound, Washington., and J. O. Bentall, former candidate for governor of Minnesota, now in the Crow Wing, Minn., county jail.

Debs Makes Membership Appeal.

In addition to the speeches, telegrams and resolutions, it is planned to have an organization talk at every meeting, with a special appeal for membership. The special application blank provided for the occasion contains a plea from Debs, himself.

There will also be a special collection taken up, to be sent to the National Office of the party to meet the cost of an immense publicity campaign which is intended to play its part in releasing all political and industrial prisoners.

"If we are to be successful in gaining freedom for our comrades," declares Wagenknecht, "we must tell the world about the righteousness of our cause."

In order to give local publicity to the 5,000 meetings the National Office of the party is sending out tens of thousands of two different posters for local use.

One contains a big picture of Debs, while the feature of the other is a cartoon showing the necessity of organization to secure the release of the nation's political prisoners.

Millions of Debs' protest post cards are also being sent out for local use. These cards will be mailed to congressmen, newspapers, labor unions and also friends, relatives and shop mates of the writer. Each card carries the statement that, "Millions of these post cards are being mailed to millions of people by a million friends and comrades of Eugene V. Debs, Kate Richards O'Hare and others imprisoned and convicted for their war views."

"Those who are unable to attend any of these May 1 meetings should send a contribution direct to the National Office to help in this campaign" announced Director Wagenknecht. "Also send to the National Office for May 1 literature."

DEBS HURRIED TO PRISON

made a speech at Canton, O., in June, 1918. And so Debs spent his last few moments on "the outside" forgiving everybody. "With malice toward none," as Abraham Lincoln put it.

Warden Joseph Z. Terrill and the prison physician, Dr. O. P. Wilson, were waiting for us. In a moment we were all acquainted, and then—

"Mr. Debs, come with me," said Warden Terrell, and in another moment the threshold that leads from liberty to the tombs of living men had been crossed.

"You're quite a tall man, Mr. Debs," said the warden as the electrically manipulated turntable cage door moved noiselessly, transferring its opening from the "outside world" to this "inside world."

"Yes, six feet," answered Debs, pleasantly, and that was all we heard as they passed on.

We went back into the warden's office and waited. Soon the warden returned and signed several papers that the already impatient marshal and his deputy presented to him. Then we began asking questions about Debs, and the treatment he would receive.

"He will be allowed to write all the letters he pleases," said Warden Terrell, "subject of course to the prison censorship. He may receive visitors twice a month," but the understanding seemed to be that visitors coming from some distance would be allowed to see Debs at almost any time.

The warden wrinkled his brow just a little when he was asked if there would be any restrictions on papers, magazines and books sent to Debs.

"No," he said, "not if they are for Debs alone. But he must not pass them out among the other prisoners, some of whom are ignorant, you know, and it might have a bad effect on them."

"I am just going to use common sense in my treatment of Debs," said the warden, for which announcement Baur and the rest of us thanked him.

Baur then left with the marshal and his deputy for the return trip home. Wagenknecht, Karsner and I lingered, although midnight was approaching. We readily accepted the warden's invitation to visit Debs and bid the spokesman of American socialism "Good night," in his prison cell. One of the jailers led us up an iron staircase and along the corridor of a second tier of lairs for humans. Through the bars of his cage's door we asked him again if there was anything we could do for him.

"No, nothing more," he replied. "I am going to have a good night's rest. My only hope is that everyone tonight could have as good a couch as mine. Don't worry about me, comrades, I am all right. Everything is fine."

Then we returned to the warden's office where we sat down and asked more questions. Both the warden and the prison physician insisted that the "flu" epidemic that has been raging in the prison, resulting in several deaths, is now a thing of the past. They stated that the wing in which Debs' cell is located has been thoroughly fumigated, and that they had the "flu bug whipped out."

Debs is bald headed, just like the warden, so he will not have his hair cut. Upon entering the prison Debs was not subjected to the usual shower bath and the usual change of clothing because the warden said he felt that Debs didn't need it. Although the warden praised the prison fare in high terms, he said Debs might send out for any delicacies he wanted, or that they might be sent to him. He said prisoners spend about $1,000 monthly in such purchases, saying they were free to buy anything they wanted. He said Debs would not be asked to do any prison labor, because of his advanced age. Debs is 64 years old. The color of the prison uniform has been a cadet gray. Striped suits are not used except for escaped prisoners who have been caught and brought back. We were shown the "solitary" cells, but it was claimed these were not used except in rare instances, while the "shackles" were brought into use in only very extreme cases, it was claimed.

While we were talking a reporter from one of the Wheeling papers came in and Karsner gave him Debs' statement about his entering prison as a flaming revolutionist. The warden pricked up his ears and insisted that Debs must not start a revolution in his prison. He was assured that he had nothing to fear.

The sudden and mysterious manner in which Debs was spirited off to prison, when it was thought that he would be at liberty at least until May 1, took the entire nation by surprise. The manner in which Debs was whisked away from his friends is looked upon by some of those closest to him as a polite form of kidnaping.

While Kate Richards O'Hare was given one month to prepare for her five years' incarceration in the state penitentiary at Jefferson City, Mo., Debs was given only a few hours.

Saturday morning, April 12, some one purporting to be Federal District Attorney E. S. Wertz, who prosecuted Debs, called up the Debs' home at Terre Haute, Ind., and ordered Debs to come to Cleveland. Efforts to learn whether Wertz was really the person at the Cleveland end of the wire were met with evasive replies, according to Debs. Someone also called up the Debs home from Cleveland claiming to be Mrs. Marguerite Prevey, one of Debs' bondsmen. Mrs. Prevey denied she called the Debs home on the phone.

Nevertheless, in good faith, and taking for granted that all arrangements were satisfactory, Debs took a Saturday night train for Cleveland, accompanied by his brotheri-n-law and Karsner. News of what was taking place reached the Socialist Party National Office in Chicago late in the afternoon and Wagenknecht and Engdahl hurried to Cleveland on a Saturday night train. Debs arrived in Cleveland Sunday morning at 7 o'clock, had his breakfast and was taken into custody. The marshal's office seemed ignorant of Debs' whereabouts because it was not until Deputies Walsh and William F. Gauchat followed Mrs. Prevey, with her sister, Mrs. May Diebel, Wagenknecht and Engdahl, that they found Debs in his room. We were all greeting Debs "Good morning!" when Mrs. Prevey noticed the two strangers in the room and asked them what they wanted.

"We have come to get Mr. Debs and take him to the marshal's office," said Deputy Gauchat.

Mrs. Prevey stood on her rights as a bondsman, claiming she had not been notified, neither had Moskowitz, nor Debs' lawyers; she charged that the entire proceeding was irregular, and insisted that the deputies should await the arrival of Attorney Wolf, one of Debs' counsel, who lives in Cleveland. Deputy Walsh called up Marshal Lapp from the hotel office, after which he returned to Debs' room declaring:

"I am ordered to take you to the federal building, Mr. Debs. I have a United States supreme court mandate."

"All right, I am ready," replied Debs, and accompanied the deputy marshals down to their automobile and was taken to the marshal's office in the federal building.

In spite of the early hour a goodly number of Socialists had gathered at the hotel and they cheered Debs as he appeared and then followed him to the federal building. One reason for the anxiety displayed by the federal officials and the speed with which they were hurrying Debs off to prison, was that Cleveland Socialists had planned a Debs' protest meeting at which Debs was to speak.

Behind this anxiety, however, was a greater fear, that Debs would be cheered by huge demonstrations in the cities thru which he passed. This is the only explanation that can be offered for the attempt to elude all Socialists. After the necessary formalities had been gone thru with at the federal building, Debs was rushed into an automobile whcih started off in a direction opposite to that of the Cleveland Union Station. We had a high-powered automobile of our own, however, and trailed the U. S. Marshal's car up and down thru Cleveland's main thorofares and down its side streets. There was a merry race along Euclid Ave., Cleveland's fashionable boulevard. When the officials saw they couldn't drop our car, they halted theirs near the home of the late mayor Tom Johnson and exhibited this showplace to their prisoner. Then the race began again, ending in a draw at the Broadway station of the Erie railroad.

Marshall Lapp was good natured as Wagenknecht, Karsner, Engdahl, Baur, Mrs. Deibel and the driver, Morris Fried piled out of the Socialist car, and he offered no objections when the first four joined him in buying railroad tickets for Youngstown. This was to be the start of an all-day roundabout trip to dodge any possible Socialist ovations that might have been planned for Debs on his way to prison.

OPEN THE PRISON DOORS

Five years in prison!
Ten years in prison!!
Twenty years in prison!!!

No man who knew from personal experience what those few, brief words meant to those upon whom the sentences were imposed would utter them. A judge who had himself been in them would know that there is no crime that is not fully expiated by six months in the hell holes we call prisons. The writer of this article has been suddenly wakened in the middle of the night to hear a voice crying out from a neighboring steel cage, "This God damn, God damned place!". The profanity in the cry involuntarily wrung from some wakeful, tortured prisoner, was lost in the suffering and anguish that was in the voice that uttered the words.

Most men and women who are not sodden with crime and drink would rather die than serve five years in prison. And it is men and women of keener sensibilities, who have accustomed themselves to take something more from life than the mere satisfaction of their physical needs, that suffer most. To them prisoners do not mean merely physical confinement, but tortured souls, because of the degradation of humanity that is part of the routine of every prison.

* * * *

Eugene V. Debs is behind prison bars, to remain ten years!

Kate Richards O'Hare has begun her five-year sentence!

Haywood, Germer, Berger, Kruse, Tucker, Engdahl, Rose Stokes, Hitchcock and scores of others are in prison serving their sentences or awaiting the final decision that will send them to prison for five, ten and twenty years!

* * * *

What have these men and women done that they have been so savagely dealt with? What is the crime that justifies their being placed behind prison bars to suffer all the refined cruelties, which to them will mean suffering as great as anything the Spanish Inquisition could inflict upon them.

In the constitution of the United States there is a provision reading:

> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

"Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

Explicit and definite, is it not? It was the desire of the men who wrote the first amendment to the constitution to guarantee to the people of the United States the right to freely voice and publish their opinions and they said it in words that cannot be otherwise interpreted or understood.

Debs, Haywood and the others believed in certain principles and ideals, and advocated the reorganization of society on the basis of these principles and ideals. For many long years they had publicly expressed their views.

The war came. Among the principles which these men and women accepted and to which they had publicly expressed their adherence for a decade or more, was one explaining the fundamental cause of modern wars. The president of the United States gave his officiel view of the cause of the war and what the war was being fought for. The congress of the United States, with the approval of the president, in defiance of the constitutional provision, "Congress shall nake no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press," passed a law which in effect said that any one who differed from the president's official view of the cause of the war and the purpose for which it was being fought, and publicly express that view, should be put in prison for no more than twenty years.

The apologists of the present form of political democracy have frequently argued that the first principle of this democracy was the free public discussion of all problems coming before the people and the government. But here we have a law which prohibits the expression of all but the official view of war, formulated by one man, on pain of twenty years in prison!

The men and women who are in prisons or threatened with prison sentences because of violation of the Espionage law, continued to express their views of the war; they continued to express those ideals and principles which they had upheld for many years before the war.

While most of them did not have much faith in constitutional provisions which run counter to the interests of the ruling class, they were ready to go to prison for their ideals, and they put bourgeois democracy to the test—and went to prison or will go to prison.

Thus far, however, the supreme court of the United States has not dared to say that the law, under which they have been sent to prison is not a violation of the constitution. By some legal juggling the sentences have been affirmed, but no decision has been rendered on the main point they raised, that "Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

* * * *

But Debs is in prison! Kate O'Hare is in prison! Many others convicted under this law are or soon will be in prison!

Five years, ten years, twenty years, thus have the sentences run. Thus has the ruling class savagely wreaked its vengeance on those who had the temerity to refuse to accept the ruling class interpretation of the war and its cause.

Shall Eugene V. Debs suffer the torture of ten years in prison after his thirty years of service to the American workers? Shall he serve, what will be, a death sentence?

Shall Kate Richard O'Hare be separated from her children by stone walls and iron bars for five years to come?

Shall Germer, Berger, Kruse, Tucker, Engdahl, Haywood, rot behind prison doors for the next twenty years?

Shall all the others, thousands of them, who have upheld their ideals, pay the price in anguish and suffering that the ruling class is exacting in the sentences of various length imposed upon them, for having stood firm in the hour of trial?

The swelling chorus of the voices of the workers answers with a thunderous "NO!"

How then shall we open the prison doors?

Shall we go to the president and say, "Please, Mr. Wilson, issue an amnesty declaration and let these men and women go free?" Shall we cringe and crawl and beg that the outrage against these men and women be wiped out, so far as it can be wiped out?

The time for "Please, Mr. Wilson," for begging and petitioning is over?

We are in the midst of the class war—the class war grown bitter and brutal because the masters of society feel power slipping from their hands.

As yet they have the power—and are using it.

The workers' power must be organized.

Let us open the prison doors, not through begging and petitioning, but as the workers of Italy and France and England are opening the prison doors—through the threat of their power.

Let us hold great mass meetings and demand freedom for our comrades. Let us join in great mass demonstrations and demand freedom for our comrades. Let us, above all, organize our power, and demand freedom for our comrades.

If we measure up to our opportunity, if through aggressive and intensified propaganda we arouse the workers of this country not to beg, but to growl, the prison doors will open.

That is our task in the struggle for the freedom of our comrades whom capitalism is torturing and mistreating because they stood firmly by their ideals.

Let us begin that task on Labor's International Holiday. Let us make May Day this year memorable as the first manifestation of the determination of the workers of this country not to lag behind in the struggle for freedom.

Let us take up our task of organizing the workers' power to open the prison doors and to abolish capitalism, and never shrink nor falter until our goal is won.

Was Debs Spirited Away for Fear of Worker's Wrath?

Why the Mad Chase Through the Streets of Cleveland?—Why the Round-About Trip to Moundsville?—Many Pertinent Questions Asked About Rough Methods Used in Taking Debs to Penitentiary.

Fear was written in every action by the authorities in their attempt to rush Eugene V. Debs to Moundsville and place him "safely" behind penitentiary bars. The first scene in this drama took place at the Union depot, Cleveland, Sunday morning, April 13. Debs was met at the station by a daily paper reporter and several comrades. He was escorted to the Gillsy Hotel. While Debs and the comrades were eating breakfast, the Plain Dealer reporter, loyal to the masters' interests, reported the arrival of Debs to the federal authorities.

Only a few minutes after breakfast several deputy marshals called at Debs' room and requested that he accompany them to the Federal building. Marguarite Prevey, who was present, objected to this. She maintained that the regular procedure be followed in imprisoning Debs, namely, that his lawyers be first notified that the U. S. supreme court mandate had arrived, that his lawyers then notify his bondsmen to surrender him to the authorities. One of the deputies left the room to telephone to the Federal building. Whether he did or not will remain a mystery. He returned saying that he had orders to take Debs to the Federal building. To this Debs replied: "All right, I am ready to go and the last man who would stand on formalities of any kind."

Debs was escorted to the Federal building by about fifty comrades, who had gathered in front of the hotel. Many of them had automobiles. Arrived at the Federal building, Mrs. Prevey, who was one of Debs' bondsmen, attempted to get into the elevator with Debs and the deputies to go with him to the marshal's office. She was pushed aside and told that no one could accompany Debs up stairs. The comrades waited on the main floor of the building for Debs to return. The number of comrades who came to see Debs off was increasing every minute. One of the secret service men must have smelled danger in this, for immediately a rumor was circulated that Debs had already left the building for the depot. Many comrades, believing this rumor, rushed to the depot, only to be disappointed.

MAD CHASE BEGINS.

In about half an hour Debs returned from the marshel's office and between two deputies, left the building at the eastern entrance. He was almost pushed into a waiting automobile, which we feel sure was the property of or engaged by the Plain Dealer. It was not the property of the federal authorities nor engaged by them so far as we know. No attention was paid to Debs' baggage, his grips and valise. Mr. Baur, Debs' brother-in-law, who had come with Debs all the way from Terre Haute, was not permitted to enter the automobile with Debs. Mr. Baur, Mrs. Deibel, J. Louis Engdahl of the Socialist press service, David Karsner of the New York Call, and A. Wagenknecht of the National Office, Socialist Party, hastily jumped into the automobile of Comrade Fried, which was standing close by and the chase through Cleveland streets began. [illegible] Fried's car was a high pow- [illegible] for other comrades with [illegible] left for be- [illegible] keeping up with the pace set by the car containing Debs and the deputies. Corners were turned on two wheels practically, and the turns were so numerous that in many instances the car containing Debs was a block ahead nearly lost in the midst of dozens of other automobiles going in the same direction.

After driving Debs out to E. 105th street, bringing him back again to E. 55th St., and rushing him south on that street, the chase finally terminated at the Erie depot on E. 55th So. The automobile containing the Socialist press reporters drove into the depot driveway about ten feet behind the car containing Debs. Several additional deputies had already arrived at the depot to help guard Debs. Tickets were bought for Youngstown, and the deputies, seeing that we were bound to make the trip with Debs, and it not being in their power to keep us off of the same train Debs was to be taken on, became pleasant, glad no doubt that they had evaded most of the Socialists who had come from many surrounding cities to see Debs off.

TRIP LONG AND TIRESOME

The first of seven laps of a long, tiresome journey was then begun. Youngstown was the first stop. There a weary half hour was spent in waiting for the trolley to Leetonia. It was about noon, and the deputies relieved each other to take a bite at a cheap restaurant near the Youngstown depot. There was no opportunity to sit down at a table to enjoy a satisfying meal. Debs refused to eat, not wishing to bolt a meal and probably disdaining the panicky condition of his body guard. He kept his seat in the depot, making a few memorandums in his note book and reviewing the May 1 speeches, a copy of which had been given him by the comrades with him representing the National Office of the Socialist Party.

At Youngstown the comrades accompanying Debs first learned that the trip to Moundsville was to be made by short stages on trolley cars, through the hills of Ohio and West Virginia, in most round-about routes so as to avoid demonstrations in favor of Debs on the way. Before leaving Cleveland several rumors were current that the reason Debs was rushed out of that city was to get him away before the monster demonstration advertised for the afternoon was held. A rumor from police headquarters intimated that the police feared the afternoon demonstration, especially if Debs remained in the city. They undoubtedly remembered the 10,000 crowd that gathered upon Market Square several Sundays ago. That the deputies with Debs were afraid of demonstrations on the way to the penitentiary is amply proven by the circuitous route taken to reach Moundsville.

CHANGE CARS SEVEN TIMES.

As we stated, we left Cleveland for Youngstown, waited half an hour for a trolley and then left Youngstown for Leetonia. From Leetonia we went to East Liverpool, from East Liverpool of Steubenville, from Steubenville to Wellsburg, from Wellsburg to Wheeling and from Wheeling to Moundsville, arriving at Moundsville about 10:30 p. m., more than twelve hours after leaving Cleveland. It was extreme even to the younger comrades in the party. Not a minute was allowed for refreshments or a meal until Wheeling was reached at about 9 p. m.

The strain told on Debs and we could see that with more and more difficulty he climbed aboard each successive trolley we took. After leaving Steubenville he fell sound asleep in his seat. Many miles were traversed, the scenery along which was unseen by the eyes of Debs. The backyard dumbs, littered with tin cans and broken pottery. The pottery and coal mine slave villages, stuck in the hillsides, rickety hovels, about ready to tumble down; children half naked and barefooted for the want of shoes. And among all this misery nature asserted itself, for there was also the velvety green of the wheat fields and the pink blossoms of the peach trees.

At Wheeling the deputies hurried into a restaurant and straddled chairs at the quick service lunch counter. We braved their displeasure, sat Debs down at a table and had him order a satisfying meal. We were very hungry and ate heartily. Karsner had to leave before he had quite finished his meal in order to send a telegram to his paper. In his absence Debs reached over to Karsner's plate and helped himself to what Karsner had left. We begged him to give an order for whatever else he desired to eat, but the haste of the deputies, who were already standing at attention at the door of the restaurant made eating sufficient an uncomfortable process, and we arose and followed them to a street carner where we mounted the trolley for the last lap of the journey. Moundsville was [illegible] to talk or to give his usual smile of good cheer, which he had so generously bestowed upon deputies and Socialists alike during most of the trip.

Arrived at the penitentiary he was introduced to the warden, who immediately took him to the north cell block, scarcely giving us time to say good night to the champion of the workers. The warden must have reflected upon his hasty action, for immediately upon his return to his office he asked us if we desired to see Debs for a few minutes before we left. We were glad of the opportunity. We entered the turn table and were swung around to the cell block entrance. The warden expected to find Debs seated in the guards office, but instead Debs had requested to be locked up at once so that he could repose his aching body and find much [illegible]

The International

Arise, ye prisoners of starvation!
Arise, ye wretched of the earth!
For justice thunders condemnation. A better world's in birth.
No more tradition's chains shall bind us. Arise ye slaves! No more in thrall!
The earth shall rise on new foundations. We have been naught, we shall be all.

We want no condescending saviors, to rule us from a judgment hall.
We workers ask not for their labors. Let us consult for all.
To make the chief disgorge his booty, to free the spirit from its cell,
We must ourselves decide our duty, we must decide and do it well.

Toilers from shop and field united, the party we of all who work;
The earth belongs to us, the people, no room here for the shirk.
How many on our flesh have fattened! But if the noisome birds of prey
Shall vanish from the sky some morning, the blessed sunlight still will stay.

CHORUS:
'Tis the final conflict. Let each stand in his place.
The Internationale shall be the human race.
'Tis the final conflict. Let each stand in his place.
The Internationale shall be the human race.

Kate O'Hare Begins Her Prison Sentence

Enters St. Josephs Penententiary To Serve Five Year Sentence

St. Louis.—Convict 21669.

That is the number that now takes the place of the name of Kate Richards O'Hare, former international secretary of the Socialist Party of America.

At noon, April 12, she surrendered herself to the United States Marshal at Fargo, N. D., and at midnight, in the custody of Chief Deputy Wattles, departed for Jefferson City.

She was accompanied by Mrs. Wattles and reached the prison April 14, where she was "dressed in" and assigned to the overall and suspender factory of the Missouri state penitentiary.

At the same moment that Eugene V. Debs was entering the penitentiary at Moundsville, Mrs. O'Hare was entering the penitentiary at Jefferson City. Both were indicted, tried and convicted under the espionage act. She was sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

Conspiracy of Silence.

The events leading to the incarceration of Mrs. O'Hare have been veiled in mystery. None of the western papers carried accounts of it. The capitalist papers of the northwest raised the most violent hue and cry, appealing to the worst elements of human nature just before she surrendered in Fargo.

She ended her farewell tour in St. Paul.

She was billed to speak in the auditorium.

But the mayor and city council rose in their dignity and refused to let her speak.

More than 5,000 people crowded into the auditorium the night that she was to speak.

Standing alone on the great stage, an 11-year-old girl gave an address.

Little Daughter Spoke.

It was Kathleen O'Hare, Mrs. O'Hare's daughter.

The audience was enraged by the autocratic attempt of the mayor and the council to strangle free speech and free assemblage.

They demanded that Mrs. O'Hare speak herself.

She rose from her seat in a box and said:

"The mayor and council have made my argument for me. If you are my friends, you will permit this to conclude this meeting."

Some of the Minneapolis and St. Paul dailies frothed at the mouth at this outcome. They endeavored to institute a reign of terror. But the public and the returned soldiers failed to fall for the appeals to the "good citizens" to make an example of a "convicted criminal."

Husband's Hurried Farewell.

Frank P. O'Hare, her husband, went to Fargo to be with her on the way to prison. The Bourbon press had terrorized the authorities and he was given but a few minutes with her.

Every effort was made to spirit her away, so that the great hosts of her friends should not know when she left or be able to say good bye to her.

Citizens of St. Louis had contemplated a special car to Jefferson City to greet her with flowers, but the authorities refused to let it be known when she would leave Fargo. The plan for the tribute had to be abandoned.

After several hours of determined effort, her husband was granted an interview of a few short minutes with her in the prison, and then was shown the door, with the information that he could not see his wife oftener than once a month.

Call for American Freedom Convention to be held in Chicago, July 3-4-5

(Special Correspondence)

Chicago.—Twenty-four thousand years in prison is about the aggregate of the sentences of persons already convicted, is one of the facts set forth in the call for the "American Freedom Convention" planned for July 3-5, by the National League for the Release of Political Prisoners to be held in Chicago.

The program and call for the convention is being sent out by the immediate action committee, which has established offices at Room 414, Mid-City Bank Bldg., Chicago. It will go to 30,000 local organizations of the labor movement of the nation, to the local secretaries, state secretaries and national executive committeemen of the Socialist Party, labor and radical publications, and to the officials of all radical and religious organizations that can be interested in the struggle for the release of war prisoners.

PROGRAM.

THE RUSSIAN QUESTION

(There have been so many lies printed and uttered about the Soviet Republic of Russia that many persons who would scorn, ordinarily, to lie, keep repeating lies that they believe to be truths. Of course, this is just what the world Junkers, who have menaged this lying campaign, have aimed to accomplish. There has come to our hands a bulletin, issued by the Methodist Federation for Spscial Service. In this is an article, "The Russian Question." It covers this matter so thoroughly and dispassionately that we print it in its entirey. If it had been published by a Socialist or Radical paper, a prejudiced public would discount its statements. Coming from the quarter it does, it should be given wide publicity among those who have been fed on lying literature coming from groups and bureaus interested in restoring the right to rob the Russian people through the capitalist system, abolished in Russia by the people).

Our concern with this question is because the Soviet government is an attempt to organize a new social order.

Sources and Character of Information.

Upon so disputed an issue, it is very difficult to secure impartial information. Reports entirely conflicting, according to degree of contact of observers with actual working of revolution and again according to sympathies of eye-witnesses. It is assumed that readers are familiar with the case against bolshevism as it is constantly presented in the daily press and in propaganda of its opponents; therefore, and because of lack of space, that material is not summarized here. Available first-hand sources of information are: Documents issued by Soviet government, reports of competent observers, books by Trotzky, such messages from Lenine as censorship has permitted to come into this country.

The Soviet Government.

What is a Soviet? A local unit of government. Had its beginning on agricultural side, in the "mir," oldest Russian democratic institution, similar to New England town meeting. In cities: developed in revolution of 1905, when Working Men's Councils grew up semi-clandestinely. Years of surreptitious discussion and promulgation of economic theories in these centers, made appearance of Soviets natural in revolution against monarchy, March, 1917.

How Is It Organized? Local Soviet in every community. In rural sections, rural Soviet or Volost, represents group of villages, composed of peasant delegates. In cities, various districts have Soviets composed of representatives chosen by occupation. Soviet autonomous in local affairs. All political parties represented, strongest group electing delegates to next higher Soviet. Total system consists of local, county, provincial and regional Soviets and the All-Russian Congress of Soviets. National Organization: New government officially known as the "Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic," consists of All-Russian Congress of Soviets, supreme legislative body meeting four times or more annually; Central Executive Committee of 250, virtually a continuous parliament, chief law-making body; Council of People's Commissars, the cabinet or ministry, consisting of 17 elected from Central Executive Committee, each heading a department or commissariat.

Extent? Controls central Russia. In Siberia allied intervention has broken system and established Omsk government, which is now in control of a monarchist group under Kolchak. Archangel region similarly alienated. Ukraine has Soviet form of government and may re-enter federation. An American traveler found Soviet in Vladivostok the same as that in Petrograd, 7,000 miles away.

General Character? Like American revolution, it is an experiment in a new form of government, this time based upon occupational groups rather than upon geographical divisions; units vote according to occupations; peasant delegates represent peasant Soviets in next higher body; workers in factories vote as industrial unions; craft-unions also represented; soldier delegates represent Soldiers' Councils.

There is provision for recall and replacement of representatives at any time, making political machinery quickly responsive to will of people. It is, therefore, an attempt to establish direct democracy, both in the control of industry and government. This is why it replaced the constituent assembly, which western democracy naturally understands and favors. Every great social change is brought about by events of the moment, which are of only temporary significance, and this was no exception. Why did the Bolsheviki dissolve the constituent assembly, an act universally criticised in this country? First, assembly no longer represented popular will; only a small proportion of population interested in political reform; peasants demanded land and said to parties who wanted assembly, "We've got the land; if it gets into politics, which we do not understand, we will be cheated out of it." Industrial workers demanded control of industry; soldiers demanded democracy in the army and peace; depleted and disorganized condition of the country forced leaders to promises of economic rather than political reform; second, assembly, which met in January, elected the previous November on basis of lists prepared before Bolshevist revolution. Party lines had changed, sentiment had shifted to left or radical wing, but reactionaries predominated in assembly. Bolshevists first tried to put through program; failing, bolted, carrying people with them. Assembly passed the radical land measure, declared for immediate peace, and then died of inanition. Soviets, which had been gradually developing, now proved more responsive to the will of both peasants and industrials; Bolsheviki, therefore, did not impose a new form of government to suit their own purposes, but were put into power by a system which had long been developing.

Political Parties. Bolsheviki, or majority, radical wing of Social Democratic Labor party. Called also Maximalists, as favoring maximum revolutionary power, came into power by gaining control of Soviets in November, 1917, revolution, which resulted from change of political complexion of majority Soviets. Only effective sovereign power since March, 1917.

Mensheviki, or minority. Social Democratic moderates, called also Minimalists. Also thoroughgoing Socialists.

Socialist Revolutionists, party of Katherine Breshkovskaya (the "Little Grandmother of the Revolution"), Kerensky and Tchernov of moderates, and Marie Spiridonova of radicals, whose following is now with and now against the Bolsheviki.

Cadets, Constitutional Democrats, a pre-revolutionary party, controlling first provisional government under Lvoff and Miliukov, and having part in Kerensky coalition regime, middle class in sympathies.

The Bolsheviki Rule.

Leaders—Lenine: pen-name of Vladimir Ulianoff; belongs to noble family; had brother executed for revolutionary activity in czarist regime; active in revolutionary efforts for 20 years; fomenting revolt in Austria when war broke out. Author "The Development of Capitalism in Russia," "Agrarian Problem in Russia," and other works.

Trotzky: Pen-name of Bronstein, Commissar of Foreign Affairs; member of wealthy Moscow family, but refused father's money, hence always poor; exiled and imprisoned under czar's reign; opposed signing of Brest-Litovsk treaty, but overruled by Lenine. Author "The Bolsheviki and World Peace" and "Our Revolution," both published in this country.

"The present cabinet is probably the most cultured cabinet in the history of the world. All are experts upon a great many questions. Several have written books of philosophy and religion." (A. R. Williams, formerly pastor of East Maverick Congregational church, Boston, author of "In the Claws of the German Eagle").

Policies (Indicated by official decrees). General aim: To make labor, not property, basis of social organization. Specific aims: To guard industrial workers from overwork, from diseases of occupation, from employment at too early an age, and, in case of women and young people, from unsuitable occupations and night work. To take over all grain supplies held by speculators, or for illicit manufacture of alcohol. To socialize national finances, natural resources and the land (pensioning present holders sufficiently for their support). To make education accessible to all by means of free tuition in primary and secondary institutions, access by public to all libraries of over 500 volumes, whether owned by individuals or institutions, and by printing and circulating under government auspices, either at cost or entirely free, copies of Russian classics. To free courts and judicial procedure from traditional abuses and make them function as instruments of justice to all classes. To make marriage monogamous and free; to make divorce possible on application of either party (apparently without giving reason); to establish legal rights of all children. To free public from misrepresentations of press by attaching penalties to false reports. To establish religious liberty. To renounce all imperialistic ambitions.

Program—Election platform: "Immediate peace, land for the peasants, workers' control of industry, all power to Soviets." Claimed as single aim perfection of Soviet government. Overwhelming majority supported program, accepting only 50 per cent. of power to which they were entitled, because Bolsheviki settled land question as peasants desired, namely: Those who would use it received it.

Qualifications for Voting—Slogan: "A vote for every one who works." Individuals living on rent and interest considered parasites, not allowed to vote; franchise obtainable by going to work. In progress of democracy franchise has been limited by property owning and literacy qualifications. Soviet government and Bolsheviki require a new test, making service to the common life basis of citizenship. "The Dictatorship of the Proletariat," when that class out-numbers all others and organizes the government becomes a high-sounding phrase for "rule of majority." Determining question for both Soviets and our political democracy is whether in practice either results in control of minority. Russia's population is 84 per cent. peasant, 9 per cent. industrial, 7 per cent. (until the war) bourgeois towners and managers—of this 7 per cent., 1 per cent. had nearly 100 per cent. of industrial management).

Working the Program—Formulated peace slogan, "No annexations, no indemnities," which greatly influenced allied war aims. Published secret treaties showing imperialistic bargains for territory made by allied governments. Demobilized czar's army of 12,000,000, and raised new "Red army." Reaffirmed czar's decision to banish vodka. Redistributed land, nationalized all natural resources, ordered compulsory insurance for agricultural workers at state expense, also for homesteads against fire, drought, epidemic among cattle, etc. Schools organized and opened where none previously existed. Installed extensive hospital facilities, reorganized factories and made them more productive. (In one establishment employing 6,000 men, 18 cars a day were turned out under Kerensky regime. Soviet reorganized [illegible] force to 1,800 and turned out 12 cars a day by methods [illegible] working men, an increase of more than 100 per cent. per man. Data concerning industrial efficiency or inefficiency very inadequate. Repudiated foreign debt. Moderate Socialists wanted, after due warning from liberals, to repudiate that part loaned to czar to repress revolution. Bolsheviki repudiated all because against capitalism; also because read in French and German economists that repudiation would occasion revolution in those countries. Later offered to protect small French investors, and have since offered to arrange entire payment, if that is price of peace. Has withstood all attacks for more than a year. Has been support of Mensheviki and leaders among intellectuals, notably Gorky, one of Russia's greatest writers. Has maintained itself despite substantial help given internal enemies by allied governments, and also despite natural attempt of employers to cripple new program by taking away books and dismantling machinery.

Information as to how far whole program has been carried is inadequate.

The Present Chaos—Professor Lomonosoff, a moderate Socialist, says chaos is now between Bolsheviki and group of monarchist adventurers. He, with other Mensheviki and disinterested foreign observers, prefer Bolsheviki. All agree that intervention has strengthened Bolsheviki. Kolchak regime in Siberia, which allied forces support, is manufacturing vodka from wheat that without intervention would go to feed central Russia. Has destroyed provisional representative government by imprisoning moderate Socialist members, who have since been killed.

The Red Terror—Amount unknown. New Statesman, London, anti-Bolsheviki in policy, says of all executions in Moscow since Bolsheviki came into power, 60 per cent. were of corrupt Soviet officials. Relation of fact to report seen in "Sa. Bartholomew incident": American newspaper reported that on November 10, Bolsheviki would carry out general massacre of all opponents. What actually happened: Soviet council of Petrograd adopted resolution giving amnesty to all hostages and persons alleged to be involved in plots against Soviets, except those whose detention was deemed necessary for safety of Bolshevists in enemy hands. Kinds: (1) Massacres and murders of hated officers and defeated opponents in early days. (2) Lawlessness by discharged soldiers and criminal elements. For examples, "wine pogroms," in which these elements broke into wine cellars and caused disturbances. (3) Internecine warfare between factions, extent unknown. (4) Execution by legal procedure of counter-revolutionists and also of Soviet officials for criminality and even delinquency. Capital punishment at first abolished, but reintroduced for punishment of traitors to revolution within and without the government. Number apparently high, but no reliable figures available. Evidently increased by encouragement of counter-revolutionists by allies.

Their Attitude—From reply of Tchitcherin, Commissar of War, to allies: "Have gentlemen representing neutral powers heard of crushing of Sinn Feiners in Dublin, of White Terror in Finland, of mass murder of working men and peasants in Ukraine? To our enemies we bring war without quarter; force is being used only in holy cause of liberation of the people." From letter of Lenine to American working men: "Have English forgotten their 1649, the French their 1793? Terror was just and justified when it was employed by the bourgeoisie for its own purposes against feudal domination. But terror becomes criminal when workingmen and poverty-stricken peasants dare to use it against bourgeoisie. Terror was just and justified when it [illegible] to put exploiting minority in place of another. But terror becomes horrible and criminal when used to abolish all exploiting minorities, when employed in cause of actual majority, in cause of proletariat and semi-proletariat, of working class and poor peasantry. The bourgeoisie of international imperialism has succeeded in 'slaughtering ten million in complete [illegible].' Should our war, the war of the oppressed and exploited against oppressors and exploiters cost a half or a whole million victims in all countries, the bourgeoisie would still maintain that victims of the world war died a righteous death and those of the civil war were sacrificed for a criminal cause."

Official Attitude Toward Religion.

Summary of original decree on church and state. Church is separated from state. No laws may be passed restricting freedom of conscience, or to establish advantage or privilege on account of religious affiliation. Citizens may profess any religion or none. Free observance of religious customs guaranteed if they do not disturb public order or infringe upon rights of citizens. Exemptions of performance of civil duties on ground of religion permitted upon consideration of individual cases. Teaching and study of religion to be done privately. Religious societies subject to general regulations governing other private associations, and may not enjoy privileges or subsidies from state. Compulsory collection of payments and assessments for church or religious societies forbidden. All properties of existing religious societies declared national property. Buildings and articles especially designed for religious services given for free use of corresponding religious societies.

Co-operation with Religious Organizations—Y. W. C. A. Under Bolsheviki opened and kept running clubs for women and girls in Petrograd and Moscow. Though they helped rich and poor alike, Soviet did not hinder their efforts. Permitted to make industrial investigations, though using an interpreter opposed to Bolsheviki. Y. M. C. A. under czar had little co-operation and general prohibition. After first revolution, Soviets quickly rallied to support of association. Moscow Soviet gave buildings and full permission to work. When Bolsheviki came into power, Lunacharsky, Commissar of Education, warmly appreciated work, asked that it be enlarged, reaffirmed all permissions of Kerensky regime. When difficult to get money, Bolshevik authorities gave permission to Y. M. C. A. officer to draw two and a half millions out of state bank. For rural work along Volga, gave large passenger steamer free, paid salary of crew of 40 men, furnished fuel and financed alterations on boat, though this particular enterprise had Russian priests and men opposed to Bolsheviki on staff. Permitted to ship goods on railroads free, and given freight and passenger cars as needed. National Soviet leaders emphasized desire for continuance of work and wish for more American experts to help in educational, economic and relief work.

Some Questions.

1. Aim of the Constitution of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic is to establish a state composed of producers and to make socially useful labor the requirement for citizenship.

How is this related to a similar element in the Christian ideal of society? Does this movement apprehend and seek the rest of the Christian ideal? Are its methods destructive of that ideal? Decision must await more evidence and further development.

There is sharp divergence of evidence concerning the relation of acts and rules of local Soviets to national decree. It must be remembered, however, that nothing which may be proved against the Bolsheviki can diminish the value of the ideal of a democratic order composed of co-operating producers.

2. It is evident that acts abhorrent to humanity have occurred under Bolshevist regime. To what extent are they due to the policy of that regime? To the general disorganization of society following collapse of the old order? To practice of all Russian parties of using "terror" against opponents? To Russian temperament, in which brutality and kindness are strangely mixed?

On this question of responsibility for, as well as extent of, criminal acts there is sharp contradiction of testimony; also as to whether methods of suppressing rebels are more ruthless than our own "law and order." Apparently the degree of violence and disorder varies in different sections according to amount and character of attack upon new government. Indications are that government is restoring law and order with a strong hand. More evidence is needed before passing final judgment.

The Senate Inquiry.

Since the above material was prepared, the senate inquiry has commenced. Most of the information at present made public by the committee has been considered in making this summary. It has been compared not only with the testimony of observers who are sympathetic with the Soviet principle, but also with the evidence of neutral witnesses. The committee has been asked to hear ten representative American religious and social workers who are neither Bolshevists nor Socialists.

The first week the newspapers failed to print testimony relating to the constructive activities of the Soviets. The next week testimony was blocked regarding Siberia because the Bolshevists are not in power there now. Yet there the Soviets accomplished constructive results before allied intervention drove them from power.

If the newspapers continue to withhold such data, or the committee continues to consider it irrelevant, we shall endeavor to supply it to our readers.

American "Democracy" As Seen By Workers of Europe

European Workers Protest Imprisonment of Debs and Other Class War Prisoners

Italy.—Avanti, the Italian Socialist daily, in a recent issue published three columns reviewing the American political persecutions, while the national executive committee of the Italian party has cabled its sympathy to the American party in its hour of trial.

The 50 Socialist members of the Italian chamber of deputies absented themselves, as a protest against the imprisonment of American Socialists, when President Wilson appeared before Italy's parliament at Rome, in January, 1919.

Great Britain.—The Labor Leader, official organ of the British Independent Labor Party, after giving considerable space to the persecution and mprisonment of American Socialists, published an editorial denouncing "these legal outrages."

The Call, official organ of the British Socialist Party, published the entire contents of the leaflet issued by the National Office of the American Socialist Party, entitled "Restore Our Rights."

Sweden.—The Socialists of Sweden, fter having been prevented by the ensorship from securing the facts bout conditions in the United States, ally received information regarding the persecution of the American [illegible] returning to out a call for nation-wide protest meetings.

Russia.—The Russian Soviet Republic has always manifested a keen interest about conditions in the United States. Nikolai Lenine, in interviews with American newspaper correspondents, has made special requests for information concerning the fate of political and industrial war prisoners in this country. He is reported as having offered to make an exchange of prisoners to secure the release of Debs."

France.—Populaire and L'Humanite, the two French Socialist dailies, published in Paris, have closely followed the governmental attack on the American Socialist Party. In a special editorial article, Jean Longuet, grandson of Karl Marx, denounces especially the sentence meted out to Debs.

"We Europeans have no comrade like your 'Gene Debs,'" said Mrs. Dora Montefiore, as we sat in the reception room of the Woman's Lyceum Club, in London, some years ago, narrates Lena Morrow Lewis, in the "Special Debs Number" of the New Justice, just issued at Los Angeles, California.

"He gives a human touch to the movement," explained Mrs. Montefiore, "and radiates a spirit of love that is irresistible. I followed him in [illegible] meetings where he [illegible] when his power. I do not hesitate to say that we have no one in all the European movement who may be compared to him. My American comrades are to be congratulated on having such a worker."

SWEDISH TOILERS IN PROTEST FOR AMERICAN POLIITICAL PRISONERS

Politiken, the chief organ of the Swedish left wing Socialists, published a half page manifesto calling on the party membership throughout the land to organize protest meetings against America's treatment of political and industrial prisoners. Through its underground channels Politiken has procured a mass of details of specific cases of imprisonment of American workers, according to a cabled article by Bassett Digby in the Chicago Daily News.

The Swedish left Socialists are exhorted to do their utmost to cause the release of "American political prisoners."

BRITISH SOCIALISTS HEAR OF PERSECUTION HERE

That the Socialists of France and Great Britain are astounded at the conviction of the five Socialists, Victor L. Berger, Adolph Germer, J. Louis Engdahl, Irwin St. John Tucker and William F. Kruse, is putting it lightly.

We have just received a copy of the "Labor Leader," the organ of the Independent Labor Party. This is the first copy received for more than two years. It received its news of the trial from Paris.

[illegible] the "Labor Leader," "bears out only too powerfully what Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, the editor of the American 'Nation' told us last week in his interview with regard to the state of 'war mania' that would seem to be still prevailing in the United States.

"To this is now added capitalist panic against bolshevism, a panic which in large measure is born of a guilty conscience and fear of the harvest of past oppressions or the frustrations of present and future plans for world exploitation.

"Labor unrest is working all through the new world of the west as well as in the war tortured plains of Europe. The news from South America suggests efforts at revolution and ruthless suppressions, followed by fresh outbreaks. Who can foretell the end?"

Evidently the czaristic tactics of American "justice" do not harmonize very well, to the ears of European workers, with the honeyed [illegible]

French Socialists' View Of Debs' Sentence

(From Le Populaire, the Socialist Daily of Paris, Edited by Jean Longuet, Dated March 16, 1919).

I have received the following cable from Comrade Germer, National Secretary of the Socialist Party in the United States:

"Chicago, March 13.—The Supreme Court of the United States has confirmed the decision of the lower courts in the case of Debs. Debs will therefore spend ten years in prison.—Germer."

The Populaire has already given out this news as a dispatch from our emotion at such a verdict. We won't, however, repeat this here, because, in truth, Socialists can never remain indifferent or inactive when, in any place on the globe, the rights of their comrades are violated by the power of bourgeois magistrates.

We know what a glorious part our comrade, Eugene Victor Debs, who is called the American Lasalle, has played for a quarter of a century in the Socialist movement across the Atlantic. At first fighting for the unions, as secretary of the Railway unions, he directed the great Pullman strike of Chicago, in 1894, and was condemned to six months' imprisonment. It was in prison that he became a Socialist. Since then he has been one of the founders of our party in the United States. For three times with wonderful energy and marvelous spirit, he carried the Socialist message from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes of Canada to the boundaries of Mexico, as candidate for the presidency of the republic. He rolled up thus a Socialist vote of more than a million.

The conviction of such a man, universally esteemed by his adversaries, revered by his comrades, to so monstrous a punishment as that to which he has been condemned, for the simple expression of his Socialist opinions, will be a blot on the escutcheon of the great American republic to which its distinguished president has given such a noble luster in all the world.

It is not possible that President Wilson will let our comrade, Debs, fulfill the scandalous sentence to which [illegible]

A TELEGRAM FROM DEBS' BROTHER

Terre Haute, Ind., April 14, 1919.

Eugene V. Debs,
Federal Prison,
Moundsville, West Virginia.

They have your body behind prison walls but your unconquerable spirit, radiant as a sunburst, soars humanity's luminous heights a million miles beyond the foul touch of filthy hypocrites and their prostituted mercenaries. Your unwavering fidelity to principle, your unfaltering love and devotion to the cause of the crushed and oppressed will be an unceasing inspiration. I was never so proud of you. My arms are about you, old pal, and will be through time and eternity.

Your loving brother,
THEODORE DEBS.

Prison Poems

VISIONS, GO NOT FROM ME!

Visions, go not from me!
In my softest hour,
Pierce through and fashion me
After your power.

Though I be falling
In sloth or in sleep,
Reach up your voices
Out of the deep.

Visions, go not from me!
If I be content,
Spur me to thirst again
Ere life be spent.

—Charles Ashleigh.

(I. W. W. serving ten-year sentence in federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.)

A ROSE.

Pink petals of rose:
Bloom.
You will share this prison-cell with me,
You in your tincup of water in the corner,
I in my narrow cot.
You were sent rather unwillingly—
And so was I—
—For dear love's sake
—And I, for liberty's.

Perfumed petals of rose:
Bloom.
Suffuse your fragrance through the corridor.
Your sweetness
Will be a sign of beauty in this bitter place—
O! so may I!

—H. Austin Simons.

(Conscientious objector, serving eight-year sentence at Fort Leavenworth).

SINGING IN JAIL.

I hear the poets singing in the jail,
Never do their songs of courage fail.
Songs of human aspiration ring—
Though the scaffolds rise, the poets sing!

Standing with their backs against the wall,
While guns crackle, while their comrades fall,
Strong in courage—never do they fail—
Singing songs of freedom in the jail!

—Mary O'Reilly.

What Debs Did For Imprisoned Miners

Minden, W. Va., March 17, 1919.

Comrades: During the Paint Creek strike in this state, when we miners were almost defeated, and Mother Jones and John Brown were in prison illegally and some of our men in the penitentiary at Moundsville, sent there by the governor, unlawfully; and soldiers and company guards were in our midst, the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party met and elected E. V. Debs to draft a resolution to be presented to the United States senate calling for a senatorial investigation of the Paint Creek strike and which was presented through Senator Kern and passed the senate causing the immediate release of all our brothers in prison, Mother Jones included.

Now a federal judge who is not worthy to shine Comrade Debs' shoes, and was is as far beneath him morally and intellectually as Pilate was below Christ, says he must serve ten years in Moundsville—in the very prison that Debs made open and give up our miners.

Can we now make the prison open up and give up to us Debs, whom we all love, and to whom we owe a debt of gratitude more than to any other single individual in America?

It is not enough that we make the prisons open and give back to us Debs, Mooney, O'Hare, Haywood and others, but we must destroy the thing that denies us our right of free speech, and achieve for ourselves the things for which Debs fought and for which he is going to prison, namely, free speech free press and free assemblage.

These things cannot exist until the federal courts have been abolished and the capitalist system of industry has passed away.

The very least that I could do as an individual in recognition of the services Debs has rendered my class would be to ask of the court that I be permitted to serve the sentence in his stead and that he be permitted to go free; for it is for us that he must suffer and as all of the miners cannot go to jail I ask that I be permitted to serve his sentence. This is my offering in behalf of the West Virginia miners and to show partially their appreciation of the labors of the great chief of rebels, the crowning glory of the social revolution in America.

What a privilege to be able to take that burden from him upon myself and shield him from the fiendish abuse and hellish insults that will be his in Moundsville under the hirelings of the coal companies of this state!

State Convention of Ohio Socialists to be Held in Cincinnati

The State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Ohio named Cincinnati as the convention city and set June 27, 28 and 29 as the dates for the 1919 party convention.

In the meantime, every local and branch of the party is requested to study the constitutional provisions as printed below. Note especially the section which disqualifies locals from representation and the section which provides that unless a delegate deposits his credentials before 3 o'clock of the first day of the convention, he will not be entitled mileage.

All good standing locals in the state should be represented at this convention. It will be the most important in the party's history because of the important occurrences in the field of socialism which have transpired lately. And remember the state picnic, June 29. Attend.

Here are the constitutional provisions covering state conventions. Read them at the next meeting of the local.

Sec. 5. When any subdivision of a Local has not a sufficient number of members to allow it a representative, two or more subdivisions numbering one hundred members, or major fraction thereof, may jointly elect a delegate so long as the Local remains within the limits of its quota.

Sec. 6. Representation shall be [illegible] up to within two months of the time selected for holding the convention.

Sec. 9. Locals which have not purchased due stamps during the four months preceding the date of apportioning delegates to the state convention, shall not be entitled to representation.

NOTICE, THE NEXT STATE PICNIC

The state convention publicity committee of the Socialist Party of the state of Ohio, hereby notifies different locals or branches of the Socialist Party, that the state convention of Ohio, for the year 1919, will be held at Cincinnati, O., June 27 and 28. The state picnic will be held at Coney Island, June 29, 1919. It should be every revolutionary Socialists' duty to be present at the state picnic, no matter if from central, northern or southern parts of the state. Let's get together, rally around the reds, and have a good and jolly time.

The committee also wishes to state that tickets, which will be forwarded to each and every local or branch in the state, can be had of comrades for 25c a piece, while at the boat wharf same will cost you 35c a piece, and therefore we ask you to buy as many tickets as possible.

Furthermore we beg to state that the "country store" will be held at the local headquarters during the convention, at 1314 Vine St., and as usual does the committee ask comrades, friends and sympathizers for donations for such "country store," which will be gladly and with many thanks received.

Kindly forward donations to the treasurer of the committee, Comrade Lotta Burke, 1314 Vine St., or the secretary, Otto F. Hoefer, 1315 Vine St.

Comrades and friends, remember, under NO circumstances miss the state picnic.

Letters From 'Outside' Cheer Class War Prisoners

(Printed by Permission of the Recipients, Comrades W. E. and Laura Reynolds).

Dear Friends: Letters from outside these walls bring more cheer into our hearts than you can imagine. It surely makes one feel good to know that the people think of us and are doing all they can to get us out of this hole. We are all in pretty good health and the best of spirits, but it gets awfully monotonous to stay in one place behind big walls and iron bars. A day or a few days in prison does not seem so hard, but when these days grow into months, years, then one learns the feeling of being tied to one spot. The monotony, the sameness, is what wears. That is why letters from the outside cheer one so and help to break the monotny of prison life.

Note what you say regarding the many big meetings the Socialists are having and that the working class are with the Bolsheviki. It is high time the workers learned who their friends are. What gets my goat is the severe criticisms of the union strikes. People naturally believe that when laboring men receive pretty large wages they ought to be content. That argument is all right as far as it goes. When the government began to pay its shipbuilders $6 to $10 a day, the merchants and institutions which supplied these laborers the necessities of life raised prices which upon investigation, proved to be from 150 to 3,000 per cent., so that the workers could hardly purchase enough to live on. It seems that everybody ought to know that this is the cause of the strikes. The Swift Co. admits increased dividends of $42,000,000 over last year. The Anaconda Mining Co., with $51,000,000 surplus in its treasury. Yet we find men and women defending these robbers and condemning the laboring man.

Every day we see big headlines in the papers about deportation of I. W. W., Bolshevists and Socialists and then we read that other countries are also deporting them to the U. S. That's getting rid of them, isn't it? Now I believe all these daily press lies have but one purpose—to keep us in prison and to exterminate all radical movements. But the dawn of a brighter day is breaking. We shall yet see justice triumph.

The Ohio Socialist has found its way into my cell and, believe me, it sure is a welcome visitor every week. I like it because it strikes straight at the roots of the rotten system.

Yours for the cause,
ARTHUR BOOSE.

Tiffin Runs To Red

By EDWIN MYLER.

Local Tiffin held a very enthusiastic meeting in the high school auditorium, April 12. Speakers for the evening were Comrade Lilith Martin and Wm. O. McClury.

Comrade McClury made a short talk on bolshevism and its origin and gave to his hearers one of the most highly defined definitions of socialism and its fruits that has so far been presented in Tiffin.

When Comrade Martin was introduced she didn't realize that she was going to speak to more than the workers of this vicinity, but in the well filled auditorium were many professional men and politicians of the old anr nearly past regime.

When our comrade remarked on the "convict" strike at "our capitol." Ft. Leavenworth as proof of the coming solidarity and the most powerful of all weapons "reason" she was applauded by all within hearing.

After the meeting, when about to adjourn, a doctor and an old time politician went forward to congratulate Comrade Martin on her address. The politician was approached on the subject of their present national leader and he laughingly stated that such was a thing of the past, he would, from now on, follow the masses.

The receipts from the collection and sale of literature was exceptionally large considering the number present who were not red.

Local Tiffin will be out in front on Debs' protest day, having plans to placard the entire county with protest signs and to get the signature of every voter in this district on a protest portcard.

At our last regular meeting we had as our guest Comrade Daniel Rosenberg of New York city, a traveling salesman, who gave a very lengthy talk on the many locals and branches in New York, demonstrating the many different social factions, but when he came to Ohio he stated that he found only one, that being completely Bolsheviki, and no moderate or conservative element.

When about to leave he was handed a few copies of the O. S. and the O. S. received another new one-year sub.

In Tiffin we draw no line in our drive for new members and as for subs we try everybody, and by our growing sub list you can tell the results.

Political Prisoners Must be Released

War is ruthless and brutal. It is a negation of democracy. War knows no sympathy for its victims, and for its success the most unjust and extreme punishment is meted out to those whose conscience and principles are not in harmony with it.

Thousands of men and women have been imprisoned, both by court-martial and by civil courts—men and women whose only crime was disagreement with the world war. That sentences given these thousands of political and military war prisoners were unjust was proven at hearings before the senate investigating committee.

The war is over. Society is returning to a more or less normal state. Hate of workers by each other is being replaced by love and vengeance by kindness. Working men and women in all parts of the United States are beginning to realize that the thousands of war prisoners rotting in jails are of their class and not of the class that plunders—the profiteers. Although a venal press may have divided the workers upon this question of war, neither the capitalist press nor any other agency of the ruling class can much longer divide the workers upon the question of identity of interests.

All political prisoners of war are of our blood and our class. We demand their release. We shall not rest until the dungeon door opens for the last of the political and military war prisoners. We shall agitate and propagate for their release until the workers of the entire country, en masse, join in this just and humane demand.

We demand that the United States congress, the president, the secretary of war and others at present clothed with power, and who have jurisdiction over the fate of these thousands of political prisoners of war, immediately set in motion the necessary governmental machinery for the release of all men and women now in prison because of opposition to the war or infractions of its autocratic regulations.

DECLARATION REGARDING THE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE ELECTION ADOPTED BY LOCAL CUYAHOGA COUNTY

As a result of the war, which has brought in its wake the social revolution in action, a strong movement has developed in every Socialist Party of the world for more radical and revolutionary tactics. This is a logical development to those who view socialism, not as a scheme or a plan devised by some great mind, but as a social movement, having its roots deep in the existing social conditions, which must change and adjust itself as the social and economic conditions develop and change.

While the need for new orientation is clearly apparent, there is an element within the party which is either unwilling or unable to adjust itself to the new world conditions and the new tactics required by these conditions. Unfortunately this element has controlled the party National Executive Committee and the party machinery, with the consequence that the national organization, in place of furnishing the leadership and urging the locals forward to take advantage of the present world crisis in building up the proletarian movement, has conspicuously lagged behind.

In view of these conditions we believe that it is essential that the party membership act intelligently in voting for candidates for National Executive Committee. In the past it has too often happened that because members of the party have not been acquainted with the position nor capabilities of candidates, that they have been obliged to vote blindly, or have voted for those whose names are best known to them as writers or speakers, without knowing their position in regard to party policies.

Local Cuyahoga County, by practically unanimous vote of its membership, has endorsed the Left Wing position in the party. While among the candidates for this district there are a number who support the Left Wing position, we believe that it is essential that those who favor this position agree upon certain candidates. Be it therefore,

Resolved, By the County Central Committee of Local Cuyahoga County, that we endorse C. E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland, Marquerite Prevey of Akron and Fred Harwood of Newark, N. J., and urge all members who wish to support the Left Wing position to vote for these candidates for National Executive Committeemen; that we endorse C. E. Ruthenberg, Louis C. Fraina, John Reed and Isaac E. Ferguson for the International Delegates; that we urge the members to vote "NO" for both candidates for International Secretary, as they do not represent the Left Wing of the party. Be it further

Resolved, That this declaration be published in the Socialist News, the Ohio Socialist, and that it be sent to all other Socialist papers in this district for publication.

E. B. AUSTIN, Asst. State Sec. 231 Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

Louisville, Ky., March 27, 1919.

Special Meeting of the Executive Committee.

Present: J. L. Stark, F. E. Stevens, R. M. Rasmussen and J. J. Bossemer. Absent: W. C. Goodman.

J. J. Bossemer elected chairman.

The following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, Our Comrade J. L. Stark has been selected general organizer for the Expressmen and was selected because of his many years' experience in the Socialist party, and

Whereas, He has organized the Expressmen on a larger scale than has ever been attempted in the past, and

Whereas, His enemies are taking advantage of him because of his political views and have caused him to be removed as general organized. And that too, by a frame-up, in which he was taken by a secret service man to the district attorney on the alleged charges of bolshevism and I. W. W. ism, and

Whereas, All of these charges were promptly dismissed and we are of the opinion that said charges were only part of a well conceived political scheme to prejudice the workmen against him because of his political niews, and

Whereas, the railroad employes central body, representing eleven railway unions (5,000 members) have unanimously taken up his defense and demanded that he be exonerated of these vicious charges.

Therefore be it resolved, That we, the State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Kentucky, in special session, March 27, 1919, do hereby urge the membership of said party to give their support to the defense of Comrade J. L. Stark, to the end that he may defeat his enemies and continue his usefulness in the labor movement.

A PROTEST THAT PROTESTS

An order for supplies to the extent of $41.40 is the way Local Ashtabula protests against the imprisonment of Comrade Debs. Making Socialists is the best possible protest against this latest crime of the master class.

CELEBRATION AT YOUNGSTOWN

A monster protest meeting will be held in Youngstown, May 1. The seven branches of the Socialist Party, together with a number of locals from near by cities, will take part. All labor organizations are also invited to help make this meeting one of the greatest demonstrations ever witnessed in Youngstown. Ten speakers in a number of languages will furnish the oratory for the occasion.

The management has engaged two bands to furnish revolutionary music for the entertainment of the crowds. C. E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland will speak on the Public Square, May 4, at 8 p. m.

CARRMONTE BRANCH ACTIVE

Local Carrmonte is on the active list. The comrades have routed the germs of sloth and are now up in arms against the social disease-capitalism. The comrades are building up an organization composed of real reds, as they have learned they are the only kind to be relied upon. Literature sales are being rushed by this live little local.

LOCAL CINCINNATI SUBMITS CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES

The following proposed constitutional amendments are offered by Local Cincinnati for the consideration of the comrades.

Article 1, Section 2. The aims and objects of the Socialist Party of Ohio is to organize the working class on the political and industrial field, for the purpose of securing the unconditional surrender of the capitalist class, and by destroying the present capitalist system and establishing industrial democracy.

Sec. 3, New Article. To further this effort to overthrow the present capitalist system and the securing of the unconditional surrender of the capitalist system and the securing of the unconditional surrender of the capitalist class, we obligate ourselves to the adoption of the Soviet form of government.

Article 18, Section 1. To insert the words, "all other political parties and non-partisan groups."

Resolution

That the press stamps be marked with the month of the year, corresponding in size with the dues stamp and issued quarterly.

HUBBARD LECTURE COURSE

The comrades of Hubbard have engaged four speakers for four consecutive Sunday meetings.

The lectures will be in the following order:

May 2—C. E. Ruthenberg.
May 9—Thurber Lewis.
May 16—Tom Lewis.
May 23—Chas. Baker.

Every comrade in Hubbard is urged to get out and hustle for the success of these meetings, which promise to be the greatest held there for a long time. Take your families with you comrades, and your neighbors also.

HENNACY BEGINS 2nd TERM

Comrade A. A. Hennacy of Columbus who has been serving nearly two years at the Atlanta penitentiary, has been released from that institution. He has now been sentenced to nine months at Delaware, O., for failing to register.

In a recent letter to the State Office, Comrade Hennacy states that he is in the best of health and spirits, but longs to get into the real fight again.

POLICE BECOME LAW BREAKERS

The comrades of Farrell, Pa., were treated to a dastardly example of the lawlessness of the capitalist tools of that city on April 14, when Comrade Wm. J. Dodge of Buffalo attempted to speak for Local 225, W. I. I. U.

About 500 people had assembled at the hall when about 50 police, soldiers, detectives and the fire department, appeared at the door. The fire hose was run into the building and turned upon the audience. Seizing the speaker, masked men carried him to Sharon by auto. When between Sharon and Youngstown, O., they turned him loose, firing volleys of pistol shots after him as he was told to "beat it."

The workers were treated roughly when they refused to flee before the representatives of disorder and anarchy who wore the livery of the U. S. government. The streets were crowded and many small altercations occurred between the peaceful citizens and the assassins of the people's liberties.

This outrage at Farrel is but another evidence of the regard for the laws which the capitalists have. Some fine day the workers will resent such interference and a lot of blood will flow, but it won't all be from the workers' veins.

ANOTHER VICTIM

Dear Comrades: On way from Weed, New Mexico, to Santa Fe, to stand trial for alleged violation of espionage act.

It keeps historians humping to record mankinds' progress these days. Away here in New Mexico I can hear the hum in your office. Keep it up.

Fraternally,
W. P. CALKINS.

Comrade Calkins is an Ohio Socialist booster. We await word of the outcome of his trial.—Ed.

ONE BIG ORDER

Local Toledo does things in a big way. That's because it does big things, or perhaps it does big things because it used big methods. Any way, Local Toledo gets results. Aside from scaring the police department out of a state of somnambulism, the local did another big thing last week. It ordered $450 worth of Ohio Socialist subscription cards. Not only were these cards ordered but they are being sold, as returns prove. Local Toledo has learned one of the great secrets of success. And that is to plan big things and then to see big methods in betting the desired results. Follow the lead of Toledo.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATE SPEAKS IN COLUMBUS

J. L. Bachman, Socialist Party candidate for mayor, will speak at a meeting at 50 1-2 West Gay St., April 27, at 2:30 p. m. The public is invited and all Socialists are urged to be present.

VOTE TO STRIKE MAY 1.

If the decision of the six important unions in France is adhered to, May 1 will be observed by a general abstention from work.

The delegates of these unions—the railroad workers, mines, dock workers, metal workers, sailors and general transport workers—at a meeting decided to unite in efforts to obtain recognition of the demands of the workers, especially an eight hour day and increased wages.

WHY?

Now that the war is over, may we ask why the following, taken from Montgomery and Ward's buyers' guide No. 90? How many readers of this catalog will give a thought to the meaning of this notice?

NOTICE

In our previous catalog we announced that we had discontinued the sale of all revolvers except for police and military purposes. The government is now taking the entire output of the factories making such firearms and for this reason we do not [illegible]

Debs' Message To You

During the last lap of his journey to prison Debs turned to us for a moment, with just the flicker of a tired feeling in his eyes. Yet he was smiling the old familiar smile as he said:

"If I were to engage in satire I would say how strange it is that I have been organizing labor for half a century, and now I am being taken to prison by organized workers, most of them wearing the button of their craft in their hats."

It was literally true. The conductors, the brakemen, the firemen, the engineers, the motormen, all union men, helped take Debs to prison.

As we ascended the incline that leads up to the sleepy hamlet of Moundsville, and to the state prison, Debs gave us his last words to his comrades everywhere. He said:

"As I am about to enter the prison doors I wish to send to the Socialists who have so loyally stood by me since my first arrest, this little message of love and cheer. These are pregnant days and promising ones. We are all on the threshold of tremendous changes. The workers of the world are awakening and bestirring themselves as never before. All the forces that are playing upon the modern world are making for the overthrow of despotism in all its forms and for the emancipation of the masses of mankind. I shall be in prison in the days to come, but my revolutionary spirit will be abroad and I shall not be inactive. Let us all in this supreme hour measure up to our full stature and work together for the great cause that means emancipation for us all. Love to my comrades and hail to the revolution!"

As Debs' body was locked away in West Virginia's bastile, his mind did not concern itself with the question of any presidential pardon that might come offering him release.

"Suppose," we asked him, before he was separated from us, "suppose President Wilson should cable a pardon for you without any strings attached to it, an unconditional pardon, what would you do, what would be your attitude?"

Debs' answer came without a moment's hesitation.

"I shall refuse to accept it unless the same pardon is extended to every man and woman in prison under the Espionage Law. They must let them all out—I. W. W.'s and all—or I won't come out. I do not want any special dispensation of justice in my case. It is perfectly clear. I have always taken that position, and I cannot too strongly assert it now."

The reply must come from America's toiling millions. Get them all out through your organized power and protest.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION

Beloved Comrade: Were I a praying man I would spend some time on my knees wrestling for more power for your good right arm.

The first copy of your most excellent paper, shown me by a comrade, made for itself a large place in my heart and mind. I became a subscriber at once after reading it and am now plugging religiously to strengthen the influence of the Ohio state organ.

I have spent many years (30) in disseminating the beauty, the justness and the common sense of socialism in Michigan and Indiana, in both of which states I am well known.

Coming here about 18 months ago I was quite lost without the touch of my former comrades and naturally concluded that Ohio must be backward in social revolution, perhaps natural enough during the war period.

Since, however, that splendid Ohio Socialist fell into my hands I take off my hat to the movement in this state and will do all I can to boost its circulation.

With profoundest regards for every reader (because they know a good thing when they see it) and wishing the best of success to all who are connected with the paper, I am

Official Organization News

B. M. DUTTON, State Secretary.

Chairman State Committee, J. W. Cassell, 622 14th Ave. S. W., Roanoke, Va. State Secretary, B. W. Dutton, Abingdon, Va.

Virginia Comrades: Another month has roller around and finds us that much nearer our doom—being devoured alive by the dreadful Bolsheviki. Our Mr. Wilson went to Europe to demolish the thing there, and thus save us in free America from the dread and uneasiness of it. But alas, he has failed, and now we may look out. He is coming back to quarantine against it here, but he may fail again, so you had better be prepared for the worst. Shut yourself up in your homes, pull down the blinds and pray.

And you better pray pretty darned hard, too. If this thing gets you, you are ruined. Bolshevism in free America would mean that the country would be ruled and run by common roughneck persons. These roughnecks would demand shorter hours of labor and everything they produce, so you see there would be nothing left for the better classes, theyefore they would be compelled to go to work on the same terms with the roughnecks. These fool roughnecks would cut out waste, duplication and graft so that pretty soon there would be abundance for all, and lots of leisure for pleasure and cultural improvement, so that by and by these roughneck persons would become cultured and self-respecting gentlemen and ladies AND BE AS GOOD AS ANYBODY. Now if this would not ruin a country I'd like to know what in blazes would?

Take it from me Bo, any country in which the roughneck persons melt up together with the good society that they are all on the same economic and cultural level, so that there is no longer lots of poor, half-starved poor white trash and niggers, compelled by their need and helplessness to wait on us for the bare necessities of existence, Black our boots, cook our meals and do all the labor of our upkeep while we joy-ride, guzzle the best brands and enjoy life generally, IS RUINED.

It is being announced from the Chicago pournalistic red-light district that the I. W. W.'s, the Socialists and a few other dependable anarchists are to meet in that city sometime the first of May and lease the United States out to the Bolsheviki for a million years. I bet the Chicago police will make it lively for them before that lease is finally signed.

When Jesus was here the last time he said something about "he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one." Wonder what he meant? Anyway the expression does not synchronize with modern improvement in the art of slaughter. Modernized it would read: "He that hath no Colt automatic, let him sell his Liberty Bond and buy one."

If Jesus were here now and should say that, he would be considered a dangerous Bolshevik; Billie Sunday would stop preaching him and call the police, and he would come within about thirty cents of getting what he got before.

All together now comrades, for the liveliest demonstration ever made in this land of liberty on the first of May. Every journalistic red-light district in America is busy belching their venom against Debs, and doing their dirty darndest to prejudice the people against him, that he may be left to perish in an American bastile. Debs is sacrificing himself in the effort to emancipate the masses, while these journalistic harlots who seek to load him with opprobrium are sacrificing the masses that THEY may bask in the favor of the masters and live sumptuously. Between them and Debs there is a great gulf that language cannot bridge. If Debs rots in a bostile in "Free America" it will be to the everlasting shame—not of radicals alone, but to the whole nation.

"There is a tide in human affairs that, taken at its flood, leads on to—world-wide emancipation." That tide is now on and is still rising; if we wait until it ebbs, we may be left stranded. While this mighty epochal tide is beating, the screech of the mere reformist sounds as insane as the chirp of a cricket in a cyclone—and it is. The world does not move to betterment by slow reforms. Evolution, nowhere, works up a gradual incline. The factors slowly develop and gain potentiality then suddenly there is a rupture, an upheaval, and the process starts onward again upon a different plan. All new things are born in travail. There must be birthpangs, and the sunshine reformer who would ride into Utopia in ease and security while the band plays soft, seductive airs for him, had as well sit down—he is not in it.

Debs said: "I could get $150,000—I could sell out your cause for that easily." Debs is not for sale—the plutes have not money enough to buy him—but I wonder what some "labor leaders" have cost that are not with us any more.

The movement in Virginia for the month of March has not shown volcanic activity. Let us hope the smoldering fires will burst into flame pretty soon—in time to make a big red glow on May Day.

No Compromise Says Herman

(Comrade Emil Herman, State Secretary of Socialist Party of Washington, is imprisoned in McNeil's Island penitentiary, Washington).

Lately the papers are announcing a commutation of sentences in Espionage Act cases.—That is a compromise which is not, and cannot be, satisfactory to intelligent, thinking and liberty-loving Americans. The autocratic politicians of the Democratic party are beginning to hear from the people—They want to mollify public opinion, and they want to "save their face," they want the convictions to stand, and the inference left that the Espionage Act is constitutional and that the convictions obtained under it were justified. The facts are that the law is in contravention to the United States constitution; and that many, perhaps, MOST, of the convictions were secured by an appeal to prejudice and fear, rather than on proof of violation of the law.

Accept no compromise! Demand full justice.

EMIL HERMAN.

NEWS AND VIEWS—A WEEKLY SURVEY

Edited by C. E. Ruthenberg

Austria Joins the Soviets

The news from Vienna that the Workers and Soldiers' Council has taken over the power of government in Austria, adds another country committed to the idea of Soviet rule—and adds another country lost to capitalist democracy.

Although the capitalist newspaper dispatches tell us little of what is happening in Roumania, Bulgaria and Czecho-Slovakia, it is certain that in all these countries, in fact in all the territory east of the Rhine, the same contest that has just resulted in another victory for the Soviet idea, is being waged. We know that the struggle is on in Germany—and how long can the Ebert-Scheidemann regime hang on with a Soviet Republic established in Austria, Hungary and Russia?

It is not mere chance that in country after country the workers establish their control through the Soviets. It is because the councils of workers, rising out of the industries, are the logical expression of working class power that the Soviet movement moves forward from victory to victory.

It is not only among the war-torn nations of central and eastern Europe that the Soviet movement is making headway. It is manifesting itself in England very strongly. The English capitalists, always quick to compromise when they see their power threatened, are trying to fix up a compromise with the nascent Soviets of Great Britain, by organizing shop committees, industrial councils and national councils, in which both the workers and the capitalists will have representation, thus robbing these institutions of their characteristics as instruments of the workers in the struggle for their emancipation. They may succeed—temporarily. But for how long?

The Soviet government has come to stay. New Soviet governments will arise as the months go by and it will not be long until the eastern boundary of Soviet Europe is the Rhine. Can capitalism stop the Soviet movement there? It is not likely. The Soviet movement will sweep forward and onward until the Soviet Republic of the World comes into being.

Uncle Sam

The telephone operators strike in the New England states has been temporarily ended, while a commission endeavors to adjust the grievances of the workers. It is interesting to note, however, that after the strike had been under way for a number of days, the government, the meployer in this instance, followed the usual custom of employers and brought in imported strikebreakers to help whip the strikers into submission.

The history of Mr. Burleson's dealings with the employers of the Postoffice Department and more recently, of the telegraph and telephone systems, shows conclusively that the government may be, and usually is, a more arbitrary oppressor and exploiter of the workers when it becomes their employer, than private capitalists.

The recent erperience of government employes of the two departments referred to, emphasizes the fact that the workers' road to freedom is not through government ownership. Government ownership substitutes the power of the combined capitalist class for the power of the individual capitalists, while continuing the oppression and exploitation of the workers.

The struggle of the workers must have as its goal the creation of industrial democracy from below—through organization of the workers in the industries to take control.

Dollar Patriotism

The National Security League was one of the great patriotic institutions of the country during the war. It was relentless in its pursuit of all those that did not measure up to its standard of patriotism, among its victims being even some congressmen who did not always vote exactly as this league would have liked them to vote—that is they did not always vote to protect and conserve the financial interests of the members of the league.

The league, however, over did the patriotic business. It urged the defeat of certain members of congress, who although they did not quite measure up to the league's standard of patriotism as above defined, were good, honest supporters of capitalism and what it stands for. When the league attacked these congressmen it put its foot into it, for there is a strong feeling of sympathy between the members of congress, for none of them know where the next attack will strike and so they usually stand together.

The result of the tactical error of the National Security League was that congress authorized an investigation of that body. The report of the committee which conducted the investigation has just been published. This is what it has to say about the origin of this great, patriotic organization:

> It will be impracticable in a report of the length to which, of necessity, this must be confined, to take up all of the "foreign entanglements" of the originators of the National Security League. However, sight must not be lost of the fact that it was conceived in London by an attorney representing sugar, steel and other large interests both in this country and abroad; and that at its very inception in New York others representing like interests are found among thoes who became the most active in its organization; and, next, when the organization had thrown aside its pretense of being engaged only in "preparedness' 'and had reached the real purpose of its undertaking Mr. Charles D. Orth was selected to take charge of its real activities, which unquestionably were political in nature, as it will be shown later in this report.
> The testimony shows that Mr. Orth is a member of a New York firm dealing in sisal, from which the farmer's binder twine is made, and who, according to his own statement before a senate investigating committee, had been engaged in trying to form a combination to increase the price of his product.

In other words the National Security League consisted of a bunch of capitalists bent upon furthering their own interests through building up a great army and navy in this country, which might later be used in the struggle to win economic advantages for its members.

How such an organization controls the government is told in one of the closing paragraphs of the report:

> The National Security League and like organizations in their political activities constitute a serious menace to representative government. Ordinarily their purpose is concealed and their appeal is made to the public on some principle in harmony with dominant sentiment. Usually, as in this instance, they have access to almost unlimited wealth, and borrow respectability by the use, in honorary positions, of the names of men of national prominence. If their real purpose were apparent, the danger would be relieved.
> Men in public life are given by them to understand that they must be subservient to the demands of such institutions, and, upon their failure to do so, they will be held up to public scorn and humiliation by false accusations. Under such circumstances the best intentioned candidate for office realizes that he has one of two alternatives: He must be either subservient to the demands of these camouflaged organizations, or be put on the defensive by false charges. Such activities on the part of the National Security League have a tendency to compel obedience to the wishes of special interests, rather than obedience to a real concern for the welfare of the people. This condition is not at all fanciful, since its baneful activities of the National Security League.

That is a confirmation of what Socialists have said about bourgeois democracy from the supporters of that "democracy." What the report plainly tells us in the above paragraphs is that while we have the form of democracy in this country, in reality the capitalists, through such organizations as the National Security League, and other means through which they exercise the power which control of the wealth of the country gives them, actually dominate the government. While we may have democratic institutions in form, in practice we get a government by the capitalist class.

What Mr. Wilson achieved in Paris, told by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation, in the following statement, issued upon his return to New York:

> Mr. Wilson surrendered at the first blow, as many of us who have followed him closely knew that he would. When he calmly abandoned his principle of "open covenants of peace, openly orrived at," we kniw that others of the 14 points would be sacrificed for a partial league of peace.
> The whole conference was tremendously undemocratic, and so false was the note struck from the beginning that I, for one, found myself entirely without a thrill at the historic opening session. For it at once appeared that it was all to be done behind closed doors, in the same old way, and the number of men "putting it over" on the world rapidly diminished to the quartet who reminded one of nothing so much as the little group of professional politicians who steer our party conventions, where they still exist, from a back room.

In England more than 1,000,000 persons are drawing unemployment benefits from the government. The British workers have organized their power to such an extent at least that the capitalists dare not close the factories and send them out on the streets to starve as is still the case in the United States.

The most striking development so far as modern parliamentary governments are concerned is the passing of power from these bodies to other organizations. In England the parliament is theoretically still supreme, but it is the organized workers that really have the power. The following statement, clipped from a news story on current events in England, shows what is happening in this respect:

> Another resolution passed by the miners today should warn a government whose majority in parliament is an entirely artificial one, that it will not be easy to rule a country that is really not represented by a House of Commons consisting mainly of employers. Last night's attempt—unsuccessful, of course—on the part of labor and liberal minorities in the commons to exclude conscription from the new army bill has been followed today by the miners' warning that, unless the government withdraws the conscription bill now before parliament, the conference will take steps, in conjunction with the other labor parties in the country, to compel it to do so.
> The full significance of this courageous resolution can be scarcely exaggerated.

Leave it to the capitalist to turn everything that comes along to their financial advantage. Here's a New York moving picture producing company, for instance, which has produced a new photo play called "Bolshevism on Trial," suggesting to moving picture theater managers that one way to advertise the play is to have big red flags put up in different sections of the city and then to hire soldiers to tear them down. Of course, the Socialists would be blamed for putting up the flags and some people might get hurt when they were torn down, but that's all part of the game of making profits.

"The internal conditions in Russia do not justify a gigantic military enterprise. I would rather leave Russia to the Bolsheviki, until I see a way out, than to have Britain bankrupt. It is my earnest conviction that intervention was the greatest act of stupidity." So said Lloyd George in the British parliament the other day. The ethics of the capitalist statesmen are clear in this statement. Intervention was wrong, not because it was a violation of the right of self-determination of which both Lloyd George and Mr. Wilson are supposed to be adherents, but because it didn't pay.

Bolshevism is on the wane in Russia, we are assured, and the Bolsheviki capture Sebastopol is the next headline.

The Day of the People

Written Especially for the Ohio Socialist by W. E. Reynolds.

Once again the glint is on the grasses, and the sap is in the trees. Mother Nature in response to the amorous kisses of the spring time sun recarpets the earth with a coverlet of green, embroidered here with the gold of the dandelion and the marsh marigold and there the many colored crocuses. The trees take on new life and burst into bud and bloom pregnant with promise of future fruit. While we may know in our own mind that Nature is planless and purposeless, it requires but a small amount of imagination to conceive of nature trying by all the arts of wizardry of leaf and blade and bloom to hide the hideous disfiguring of a commercialism which has ravished her fair beauty.

Spring time is growing time; youth time, joy time, and historically speaking, the first of May, from almost time immemorial was the day set apart as a gala day dedicated to merry making and celebration of the return of spring and hope and the growing sun.

Originally a pagan holiday given over to sun worship, later a holiday of fun and merry making under the feudal barons, tinged with a touch of religious ceremonial, out of which has grown the present Christian Easter, changed again, under the rule of a blighting capitalism into a day of advertising and market day and finally seized by the international proletariat of the world as Labor Day; such, in brief, is the history of May Day.

Here in America, the first Monday in September is set aside by law as Labor Day. That is the Labor Day GIVEN by the master class. May 1 is a Labor Day TAKEN by the working class. On the September Labor Day, given by the masters, we meet and listen to the strains of jazz music by a rag-time band. On May Day we meet and are inspired by the singing of the International, rising full throated and pregnant with meaning, from throats that mean it. With the jazz music we are told that the interests of capital and labor are identical but under the International we know, without having to be told, that the interests of capital and labor are not identical but opposed. On the September day the boss takes heart as he watches his paid lackeys at their task of herding his fawning dupes. On May Day the master gets a direct warning that his days are numbered and not for long will he be allowed to live a life of fattened ease at the expense of the toil and sweat and blood of his disfranchised slaves.

May Day as Labor Day was created by the workers themselves in defiance of the capitalists of the world. In establishing that holiday much rich, red blood has been spilled, but now we know it was not spilled in vain. The streets of Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Petrograd and Peking, Moscow and scores of other cities have run red with blood, spilled by the hirelings of a robber class in the vain hope of stopping by force and violence the mighty onrush of a new idea, but ideas can not be stopped by bullets, nor barred by boundary lines or prison bars.

As we meet again this May Day to celebrate the growing solidarity of labor, we are full of the hope and joyousness of labor's spring time. We know and realize that never before in all the history of May Day celebrations of Labor have we had so much to be joyous over or so great an assurance of the fulfillment of our fondest hopes, in the past year, packed as it has been with the persecutions and prosecutions of our class with the constitutional guarantees of a free press and free assemblage, only so many tattered and torn scraps of paper beneath the feet of an arrogant oligarchy; with the most of our press barred from the second class mailing privileges, and many of our comrades slain, yet we know that never before in all the hundred years since the birth of Marx, has as much been done toward establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat, and enforcing a work or starve order upon the lazy members of the bourgeoisie, as has been witnessed since last we gathered to celebrate the May Day festival.

Our press has not been destroyed, it has been inconvenienced, forced to abandon its old attempt to capture the political state by playing the capi-ist game and to a realization of the truths of Marx and Engels, who said, e working class can not simply lay hold of the ready made state machinery nd wield it for its own purpose." Every paper we pick up today, regardless of whether it is a time serving, lying, cringing, crawling capitalist sheet, a rebellious Socialist paper or a defiant I. W. W. paper, all ring with the same story, revolt and revolutions everywhere. To the revolutionist, it is as the soothing strains of sweet music to an ear accustomed to hearing only the discordant notes of the Industrial Moloch; cheering him as water does a weary traveler in a desert land. The same reports are to the capitalists as the mournful notes of a funeral dirge.

Truly spoke our martyred Comrade Liebknecht, when he said, "The day of the people has arrived." We CAN be joyful. We can be glad, for out of the east cometh the light, and out of the east cometh the reports of the day of the people having arrived, and by the same token the day of the loiter is drawing rapidly to the twilight of its close.

A Debs was jailed because he defied a court's injunction. It made a fighting Socialist of him, and now after a life time of effort well spent in spreading the Socialist message the prison doors have again been locked, imprisoning the body but not the spirit of Debs. The days when a Joshua could command the sun to halt and stand still for a while are gone. The capitalists cannot stop the sun to prolong their day. They think that by imprisoning a Debs they can stop the march of progress. Poor, blind, deluded victims of their own dope! They ought to know by this time that Debs in jail is a thousand times more active than an old man nearing the three score years and ten, out of jail, could be! To stop the onward rush of progress, thousands are rotting in the hell holes of capitalist prisons, but for every one of the first crop jailed, there will be a hundred of the second crop, and should the capitalist class attempt to jail the second crop, the third crop will be large enough to tear their damn jails down. Bastiles have fallen before and they will faill again.

It was Joe Hill, a martyred Industrial Worker, whose name will be remembered and reverenced for centuries after the name of the judge who sentenced him has been forgotten, who said, "Don't mourn. Organize." We pause to give grateful remembrance to all our comrades who have been slain and imprisoned, yet we will not mourn, nor petition, nor beg. We will organize and teach and strike and fight, learning to do by doing and learning to fight by fighting.

Heretofore when we spoke of the coming emancipation of the hosts who toil, we spoke from a knowledge of the abstract truths of social science as taught by Marx and Engels and their co-workers of a half century ago, but today, we do not have to deal in abstractions.

We can point to an accomplished reality. Russia has done her part in the revolution. There the dictatorship of the proletariat is not a high-sounding phrase on the lips of a parlor Socialist, but a grim reality as many an expropriated Russian bourgeoisie can testify. The revolution is not confined to Russia alone, already it has spread to Hungary, Bavaria, Germany and so many other places that one must need be up to the minute in geography to keep track of all of its ramifications. The revolution, sneered at by the capitalists just two short years ago as "mere rhetoric" has become a grim reality. "All Europe is trembling in the balance." This May Day may remake again the map of Europe. The red terror is a terror to the bourgeoisie of the world, but to the rebel there are few joys so great as watching the spread of the red, and on this gala day we have ample cause to be joyful.

The American bourgeoisie think they can keep the red from America but they might as well attempt to hold back the ocean tide with one of the celebrated fourteen points. Capitalism can not exist without its foreign markets and with one-half of the world "gone Bolshevist" can the other half hope to escape? Can two nations exist side by side with the workers in one nation receiving the full social value of their labor power and the workers of the other nation receiving only one-fifth as much? Will the workers of one nation tolerate parasitism when the workers of the other nation have abolished it? Especially in these days of easy and rapid international communication? The parasite here may well shudder and ponder over his, to him, uncertain future. To the revolutionist, the future is certain; "The day of the people has arrived."

We of the Socialist movement may thus well be glad. Glad with the joyousness of springtime, the lustiness of healthy youth. We are educating our class and organizing as rapidly as we can, to the end that we may control the coming great change and make it as bloodless as it can possibly be made. While we are organizing and educating in order to make the coming change without the needless spilling of blood, we are serene with the conscious knowledge of power. We know that the years are numbered and their numbers are few until the day when we can say to our exploiters, "Will you peacefully get off our backs or shall we be put to the necessity of forcibly throwing you from our backs? We do not intend to harm you, but by all the blood that you have needlessly shed in the centuries you have ruled, we are going to arrange it so you can no longer harm us or exploit us!"

We have mastered nature and made her the willing slave of men. We started in the quickmud and the slime, but we have climbed, onward and upward until today we can grasp the thin golden fingers of the stars. We have seen our class subjected to all the various forms of slavery and all the insults that the perverted intellect of a class of paid intellectual prostitutes could devise, but in spite of it all we have watched the inevitable changes brought about by economic evolution and seen the banner of the clasped hands of international comradeship making its triumphal progress, abolishing exploitation and slavery even as the bright rays of the spring time sun melteth away the blackened slush and ice of the by ways.

The day of the exploiter is passing.
The day of the people has arrived.
Long live May Day in the minds of men.
Long live the day of the people.

WHY WAS DEBS SPIRITED AWAY?

DEBS IN CELL 51.

We were taken to cell 51, second tier, and there we found our comrade, partially undressed, about ready to retire to a three-feet by five and a half feet steel bunk. Whether or not he truly rested comfortably that night will probably remain a secret. Comrade Debs claims he did, but how his large frame could find comfortable repost upon a "bed" so small will remain a problem.

He stretched his long arm and large hand through the steel bars, shook us each warmly by the hand, asked us not to worry about him and bid us good night.

Thus ended Debs' trip to prison. And now begins the demand of the workers for his release. May this demand come quick and come in such valume that those who now hold Debs in prison will have only one thing to do and will have to do that quick.

Already they fear the mighty working class. If they do not, why did they spirit Debs out of Cleveland and why did they avoid demonstrations? Why did not the government order out several regiments of troops to escort Debs to jail if it felt that demonstrations by workers of Cleveland and other cities, which Debs would have passed through had he not been taken to the penitentiary in such a round about way, would interfere with the safe conduct of Debs to prison?

Only a few days before Debs received a long distance telephone call supposedly from Federal Prosecuting Attorney Wertz, he was sick in bed, hardly able to walk. The telephone message came. Was it the prosecutor who telephoned? And who was the mysterious party who telephoned Mrs. Prevey to inquire about Debs? Was Debs fooled into coming to Cleveland? Why did not his lawyers advise him to stay in Terre Haute until they were notified that the supreme court mandate had arrived? Since we started to write this we have learned that the automobile which met Debs at the depot in Cleveland and took him later upon that tearing trip through Cleveland streets, eventually landed him at the Erie depot, was hired by the Plain Dealer reporter at the Waite Auto Livery. Why did the Plain Dealer reported give Debs to understand that he was connected with the federal authorities? Why did the Plain Dealer reporter make it his business to wake up the secret service in order to tell them that Debs was in town? Why did United States Marshal Lapp use a Plain Dealer car to spirit Debs out of Cleveland? Why did the deputies permit the Plain Dealer reported to accompany Debs in the mad ride through Cleveland streets and deny that right to one of Debs' family? These are questions which we ask and which hundreds of thousands of Debs' friends want to know about.

Debs, just out of bed and still suffering with lumbago, after making a night trip to Cleveland from Terre Haute, during which trip he only secured about an hour's sleep, was taken against the will of his bondsmen, who had not been notified to surrender him, and hurried to Moundsville. No chance was given him to eat until 9 o'clock in the evening. He was rushed from one trolley to another, almost dragged about, his 64 years of age seeming to make no difference at all to those who were representing the government, the strong United States government.

NO REGARD SHOWN FOR DEBS' AGE.

Why was not more regard shown for Debs' age? Let President Wilson and his underlings answer. Why was not Debs permitted a few days to arrange his business affairs? Let President Wilson and his underlings answer. Debs came to Cleveland, believing no doubt that all that was wanted of him immediately was that he place himself within the jurisdiction of the federal court in which he was convicted. He felt sure that a few days would be allowed him in Cleveland to attend to some correspondence and other business. Instead, he was rushed out of the city for the penitentiary almost the minute he entered it, being given only time enough for a hasty breakfast. As a rule, when the mandate arrives from the supreme court, the marshal notifies the attorneys of the defendant, the attorneys notify the bondsmen to give up the defendant and then the bondsmen take the defendant to the Federal building and turn him over to the marshal. Why was not this procedure followed in Debs' case? May we have an answer? And right away?

The same Sunday upon which Debs was spirited out of Cleveland 15,000 workers met at Market Square, Cleveland, and protested Debs' imprisonment. After the meeting they paraded three miles to the Federal building. An army of policemen were drawn up before the building and all doors were securely bolted. Cries of "Release Debs," "Hurrah for the General Strike," and "Down With Capitalism" filled the air. The parade then retraced its steps a block and another monster meeting was held right under the windows of the court room where Judge Westenhaver sentenced Debs.

Debs is in prison. He is twice as great and powerful in prison as out of it. This the capitalist class will very soon learn. When capitalism placed Debs behind prison bars it added oil to the fire which is even now sweeping away a foul system of robbery and human despoilation.

Demands for Debs' liberation are growing daily in volume and in forcefulness. The national, state and local Socialist parties will leave nothing undone to free our comrade, whose service in the cause of the workers has ever been most conscientious and full of love and [illegible]

CALL FOR AMERICAN FREEDOM CONVENTION

YOU ARE CONCERNED WITH THESE FACTS:

A grand army of Americans is now marching into federal prisons.

Federal judges have acquired the habit of saying ten years, twenty years, thirty years and more—in many instances dealing out what are practically life sentences.

TWENTY-FOUR THOUSAND YEARS IN PRISON, is about the aggregate of the sentences of persons already convicted.

These men and women are not criminals, but are victims of war hysteria and the espionage (spy) law, upon which the supreme court has repeatedly sidestepped a decision.

Nearly every other country has freed its war time political and industrial prisoners.

Speakers are jailed, public meetings are prohibited or broken up. Postmaster General Burleson, like a czar, still imposes his dictates upon the nation's press and rifles personal letters. Religious beliefs are passed upon by a military commission. Ministers occupy cells because of their interpretation of Biblical teachings. Political grudges are settled and labor-hating employers impale labor organizers, all under this comprehensive SPY law—THE LAW UNDER WHICH NO SPY WAS EVER BROUGHT TO COURT.

You are needed. Your decision will help to make our fellow citizens Free Men and Free Women in a Free America.

A nation-wide committee, representative of organizations that despise autocracy, has been formed under the name of NATIONAL LEAGUE FOR THE RELEASE OF POLITICAL PRISONERS, and hereby issues a call to all economic, political and other organizations for an

to be held in the city of Chicago, beginning July 3, 1919.

Representation will be accorded to all organizations that endorse, by vote, the vital purposes of the convention as stated in the two points of the program.

Reactionary and un-American policies, imposed by a small group which is in control of the mighty federal powers, cannot be successfully opposed by any local or sectional body. There must be erected a national organization of organizations with power to fight until we win.

Therefore we call upon all societies and organizations to join in this common cause FOR THE RESTORATION OF AMERICAN LIBERTIES AND FOR THE RESCUE OF ALL THOSE WHO SUFFER FOR POLITICAL OPINIONS, INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITIES OR RELIGIOUS BELIEFS.

We invite the active assistance of every liberty loving citizen.

We invite the co-operation of all the relatives of such persons as are being persecuted or are now prisoners.

The committee believes the vast majority of citizens favor this move and we are prepared to canvass the homes of the country.

The committee further believes that neither arrogant usurpers of power nor "a few willful men" can misrule this nation when legislation, in effect, is made in the workshops and at the firesides of America.

Join forces for Freedom for ALL.

The call is accompanied with a blank endorsement to be filled out and returned by organizations approving of the program and aims of the league.

Each organization affiliated with the league is entitled to one delegate to the convention, and one additional delegate for every 300 members. All correspondence should be addressed to the Immediate Action Committee, American Freedom Convention, Room 414, Mid-City Bank Building, Chicago, Illinois.

Seattle Labor Council Calls Upon A.F.of L. to Reorganize

The Central Labor Council of Seattle, Wash., has sent a letter to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, urging the reorganization of that body along industrial lines. The proposal as formulated calls for consolidation of the existing unions in twelve great industrial organizations.

The letter, which has just been received by Cleveland unions and will come before these organizations for action during the next few weeks, reads as follows:

To All Organizations Affiliated With the American Federation of Labor. Greetings:

The Seattle Central Labor Council respectfully urges your most cereful and thoughtful consideration of the enclosed proposals for the reconstruction of our organization along lines dictated by present-day industrial conditions, and earnestly requests your most energetic co-operation in bringing about these essential improvements in the interests of the wage-earners.

President Lincoln, speaking at Hartford in 1860, said: "Thank God we have a system of labor where there can be a strike. Whatever the pressure, there is a point where the working man may stop."

Yet, what does the right to strike avail us if we strike in such small units as to make us an easy prey to those who seek to exploit us? As a matter of fact, the more effectually we prepare to strike, the less striking we will have to do.

Let us remember the advice of Wendell Phillips: "Organize and STAND TOGETHER. Let the nation hear a UNITED demand from the laboring voice."

Sometimes rivals criticize us because of our obvious weaknesses, but we have nothing to fear from rivals so long as we will profit by experience and through the application of

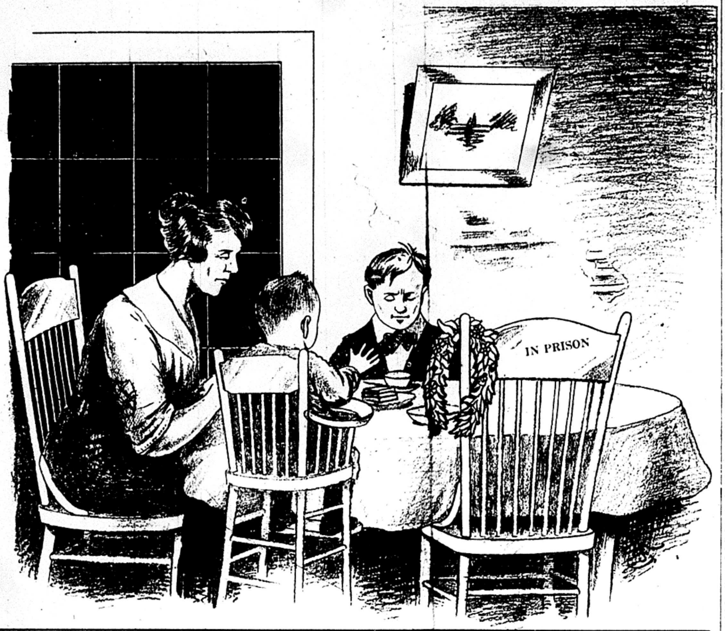
A NEW PHASE OF CAPITALISM



Soviet Representative Calls Stories of "Defeats" Lies

Says That Capitalists Are Making Desperate Efforts To Prevent Recognition Of Workers Government

During the past ten days the kept press of this country has been publishing daily dispatches telling of defeats of the forces of Soviet Russia. According to these stories the armies of the Soviet government are dissolving and tens of thousands are being captured some of whom have gone over to the enemy. In the following statement, Santeri Nuorteva, Director of the Russian Soviet Information Bureau, characterizes these stories as "lies," and points out that the present tactics of the kept press are the same as those used at the time the Prinkipo conference was under consideration:

"A perusal of the 'Russian dispatches' in the metropolitan newspapers of the last few days irresistibly raises the question: Will the American public once more permit itself to be fooled by deliberate lies about the Russian situation?

"The world-wide press campaign against Soviet Russia has always been characterized by particularly vicious lie drives on the part of reactionaries every time some possibility arises to bring about friendly relations between Soviet Russia and the United States. It is natural that, now that the power of the Russian Soviet government is extending daily over Russian territories, now that the imposibility of defeating that government is being admitted in all circles, and now that the establishment of relations between Soviet Russia and the rest of the world looms within sight, the forces opposed to such an outcome are desperately carrying on a campaign which outdoes any previous accomplishment in perfidy and deliberate lying.

"We have every day reports of Kolchak's 'victories 'in the east. To make such 'victories' appear more real, we are told that the Soviet government itself admits defeats of its troops. It should be remembered, however, that at the time of the Prinkipo conference decision we had a similar 'victory' by Denikine, similarly 'confirmed' by 'official admissions' from the Soviet government.

"We were told Denikine had captured 30,000 prisoners and extended his power over hundreds of miles of territory. About a month later the press admitted the 'victory' was a deliberate lie from beginning to end, and that, on the contrary, the Denikine forces had retired considerably and the Soviets never had published an admission of a Denikine victory.

Will Prove False.

"There is no doubt in our mind that the much heralded Kolchak 'victories' of recent date also will prove a fake within a very short time. Nevertheless, for the time being these fake 'news' stories serve their purpose. They make people, who already began to acquiesce in the necessity of recognizing the Soviet government, to hesitate once more. They make it possible once more to fool public opinion into a prolongation of a definite decision on the Russion question and even to consider the possibility of recognizing the Kolchaks.

"In line with dispatches about Kolchak's 'victories' we have, of course, new reports of 'Bolshevik atrocities.' 'Eighteen hundred men, women and, children have been murdered in Ufa.' In screaming headlines the newspapers announce this new lie emanating from the Kolchak government, whose forces have marked every step of their rule with unprecedented murder and cruelties.

"Swallowing the fake dispatches of this kind, the average reader will forget all the authentic news about the treatment accorded men, women and children of the working class by Kolchak—that blood thirsty exponent of defeated monarchy, vodka and the knout, in Russia, who now presents himself as a champion of humanity.

"It is also quite in order for the purpose of this dirty campaign of lies to dig out from the grave the take of a Bolshevik alliance with German imperialists. A secret treaty has been unearthed, 'it is reported,' which the Soviet government supposedly has entered into with the present German government.

"From private and well informed sources it is made known this treaty provides that the Soviet government shall apply a milder policy toward Russian industry, especially the munition and arms factories; that the Germans will send thousands of military instructors to the Russian army; that Soviet Russia will provide Germany for the next 20 years with military assistance; that Soviet Russia binds herself not to enter into any negotiations with the entente; and that the Germans shall set in order the Russian railway system.

Gamble on Ignorance.

"And so it is being 'proved' that the Soviet government is threatening the peace of the world by an alliance with a resurrected imperialistic Germany. The producers of such stories gamble on the deep ignorance of the average reader.

"They presume he does not remember that the present German government is as violently opposed to the Russian workers' regime as any one in the world; that the Russian Soviet government not only has not promised not to enter into negotiations with the entente, but is at this very moment actually carrying on such negotiations, and that the representatives of the Soviets welcome relations with American industry.

"It is being authoritatively stated in the press that the American delegates in Paris have proposed the recognition of the Kolchak government, including the extension of military support to his forces in the form of munitions, finance and material. To believe that this is true would seem an insult to the delegates of the peace conference.

"Only a few days ago there was an official statement from the Paris conference that a proposition is being extended to Russia whereby foodstuffs and other materials would be sent there, and one of the conditions attached to the proposition was that the Soviet government should stop fighting and using the Russian means of communication for military purposes. This statement has been given out officially.

"To believe that simultaneously with asking the Soviet government to refrain from fighting, the allies, including America, would propose to support the Kolchak government militarily seems absolutely imposible. However illogical the allied policy in Russia has been up till this time, this would outdo anything previously heard of.

Impossible to Defeat Soviet.

"If it has been impossible till now to defeat the Russian Soviet government, it is still more impossible at this time to do so. The news dispatches, of course, speaks of mass desertion of the Bolsheviki from their own ranks, and of a lowering of the morale of the workers.

"Even the old story of revolts in Petrograd is not lacking in the press stories offered for distribution by the reactionaries. Yet one will search in vain for any proofs of such assertions, or even for an indication of their probability.

"With spring at hand and with the grain-rich Ukrainian districts in the hands of the Soviet forces, the bitter sufferings of the city people in Soviet Russia must be much less today than they were in the winter. All the logic is on the side of the assumption that the position of the Soviet government is now stronger than ever, physically as well as morally.

"We are sure the American people from bitter experience will be on their guard against the shameless lie drive instituted in order to defeat at the eleventh hour the establishment of relations between the Russian workers and the United States."

Kate O'Hare Sends Message from Prison to Her Comrades

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Jefferson City, Mo.——There is but one "task" for the women in the Missouri state prison—the making of overalls.

The men may be assigned to any "task" among many. There's the broom factory, the shoe factory, the leather novelty works, the machine shop, the stone cutting shed.

"This is all we have for the women to do," said Miss Lilah Smith, the matron, as we stood in the entrance to the overall factory, which is housed in one of the big rooms of the woman's prison.

There the women toiled over the high-powered sewing machines making overalls, also called "jumpers." The "task" set for Kate Richards O'Hare, former International Secretary of the American Socialist Party, and chairman of the committee on war and militarism that drew up the now famous St. Louis Anti-War proclamation, is 55 overalls per day. If you do not make the "task" you are penalized.

I glanced over the room where there was no sound but the whirring of wheels and the suppressed roar of needles as they raced along and drove the thread through the thick cloth, either singly, double or sometimes three abreast.

It was getting well along in the afternoon, Kate O'Hare was bent to her task as if her life depended on it. I wondered how many more of those 55 overalls she had yet to make before her day's "task" was done. I also wondered if the time would ever come during the days that are ahead, when her fingers might be caught in the drag that keeps a pulling that cloth into the path of the hungry needles. I was told that such accidents happen here in the prison factories just as they do in industry on the "outside"—that fingers are mashed and pierced with threaded needles. Every girl was driving her machine at high speed, with eyes glued to the task, no doubt the result of the whip applied by Rule No. 32 of the prison regulations that:

"When at work, give your undivided attention to it. Gazing at visitors, or at other prisoners, will not be allowed."

Yet, as her machine rushed on, Emma Goldman looked up for a mo-

Italian Socialists Repudiate Second International

Washington.—The executive committee of the Socialist Party of Italy has resolved to sever its connection with the International Socialist Bureau and to affiliate with the "Third International" founded recently by the Russian Communist party and sundry Socialist or revolutionary groups of the other European countries, according to authentic information which reaches us from Europe. The vote in the executive committee was ten in favor of withdrawing to three against. The text of the resolution passed by the executive committee follows, the translation being made from the original text as published in Humanite, the official Socialist daily of Paris, France:

"Whereas, The International Socialist Bureau is an instrument of the war policy of the pseudo-democratic bourgeoisie tending to the mystification of the proletariat and is only a barrier to the reorganization of the activity of the Socialist Revolutionary International, and

"Whereas, All the efforts tending to bring back to life the energies of the Socialist proletariat by means of the International Socialist Bureau, now a hostage of the imperialist bourgeoisie of the entente, have been in vain; and

"Whereas, The alliance constituted at Berne between the social-patriotic tendencies of the ententiste imperialism and the social-patriotic tendencies of the imperialism of the central empires brings into the open the reactionary character of all the fractions who were false to the pledges made by the international in opposition to the bourgeoisie who threw the peoples into the war; and

"Whereas, In consequence it is impossible to conceive the co-existence in a single organization of those who were loyal to the principles of the international and those who betrayed those principles and are still opposed to the realization of socialism; and

"Whereas, The International Bureau, instead of, as soon as the war ended, bringing about the immediate convocation of the parties and organizations affiliated with the Bureau, loaned itself to the work of making a success of the Berne conference, which was nothing less than a caricature of an International Socialist conference; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the Socialist Party of Italy withdraw from the International Socialist Bureau and affiliate with and work for the establishment of the Socialist Revolutionary International upon the basis and principles laid down by the Russian Communist comrades at Moscow in the month of January, for the convening of an International Socialist Conference; and be it further

"Resolved, That the executive committee shall carry active work to secure for the aforesaid purpose the adhesion of those Socialists of all countries who have remained faithful to the International, either by convening a preliminary meeting or by any other action deemed proper to attain the result sought."

The resolution was supported by Gennari, Serarati and Bombacci and opposed by Lazarri, Bacci and Dindani.

"The Italian Socialist Party, instead of withdrawing from the international," said Bacci, "should make energetic and persistent effort to expel all those who have been faithless to its principles. Toward this end the party should, on the one hand, gather together and co-ordinate in preliminary meetings those elements of the international which never ceased to observe the class principles, and, on the other hand, invite once more the bureau to convene an emergency meeting of the international and place before it a resolution demanding the expulsion of the traitors." After reiterating that the Italian Socialists should not withdraw from the international unless those faithless to socialism should be in the majority, Bacci concluded: "To create a Third International when the Second International still exists in its representative organism would produce a pernicious confusion in the ranks of the proletariat of the various countries."

May Day Manifesto of the Socialist Party

On this international holiday of labor the Socialists of the United States solemnly announce their determination to consecrate themselves with renewed earnestness and vigor to the world-wide struggle for the complete overthrow of the capitalists and for turning over the world's government to the world's workers. The formal termination of the war finds the ruling classes and their governments in all capitalist countries discredited and distrusted, judged and convicted.

In the fierce impact of their conflicting greeds they have brutally slaughtered millions of workers and mutilated, crippled and invalided many more millions. They have destroyed human habitations, workshops and fields without number, and have devastated whole countries.

They have disrupted the lives of the nations and surrendered the peoples to hunger and disease, suffering and despair.

Potent enough to throw the nations into war, but powerless to make and maintain peace; too weak to rule and too selfish to abdicate, the powers of capitalism stand before the world as derelicts of a dark age, as dangerous enemies of humanity and progress.

We, therefore, welcome with joy the powerful movements of our fellow workers in Europe for the immediate liquidation of the capitalist system of oppression and exploitation, and for the establishment of workers' republics.

We send fraternal greetings and vows of whole-hearted sympathy to the Socialist Soviet Republic of Russia, which is so valiantly upholding the lofty international proletarian ideals in the face of the combined military, economic and political attacks of reactionary powers and in spite of the systematic campaign of libelous misrepresentation on the part of the lying capitalist press of the world.

We send congratulations and fraternal good wishes to the workers of Hungary on the establishment of a free communistic workers' republic upon the ruins of the predatory monarchy of their exploiting and land-monopolizing rulers.

We extend the hand of comradeship and solidarity to the revolutionary Socialists of Germany and Austria, now engaged in the life-and-death struggle to secure for the working masses of their countries the full fruit of their victorious revolutions; to the workers of England in their efforts to wrest the control of the industries from the parasites in their country, and to the Socialists of France, Italy and all other countries of Europe in their fights against their reactionary governments.

With the dismal failure of the ruling class League of Nations, the hope of the world lies in the irresistible League of the Communistic Commonwealth of the workers.

We call upon the workers of the United States to join in the onward march of the international proletariat toward the conquest of liberty.

While our young men by the millions have been risking their lives abroad for the alleged cause of democracy, our government has taken advantage of the oppressive war-spirit of intolerant terror to crucify democracy and to crush all radical movements at home.

Under the sanction of a reactionary act of congress and with the aid of a servile officialdom and judiciary, of profiteering interests and a short-sighted labor leadership, an orgy of oppression and persecution was inaugurated, which is unequalled in the political annals of the country for its shamelessness and brutality. Hundreds of Socialists and radical labor leaders have been thrown into jail for inhumanly long terms, scores of Socialist and labor papers have been suppressed, thousands of peaceful meetings have been broken up; all cherish constitutional rights and liberties of American citizenship were cynically trampled under food and all representative government was practically abrogated by an administration, which has the audacity to pose at home and abroad as the leader of modern "liberalism."

The Socialists of the United States demand the immediate restoration of constitutional republican government in this country. We demand the immediate repeal of the infamous espionage law, the immediate lifting of the despotic postoffice ban on radical publications, and the full freedom of speech, assemblage and organization to the end that American labor may freely pursue the legitimate struggles for the emancipation of its class.

We demand the immediate withdrawal of American troops illegally sent to Russia to fight the battles of Russian reaction, and we demand that our government keep its hands off Hungary and the other countries of Europe coming under communistic control, to the end that the workers of Europe be allowed to organize their own lives and destinies, free from foreign capitalist and imperialistic interferences.

Long live socialism and labor, long live the international of the proletariat!

Buffalo, N. Y.—Socialists here on Sunday, April 13, by unanimous vote, of the largest meeting of the Socialist Party members ever held in Buffalo, indorsed the Left Wing program as formulated by the Left Wing section of Local New York, as a basis for the future position and activities of the party.

The principal feature of the program is the repudiation of political activity in favor of social reform measures and the substitution of mass action, the organization of the workers in the industries and political action for the purpose of education.

The meeting demanded that the National Executive Committee call an immediate emergency national convention to formulate party policies and tactics to meet the present crisis. This was a reaffirmation of Local Buffalo's position on this proposition, the local being probably the first to follow Local Boston in the [illegible] several weeks ago.

Exploiters Do Not Keep Promises To Returned Soldiers

Washington.—President Wilson's appeal for the nation wide observance of Sunday, May 4, as "Employment Sunday" is regarded by Socialists in Washington as an attempt to break the lock-out against the returned soldiers, which the labor exploiters made effective weeks ago.

The lock-out is known to be one part of the capitalist plan to force wages down to the physical minimum by means of the tried-and-not-found wanting method of creating a gigantic army of the unemployed.

It will be recalled that when the government conscripted nearly two million workers, and sent them to fight for democracy, the labor exploiters gave their solemn pledge to restore the soldiers to their "jobs" in case they returned alive with democracy saved. It now appears, however, from figures in the possession of the U. S. Employment Service, that the organized capitalists of the United States, in their nation wide conspiracy to create an army of the unemployed, are traitorously and persistently refusing [illegible] ers at the present level of wags.

The employment service reports that such a large number of the organized capitalists have turned traitors to their solemn pledges that at least forty out of every hundred soldiers are without capitalist masters. And just as a chattel slave could not live in a chattel slave country without a slave master, so a wage slave cannot live in a wage-slave country without a wage-slave master. Forty out of every hundred, 400 out of every 1,000, 400,000 out of every 1,000,000 and 800,000 out of every 2,000,000 boys who went forth to "pot the Huns" with the promise of the capitalists that after the potting was over the soldiers would be turned into wage slaves again, find that now the labor exploiters absolutely refuse to exploit them again until wages have been forced down to a physical existence basis.

The extent of this capitalist conceived, planned and administered [illegible] out of the returned soldiers [illegible] apparent to Socialists [illegible]

May Day, 1919, Springtime for the Working-Class

By N. L. WELCH

"The first fight came in the night, now comes the dawn,
The sword is drawn, the scabbard is thrown away!"

Out of the night they come. Awakening from the deepest sleep the producers of the world's goods have come to death grips with the despoilers and exploiters. In all lands, wherever man oppresses man, the red dawn is waking all to action and the toilers are forming in battle legions to wage relentless war upon the merciless capitalist system and the class which fattens upon the spoils wrung from the blood and marrow of the working class.

Wherever there is exploitation today, millions are rising; the armies of the world's liberators are springing up and girding on the sword which shall not be sheathed until the proletariat rules and Industrial Democracy is enthroned. It is the army of the positive; a slave class marching to liberty; it knows no halt, no defeat. Victory is written on its banners, and victory shall it be.

Fiercer than all wars that were ever fought, rages the class war. The casualties are heavy; hearts are torn asunder as the flower of the working class is mowed down in the mad resistance of the bourgeoisie. Liebknecht, Luxemburg and thousands of others, unknown, rot in the soil; offered up on the alter for working class liberation; the war is growing in intensity and bitterness. No quarter is asked, no quarter is given. It is war to the knife, and, know you masters, the producers will emerge victorious.

In our own country hundreds are pining away behind prison walls and are slowly becoming stifled in the vile dungeons which the masters prepare for working class rebels. On this May Day, they are looking at us, out here, through iron bars and over high walls and in their grim silence they beckon us to carry on and on.

May Day, 1919, is springtime for the working class. The time has come at last. The hour has struck and the conflict which we have awaited so long is at hand. In Russia our comrades have stormed the citadel of capitalism and won. The struggle is not ended yet. Enemies within and without would crush the first proletarian republic and drown in an ocean of blood the aspirations of the workers and peasants of Russia. In the face of bitter hostility and ceaseless warfare our comrades have held the fort for eighteen months. They are stronger today than any government in the world. The peasants and workers of Russia are now free men and shook loose not only autocracy in government, but autocracy in industry and land. Free men fight as no others do. The enemy will not pass. He shall not pass.

In Germany the Spartacans are valiantly waging warfare against the bourgeoisie and their hireling government directed by the Scheidemann-Ebert outfit. Their setbacks, heralded with joy by the ruling class and their prostituted journals, are but temporary. The proletarian revolt is spreading in former kaiserland. In a few days, weeks, or months, the capitalist class of Germany will be relegated to the scrap heap and the birth of another proletarian state will be effected.

Hungary leaped into the world-wide revolt most unexpectedly. Four years of war has made the working class of Hungary militant and determined to rid its country of the parasitic exploiters and establish the Soviet form of government. Austria will soon follow suit and the union of all the discordant elements of the former Austrian empire into a Socialist Soviet Federation will be consummated. There are no national barriers that can prevent working class union.

The workers of England, Italy and France are alive to the tremendous possibilities facing them and their emancipation from industrial oppression is a matter of but a brief time. The recent strikes in England are an augury of the revolutionary power which will soon accomplish the dethronement of the capitalist class and the displacement of the wages system.

In the United States the workers are learning daily of the historic mission that the working class is to fulfill and are drifting in the direction of proletarian emancipation. The reactionaries of the Gompers tribe are fast losing their support and will soon be repudiated with the scorn they deserve. The principle of industrial unionism is becoming recognized among the most backward labor organizations and the next few years will witness the rapid growth and spread of the One Big Union idea.

The irresistable sweep of the working class to power and liberation from the oppressive yoke of capitalism continues and grows in volume as class lines become clearly defined and there is nought for workers to do but take the field with one side or the other. In their blind desperation and facing theid destruction, the powers that be are preparing to rivet the chains of oppression upon the militant workers. Repressive legislation and prison cells await their spokesmen. The iron Heel will continue to grind the men and women of the revolutionary movement. But it will avail them nothing. Those of us who have accepted the joy and duty of the conflict will not desist; we will not retreat one step, but go forward and on to power with the working class.

The Red Dawn is waking all to activity and revolutionary effort. In spite of all oppression, and ready to make whatever sacrifices are necessary to consummate the supreme aim of the proletariat—to wrest power from the capitalist class and usher in the era of Industrial Democracy—we pledge ourselves anew, on this May Day, with the goal in sight, to work unceasingly and to offer up all that we are and all that we have in the cause of proletarian emancipation.

Why Talk Organization?

By DR. FRANK S. HANNEN

Mr. So and so is still hammering on "organization." Perhaps we judge him wrongly, but it seems to us that he is infatuated with a word. He told us during the great socialist activities before the war, that we had a splendid organization. Possibly we had, but where did that "organization" get us? Nowhere except in the ditch.

The labor unions have organization galore,—but to what avail? What are we to organize? Ignorance? Oh, no! We are told we must educate. Of what is our education to consist? Mr. So-and-so's speeches and magazine articles? If not, then what? Does Mr. So-and-so suggest a book for the worker to study and really learn something through the study of it? No.

Did "organization" of the worker prevent war? Did it hinder in the least degree? Yet, we had organization—much organization—in shop, in field and in politics. The army itself is one of the most perfect pieces of organization the heart could wish for. Behold, it is an organization of workers! So is industry an organization. An organization to produce commodities for the capitalists.

Why then, this failure of the workers to gain something for themselves through all this organization?

Did organization obtain the high wages paid in munition factories and on the farm?

By no means. Merely a law of supply and demand by those who are "educated." Was it "organization" that brought together and made powerful and successful, those "educated" ones whose ideas, whose religion, whose habits, whose nationality, whose private interests, whose national, sectional, and racial hatreds were, so far as they had ever thought about it, as diverse as the petty methods by which the women of the ruling class dissipate their energies?

No! It was education. When the big war started, all the manufacturers, all the politicians, all the moneyed interests saw a great light, and of course that same light illuminated the path of the preachers, the professors and the plugged editors and blinded them. They couldn't get together fast enough. They couldn't get the workers together fast enough.

Were they "organized?" Well, we should say not. They didn't have time to organize, and they never did get organized, unless you wish to call those world-wide collection agencies "organizations." They were bound together only by that great light. They "saw" their interests. In other words, they were "educated." To be sure it was a short course and a hurried one—too much of a rush to retain dignity, or even common decency—but it served the purpose and made them successful. Here, nature, in the guise of social evolution, stressed the education involved in the process. Why should we not take a lesson?

Where are the workers nearest to [illegible]? In Russia, are they "organ[illegible] [illegible] hardly. But they are educated; and their suc[illegible] [illegible] and early just to [illegible] ber of them are truly, really educated in the materialistic conception of history.

Why not name one of the fundamental treaties on the materialistic conception of history, one on the class struggle and one on the law of surplus value, and then tell the workers how to study these works? One essay from Mr. So-and-so on this work would be worth more in the development of working class solidarity than a thousand bursts of oratorial eloquence.

The capitalists are organized—yes. Why? Because they know their interests. They are educated. Who educated them? Industrial evolution. They organized afterwards. Why? They couldn't help it. They had to. Of what does their education consist? Why, of the single fact that higher wages mean lower profits. Do they need to study in order to learn this? Of course not. It comes naturally. They handle both ends of the game.

But the worker? Does he know his own interest? Certainly not. How can he know them? Only by study. He must get the scientific method of thinking—from cause to effect. The knowledge required by a slave is far different from that required by a master. He must quit believing fairy tales.

His knowledge cannot be made efficient by the promiscuous use of the policeman's club. If he is to use either his physical force or his intellectual power to the end of working class freedom, he must have it directed by knowledge. Real knowledge in his own brain—not speeches made by others.

But when he gets the knowledge that constitutes power—the power to revolutionize society—he won't need a shepard to stand on some high place and shout "organize!" He will be on the high place—and he will be organized.

An educated working class—educated in the "Communist Manifesto," "Value, Price and Profit," and "Revolution and Counter-Revolution"—is an organized working class. You don't need to tell them to organize. Why, bless you, you couldn't keep them apart. All the powers of capitalism with all their pseudo—educated dogs of hell and war can't keep them apart. They will be organized consolidated, united.

Let us educate. Let us put the stress on education. Organizatoin will follow naturally. Let us study individually and in classes, everywhere and all the time. Let us learn to think, write, talk—systematically, scientifically, not promiscuously and at random. Every one of us, not a few "leaders." Let us stop our academic speech-making and educate. Let us be intelligently educated, possessing skill and power in intellectual work.

Workers, when we are educated, we will be united.

"Workers of the World, unite!"

"It has so happened in all the ages of the world that some have labored and others, without labor have enjoyed a large portion of the fruits. This is wrong and should not continue. To secure to each laborer the whole product of his labor as nearly as possible, is a worthy object of any govern[illegible]

Another Lie Nailed

(A copy of the "New Europe" has just arrived from England. It bears date of March 13. A statement in it puts an end to any doubt in the minds of decent people as to whether the story of the nationalization of women in Russia is the truth or an infamous libel. Harold Williams, a bitter opponent of Bolshevik rule in Russia, gives the lie to a report that was as foolish as it was wicked. "The New Europe" takes the blame for giving currency to this report, which they now state was a mistake on their part. There are many people who have believed this statement, who will be convinced that a lie has been uttered by the opponents of Soviet Russia when they read this statement from the "New Europe." Our readers should give it the widest currency.)

"The Bolsheviki and the Status of Women"

We have received the following communication from our collaborator, Dr. Harold Williams:

"The statement has been frequently made of late in the press and in public speeches that the Bolshevik have issued a monstrous decree for the nationalization of women, and a women's society in Paris is reported to have undertaken a campaign against the Bolsheviki on this particular ground Personnaly, I cannot be accused of any prepossessions in the Bolshevik's favor, but, just because I feel so acutely the enormity of their real crimes and the iniquity of their whole regime, I consider it wrong to weaken the case against them by imputing to them crimes they have not commited.

"I have made particular inquiries among friends recently arrived from Russia is to the alleged nationalization of women, and they all assure me positively that they have never heard or read of such a decree. It is certain that central Bolshevik government has issued no order of the kind, and if anarchists in Smolensk or school boys in some other provincial town have printed such abominable productions the central government cannot be held responsible. The position of women and of everybody else under the Bolshevik regime is far too tragical to be made the subject of such gross caricature as these reports of the nationalization of women really are."

We gladly give prominence to the above declaration, since, according to the "Russian Information Bureau" (the Bolshevik agency in London), an article entitled "The Bolsheviki and the Status of Women," published in No. 107 of the New Europe, "appears to have set the ball rolling." In it we gave "a translation of a decree issued by the Bolsheviki of Vladimir and ublished in the official Soviet organ, Izvestya," which had been supplied to us by an Englishman personally well acquainted with Russian conditions during the war and of unquestionably good faith. We now find that he was inaccurate in quoting the document from the official Bolshevik organ, Izvestya, and that he had confused it with the local Vladimir newspaper of the same name ("Izvestya" being the Russian for "News"). As this puts an entirely different complexion on the matter, and as the central Moscow government cannot be held responsible for the lucubrations of every local committee, we desire to withdraw unreservedly the imputation and to express our regret for the mistake.

Besserabia Goes Soviet

By ANISE, in Seattle Union Record.

"Where is this Bessarabia and what is the importance of it?" I asked the history teacher. "I see it has gone Soviet."

"It is over on the Black sea," he answered. "Between Russia and Rumania. The Danube empties into the Black sea along the southwestern boundary of it, and other rivers from Russia run through it. It contains, the important port of Odessa. In fact, it is really Russia's main outlet on the Black sea, which is her only chance of water transport to the south.

"But while economically it is Russia's outlet to the sea, its population is largely composed of Rumanians. Except that over in the part which is nearest Russia there are quite a lot of Cossacks. This makes Bessarabia a country which, in times of irritation, might be a source of trouble, since it has a strong nationalistic movement driving it toward Rumania, while its economic development i largely tied up with Russia.

Also Leads Over Toward Poland.

"Also Bessarabia is an entering wedge northward toward Poland and Galicia. That is why our friend Paderewski is scared to death over a Soviet government in Bessarabia.

"Like all other little sections of the Balkans, Bessarabia has been tossed back and forth to suit the great powers. In 1812 Turkey ceded it to Russia. In the Crimean war its boundaries were changed about somewhat, but it came back to Russia after the Slav massacres by the Turks in 1877.

"You see, the Turks were massacreing Bulgarians on a large scale. France, England and Austria refused to help, as they wished to keep Turkey sufficiently in the saddle to prevent the growth of Russia. So Russia went down into Bulgaria to protect the people there. No doubt she had her own ulterior motives, but, at any rate she tried to do something.

"After Russia had Turkey beaten, Austria decided that the settlement of boundaries in that vicinity was a 'European matter.' So in 1878 they pulled off the Treaty of Berlin, giving Bessarabia to Russia, and making several other little readjustments of territory not at all in accordance with the will of the inhabitants."

Rumania Growing in Power.

"Since the late '80s Rumania has grown steadily in power. She discovered oil wells and developed industry, and by 1912 she probably was the most progressive and prosperous of all the Balkan countries.

"Like all those states, however, she has two big sources of unrest. An unsolved land problem, with big estates and peasants who are almost serfs; that is one problem. A gradually growing industry, hampered by a reactionary political government; that is the other problem. These two are the social and economic problems all through the Balkans.

"Besides these social and economic problems, there is, of course, the national problem. And the big question facing the world just now is: 'Which of these problems—the national or the economic—is going to be settled first?'"

Via Peace Conference or Soviets?

"Over in Paris, at the peace conference, they are taking up questions of nationality and national boundaries. Their method is to settle those first and let the economic and social problems be worked out afterward by each country.

"If the peace conference ever got around to it, and settled matters on a nationalistic basis, it probably would hand Bessarabia, or part of it, over to Rumania, because her population is so largely Rumanian, and also because they are friendly to Rumania, and not to Russia.

"But they have been very slow in Paris, and meantime the Soviets are offering solution, not of national problems, but of economic problems. Let the poorest, peasants seize the land they till and the workers take over control of industry, is their program. Never mind for the present about political government or national boundary lines. Those can be settled when you get around to it; they aren't important.

"You see now what it means when Bessarabia goes Soviet. It means that the nationalistic movement toward land control and control of industry.

Will Rumania and Poland Follow?

"It means, also, since the connection of feeling is very close between Bessarabia and Rumania, that Rumania, and perhaps Poland to the north, will be next touched by the desire of the peasants for their own land, which is, of course, the communist program of Soviet Russia.

"When we read that the Rumanian army is fighting Bessarabia, it is quite likely that this army is composed largely of adherents of the old regime, and not of Rumanian peasants. The Rumanian peasants will have no quarrel with their brother Rumanians just over the boundary, who have taken possession of the estates of Bessarabia. Their chief emotion will be one of envy.

DEPORTATION

By SCOTT NEARING.

The most modern and most fashionable method [illegible] by tyrants to get rid of the[illegible] [illegible] subjects is to "deport" them.

This new weapon of autocracy was invented by the [illegible] government in 1915, when the whole Armenian nation was removed from its ancient home and driven by a murderous soldiery into the deserts of Asia Minor to starve or be butchered by bandits. Kaiser Wilhelm employed the same tactics in Belgium in 1916-17, when the Belgian working class was deported en masse to work for its conquerors in Germany.

The American capitalist class immediately saw the advantages of deportation as a means to make war upon American workers. In the summer of 1917, the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, operating mines in Arizona, was faced by a strike. In Bisbee, and several other towns, the officials and retainers of the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, together with the business men of the place, armed themselves with rifles, rounded up the strikers and their friends, commandeered a railroad train and deported 1,200 men into the desent.

This action proved a great success. Of course, there was no warrant of law in thus picking up innocent men and shipping them out of town without a trial, nor was it in accordance with the statutes to hold up American citizens at the point of a gun, tear them away from their families and exile them. But the law of the capitalist class acquiesced. The indictments formally brought against the Phelps-Dodge officials and their accomplices were dismissed in the federal courts.

Since then, deportation, lawless or lawful, has risen rapidly in public esteem. Recently, the newspapers told of the deportation of several hundred Negroes from Coatesville, Pa. These Negroes had been lured from their homes in the south to help win the war for democracy by doing war work in the factories of the north. The war is over now, and democracy is assured—in Germany, anyway. There is no more work for the Negroes in Coatesville—and, besides, they insist upon living wages—and, moreover, the south needs her slave labor back again. What to do? The question was solved very simply in Coatesville. The Negroes were simply driven to the southern limits of the town by armed men and told "to go home."

Deportation is now the recognized means for dealing with class-conscious workers of foreign birth.

The immigration law provides, for the deportation of foreigners in this country who "advocate the overthrow of the government by force." Naturally, therefore, when a foreign worker participates in a strike or is found endeavoring to organize the workers of [illegible] he is discovered to be "affiliated with an organization which stands for the overthrow of the government by force"—and he is promptly deported.

A few weeks ago we were startled by the arrival in New York of a trainload of such "anarchists," whom the newspapers announced were picked up along the Pacific coast, several of them in the ranks of the Seattle strikers, and, after a hasty hearing, bundled off to New York under guard, "the courts co-operating." At this moment there are several hundred Socialists, I. W. W. and other "malcontents," held in prison on Ellis island, awaiting deportation to the lands of their birth. And all over the country others are being quickly arrested.

Among these are many political refugees from their own countries, whose return there means long prison sentences, and probably worse. There are also many Russians. * * *

It is now fairly well known that there is a war in Russia—a war between the remnants of the Russian propertied classes, supported by foreign bayonets, and the Russian people rallied around the Soviet government. The vast majority of the Russians whom the United States government is now attempting to deport are Bolsheviki. If they are deported to any part of Russia, except Soviet Russia, they are doomed to certain death, either at the hands of their own master class, the Finnish White Guards, or the allied troops, whose record of brutalities in the parts of Russia when they occupy is scarcely surpassed by the record of the Germans in Belgium.

Where is the American government going to send the Russian workers? To questions addressed to the United States Department of Labor no answer is returned to this vital question. We do not believe that American labor is going to allow our Russian comrades to be murdered in this way.

We happen to know that the Scandinavian countries have closed their frontiers to Russia. And, even were the borders of Sweden open, it would be impossible for a Soviet sympathizer to pass through White Finland. The allies and the Russian renegades hold all ports of entry to Russia—the Black sea ports, Archangel, Vladivostok and Harbin. There is only one way by which the deportees can be safely sent to Russia—and that is, via the Baltic sea, direct to some port held by Soviet Russia. * * *

For a year and a half, tens of thousands of Russian workers in this country have clamored for permission to go home. They have not been allowed to go. * * * By what right does the American government refuse these Russian citizens the right to return to free Russia? Thousands, tens of thousands want [illegible] if they are deported to Soviet Russia, and not into the hands of their enemies. President Roosevelt, in 1910, deported Mexican revolutionists across the Rio Grande, where they were captured and shot by the butchers of Porfirio Diaz. Let us not permit the Russian comrades to be delivered over to the tender mercies of Kolchak, Seminov, Tchaikovsky, Denikin and the Tchekho-Slovaks.

If the United States government will open our frontiers to those foreigners who want to leave this monstrous industrial tyranny of ours, where the laws are seemingly made to be obeyed by working men only, the "alien agitators" will go home, and there will be such a rush for the seaports that there won't be enough ships to carry them.

Do Secretary of Labor Wilson and the department of justice imagine that with these revolutionists they are deporting the revolution? If so they are mistaken. The revolution is not a person, or a thousand persons; it is an idea, and ideas cannot be deported.

Queens Local Endorses Left Wing

New York.—At a meeting of the membership of Local Queens, one of the divisions of the Socialist Party of New York, the following resolution declaring the adherence of the local to Left Wing Program and Manifesto was adopted:

Whereas, We desire to clearly place ourselves on record for, and openly and actively align ourselves with the revolutionary proletariat the world over, as at present expressed by the policies and tactics of the Communist Party of Russia (Bolsheviki), the Communist Labor Party in Germany (Spartacans) and other parties in harmony with them, be it

Resolved, That we, in Local Queens, in Party Membership Meeting Assembled, this 7th day of April, 1919, adopt as our official expression the Manifesto and Program of the Left Wing Section of the Socialist Party Greater New York; and be it further

Resolved, That we pledge both financial and moral support to the Left Wing propaganda, working to the end that the National Organization conforms with the policies of this Program; and be it further

Resolved, That all delegates, committees and officials of Local Queens adhere strictly to this Manifesto and Program; and be it further

Resolved, That Local Queens will not countenance or compromise with any half way measures, but that the change in policies and tactics must be complete even if it necessiatates the severance of relations with those constituting the right; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be printed in full in the "Call and Volkszeitung" as part of the minutes of this meeting of Local Queens with the request that other Locals and Branches adopt it.

Do We Stand The Test?

When the United States entered the war to overthrow the Kaiser and his Autocracy, and incidentally, to make the world safe for the Democratic Party, and to prove by superior might, that might was not right, it found itself under obligation to incarcerate those who persistently voiced the sentiments and ideals of peace, brotherhood, and industrial freedom.

Agitation could not be permitted in time of war. The unified forces of the nation had to be brought to bear upon the work in hand. This could not be done when the divergence of class interest was being continually held before the minds of the workers who had to supply the materials of war as well as do the bulk of the actual fighting.

Thus, to restrain the intellectual, social, and industrial activity the Espionage act was passed, and those individuals whose habits of thought differed from the thought modes necessary to carry on the great conflict were herded together, tried and sent to prison for terms ranging from a few days to twenty years and more.

This for a while stilled, or seemed to still, the industrial unrest of the country. But it proved, as all repressive measures must prove, that it is possible to incarcerate the body of men, but it is impossible to quench the spirit of social unrest as long as the social organism is full of elements of irritation. Thus, with the prisons full, we find that strikes, protests, and other manifestations of social mal-adjustments are ever on the increase in the country. In other words all that the men in prison did or could do was to give active voice to the sentiments and ideals that are felt by millions of people in the country today. The difference between these millions and the men incarcerated is, that the latter actively saying what the former dumbly felt, has brought them into conflict with the authorities.

Now is the chance for us who are out to show that we are with them, in a little more than lip service. Many of these men have been admitted to bail. The government, practically recognizing the weakness of the case against them, has said that they are entitled to a new trial. The trial of these men, Comrades, is a trial of your ideals and mine. These men, believe in their ideals. The stone and concrete walls of Leavenworth penitentiary, steel cages, and fettered limbs, did not deter them. In many cases they suffered slow and loathsome deaths, as in Sacramento jail, for their ideal's sake. Others are pining away with diseases which in the open air they might be able to fight off, but they do not complain. Firmly convinced of the justice of their cause, they see in each rising sun a mile-stone on the road to the final realization of their great goal—Industrial Democracy.

Toward that goal we are still working. We all believe in Justice and its final triumph. They believed it strong enough to brave abuse, conviction, and even death. Do we believe in it? I mean, we who have property, strong enough to say to the government: "Here is my pledge, that these men will be present at their trial, that they will defend themselves."

Clearly, if we belive what we say, this is our duty. It will return these boys to the sunlight and to usefulness. And the volume of the bond that will come in from the comrades and the readiness and speed with which they are given will be a powerful plea before the court, for it will show that the people as a whole do not believe in the principles that men should be incarcerated for their opinions sake. Let us do our utmost and go our limit in giving bonds as these men have gone their limit in upholding the principle of free speech and assembly as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

Comrades who can furnish bail should communicate at once with "The Workers World," Box 697, Kansas City, Mo.

If you cannot qualify on a bond, use your effort to interest those who can. Remember that it is a pledge of our substance against the pledge of their life and liberty.

Strike Resolutions

(United Mine Workers of America, Local Union N6. 1348, Midvale, O.)

To the officers and members of the International Executive Board, United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The time has come when organized labor can no longer hope for fair, just and unprejudiced consideration at the hands of employers; and,

Whereas, The interests of organized labor and organized capital are in direct conflict; and,

Whereas, The trial and conviction of Eugene V. Debs and Thomas J. Mooney is not only an arrant miscarriage of justice as regards an individual, but is a direct attack upon all labor organizations by organized capital; and

Whereas, Every appeal has been tried and every attempt made to secure a fair and impartial trial for Eugene V. Debs and Thomas J. Mooney but without avail, therefore be it

Resolved, That we the officers and members of Local Union No. 1348, U. M. W. of A., of Midvale, O., go on record as unanimously endorsing the Debs and Mooney strike, and hereby petition our international president and the members of the international executive board for a referendum vote to be taken among the entire membership of the U. M. W. of A. on or before May 15, 1919, for the purpose of endorsing the Debs-Mooney strike and that if such referendum vote carries in favor of said strike that the U. M. W. of A. as a body walk-out July 4, 1919, and stays out until Eugene V. Debs and Thomas J. Mooney and all other political prisoners are released.

THE MOST WONDERFUL THING

By TOBIAS BLOU.

I have found the most wonderful thing on earth;
Men die for it, women sigh for it, children live by it.
'Tis the strongest pillar of man's social state;
Nations live by it, capitalists thrive by it, workers sweat by it.

'Tis the life or death of millions, 'tis their fate;
Glory unto those who can us rob,
I have found the most wonderful thing on earth—
I have found a job.

TERRE HAUTE SOCIALISTS WILL PROTEST

Dear Comrades:—

We, the Comrades and friends of Eugene Victor Debs, now sent to prison in W. Va., have planned to hold a big demonstration here in his home town on Sunday, May 4th, 1919.

We hope to make this the biggest demonstration ever held anywhere. We want to make it not only National but international in character if possible.

Speakers of emminent ability and reputation will address the crowds.

Meetings held at 3 of the entrances to the court house, all are cordially invited.

We hope to accomplish several results by this meeting. To show honor to our Comrade 'Gene, to protest against the injustice of his imprisonment and strengthen solidarity among the workers and to start concerted action for the release of not only 'Gene but all political prisoners.

We want you to help us advertise this meeting through your paper as soon as you receive this and up to that date.

Thanking you for this help, we remain

Eugene V. Debs

By JENNINGS B. ASHCRAFT.

From the streets in ragged breeches,
To the work shop's din and dust,
From the platform to the dungeon,
Scourged and cursed by mammon's lust.

He has climbed the lofty ladder
To the eminence of fame.
He has won the countless millions,
To adore and shout his name.

With the courage of a Spartan
He has held the narrow pass,
Through which mammon seeks a passage,
To make slaves of labors' class.

Comrades, let us rally round him,
Do not falter as of yore,
Let us open wide to mankind,
Liberty's untarnished door.

Let us live or die with freedom,
We have everything to gain,
Nothing shall we lose but shackels,
And submission's ugly stain.

Debs has lived and fought to free us
From the pangs of slavery's hell,
Now, shall we stand mute and see him
Locked within a felon's cell?

No, my comrades, we shall free him
From the dismal prison wall,
By resistance we shall triumph,
By submission we shall fall.

The Intellectual and Moral Bankruptcy of College Men

By A. A. KARALUS.

When the capitalist mode of production and exchange, with its anarchy and corruption, began to break into pieces, and a new order of society appeared upon the horizon of social evolution, the intellectual and moral degeneracy among the people who are bound to the ducational institutions of the decrepit system began to show itself.

The educational institutions are very closely connected with the interests of the ruling class and since this class has grown to be parasitic and become useless in social evolution, it jeopardizes the progress of mankind.

I am a student of a college of engineering. I study closely the people I meet in the school and I cannot refrain from stating the opinion that intellectual and moral bankruptcy prevails in most schools, colleges and universities of the land.

The teachers are very ignorant of social questions. Ideology is the beginning and end of their reasoning. Their view of social evolution is that of a wagon being pulled and stopped and started again by great men. For them the way to achieve anything is to worship at the shrine of a great man and give him the opportunity to go ahead, whether he is right or he is wrong. Some few are perturbed about revolutionary events in Europe, but others neither know nor care that there is a revolution under way in Europe. [illegible] individuality are in the minds of every teacher and student. In the classes, churches and all student gatherings the talk is about success through personal achievement. Everybody believes that he can become a millionaire, or a great, successful engineer, or even president of the United States if he works hard and is loyal. One teacher of higher mathematics told me that "At present jobs are scarce for engineers, but if you are a good mathematician you will be a good engineer and you will be able to kick the other fellow and get his place, and what do you care for him?" That means that you may crush the other fellow if you are stronger and conditions are favorable for you, and those are the ethics which are being taught the student.

The people here are all afraid of social revolution, but all uphold "democracy," and equal opportunities and equal rights for every man. They hope that some great man, still to come, will save their institutions founded upon "freedom and liberty" from Bolshevism. Since the revolutionary proletariat in its march to freedom does not concern itself with "great men" they are disappointed and will have nothing to do with it.

It is a pitiful thing to see that in such a crucial and decisive period in which intelligence is needed to interpret the new social phenomenon to the students, there are no men in the colleges who understand social evolution. [illegible] er of that class had explained panics in the following manner: It happens that somebody starts a rumor that a certain bank is unsound and that the depositors may lose their money and this starts a run on the bank which spreads to other banks, forcing some of them to close their doors and the result is widespread depression.

They interpret the Russian revolution in the same manner that they explain the condition which the Puritans found themselves in when they landed in this country. They say if there is starvation, disorganization in Russia, it is because no great men have appeared to lead the people, just as the Puritans experienced much hardship at the beginning because they did not have great leaders.

What do you think of these intellectuals, workingmen? Is it not ridiculous that in these times and this age so-called educated men should accept such rot? Yet this is what is being taught the students in this school.

The profit system based upon robbery, ignorance and lies, is responsible for this manifestation. Intellectual and moral bankruptcy is its natural accompaniment.

The working class is the only class that can save civilization from the chaos which capitalism is precipitating. It is the historic mission of the proletariat to bring about the social revolution. The wage workers have inherited the [illegible]

NEWS AND VIEWS—A WEEKLY SURVEY

Obscuring The Issue

If there were no other indications that recent events in the world have frightened the capitalist class, the desperate efforts which it is making to create the impression that it is a necessary factor in the work of production of wealth, would be indication enough.

In the past the capitalists have not been very much concerned about the views that the masses held about their function in society. This has all been changel. The capitalists are no longer indifferent about the matter. They realize that forces are in motion that will eliminate all capitalists and so they make their puny effort to sweep back the tide of social revolution by pointing out how necessary they are to the work of carrying on industry.

One of these apologies for the capitalists is made by the Christian Science Monitor, in an editorial discussing the development of the "one-big-union" in Australia. Quoting the president of employers' association as saying, "if apart from the working class themselves, there were no directing minds in industries the working class would be woefully short of work," it asserts "that the manual laborer is not the sole prducer."

Of course not. No Socialist, Communist or Bolshevist has ever made such an assertion. But to prove, what every one will admit, "that the manual laborer is not the only producer" does not make the modern capitalist a useful member of society.

In the early days of capitalism the owner of a plant was usually the manager. He was identified with the work of production and rendering useful services. If in place of drawing a salary he took part of the profits as the compensation for his services, no doubt up to a certain amount the profits were the reward for his services. But this situation does not exist any longer. The development of the corporation has divorced the capitalist from the manager. The managers of the modern industrial corporation are salaried employes. So far as these employes are engaged in the work of production and distribution, and not merely in the competitive struggle for business, they render valuable and necessary services to society. They are, no doubt, over paid and a large part of them are merely carrying on the capitalist fight for business—as was proven in the case of the railroads when then Railroad Administrator McAdoo fired a large part of the railroad presidents—but those that are giving managerial or technical skill are as surely producers as the manual worker.

But that does not help the case of the caitalist any. While some capitalists may be managers or executives, most of them are not. If the capitalist is also a manager he receives a salary as manager. His income as a capitalist has no relation to his services as manager. The capitalists in the modern industrial world are stockholders and bondholders who render no service, have no connection with industry outside of their mortgages in industry. They may never have seen the industry from which they draw their profits. They may not have the slightest knowledge about the work of production; they may be weak-minded, idiots, children, but still they draw their interest and dividends and suck the life blood of the workers who produce the wealth.

What services does John D. Rockefeller render society today for the millions of dollars that yearly roll into his coffers? And Anderw Carnegie? And the tens of thousands of other parasites who are wallowing in wealth.?

The capitalist is a parasite on the body of society. Incidentally the system which enables this parasite to wax fat at the expense of the many creates poverty, and unemployment, and war.

The workers of the world are bent upon eliminating the capitalist parasite. Obscuring the issue by confusing the capitalist and the managers of industry will not fool the workers. They know what they are after.

The executives, the managers, the men of technical ability will have their place in the new industrial system. If they can adapt themselves to the new conditions they will have their jobs and rewards commensurate with the services they render. If they are unwilling or unable to adapt themselves to the new industrial democracy the workers will develop men from their own ranks to take their places. It may take time to do that, there may be some temporary reduction in efficiency, but the goal is worth the price.

Why They Do Not Act

The capitalist press of this country is constantly wailing because sterner methods are not used in dealing with Soviet Russia. President Wilson, Lloyd George, etc., are charged with weakness in not riding roughshod over the workers' government of that country and drowning the new social order there in the blood of those that support it.

It is not sympathy for the Russian workers that prevents the capitalist governments from acting. It is not sympathy that directs such proposal as that of furnishing Soviet Russia with food. It is not Mr. Wilson's or Lloyd George's weakness that has prevented a million allied soldiers from being sent in to end the rule of the Bolsheviki.

What has saved Soviet Russia is the weakness of the capitalist system and the capitalist governments. Lenin, in his letter to American working men, said that the workers of Russia can only succeed if the workers of other countries come to their rescue. The workers of the allied countries and the United States have not come to the aid of Russia through open rebellion, but the fear of such a rebellion has held the hand of the capitalist statesmen in dealing with Russia. Even the workers of this country, still so largely held by the leading strings of the capitalists, see the issue in Russia, and all the lies and lurid misrepresentations of the kept press have not succeeded in securing their consent to an invasion of Russia on a large scale by American soldiers.

Even Mr. Wilson knows that he dare not * * *?

Who Will Make Peace

Italian delegates have withdrawn from the Peace Conference and left Paris.

In the background looms a dispute over Japanese claims to territory formerly controlled by Germany in China, which threatens to bring about similar action on the part of the Japanese delegates.

In addition there is the threat that German delegates will refuse to sign the peace treaty and tell the allies to do their worst.

No wonder Oswald Garrison Villard, recently returned from Paris paints this pessimistic picture of what has happened there:

> Yet it is far more than a test of the real moral force and character of President Wilson which we are witnessing. It is a far-reaching test of the value of war as the creator of new moral values. Entered into on the part of the American public with the highest idealism and the confident belief that it was a war to end war and to make the world safe for democracy, the war thus far has made the world less safe for democracy than it has been at any previous period in modern times, and in addition has brought a brood of actual wars and the threat of others in its train. The struggle is ending at Paris with bitterness and hatred as well as with colossal hypocrisy. It is ending with the whole modern order of society on trial for its life; for nothing is plainer than if the four men who have become the dictators of the world can not produce a peace that is real, one that shall not only end war but also do away with armaments, a deceived and disappointed world will try other ways and means. Can war be cured by frankly trying to apply the doctrines of Christianity and the brotherhood of man? This is the question which is to be answered at Paris. Beside it the new Holy Alliance misnamed the League of Nations sinks into insignificance.

All of which is in striking confirmation of what Socialists have been saying about the capitalist system for, lo, these many years.

What We Want

The Socialists of Cleveland have been raising cain since Eugene V. Debs was taken to prison. Great meetings have been held almost nightly, followed by demonstrations in which thousands paraded the streets. One of these processions passed under the windows of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and while doing so the crowd made a point to give three cheers for the Bolsheviki and to raise the cry, "Down with the capitalist press."

The result is a peevish editorial in that paper, in which we find among a lot of slush and mush, the questions:

> What is the Bolshevist complaint in this country? Are wages low? Are men denied the right of suffrage? Are they opprssed by the government they propose to overthrow by violence? Are thy taxed out of proportion to the benefits they enjoy? Is work scarce or impossible to get? What are these un-American Bolshevists in America protesting for, anyway?

Although these questions are manifestly not asked in good faith, the opportunity to tell what the American Bolshevists are after is too good to miss. The Plain Dealer asks its questions in a form which indicate that it believes that no one will have the temerity to answer them in a way not favorable to its case, but we propose to attempt what it believes impossible.

"Are men denied the right to suffrage?" the editorial writer would no doubt consider a particularly safe question. With the word "men" carefully inserted to prevent reference to women, the answer must be "no" he no doubt believes. But there are still the negroes of the South disfranchised by the trick laws of the southern aristocracy and also the millions of "foreigners" who are denied the right to the ballot for long years after they come to this country. But these qualifications of the negative reply are not the chief criticism of the suggestion that political equality exists in this country, which is contained in the question.

Formal political equality we have. But in practice it is a snare and a delusion. The class which owns the industries and is economically dominant controls the educational and publicity machinery of the country and through such control shapes the minds of the voters to suit its interests. It is perfectly safe for a ruling class to grant formal equality so far as voting is concerned, so long as it controls the way the voters vote. The American Bolshevists, to use the Plain Dealer's term, doesn't only want formal equality, they want democracy that is not merely democracy in name, but the reality and they know that the only way to get it is by wiping out the economically dominant class and establishing industrial demacracy.

"Are wages low?"

They are so low that millions of people are living in misery and squalor in this country.

Though in some cases wages may not seem low when expressed in dollars and cents, they are low, below a decent standard of living, when expressed in buying power.

And further, wages will be low for the American Bolshevists so long as they do not represent the full equivalent of what the workers produce through their labor power—so long as capitalists wax fat out of the labor of the workers and we produce ten thousand new millionaires during a few months of war.

"Are they oppressed by the government they propose to overthrow by violence?"

Well, when they elected men to represent them in the government of the city of Cleveland these men were charged with "disorderly conduct" and thrown out because they voted in accordance with their conscientious beliefs.

When they upheld a view of the war contrary to the view promulgated by the president they were thrown in prison by the hundreds because they dared differ with the official view of the government—dared believe that in a "political democracy" the minority had the right to convert the majority to their point of view through facts and logic.

They find at the present time that all the powers of the existing government are being used to prevent them from publicly propagating their ideas. Hall owners are intimidated by the police, reactionary laws are proposed to prevent them from holding public meetings and demonstrations.

"What is the Bolshevist complaint in this country?"

Here it is, brief and to the point: A small class owns the things that the many must use in order to live; it uses the power that ownership gives it to rob and exploit the masses when they are permitted to work and when it cannot make profits it takes away their jobs and sends them on the streets to starve; the same class controls the government and uses its power to bolster up the system of exploitation and oppression.

The complaint is that capitalism exists and the "American Bolshevist" will not be content until it is wiped out of existence and the workers control their own jobs.

Congressman C. C. Dill, of Washington state has been talking to returned soldiers and gives this pessimistic view of their state of mind (pessimistic from the capitalist standpoint):

> "The returning soldier—the enlisted man—is a frankly cynical individual. He has taken the slogan of making the world safe for democracy with a literalness which is going to surprise many politicians. He bled and suffered for the ideal in France, and he saw his buddies blown to pieces for it in the slaughter house of war.
> "Returning to this country he finds unemployment, high prices, indifference and corruption looming everywhere behind the pageantry of welcoming committees. He comes home jobless and with an empty sleeve, and reads that the war made 17,000 new millionaires in the United States. He gets his $60.00 bonus from congress and reads that Mrs. Frank Gould spurns alimony of $150. a week because that will scarcely pay for her silk stockings and other incidentals. These things he remembers and tells to his companions.
> "I tell you that the returned soldier is in a questioning state of mind. Party names and party fetishes will count for nothing with him. He is looking behind fine phrases as he is looking behind the brass bands and the streamers which greet his landing. He is in the frame of mind in which the seeds of Socialist doctrine will take root easily and will grow readily."

And here's Sammy Gompers, after selling the workers body and soul to the Wilson Administration, calling Postmaster General Burleson a dictator. But didn't Mr. Gomper's friend, Wilson appoint Burleson and doesn't he keep him at his job of oppressing the workers on the post office department and telephone system?

Investigation of Court Martial System Called Farce

Washington,—For several weeks the American Bar Association has been conducting an alleged investigation of the court-martial system for administering justice in the army.

Socialists have suspected all the time that the "investigation" was a monumental farce designed to forestall the congressional investigation which will be ordered as soon as congress convenes.

Confirmation of the suspicions of the Socialists has appeared in the specific charges of Lieut. Col. S. T. Ansell that the Bar Association's investigating committee is not getting the facts does not wish to get the facts, was not organized to get the facts, and has conducted the investigation with the determination to whitewash Judge Advocate General Crowder, held to be responsible for the system, and to give the military law and its administration a clean bill.

It is interesting to note that the Bar Association's committee has not called a single private. The privates are the ones who have felt the injustice and undue severity of the court-martials. It would seem that one of the first things for the committee to do, if its attempt to investigate alleged injustices was sincere, would be to call a number of soldiers serving five, ten and twenty-year sentences for petty offenses before it and find out from them just what their experiences were before the military courts. The witnesses, however, have been the military courts. The witnesses, however, have been the military autocrats who sit on the court-martials, not the conscripted workers who have been subjected to military penalties.

To the Socialists the mere fact that the American Bar Association is conducting the investigation is conclusive proof that no reliance can be placed in either its sympathies or its methods. The Bar Association is mostly made up of the paid lieutenants of the organized exploiters of the working people, and they cannot, therefore be expected to impartially investigate a class question concerning the miscarriage of justice for the working people.

Lieut. Col. Ansell is the man who first drew attention to the injustice of the court-martial system because of the alleged monstrous sentences imposed upon the working people temporarily following the occupation of a soldier. Ansell's statement that under the military court-martial system the enlisted man does not receive the same consideration as the officer is nothing new. The army officers represent there the same functions that the employer represents in industrial life. The court-martial system is a system framed by the military autocrats. Naturally they would no more enact laws meting out the same penalties to the privates and the officers for the same crime than would the employers enact laws punishing employers and workers alike for the same or similar misdemeanors.

Ansell pointed out that "dishonorable discharge" is one of the common penalties imposed upon the privates for infraction of the military law, but is very rarely applied to the sacred persons of the officers. Dishonorable discharge deprives a man of his civil rights as a citizen and makes him in fact a man without a country. "In 51 out of every 100 court-martial cases of enlisted men," said Ansell, "dishonorable discharges have been awarded as part of the penalties and 36 of them have been executed." This was wholly different from the treatment of officers, he explained, whose citizenship status congress had carefully guarded.

One of the fundamental evils of the court-martial system, it is alleged, is the fact that, while the bulk of the men amenable to military law are privates, the military law prohibits privates from sitting on the court-martial "juries." The court-martials are composed exclusively of officers. A similar system would obtain in civil life if workers were prohibited from sitting on juries, the law limiting juries to employers.

It is well understood that the anti-labor militarists expect to drive a compulsory military training bill through the coming congress. As a preliminary to the dictatorship of the capitalists which the young workers will find in industrial life the capitalist autocrats want to give the young men a suggestive touch of capitalist class justice as administered by the court-martial system under the articles of war.

Efforts and Sacrifice

Milton Sheridan Sharp, chairman of the board of directors of the Bradford Dyers' Association, Ltd. (England), opened the annual meeting of the stockholders on February 22, 1919, with these words: "After four years of the most terrible war in the history of the world . . . we meet today after complete victory has crowned our efforts and our sacrifices." The chairman then gives in detail the "efforts and sacrifices" of his company. These include net profits for the year of $3,200,000; 10 per cent regular dividends on the common stock; 7 1-2 per cent bonus on the common stock, and a surplus carried forward of $1,440,000. Mr. Sharp predicts that, with the German dye industry destroyed, a future of the greatest prosperity is in store for his concern.

Exploiters Do Not Keep Promises

overly confident that even the president's appeal to the capitalist industrial and commercial dictatorship will have much effect. When the organized labor exploiters traitorously repudiate their pledges made when war was declared and the workers conscripted to restore the workers to their jobs when the war was over—when they persistently refuse to do this and organize themselves nationally in order to make the lock out effective, it is not probable that they will respond to the president's appeal. They think more of their profits than they do of either their pledges or the president, and they figure that the maximum of profits will only come into the capitalists' coffers when wages have been forced down to what Karl Marx calls the "physical minimum."

But by all means let us celebrate "Job Sunday" and celebrate it with such enlightenment that the workers who participate will understand just what a "job" means under capitalism.

Former President Taft and other representatives of the capitalist class in the present capitalist administration want the War Labor Board continued as a peace-time institution. It is authoritatively stated that plans for its continuance will be submitted to Presiden Wilson after he brings back to America what remains of his fourteen points.

The principal thing that the National War Labor Board did was to make the statement that in its opinion the working men and women and children are each and everyone really and actually and civilizedly and capitalisticaily entitled to enough of the new wealth they produce to enable them to live decently from day to day and reproduce their working strength with persistency and stability.

That is just what organized capitalists all over the world are trying to bring about—a system of wealth production under which those who produce the wealth will be permitted to have under the guise of wages no more of the wealth produced than is required to keep them alive and in working condition. The surplus, and under modern production there is a mountain of surplus, then of course belongs by right and by law to the labor exploiters.

Socialists declare that the working people who produce all the wealth are by right entitled to own and enjoy it. The capitalists and the War Labor Board states that the workers are entitled to but a small portion of that wealth and that the labor exploiters are entitled to what remains over and above the workers' living. The Socialists would guarantee the right of the workers to the wealth they produce by substituting collective ownership and democratic operation of the means of production for the existing private ownership for provate profit system. The capitalists and the War Labor Board would perpetuate the present privately owner private profit system as the best possible system to limit the workers to the War Labor Board's "living wage."

The capitalists will need their War Labor Board badly enough before long.

Calls for Reorganization

the results of our best thought and study keep strengthening our organization according to the dictates of common sense and practicability.

Believing that the above represents the sentiment of an overwhelming majortiy of the membership of the American Federation of Labor, this council submits the following propositions to you with the modest request that they be analyzed and judged solely upon their merits, and if you feel as we do, that you put forth your utmost efforts to carry them into effect.

Whereas, Experience of the most ardent and loyal trade unionists in carefully and deliberately planning to invoke the use of the strike weapon as a last resort in their efforts to secure certain measures of justice (especially at times when delay might prove fatal to their cause) have demonstrated weaknesses in our organizations which should be promptly remedied, notable among which is the necessity of as many as twenty different local unions represented in one plant (and desiring to act as a unit under a blanket agreement) communicating with that number of internationals for sanction and securing swenty replies, all of which must harmonize before joint action can be legally taken, the detrimental effect of which must be obvious to all; and,

Whereas, The continued existence of craft units in given localities as at present appear to be distinctly desirable and necessary for the transaction of business of a technical nature; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Central Labor Council of Seattle and vicinity request all local unions within its jurisdictions to call upon their respective internationals to immediately submit the following proposition to a referendum vote of their membership:

Proposition No. 1.—Shall this international, by referendum vote, select three of its members to represent this international in conference, at a time and place to be named (preferably by the President of the American Federation of Labor) at as early a date as possible after such election, for the purpose of effecting the amalgamation and consolidation of all international unions into as nearly as possible twelve units, grouped approximately as follows:

Amusement Trades, Building Trades, Clothing and Textile Trades, Culinary and Provision Trades, Marine and Transport Workers, Metal Trades, Mine Workers, Postal and Federal Office Employes, Printing Trades, Railway Workers, Telegraph and Telephone Workers, Timber Workers.

Allowing local unions to retain their present status and at the same time permitting them to act as a group unit dealing with an international unit, thus greatly adding to our organizations' efficiency and very materially reducing overhead expenses.

Note: It is suggested that in case of favorable action the international financial secretary should be one of the delegates.

Proposition No. 2.—In case of favorable action upon Proposition No. 1 shall your delegates be instructed to work but a plan, at said conference, for the interchange or transfer of card without cost into any local union by any member of another union qualified by experience and ability to work under the jurisdiction of the union into which he or she may seek admission?

Proposition No. 3.—In case of favorable action upon Proposition No. 1 shall your delegates be instructed to work out a benefit plan which shall be just and equitable to all organizations based upon the length of time the beneficiary has held continuous membership in the American Federation of Labor rather than the period of membership in any particular craft union?

Proposition No. 4.—Shall this organization use its best influence to encourage the making of blanket agreements to cover all crafts in a given plant, endeavoring to secure uniformity of wages according to skill, and discourage local unions entering into individual agreements without regard for the welfare of other unionists in the same plant?

Proposition No. 5.—In case of favorable action upon Proposition No. 1 shall the plans worked out in said conference be submitted to our membership for ratification together with any further suggestions from the conference calculated to facilitate the operation of the proposed plans, and in no way conflicting with them? And further be it

Resolved, That all local unions in this community, having the ability, be requested to communicate with all local unions of their own crafts, urging favorable action upon these resolutions, sufficient copies of which will be furnished by this council; and further be it

Resolved, That each Central Labor Council within the jurisdiction of the A. F. of L. be earnestly requested to duplicate the action of this council in its own vicinity.

Respectfully submitted,
SEATTLE CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL,
JAMES A. DUNCAN, Sec'y.

KATE O'HARE'S MESSAGE

ment from her "task," there was a world of rebellion in a single glance, and then she resumed her sentry's watch over the tireless needle.

In the center of the back of the room, behind the toiling convict women there is a platform on which sits the forelady, watching over the laborers of these others from seven in the morning until five in the afternoon, with an hour for lunch.

I was trying to study the forelady by her features when the matron said, so she could be heard above the noise of the machine, "There is that noted Goldman woman," and I tried to show the same curiosity as others who came to this prison just to look.

"How do you get along with her?" I asked.

"Well," replied the matron, "she tries to carry on her work here on the 'inside' just as she did on the 'outside,' and of course we can't stand for that."

There is absolutely no attempt made to differentiate between political prisoners and those committed to Missouri's penitentiary for the usual crimes against society. I asked Warden Painter about this and his only answer was, "We treat them all alike." He did not seem to comprehend what was meant by a "political prisoner."

We, therefore, find Kate O'Hare, the world's most prominent woman political prisoner since Rosa Luxemburg was murdered in Moabit prison, in Berlin, Germany, at the height of the Spartican revolution in January, working here like any ordinary criminal. The negro women are mixed indiscriminately with the white women at the sewing machines. At the end of her first week's prison experience, Kate O'Hare was as spirited as ever, with courage unshaken and her outlook undimmed.

"I am quite all right," she declared, using almost exactly the same words employed by Debs after his first night in his prison cell.

"I feel perfectly well," she persisted, "sleep like a baby and eat like a harvest hand. The rest and quiet after the stress, strain and hard work of these trying times is really restful.

"So far I seem to feel no sense of shock, whatsoever. I entered here quite as calmly as I have registered at hundreds of hotels and the clang of the cell door did not disturb me more than the slamming of my room door by a careless bell boy.

"Life is the 'Great Adventure' and I am living one of its most interesting and illuminating experiences. I have learned much, so very much, in these strained days; lessons of pride and humility; lessons of laughter and sorrow; lessons of high comedy and bitter tragedy. I have learned that prison cells can teach greater and more useful lessons than college class rooms.

"Don't think that I am gloomy and lonely and unloved here, for I certainly am not. Through all the tragedy and heartache there comes sparkles of wit and flashes of humor, and we really find many things to laugh over.

"Our little world has its comedies, its vanities, its classes and its castes, just like the big world outside. The 'federals' are for some reason the 'upper class,' and the 'politicals' are the 'aristocracy'," so it would seem that the prisoners themselves recognize the difference between themselves where the prison officials and the prison system does not. Kate O'Hare continued:

"There are three real 'politicals,' Emma Goldman, a wonderful little Italian girl of 18, and myself. There is another 'espionage,' but she is just a poor, simple, old soul about as dongerous to the government as an unoffending Jersey cow.

"Next in rank are the women who have disposed of undesirable husbands, and at this point I want to expound for all my male friends a bit of wisdom. If you chance to have one of those meek, patient, quiet, long suffering wives, beware that you do not try her too far, or some morning you may wake up in paradise—or the other place. If you have chanced to get a temperamental lady, of shrewish tendencies, you may be uncomfortable but you will be safe."

Kate O'Hare then told of her experiences with the other prisoners. She likened her efforts to get in touch with the driftwood thrown up by the criminal world, to the obstacles [illegible] by the [illegible] of a well-to-do flock in St. Louis who could not develop a point of contact with the working class of that city.

"I feel the same way in my contact with the other inmates," she said. "I want to come close to these women. I want to serve them. But I am always conscious of the fact that they feel that I am one apart from them. Quite often I feel that I am uncovering a mine of psychological material, or a rich vein of underdog philosophy, and just when I am getting what I want, some cynical soul says, 'Aw, cut it—she's a lady.' And I am baffled and shut out and realize that 'ladies' and 'clergymen' are purely ornamental, and can have no relations to real life.

"But I feel that I am winning ground and in time I will not be penalized for being a 'lady.'"

The former member of the International Socialist Bureau then told of her experiences in the prison factory.

"One thing in my favor is that I can work," she said. "I am certainly thankful for my machine shop training."

Before her marriage to Frank P. O'Hare, Mrs. O'Hare was employed in a machine shop owned by her father at Kansas City, Mo.

"The work in the factory here does not trouble me in the least," she contends. "I understand that I have unwittingly broken all records for beginners. Of course I feel a little stiff and sore, but it is nothing serious. I feel sure that by next week I will be able to make the 'task' which for my work is 55 jumpers each day."

"I have received so many beautiful letters. You must let them know that I will be glad to get letters from them. There is no limit to what I can receive. But I can only write one letter a week and that, of course, must be to my family."

Kate O'Hare also asks that she be sent new books, as she cannot get too much reading matter. There are 80 girls in the prison, and there is not a book, magazine or partical of reading matter supplied to the women. There is a prison library but it seems that this is monopolized exclusively by the male prisoners.

The food served is eatable only as a last resort. Those prisoners who have money, or with friends on the "outside" can have anything they want in the way of cold food sent in.

"It will take some thought for me to work out a balanced ration," says Mrs. O'Hare. "But I will do the best I can. Tell the women comrades that I will be very glad to have any sort of home made jams, jellies and pickles, in fact, anything that is put up in small containers."

Several of the Jewish Socialists have promised to send Mrs. O'Hare some matzos, for which she had confessed a liking.

In speaking of the presence of Emma Goldman and the little Italian girl "political" prisoner, whose name I failed to learn, Mrs. O'Hare said:

"It is certainly a great thing for me to have two women like the two 'politicals' with me here. Miss Goldman is very fine and sweet and intellectually companionable, while the little girl is a darling. We really have very interesting times."

As a parting word, Mrs. O'Hare said:

YE WHO ARE IN PRISON

To our comrades who lie in the dungeons of capitalism, we send greetings of the revolution. Whether in the north, the south, the east or the west, wherever stone walls and iron bars confine a rebel, you, we hail as comrade and bid you be of good cheer for the new day is breaking and the forces that shall open your prison doors gather daily in strength.

Unconquerable you have been, determined in loyalty to your comrades and your ideals. True to your better selves, you now pay the price demanded by a predatory social system for loyalty to manhood and womanhood.

Jails have not terrorized you. "Cruel and unusual punishments" have not tamed your revolutionary spirits. Punishments abhorrent have not weakened you.

Strong have you stood for the solidarity of the workers. Firm as Gibraltar against the tides of capitalistic injustice, bearing always your faces to the rising sun and in your hearts and minds the vision of a new world for the workers.

Rooted deep in proletarian experience and in knowledge and conscience your spirits have not wavered under the persecution a foul capitalism has heaped upon you.

No regrets fill your thoughts. You do not relent in your revolutionary fervor. Slander has not seared your souls. Lies and the vicious "frame-up" have not worked your undoing. The workers of the world turn their faces to you today and call you comrades. They demand your release and in their throats rumbles the threat of revolution.

Some of you have died in prison. Not all could bear the iniquities of a capitalist prison life. Disease has thinned your ranks. Inhuman punishments, which could not break your spirits have broken your bodies. But you died without regrets—only that you could not live for the revolution. But your deaths have brought life to the cause. You have passed to unknown shores but across the uncharted spaces your voices reach us bidding us carry on till he worketrs' goal is reached.

Foully murdered that you were, your deaths have been a means of inspiration to thousands. Iniquities practiced upon you have hastened the end of capitalistic misrule. You are our honored dead. Through the mists we feel the touch of your hands; we hear your voices; we feel your presence. The inspiration of your revolutionary spirits abides with us and we pledge you unfaltering loyalty to the cause for which your lives were given.

The morning sun grows golden in the east. The day of the workers' emancipation draws near. A visionless capitalism has, through your imprisonment hastened the end of its misrule. Throughout the world echoes the tread of millions marching on the way to a better world society. A society of free labor, of love and comradeship.

You who now stand within cold prison walls, are rendering unto the revolution a service immeasurable. Injustice toward you but brings about the downfall of tyranny. It sows seeds of resentment in the minds of millions. You who can but "stand and wait" are a living part of the great change that is taking place in the world. Apart from it, yet a vital part of it, you serve the revolution to an heroic degree.

A bitter part the masters have given you to play. You have played it with the hearts of heroes. With unselfishness and devotion you have accepted what has fallen to you. You have been game. You serve the revolution in the spirit of unselfishness, which is the spirit of the revolution.

Today we hail you with tidings of the workers' growing power. The armies of capitalism decay in morale. The Red Armies of the Soviets increase in number and grow stronger in purpose, more united as the days pass. No power of capitalism can stay the workers' onward march. Capitalism is in retreat in half of Europe. The workers assert, capture and retain more power. "The day of the people has come."

And today we demand the release of our comrades, the class war prisoners of America. And every succeeding day we shall continue to demand their release until they are free. If capitalism cannot see the wisdom of releasing you then so much the worse for capitalism.

We workers grow weary of continued injustice. We are uniting for your release. We shall not rest until our demands are granted.

WE DEMAND YOUR IMMEDIATE RELEASE.

Hail to the Revolution!

WHAT'S TO BECOME OF WOMEN?

What's to become of the women under socialism, (bolshevism), asks a reader, and we proceed to answer by asking a question or two ourselves.

Being a man we are not greatly concerned about the future of woman under the new democracy that's a dawning over the world. Woman, it seems to us is becoming mighty capable of taking care of herself. As far as we can see the shoe is on the other foot. What is woman going to do with man under socialism, is a more pertinent question.

Under a social system where political and economic rights are equal, man may well fear some reprisals and revenges upon him for his age long persecution and humiliation of woman. Having equal rights with man, and since the war, being in all probability in the majority, what is to prevent them "getting even" for the mountains of humiliation man has heaped upon them. It's a serious question. They will have the power. Will they use it?

Here are a few of the outrages man has committed against woman—because he had the power:

Denial of all, not to speak of EQUAL political rights. Denial of equal pay for equal work. Denial of equal rights in property. Denial of equal rights in the home, though granted a generous share of responsibility. Denial of the rights of chastity because of a prostitute creating economic system which we upheld with our ballot and economic power. Denial of the right to create through political action better conditions for her children. Denial of the right of representation in government, though permitted to rear the necessary cannon fodder for its just and unjust wars.

This is not a complete list though it is long enough to arouse thinking men to the terrific posibilities ahead, once woman has an equal show. Can we expect a pardon from our wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts for these crimes, upon the day of liberation from our bondage. Can the slave forgive his master? It is too much to expect even from so magnanimous a creature as woman has proved to be. The hour of her deliverance is fraught with many dangers—to man.

So far, as man has tread his predatory way, cajoleries and appeal to woman's forgiving and sympathetic nature have sufficed to quell incipient rebellions. Will these means avail in the future when she gets in the full stride of her liberties and fully realizes the depth of her past slavery at our hands? We fear they will not. The future for us is grave indeed. Suppose, just for a moment that she would go the limit and—decide to get along without us. Ye Gods, men!

Why Your Wife Should Join The Party

By Fannye Treaster

ARTICLE NO. 2

See what our Militant Sisters have done for us? They who thought to win for us the vote. They have caused the suffrage so near within our grasp to evade us for a time. We are satisfied that theirs is not the right method—the warring one. Does this method ever pay? The mother who wars with her child for perhaps, some just cause—does she ever gain any real results from this method? From sheer force of her superior strength, there may be a temporary relief. Does the warring, nagging wife ever attain the regeneration of her mate? She is invariably a failure. Do warring political societies ever gain anything but hysterical, unreal, upstart support by their violent methods? I might apply this to the moral and physical attainments of warring nations. Nothing was ever gained by war of any sort; nothing that is permanent and good, sane and sound. If we expect san and sound developments from our efforts, we must use san and sound methods. We only reflect that which we think, feel and emit. We are responsible for the storms brought about by our violent acts. And I believe that when suffrage is ours, we can feel assured that it was not the methods of our Militant Sisters that brought it about.

As I mentioned in the previous article, this movement of woman suffrage is not our movement. It is not the movement of the female proletariat. It is that of the restless bourgeoisie—of the woman who wants to vote as a child wants a new toy. It is not a movement with a definite, far-reaching goal in view. True, they advocate some few reforms; but we—we want far more. We want a general revolution of conditions—economic, social and industrial. The moral reforms that they ask, will come as a natural outcome of these.

Our husbands are the toilers, the producers and it has become the lot of some of we women to become toilers and producers. Given the vote, we should abolish the necessity for female workers except in the capacity for which they are fitted.

We are natural artists and beautifiers. Given time and means, we would make our homes the haven of rest fitting to its name, which the dictionary describes as "one's abode or dwelling." (It usually belongs to the landlord). Under our system, it would indeed be "home" to the toiler, who under the proper working condition, would not be work-weary and depressed, too tired from building the boss's new auto or a new mansion, to notice or enjoy the feeble efforts of his wife at adornment. The writer had occasion recently to converse with a prominent lawyer on the topic of the working conditions of today—the fact that so many men were out of work and that wages and "time" were being cut. This legal advisor said, "I have no sympathy with the working-class. I have no patience with them. When they were making big wages, they wasted it for autos and victrolas—" I answered, interruptingly, "Why should they not have autos and victrolas? Do they not make them?"

We want the right to enjoy some family leisure. To illustrate my point: The writer's small daughter is of the impression that her father only spends Saturday night at home, since he is gone when she arises in the morning and he is still up when she retires at night and she only sees him, except on Sunday, at her evening meal time. She is constantly asking her daddy, "Are you going to stay all night, tonight?" We treat it as a joke. But, is it really a joke? We say that they are babies but once and we should enjoy them while we may. But, may we? How many parents are really and truly in a position to enjoy their babies?—Mother is weak and ailing from a life of drudgery at home and father is cross and irritable from a life of drudgery exacted by this system of exploitation. He leaves the best of himself at the shop. When evening comes, their tensely drawn nerves are about to snap and the least noise and laughter of their high spirited, yet unchecked with toil, offspring makes them feel their young are but something to add to their misery. Assuredly, we are not in a position to enjoy our babies. This is one more thing that we want our vote to accomplish, a little leizure, a little freedom, a little playtime, to be able to enjoy a romp with our babies

Then, there is education to consider. We want the right to educate our children. There are the schools," you say. True, schools. You are right. But a drawback there is, that of lack of economic freedom. There is something required these days besides the right to enter a public building. It is the means to get there. In the first place, there is needed good wholesome food to make good sturdy legs with which to walk; then, there is needed good substantial clothing to cover good healthy bodies and keep them so; and behind it all, pushing with all its might, there must be a good generous income. The majority of children do not leave school because of a lazy brain. Neither do they need such prodding to keep them there, but they do need conditions equal to that of the other child. Children are sensitive beings. They have a well developed pride. They cannot bear the sneer of their companions on account of a toe sticking from a worn shoe. They cannot bear to borrow books or to have them charitably given them. Personally, there has come to my notice, a number of children who have left school for these very reasons. Then, secondary to these the struggling parents sometimes reach such a crisis in their struggle, usually when the child becomes of such an age that his upkeep has increased to such an extent that the parents have no alternative but to reach forth and grasp the small hand of the child for support, and instead of the child becoming a useful, learned member of society, he joins the band of wage slaves in their eternal struggle. Now, we want the vote to free our children of these evils which beset their helpless lives, and to be able, personally, to demand better educational advantages.

I might go on indefinitely, but lack of space forbids. I will conclude with the statement that the most satisfactory and lasting way to obtain the vote is through education—education as to the right, reason and necessity for women voting. Then, education of the women as to the most advantageous way to use the vote after it has been granted. Heaven help her if she does not surpass the male in the wisdom of its use. A good majority of the men in this country do not either use their right of suffrage or they simply vote for the "Party" that grandfather voted for. You know they have so much respect for the "family tree" (which contained their ape-man ancestors). When we have suffrage, we want control of the central power, and we shall have recognition, but our methods of gaining this will be a different one from that of the afore-mentioned sisters. We will not storm that center, and make symbolic displays before it. We will first congregate in small units, that is the locals of the Socialist Party. These locals make up the state organization, and finally we shall have the national unit. And it shall all be done in a legal, quiet way, a way that no one can question. The Socialist Party movement is an open, above-board one, one that any woman may be proud to join There we have equal rights with the men, where brains count and not sex charm. Women, join your Socialist local, take active part. If you have no local in your community, organize one. It is your privilege.

Resolutions

Local Mount Vernon assembled in regular session makes a motion favoring the following resolution and extends a call for seconds.

Be it resolved, That the Socialist Party of Ohio and the United States, issue a call and exhort all organized lobor and labor in general throughout the United States to declare a general and indefinite boycott on all newspapers and publications in the United States that in any manner or form vilify, discriminate against, or misrepresent the labor or Socialist movement from any source whatsoever throughout the world; and the Bolsheviki or majority government of Russia and Hungary.

COLUMBUS SOCIALISTS WILL PROTEST

Wants to Help

Editor, Ohio Socialist:-

I feel it my duty to do something for Gene Debs, who exercised only the power that our constitution gave him. By what rule shall we be guided if we dare not exercise the rights that our own Constitution gives us?

Shall we stand idle and let capitalism take all our rights from us? The imprisonment of Debs takes from all of us another right, soon the working class will be the slave of the capitalist as the negro was in the south. Isn't it ridiculous that in such a great country, a man will be cast into a filthy prison for ten years for telling the truth! What will our country come to? At such a rate it will soon be worse than Germany was.

If the American people would have made a religious campaign to such an extent as they made Liberty Loan drives, our country would not be infested with robbers, theives and all other criminals and not every town of any size would be so vile that a young girl is not safe on its streets.

Our religious duty is our first duty. It is our duty to God. Shall we be slackers and turn down our religious duty to help raise money so that man can kill his own kind? It takes some people long to see that war is an evil and that God forbids it. And those people who do know it simply defy their Lord and his Commandments by upholding such evils. He who gave them life and all their beautiful homes and surroundings, they defy. Are you going to be a traitor to your Lord, by letting vices exist in your country, brother I hope not?

If only the people could see ahead, and if they would make half as much of an effort to throw over capitalism and set up God's law—Socialism, as they did to put over the Masters' will, our country would be a far better place to live in, and no man would be cast into prison for speaking the truth. Here are some of the things that are left for us to clean up in our country as given by a prominant magazine:

One hundred heathen temples in our country.

A million children at work under age.

Many daily and weekly newspapers published in the United States that openly attack the Christian religion.

Vices in every town of any size, and the two billion dollar waste every year on booze which has taken all these years for our prominent lawmakers to take notice of. Socialism is going to make this world a decent place to live in, but it takes a long time for some people to see it, just as it took a long time for the south to see that slavery was impractical. The laboring class must stick together, "United, We Stand—Divided we fall." I, a mere high school youth with small means cannot do much, but will do what I can.

Will you do me a favor by answering the following thru your fine paper?

What is Gene Debs' address and will he consider any letter of consolation sent to him by an ordinary person like myself?

Do you think my ideas in this letter are right?

Yours in brotherhood
A READER

Letters addressed to Comrade Debs at 1818 Jefferson Ave., Moundsville, W. Va., will reach him. We do not know if the prison rules will permit Comrade Debs to answer the hundreds of letters which will reach him from his freinds, but he will surely appreciate your letter.

The best indication of the growing strength of socialism is found in the great influx of young people in the movement. It is an inspiration to every Comrade to see the young men and women taking a serious view of the great problems of the day, which they surely must help solve. Keep up your interest in Socialism, do what you can in the movement and keep on the look out for a chance to propagate our ideas. You are on the right road. Keep agoing. Ed.

Harper's Ferry and Moundsville

By J. P. WEST

Forty-five miles north west of Washington, D. C., at the foot of Boliver Heights and at the confluence of Shenandoah and Potomac rivers is grandly situated Harper's Ferry, Jefferson county, W. Va.

If you chance to be a passenger on a B & O train, and the train men or some one says we are near Harper's Ferry, windows are raised on one side of the coach and passengers on the other side move over, all eager to see—what just a little stone, a marwer insignificant in itself, but marks a spot now almost sacred to all liberty loving people. Old John Brown's Fort stood there.

John Brown, born in Torrington, Conn., May 9, 1800, died Dec. 2, 1859. On the night of Oct. 16, he with a handful of brave companions overpowered the guard and captured the U. S. arsenal situated here. On the 18th he was wounded, over-powered and taken capitive. On the 27th he was tried at Charlestown, W. Va., convicted and executed Dec.2. So died a martyr if ever there was one. In 1868, Lincoln finshed the work for which John Brown so nobly laid down his life.

A few days ago I was reading over the names of those connected with John Brown. I wonder how many can name judge and jury that condemned John Brown to die? They are forgotten; but John Brown, the martyr lives as does Benjamin Lundy, Wm. Loyd Garrison, Elijah P. Lovejoy, (martyr), Wendell Phillips, Charles Summer, Channing Emerson, Bryant, Longfellow, Whittier, Whitman, Stone and many others who spoke against the cause of Negro slavery. It is pertinent to enquire how the slave power attempted to increase its influence in the union. By the Louisiana purchase (1803), Missouri compromise (1820), annexation of Texas (1845), fugitive slave law (1850), Kansas and Nebraska bill (1854), Dred Scott decision (1856) (a supreme court decision, as in the case of Debs), attempts to acquire Cuba (1854), and to reopen the foreign slave trade (1859-60)

All these attempts failed to stop the agitation against slavery, but only aroused a determined spirit of opposition.

The south and its partisans in the north made desperate efforts to prevent the free expression of opinion respecting slavery and even the so-called Christian churchse in the slave states used their influence in favor of the vile institution; just as it is using what little influence it has today in favor of the robbing class, the exploiters of the workers. Notwithstanding one of the commandments says, Thou shalt not steal, and another, Thou shalt not kill.

Moundsville, a city in Marshall county, West Virginia, situated on the beautiful Ohio, here lived and loved another race of people as the mound plainly shows, hence the name Moundsville. The mound is still there but builders have gone on before.

There is another mound, or I should say, monument, a monument to capitalism. They call it a prison. It was built by the working class and it mostly if not entirely is inhabited by the working class—one big, massive, strong building at least built by the workers and occupied by the workers. You know that is not the rule, the workers occupy the shack and pay rent for the use of it.

A man old in years, but young in spirit, arrived there a few days ago. Comrade we greet you. We are glad they sent you here. We didn't want you in prison, but as it had to be we are glad to have you near. In future the passengers on the train will try to catch a glimpse of these stone walls because of the fact that they have contained the person of Eugene V. Debs.

When the names of judge and jury, who convicted you, are forgotten, your name, your memory, will live in the lives and minds of a free people. Some day you will be free; some day I will be free, the whole world will be free. The Dred Scott decision by the supreme court did not save slavery neither will the decision of the supreme court in your case save capitalism. Just as sure as chattel or Negro slavery passed away, just so sure will wage-slavery pass away. John Brown's life and work was finished here in West Virginia. Your work has just begun. When John Brown was hanged all the slave-owning papers said, Amen. They said the same of Debs. John Brown died upon the scaffold, but his soul went marching on, to victory. You may die in prison but the truth will go marching on.

J. B. WEST.

OKLAHOMA ON THE FIRING LINE

We are going to wake the dead down here May 1. Will pull off a big program and have a picnic in the woods with speeches, songs, exercises and propaganda literature by the basket full. There is a great growing sense of injustice growing among the farming class and laborers.

Lt is surprising how the idea of socialism is getting in the heads of the common farmer and others that thought it was free love and dividing up. The capitalists try to backfire on them by substituting the word bolshevism to scare them away but it will be all in vain. By the time they get their scheme ready to ull off Europe will be fully bolshevikized and what kind of a name will they call ungrateful England, France and Italy for taking this awful thing, bolshevism, to their bosoms?

Local Zanesville is another Ohio local that has placed itself squarely in line with the revolutionary elements of the party. At a recent meeting it went on record as favoring the Left Wing Program as published in the Revolutionary Age.

SOCIALISTS WIN IN SILVIS, ILL.

"A good, clean administration wins for the Socialist Party at Silvis," writes Comrade Fred O. Hartline of Silvis, Ill. At the recent election the Socialists re-elected the mayor and two members of the board of trustees, lacking but six votes of electing the third. The Socialist police magistrate failed of re-election by but 14 votes.

Who Wants War?

FREDERICK A. BLOSSOM.

Who wants war? Who is it that is trying to get us into trouble with Mexico and send American working man across the Rio Grande to kill their Mexican fellow workers? Who is it that is demanding a standing army of half a million men and a fleet that shall be able to whip that of Great Britain?

The workers of America has no quarrel with the workers of Mexico or with the workers of England. They have no interest in disputes over Mexican mines and oil wells, or foreign trade in South America and the Orient. All they demand is to be left in peace to do the work of the world and to solve the big problems of [illegible]

The workers of every country are always the ones who pay the terrible cost of war, who pay it in sweat and blood, in life and limb, while the master class makes enormous fortunes out of the agony of mankind. The workers, who are the immense majority, do not want war.

The master class, the privileged few who live by the toil of the many, find war a highly profitable business. They will continue to provoke one war after another in the advancement of their money-making schemes, in settlement of their commercial disputes, until the workers of [illegible] realizing their [illegible] up and put an end to [illegible]

MILITANT WORKERS OF EUROPE SECURE MILLIONS IN WAGES

Militantcy of European Workers Seen in Recent Victories in England, France and Belgium.

Washington—The international labor exploiters told us during the first months of the world-war that Socialism and the class struggle and internationalism had definitely disappeared. But now they are marching triumphantly in every country.

In some countries the workers are emancipating themselves from capitalism by the social revolutionary route, in others by the social evolutionary route. In some countries they strike against private employers, in other countries they strike against the Government. But in every country the workers are hitting the labor exploiters in the solar plexus.

A few of the notable victories of the class-conscious workers of the world are given herewith:

ENGLAND.

From England, Sydney Webb sends the authentic account of the terms of the settlement of the dispute between the organized railroad, mine, and dock workers, numbering all told 2,000,000 working men and forming with their families one-fifth of the population of that country. Webb was a member of the arbitration commission and is understood to have written the report which was agreed to by the workers, their exploiters, and the government. He is the author of a number of books on economic subjects and is a prominent member of the British Labor Party.

The demands of the three sections of the Triple Alliance were radical. And the 2,000,000 men threatened to tie up England with a general strike unless the employers and the government granted the major part of their demands. The 2,000,000 workers knew they had the power to tie up England; the labor exploiters knew the workers had the power to tie up Engalnd; the government knew the workers had the power to tie up England. So there was prompt action all around.

The workers did not declare the general strike. Nor did they wrest from the labor eyploiters and the government 100 per cent of their demands. But they did coerce the labor exploiters and the government into granting the major portion of their demands, and, what is significant, they smashed the theory, so carefully nursed by the employers, that the wages paid the working people for producing wealth should vary according to the cost of living and be limited by that cost.

According to Mr. Webb's official statement the dock workers obtained the 44-hour week, big increases in wages, with substantial premiums for overtime work. The railroad workers got the 48-hour week, equalization of wages for each occupation, and the guarantee that neither the government nor the private owners of the railroads shall decrease wages for a year, even though the food profiteers may decrease the cost of the workers' living. The miners, Webb declares, presented the most radical demands, insisting on a large wage increase, a stiff reduction in hours, and the nationalization of the mining industry, temporarily operated under government control.

The Triple Alliance accepted the proposition to arbitrate the dispute. But they stipulated that the workers should select half of the members of the arbitration board and that the board should make its final report within three weeks. The miners' federation named Smilie, its president, and Smith, its secretary, and three labor exploiters represent- economic and political subjects, including Sydney, and a magistrate, who was to be the president of the board. The coal mine owners named three of their own members and three albor exploiters representing other big industries. It is significant that the three "Intellectual" members ofthe labor part of the board were three defeated candidates of the Labor Party in the recent parliamentary elections.

The board made three reports. The coal mining owning labor exploiters offered to decrease the working day one hour and increase wages 15 per cent. The labor representatives demanded that the working day be cut down two hours with a 30 per cent increase in wages. The labor exploiters representing the other industries and the president of the board proposed an immediate reduction of one hour in the length of the working day, a further reduction of one hour in 1920, and a 20 per cent increase in wages. Lloyd George's government agreed to the third report, and the men consented to the compromise. The agreement establishes the 42 hours per week for underground workers and 46½ hours for other workers. "The commission's award," declares Mr. Webb, "will require the payment of increased wages amounting to $218,000,000 per year. This is the largest wage increase ever made in Europe.

FRANCE.

In France, coerced by the Socialists in Parliament and menaced by the revolting workers in the industries, the Chamber of Deputies passed the national eight-hour bill extending the benefits of the shorter working day to every section of the Republic.

Profiting by the experience of the railroad, mine and dock workers in England, the French workers organized an even more effective alliance of the workers in the large industries to drive the eight-hour law through parliament. The French General Confederation of Labor has been co-ordinating the efforts of the organized workers of France ever since the armistice to compel action on the part of the labor exploiters controlling the French government, who have been exceedingly dilatory in enacting labor legislation, and especially so relative to the eiht-hour day.

WAR ON REDS IN RUSSIA DRIVES YANKS TO DRINK

That many Americans in Russia have become alcoholics as the result of imbibing too freely of vodka was the assertion of Sergt. Louis Karel, 3624 West Twenty-sixth street, Chicago, X-ray expert, who served in France and in the hospital in England to which Yankee troops from Russia are taken. Sergt. Karel reached here today on the transport Louisville.

"There are thirty-six American soldiers in the hospital at Liverpool now waiting to be sent home," Sergt. Karel said. "Most of the men who come back from Russia have frozen feet. It is also noticeable that there is a large percentage of tuberculosis cases among them and that many come back as alcoholics.

"Liquor is welcome in the zero temperature, and many of the men acquired a craving for it."

A new Y. P. S. L. has been organized at Bellaire. Quite a number of the members are party members, consequently we expect them all to be excellent workers.

When it comes to having a good time the Bellaire Y. P. S. L. is a star of the first magnitude.

We held our first social on the evening of April 12 and it certainly was a success in every way. Our program for the evening consisted of an address by our director, Comrade J. J. Hoge, several well rendered readings and musical selections by a number of our members. Not the least appreciated of which were two vocal selections by Comrade Lena Sambuco, the "littlest rebel."

It was here demonstrated beyond a doubt that our Yipseletts know how to bake cakes, for one of them baked a guess cake, which brought almost ten dollars. When we tell you that it waved a red flag it won't be hard for you to guess what was inside. You guess! Yes, a picture of our own "Gene."

Inspired by the success of this affair we are palnning many other activities. Fraternally,

HATTIE GUEISER.

ALLIED FORCES IN RUSSIA

(An editorial in "The Manchester Guardian."

Signs multiply that Allied military intervention in Russia is drawing to an end. The French government has announced that it will send no more troops to Russia, and that it will not even replace those who are being withdrawn or demobilized. The Canadian government is bringing home all its soldiers from Siberia where they constitute the bulk of the British contingent. The American government, somewhat to the concern of the Japanese, declines to permit its Siberian forces to participate in military operations. The disinclination of our own government to extend its commitments is equally marked. The Japanese have no men in Western Siberia, and any fighting they have been engaged in of late has been in the remote East and has no relation to the real anti-Bolshevik crusade. Finally, the Czecho-Slovaks are out of the firing line, and are making their way home as fast as transport can be provided. The Allied war against the Bolsheviks is being wound up for a variety of reasons. That war was and is exceedingly unpopular with the soldiers, now that the war elsewhere is over. It is, morally and politically impossible to keep a conscript army for such a purpose; it is impracticable also to get together a voluntary army. There is, further, the urgent peril of sowing Bolshevism in every country by making war upon it. There is, again, the impossibility of giving the world peace so long as there is war with Russia. Hints that the Allied governments have assimilated such reasoning as this may be gathered from the press. The American government has been investigating Russian conditions on the spot. Other governments have been or are doing the like. The air is full of rumors of arrangements and accommodations with the Russian government, and when we see the reflection of them in the changed tone and temper of semi-official French papers we cannot doubt that the rumors have substance. It is useless to complain that the Allied rulers have been intolerably long in reaching the inevitable conclusion. We can only hope that they will now act with vigor and decision.

SOVIET BANNER FLIES HIGH AT CHICAGO.

Chicago—Early walkers in Humbolt Park, Chicago, were astonished to see waving a hundred feet above the ground the first Soviet flag ever flown in this city. Some Bolshevist joker had seen fit to create a bit of interest in present day problems by running up a red flag inscribed with white letters reading "Hooray for the Soviet Republic."

It was necessary to secure a steeple jack to shin up the pole after the offending emblem. It was later burned at police headquarters—which, of course, settles the Bolshevik question as far as this city is concerned.

PARIS SCHOLAR ON PEACE CONFERENCE

"OPEN COVENANTS OPENLY ARRIVED AT."

That the peace conference is not only the most secret but probably the most august peace assembly ever held is the affirmation of Auguste Gauvais in the Journal des Debats. This veteran journalist and student of diplomatic procedure writes:

"It is an unheard of thing, which posterity will hardly be able to believe, that the peace conference has kept on record of its meetings except in the public sessions where nothing has been discussed. Since January 18, the date of the solemn opening, not one of its members has been able to have registered the opinions which it was his mission to express. At the congress of Vienna, the congress of Berlin, and the conferences at The Hague, as well as at all other known conferences, protocols have been drawn, sometimes even voluminous, in which could be found the substance of the opinions, suggestions, propositions and counter propositions of representatives of the various states. It was not a stenographic record as in a parliament, but everything essential was written down, each member of the assembly moreover having the right to correct or modify the text of his declarations.

Chance to Explain Denied.

"This traditional procedure was consecrated by long experience. It enabled each government to explain its viewpoint, make its objections, support or oppose various propositions and oblige its opponents to justify their pretensions by serious arguments. The protocols of the Vienna and Berlin congresses are extremely valuable collections.

"It is impossible to understand why these precedents have not been followed. The present crisis and also the prodigious loss of time would have been avoided. The ten, then the five and then the four have preferred not only to discuss matters in secret, but to leave no trace of their deliberations. They have not had any secretaries to record them. They have talked interminably. They have broached and agitated all questions without putting anything on paper. They resume on one day what they had settled the day before. They protest against language attributed to them outside. As nothing is written they can deny everything and begin everything over again.

"After four months of negotiations one can count on the fingers of one hand the written declarations which have emanated from them. They have been afraid to let their opinions and arguments be known. One would say that they were conspiring.

Installed Themselves on Sinaii.

"We forsee the results, of this method when the four installed themselves on Sinaii. They thought they would be able to extricate themselves from difficulties by surrounding themselves with clouds. On the contrary, this was just the time to emerge into daylight. Having noted the conflict of views among themselves they should have confined themselves to formulating and justifying their opinions in writing. The mass of untenable arguments would thus have been swept aside. Even though no agreements were reached, material for arbitration would have been prepared.

"The four months which have gone by have served only to confuse questions instead of clarifying them. The representatives of the allied and the associated powers had from November 11 to January 18 to study the conference program and prepare their conversations. On January 18 each delegation should have placed its memorandum and supplemenfary documents on the conference table. The questions could then have been examined one after another, a careful record of each meeting being kept. The delegates would have had intervals between the sessions for the indispensable confidential conversations. But once in meeting they should have assumed responsibility for their words and formulated declarations destined to be recorded in the protocol. Oppositions would thus have been revealed, it is true, but they were inevitable.

"In the present state of things neither parliaments nor peoples have authentic documents at their disposition. They have to content themselves with the verbal declarations of their government ministers. There is not even material for a yellow book. This creates an atmosphere charged with electricity whence a storm may burst at any moment."

Seattle Labor Plans Five-Day Plan

Seattle, Wash. May 2.—Beginning tomorrow a five-day week will be enforced, according to announcement today by the building trades council, representing 6,000 workers. No work will be done on Saturday and Sunday.

The change was said to have been made in the belief that more men could be given employment in the building trades.

HE WORRIES ABOUT BOLSHEVISM—GETS HEADACHE

As you will notice another town is being entered by the "Ohio Socialist," viz. Okolona, O., the result of my attending the lecture held there last Sunday, April 27, by Comrades Geo. Wicher and F. Adler, members of the Ft. Wayne, Ind., German Branch S. P. Both spoke in German to a large and very appreciative audience. Quite a lot of literature was sold and distributed, eleven subscriptions to the German weekly "Echo," of Cleveland, were secured by Comrade Wicher. I stole two one year-lies away from him for the Ohio Socialist while he wasn't looking. This is the first Socialist meeting ever held there and if I do not miss my guess it will not be the last, notwithstanding the "frothings" of the worthy (?) president of the Napoleon League of Patriots. A Republican ex-officeholder (by appointment), supposed to have made the statement that he "grappled with the question all Saturday night, it robbed him of his sleep and made his head ache over this question—whether or not to stop the Socialist meeting called for Sunday at Okolona."

I do not know what his reasons were for not stopping it. It may have been the fist fight he had with a comrade (who wouldn't be bluffed) a few hours previous, that decided the thing.

UNION MEN DEMAND FREEDOM FOR ALL POLITICAL PRISONERS

Huntington, W. Va., May 1, 1919.
Mr. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.

FUTURE OF GERMANY IN HANDS OF TOILERS

Ben Heet of Chicago Tribune Cables That Though Soviets Rise and Fall, Workmen With Guns Are There To Stay.

The following dispatch was written in Munich, Bavaria, on April 19th. It is written by a capitalist newspaper correspondent to what is probably the first and foremost capitalist sheet of this country.

The story of Germany today lies in a single phrase—workingmen with guns. I have made my way through Bavaria, Wuerttemburg, Saxony and the Rhineland. I saw stunted little peasants with blinking eyes carrying guns—ragged looking, unsmiling creatures out of engine room and mine depths, sauntering through the streets of Essen, through the streets of Hagen, Ochsburg, Munich—cocking their eyes at palaces, holding their heads high—everywhere expressionless faces of folks who have known misery, hunger and always hard labor, mooching about with guns slung over their shoulders.

Here in Munich today bolshevism reigns undisturbed. The workingman with the gun is the cock of the walk; the workingman with the gun lounges in the plush seats of the famous hotels where once the Bavarian elite focused a languid monocle upon life. Playboy Munich has vanished; even the revolutionary playboys are gone. The political grotesques are gone, the garrulous idealists have vanished from the seats of the new government and the little schoolmasters, café poets and expansive egos who for a few days fancied themselves the consecrated leaders of a great ideal are no longer on the scene. Red guard patrol trucks, laden with workingmen carrying guns, careen through the streets all day and all night.

SOVIET ON EVERY CURBSTONE.

Beginning with the dawn the streets are jammed with curbstone soviet parliaments. Groups of peasants and factory workers, they stand talking, talking. Their wives and children stand beside them listening in awe to their sudden oratorical prowess. Occasionally an airplane appears over the city, whereupon the father unlimbers his gun and starts popping away. Guns start popping on every street corner and workingmen dart out of the wine shops. The zoologist Max Levien dashes from Wittelsbach palace to superintend the anti-aircraft attack. Little clouds of paper zigzag down from the escaping plane and hundreds of bolshevists are busy for an hour removing the anti-bolshevist propaganda leaflets from the streets through which they have been scattered.

Occasionally another variety of excitement arrests the attention of the strolling thousands. A closed automobile, crowded with "young bloods" scoots through the city with guns blazing out of the windows at the red patrols. Ever and anon a volley of rifle shots cuts loose at the red guard workingmen holding the railroad station. As a result of these sniping attacks all automobiles have been confiscated by the soviet government.

TOLLER WRITES "POEM" OF VICTORY.

Women and children are waiting for the first train to take them out of the city. No trains have come yet. The families have brought bedding

CLEVELAND SOCIALISTS' GREATEST PARADE ENDS IN RIOT AND BLOODSHED

Peaceful Internationals Attacked by Mobs—Scores Sent To Hospitals and Jails With Bruised Bodies.

The greatest parade ever staged by the Socialists of Cleveland ended in red riot and bloodshed on Thursday afternoon, May 1st. Hundreds of arrests were made, scores were taken to the hospitals, including seventeen policemen. Many more only slightly injured were taken home by friends. Riots and mobs ruled in the downtown section of the city for two hours. Shots were fired, police clubs cracked scores of heads and fist fights innumerable were principal parts of the debauch to which this section of the city was given over when the first division of the parade, numbering 35,000 marchers, entered the Public Square in the heart of the business section.

PARADERS PEACEFUL AND HAPPY.

In five great divisions the 35,000 Socialists and sympathizers, including the Bakers' union, on strike for day-work only, the Machinists, one local of the Carpenters, members of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, converged near Acme hall and began their march toward the Public Square. Thousands carried small red pennants. Dozens of banners demanding release of political prisoners, withdrawal of troops from Russia and similar emblems were carried. Great red silk banners together with the national emblem were carried at the head of the parade and by the different divisions.

Smiles and happiness were on every face, cheers were given for the workers' cause and the spirit of the New Day was seen to shine in every comrade's face and bearing. The parade was one of happy men, women and children, bent upon a peaceful and happy celebration of our International holiday.

FIRST RIOT STARTS.

The parade was passing East 9th on Superior street when soldiers on the sidewalk rushed into the parade tearing the red banners from the hands of the marchers. In a few minutes Superior street was a scene of riot and disorder from this point to the Public Square.

When the head of the parade reached the Square an immense cheering rose up from the thousands who packed the grounds. At the same moment the soldiers who carried the Socialist banners were attacked by others from the crowds. Their banners were wrested from them. When C. E. Ruthenberg, who was to be the principal speaker, interceded for the Socialists, he was arrested. Scarcely had the applause of the vast throngs died down when a shriek of terror rose from thousands of throats as a platoon of mounted police dashed into the meele weilding clubs without discrimination upon men and women alike. Instantly, bedlam broke loose. Army trucks and tanks, police autos, ambulances and police patrol wayons were dashing helter skelter through the crowds overrunning and injuring many in an attempt to disperse the crowds. Autos carryinv police and mounted police

"I'M STILL ON DECK"

SAYS DEBS, REFLECTING ON FATE OF FORMER FOES.

(By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.)
(Special Correspondence.)

Chicago. "All, or nearly all, of the enemies I've had during my life time have met with misfortune and tragedy. Clouds have settled early over their careers. I'm still on deck. And I'm going to emerge from this new experience in my life, in triumph, too."

This is one of the conclusions that Euene V. Debs reached, as we discussed the big incidents of his busy life, while making that memorable journey to prison from Cleveland, O., to Moundsville, West Va., on Palm Sunday, April 13. He did not gloat over his fallen foes, who have sought to hold back the hands of progress, but rather exulted in the fact that the world was moving ahead in spite of all obstacles.

It all comes back to me now, stronger than ever, as word comes from Debs' prison down in West Virginia, to the effect that so many visitors want to see and visit "Gene" that the prison warden has been compelled to turn them away, and there are so many letters coming to 'Gene in the mail from all parts of the world, that the prison warden is planning to change his ruling made on the night of our arrival, that 'Gene would receive all letters sent him.

Has More Friends Than Ever.

The prison officials, if not the democratic officialdom at Washington, are no doubt discovering that Debs has more friends than ever.

One of Debs' most bitter opponents during the Pullman strike was John R. Walsh, the Chicago banker and newspaper proprietor. Walsh was himself sent to prison as a bank wrecker. His friends secured his release just in time to permit him to die on "the outside."

George M. Pullman and Eugene V. Debs clashed in the great Pullman railroad strike. Pullman is said to have gone to an early grave because of the wild life led by his two sons, both of whom died degenerates at an early age, also clouding the life of the wife and mother.

Former Judge an Unburied Corpse.

Judge Westenhaver, at Cleveland, Ohio, who sentenced Debs to his present ten years' imprisonment, isn't the first interpreter of law that has faced the Socialist spokesman. One of these was Judge Peter S. Grosscup of the federal district court in Chicago, who some years ago was driven from the bench in disgrace and who now lives somewhere, as Debs remarks, "an unburied corpse."

It was Judge W. W. Woods that was called upon to sit in the great

THE Y. P. S. L. AND THE REVOLUTION

(By Oliver C. Carlson.)

The average American Socialist who is not well versed in the International Socialist movement knows little or nothing about the Young People's Socialist organizations in other countries, and what an important part they have played in the development of Socialist thought and action. In this country we have considered the league only as a gathering place for the young; we have been satisfied when they managed to exist with the "social" in "Socialist" playing the the all important part; and when by chance a circle or a small part of a circle showed interest in the actual study of socialism, we were elated—for we know that these were indeed valuable exceptions. On the whole, most of the older heads in the party considered the Y. P. S. L. as an organization that was necessary, but which was not likely to accomplish anything worth while for the coming of the day when the emancipation of the proletariat would become a reality.

Something has been radically wrong with the Young People's Socialist organizations in this country. The attitude of the older party members toward them has, to a certain extent, been the correct one. But let us not condemn the movement; let us not say that there can be no change—for even now a great change is taking place. Let us not hold preconceived ideas that the young people's organizations of Europe are similar to that which we have had in this country.

Karl Liebknecht was one of the founders of the Young People's Socialist League; in fact, this was his first real undertaking after graduating from the law school. The spread of the league throughout Europe was by no means phenomenal, but was a steady growth. Austria, Switzerland, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and Russia, soon fell into line, and the Y. P. S. L. assumed an international character. The young and enthusiastic Socialists joined hands, not in any attempt to gain concessions, not to ask for a little bit more from the rulers and exploiters, but to seize control of ALL, to "expropriate the expropriators." They were not chained to the past; they were ready to fling to the winds traditions and customs; to view the present as only the present generation can, and above all things, they were eager to study, to agitate, to educate, in other words, TO ACT. And they did.

The greatest stumbling block for the reactionary elements of the Social Democratic parties of all Europe was the Y. P. S. L. Within it were the Left Wingers who wasted no time in dilly-dallying with the trivialities that so concerned the old line readers. They refused to compromise. And so it was that the Young People's Socialist Leagues of some countries were practically outlawed by their respective (and respectable!) Socialist parties.

In Russia, it was the young who formed the most active group of the Bolsheviki. In fact, the struggle there would no doubt, have been a much more difficult one had it not been for them. Lenine, an ardent advocate of the Y. P. S. L., was and still is a contributor to the "Young International," the official organ of the international Y. P. S. L.

The Ebert-Scheideman group of Germany feared the young to such an extent that they made every attemptto break up their organizations. In the Spartacan revolts, these same young Socialists are acquitting themselves as creditably as did their comrades in Russia. They form the backbone of the revolutionary movement which is seeking to overthrow the reactionary Socialists, who hold the reins of government in the interest of the capitalist class.

The activities of the young in all of the European countries gives us an idea of how important the Y. P. S. L. really is. We are facing a critical period—the revolt of the working class is spreading from east to west, from north to south, and threatens to encompass the entire world. What are we going to do? We must devote more time to the Young People's Socialist movement than ever before; we must see to it that OUR young people become the leaders in thought and action here, just as did the young in Germany, Russia and the other countries.

Within the Y. P. S. L. a radical change must take place. We who are members must bring this change about, for the freedom of the movement from its present lethargy must be the act of the league itself, just as "the emancipation of the working class must be the act of the working class itself."

When we show our willingness to become an integral factor in the struggle we may rest assured that the revolutionary Socialists will give us their hearty support. Let us change our slogan from "organization and education" to "education and organization." Then our solidarity will become a fact, and we, too, may step forward to grasp the hands of our comrades in all parts of the world, ready to carry on the work they have os well begun.

WE GO MARCHING ON

Capitalism is crumbling. war dogs are grumbling and socialism is marching onward to its goal—the emancipation of the wage slaves of the world, despite the endless chain of lies plutocracy has welded. The vulgar epithets that are emphasized by conspicuous head lines of the putrid press, demonstrate decadence and it is a proverbial denunciation to be heard in every public place that newspapers are a tissue of lies.

It is a deplorable fact that telling the truth now-a-days endangers the life, liberty and property of any man or woman who dares assert it aginst the pretentious patriots who have grabbed millions from the toilers and spend it in securing titles for their daughters in marrying them off to dukes, pukes; counts, no-accounts, discounts and lop-eared lords who are willing to confer titles for lucre. Tumbling crowns now indicate that the plutocratic shes of America will have to hunt other channels of investment for the ill gotten gains of their daddies to give them prominence hereafter.

Enclosed find ten dollars as another contribution for purchasing a shroud for pluderbunds who have at last succeeded in digging their graves. This makes twenty I have sent to oil the machinery of a free press and I hope soon to send another good batch.

Socialism is lighting up the horizon and capitalism might just as well attempt to stop the thunderbolts from the sky as to stop its progres.

Fraternally yours,

M. S. HOLT

ONE COMRADE'S WORK FOR THE RELEASE OF POLITICAL PRISONERS.

I am sending this list of 14 subs as a nail in the coffin of Capitalism, and a demand that the powers that be open the prison doors and release Debs, Mooney and all class war prisoners.

It might do you good to know that the Gendron Wheel Co. of Toledo will go out, as a protest against keping Debs and others in prison.

I think I can give your amnesty edition and myself a good deal of the credit for it, as I covered all of the six floors of the factory with the paper three days before the first of May, and I believe that way I started the ball rolling.

A [illegible] COMRADE.

SUBSCRIPTION FLOOD CONTINUE

An unabated flood of subscriptions for the Ohio Socialist continues to flow into the State office. Little of the state and nation and at last rivulets of subs start from all parts joining one another reach flood tide at the office. Many, many new outposts of Socialist strength are being established in all parts of the nation. Each week sees the Ohio Socialist firmly established in as many as 25 to 75 new cities. The enrollment into the Red Army of Ohio Socialist Boosters continues to increase. Comrades daily join the ranks of the workers for the establishment of the Ohio Socialist as a twice-a-week paper.

The comrades seem to be settling down to a regular and systematic routine of subscription getting. Within the last month the average number of subscriptions received has been raised nearly 100 per cent. Everywhere the strength of the Socialist press grows as the workers become aware of the tremendous frauds imposed upon them by the capitalist press and as their knowledge of world affairs increases.

The Socialist Party press has a tremendous work of education to perform. Its field of activity is unlimited. Its power is omnipotent once it is established. Only the truth can make men free. Only the workers' press can be relied upon to carry this life-giving power to the workers. Only the workers' press is to be trusted. Thousands realize this today. More thousands will realize it tomorrow. Let us who realize the potential powers of the Socialist press utilize every opportunity to build it strong for the workers in the future struggle between capital and labor.

The number of subscriptions received the last two weeks total over 1,000. When one considers the growing Socialist sentiment in this country the possibility of keeping up this record is apparent. With Socialists in the making in every locality and the hunger for Socialist literature gnawing in the minds of the workers this high record becomes understandable.

To the hundreds of comrades who daily add to our list of readers we wish to express a very fervent "Thank you." Only the narrowness of our space prevents us from giving acknowledgement here of each comrade's work in behalf of the O. S. However, we know that our Red Army is not working for the sake of seeing their names in print, but for the immensely greater good of establishing the O. S. as a greater power in labor's battle. On then, with the work. And by your efforts will we create the new world of the workers!

DAMMING THE FLOOD

When thieves fall out honest men come into their own.

If you will study the agreements between the nations of Europe in which each faction agreed to parcel out the other nations and lay tribute, the stories of Captain Kid read tame.

No free booter in all history can produce a more infamous and ferocious agreement. All large nations of Europe were parties to it. This was before the war. After the war began they only enlarged upon it. The common people of Europe had no voice in the matter. They did not desire to be parties to such infamous agreements. The mighty capitalists when things looked most favorable concluded to clean up on the other fellow by using the forces of their government.

Through the force of events they exceeded their ability to control the affairs as they had set out to do. They drained their money bags to the bottom and put out plenty of I. O. U's.

The great problem now with them is to arrange things so that they can at least secure the income on their gigantic debt. They are bracing every corner to secure their designs. They are shouting democracy from the house tops. We see them in democratic England to date outmaneuvering the common people. One instance. In the last election in England the reactionary forces so gerrymandered the election that the labor party, which is the party that has the Socialist program, out of a vote of over three million seven hundred thousand votes cast, only succeeded in electing sixty-one representatives to parliament, while the other two reactionary parties only polled a little over two million votes, secured over three hundred and seventy-one members to parliament. The laborers of England have threatened a nation wide strike if their program is not carried out. The silk-hatted gentlemen are yelling Bolshevism, anarchy rule of the mob. That to strike is not good ethics. Yet right in the face of it they do not stop to use the most infamous methods to thwart the will of the common people and cause their vote to be of no force. They can't stand equality of the ballot. Labor's only method left is the strike or revolution, which he does not wish to invoke. The common people are not being fooled like they once were. They have begun to reach out for the blessings of democracy. The reactionary forces are screaming bolshevism to distract them from their goal. The wave of revolt will continue until all reactionary governments are swept off the earth. No force today can stand in front of it. The capitalist press of our country are trying to build a backfire against this popular movement. They just as well had try to dam up Niagara Falls with tissue paper. History will write this event as the greatest in the world for the common people. The old order is falling. We are beginning to see the blow holes of incompetency, selfishness and deception. We see this great force gathering strength every hour.

The reactionary forces are trembling with guilty fear and know not what to do. Today they cry, food will stop bolshevism, the next day they cry, starve 'em. Another cries, we must take a firm stand. They may just as well try to catch the air with a sieve. Hugo, that great Socialist, wrote that when an idea was due to arrive that no army or nation could stop it. That it would overwhelm any forces that tried to oppose it. There is a clear distinction between healthy revolution and outlawry. REMEMBER THIS

TOPICS OF THE DAY

GET DOWN TO BUSINESS

President Wilson has added his word of approval to the movement for making May 11 "Employment Sunday." He cables "I hope that the people of the country will universally observe Employment Sunday."

Observe it? How? By having the cellar whitewashed, or by hiring an additional kitchen maid?

It is high time that the American people turned from maudlin sentimentality to a serious and fundamental consideration of the menacing economic issues that are looming up on every side. Hundreds of thousands of men and women are idle all over the United States. Rhetoric does not create work. Church service cannot make jobs. Unemployment is here because it is just as much a feature of the present system of society as spring flowers are a feature of spring.

Unemployment is less in some years. In other years it is greater. Always it is the "great fear" of the working class and it will continue to be the great fear of the worker despite rhetoric and psalms, until men are paid in wages that equal what they create in product.

PARTNERS

"Labor and Capital are partners," said John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a recent speech before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Partners? How partners?

A Scotch miner named Robert Smillie told how at a hearing of the British Royal Commission on the nationalizing of the coal mines,

"Mr. Smillie: We know of private companies that have paid in two years their total supposed capital back to their investors. They paid 106 per cent in two years, but they did not publish the balance-sheet. Mr. Smillie asked whether, asuming he paid a dividend of 10 per cent, a mineowner who had never seen his mine would get back the whole of his invested capital in ten years.

Witness: That is true of any industry.

Mr. Smillie: Under the conditions prevailing in the mining industry for the last forty-five years mine-workers have invested their lives in the mine. They do not receive more than keeps them to go on working. If you could capitalize the life and work of a miner, all that he gets for that is a livelihood, and at the end of ten years he is a loser by ten years' work. Is that equitable or just between Capital and Labor?"

This is the kind of a "heads I win, tails you lose" partnership that has become forever impossible in England and that will be impossible in the United States too, when the workers wake up. The master class is willing to do anything for the working class except get off their backs. The master class never will get off until the solidarity of the working class makes riding uncomfortable or impossible.

AN OLD STORY.

An old story is told by Babson's Statistical Organization in a recent "Barometer Letter." Prices are coming down because wages are already falling and the worker faces starvation.

"Regardless of the various arguments to the contrary, a period of declining prices must now be expected. This decline will doubtless be punctuated with minor upward spurts, but such intermediate movements will be of lesser importance. Two of the conditions which will bring about the decline are as follows: (1) The producing machinery of the United States business has been overbuilt in many lines; (2) The buying power of the people will continue to be diminished by lack of employment, due to labor disturbances and generally unfavorable manufacturing conditions."

The workers, creators of all wealth, cannot get enough of the products created by them to preserve life, unless prices are lowered. Therefore prices will come down.

This is another illustration of a principle well known to students of economics. In periods of "prosperity" prices rise faster than wages; in periods of "depression" wages fall faster than prices. Property owners are taken care of first; workers come last. Blessed are they that own, for they shall be satisfied. Cursed are they that work. The burdens of life are theirs. Such will be the rule of the road while the present economic system endures. It can be changed, all by changing the system.

Alarming Growth Of Tenancy

The last census shows that we are the victims of increasing landlordism and farm tenancy. Tenancy in the southwestern states is already the prevailing method of cultivation and is increasing at a very rapid rate. In Texas where the investigations were thorough and conclusive, it was found that the conditions of the tenant was extremely bad; that he was far from being free while his future was regarded as hopeless. They are not only unable to lay by any money but their children remain uneducated and half clothed.

The tenants have no interest beyoung the crops of a single year; the soil is being exhausted and conditions become worse. A large proportion are hopelessly in debt and are charged exorbitant rates of interest. Practically all are native born and are deteriorating rapidly; each generation being more hopeless as farmer, farm laborer or tenant sees no possibility of becoming a future landowner. Only in the hands of large owners can land be held out of use if its products are needed. The landlords move to the towns and cities, relieving themselves from all productive labor and responsibility for conditions with a tendency to demand from the tenant a greater share of the products of his labor. The history of every vanished civilization shows decadence was preceded by immense land holdings and its increase can be regarded only as a menace to the nation. The responsibility for the existing conditions rests not upon the landlords but upon the system itself.

Land monopoly is creating congestion in the cities and towns and an army of unemployed where two-thirds of those who toil from 8 to 12 hours a day receive less than enough to support themselves and their families in decency and comfort. From childhood to the grave, they dwell in the shadow of a fear that their only resource, their opportunity to toil, will be taken from them.

The responsibility for the conditions described rests primarily upon the workers who, blind to their collective strength and deaf to the cries of their fellows, have sufered the invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance. A large measure of responsibility must attach to the great mass of citizens who have failed to realize that their own prosperity and rights are bound up with every other individual.

A basic theory of our government was that every man should have land enough to support a family. If this theory had been carried out and homesteads gone to those who would use them, we should not now have such a problem.

But land was stolen outright by wholesale and enormous tracts are now held by wealthy individuals and corporations.

Should not the same doctrine be applied to land that in the arid states is applied to water, i. e., that no more land can be held by an individual than he can put to productive use; thus making unused land acquirable by those who would use it.—Report of Commission on Industrial Relations.

THE WHITE TERROR IN FINLAND

WORKERS SHOT BY THE THOUSAND.

(Manchester Guardian, March 20, 1919.)

We have received from a Finnish correspondent an account of the "White Terror" which raged in Finland at the time of the suppression of the "Red" rebellion. He writes:

"The greatest slaughter did not take place until the Whites, aided by over 10,000 German first-class troops, had completely defeated the Red Guards. It is well nigh an impossible task in a few lines to give an impression of the unspeakable horrors which now followed, and which have no counterpart in the history of any other civilized nation in the world.

After the insurrection was over, sometimes weeks and months later, there commenced a most frightful slaughter, with the permission of the Germans and by the order, assent and full knowledge of the White Government. There are more than five hundred municipal districts in Finland, and to each orders for "reprisals" were given with the effect that in the following districts approximately the following numbers of workers were shot without any kind of legal procedure:

"Riihimaki, 600; Varkaus, 450; Lahti, 2,000 (among them over 200 women); Forssa, 400; Hauho, 100; [illegible], 400; Vihti, 450; Ciborg, 4,000, Tammerfors, 600; Hyvinge, 300; [illegible], 200; Karhula, 76; Eeinajoki, 70; Kokkola Gamlakarleby, 100; Nurmijarvi, 80; Kotka, 400; Helsingfors 600 (125 women); Lammi, 300; Abo, 400; Jokioinen, 40; Kuhmoinen, 46; Palkque, 17; Jokela, 10; Karis, 40; Asikkala, 27; Borga, 14; Teisko, 86; Kexholm, 15; Kajana, 11; Kotojarvi, 16; Hirvensalmi, 10; Lavia, 10; Virolahti, 10; Perkjarvi 39; Reirkolli, 20; Atsari, 78; Jyvaskyla, 10; Korpilahti, 30; Kemi, 50; Euroajoki, 14; Lieksa, 48; Kiikainen, 10; Kasisalmi, 13; Volkla 114; Kymi, 42; Joensuu, 30; Hoplaks, 45; Kokemaki, 60.

"This makes a sum of approximately 12,500 killed. And it is to be observed that these figures refer but to about fifty districts of the five hundred. Also, these persons were not killed in fighting during the civil war, but slaughtered weeks and months after the termination of the warlike operations."

"Besides, according to official figures between 80,000 and 90,000 prisoners were taken and kept in occasional prisoner camps, where the conditions, in consequence of deliberate neglect and bad organization, proved so miserable that approximately 15,000 persons, men and women and children, died of hunger and disease. In the barracks in Ekens alone died 2,821 prisoners between June 4 and October 19, among them 2,256 without having been brought to trial. Over 60,000 have been sentenced to punishments between two years' imprisonment and the penalty of death. All except some 6,000 have got their punishment changed to a conditional one and been released, but remain deprived of all rights of citizenship. About 450 have been sentenced to death, but only a little over a hundred actually shot. Forty Socialist members of the Diet who remained in the country have got between eight years and lifetime unconditional prison. Out of 92 members only one was uncompromised and allowed to reoccupy his seat in the Diet.

"The last general amnesty included also amnesty for all those who in one form or another had behaved "too severely" against the workers during the "cleaning" of the country. Accordingly no one can be brought to trail for having murdered workers, stolen their property, etc."

SOCIALIST PARTY OF [illegible]

EFFORTS AND SACRIFICES

(Scott Nearing.)

Milton Sheridan Sharp, chairman of the board of directors of the Bradford Dyers' Association, Ltd. (England), opened the annual meeting of the stockholders on February 22, 1919, with these words: "After four years of the most terrible war in the history of the world . . . we meet today after complete victory has crowned our efforts and our sacrifices." The chairman then gives in detail the "eforts and sacrifices" of his company. These include net profits for the year of $3,200,000; 10 per cent regular dividends on the common stock; 7½ per cent bonus on the common stock, and a surplus carried forward of $1,330,000. Mr. Sharp predicts that, with the German dye industry destroyed, a future of the greatest prosperity is in store for his concern.

Own Tactics Get Their Goats

Back on the job again, the meetings held in Indiana were very successful, I had quite a jump from Indianapolis to East Liverpool, but I landed here in time for SOME meeting, which we held on the streets last night.

I had only been talking about ten minutes, when some nut cried out, "You should be shot." Things were getting rather warm, there were about a dozen boys who had just returned from the wront, who tried to break up the meeting.

The chief of police informed me (when I was relating the way Gene had been taken to Moundsville) that I would have to confine my talk to something that was not so radical, he stated that he did not wish to see any trouble, and that if I continued to talk the way I had been that trouble would start. I informed the chief that I was relating an actual fact, something that really had happened; that I was sorry that the representatives of the United States government had acted in a way that simply to explain their actions may stir the peopel into action, that this fact in itself was an indictment against the present system.

After the chief saw that we intended to insist on our rights, he contented himself with trying to keep the jingo patriots quiet. After I had paid my respects to the gang present who were opposed to Bolshevism, but who acted like the Bolshevik the capitalist papers tell us about, their only answer was in the form of an egg, which missed its mark and splattered against the wall in the rear.

About 12 o'clock several persons came to my room and knocked on the door. When I asked them what they wanted they said they wanted me. I informed them that unless they left the hallway and kept away from my room there would be several funerals in town, and that mine would not be among them. The gang started to joke with me, but when I threatened to shoot them through the glass in the doors, they nearly tore up the stairs getting out of the hotel.

All is well, the work is going fine.

Yours in the fight,

CHAS. BAKER.

IT'S BUSINESS WE'RE AFTER IT SEEMS.

Although the world's stage still shows various actors going through the role of making the world safe for democracy, doings behind the scenes tell a story that seems to be a little different for there the play seems to be for big stakes rather than for sentiment and sympathy.

Richard H. Cole, formerly personal representative of Carranza in the United States, suggests:

"I would not advise military intervention. Any strong power could conquer Mexico in sixty days. But it would be a shame and a crime to do so. What the Mexicans want is food, not force. About 16,000,000 of Mexico's 17,000,000 people will welcome Americans who come with food and the help they are entitled to. A few trainloads and many motor truckloads of food, enough soldiers to police the country, about 10,000 of them in all, and we can do a more profitable business in Mexico in a year than we can do in Russia in a lifetime."

GET RIGHT OR GET OUT.

"The proclamation issued by the patriots to the Reds of Cleveland," said a speaker at the Public Square since the May Day riots, is "Get right or get out." "Get right or get out"—just what does it mean? The speaker meant this: "If you don't like the government we have, get out of the country." It's a common enough expression. One hears it on all sides. Like a lot of plausible and common ideas and expressions it is faulty in reasoning and principle. Only cowards would follow such counsel.

Governments are said to be organized (recently organized governments have been at least) for the purpose of aiding society in its efforts to attain happiness. Not all governments have been organized for this purpose. Most of them have been organized for the purpose of attaining the well being of a certain small portion of society. As time rolled on and the workers of the world grew more cognizant of their economic interests and organized accordingly, governments have been changed more and more in conformity with their interests. We are far form the goal that means workers' control of his destiny. Nevertheless, we shall not get off the earth until that goal is reached.

We are here. Brought here by the same forces that brought the parasites here. We mean to stay. We pay as we go. All the wealth and well-being of the world is the produce of our hands and brains. We have made it all. It is ours when we have the good sense to take it. All the sophisms and powers of parasites cannot keep it from us once we desire in our might to take it. We shall not "get out" because we do not like slavery. We shall change the economic system from a slave system to one of economic freedom. We are not only the larger part of human society, we are the most vital part. Without our labor, society and its parasites can not exist.

We shall not be cowards to run from responsibility and duty, nor shall we run from a government which does not represent us. We shall stay on the job till we get control of it. The world's heroes are those men and women who did not run. They stay. They stayed at Valley Forge. They stayed at Gettysburg. They stayed throughout history in the face of fulmination and oppression. They stayed and through them and the principles they stood for, the world has reaped a harvest of happiness and well-being.

In the fact of recent world events to "get right or get out" is a tactic more applicable to the parasites of society than to the workers. In Russia those parasites who failed to get right with the workers "came up missing" or got out. They got right by getting a job and earning their living by the sweat of their own brows. The same principle is capable of application throughout the capitalist world—nowhere more easily applied than in capitalistically developed America.

Our advice to the parasites of America is to get right with the workers, or prepare to eat later the mud they attempt to fling at us now.

RIOTISMS.

The Socialists worked for the eight-hour day for Cleveland police, but that fact did not prevent the police from taking one of the eight to break the heads of a few score Socialists.

Pearls cast before swine!

And now we know what a "loyalist" is. An assaulter, a rock thrower, a breaker of law, an insulter of women, a frightener of children, a maniac, a beast. A thief, a button snatcher, a bully, a hoodlum. They are welcome to the honors (?) but to what or to whom are they loyal is a pertinent question.

"Law and order" as practiced under capitalism make for disorder.

"Rights of property" disappear when "might" comes on the scene. Especially if it is mob might.

Nothing is so potent as a policeman's club to open one's mind to new ideas.

If you ask, what was settled? We answer, nothing, but much was begun.

Deport the Reds. Yes, but what to do with those American Reds who are being deported home?

An American Siberia would be a welcome addition to the spoils of war some seem to believe.

Cleveland daily press now says we should Americanize the foreigner. And we assent. An Americanized Bolshevik could do wonders with a ballot.

AVAILABLE SPEAKERS

Here is a revised list of speakers upon whom the locals may call. Terms are five dollars and expenses. Other names of qualified speakers will be added from time to time. Comrades who feel that their services are useful to the party upon the platform are requested to secure the endorsement of their locals before making application to be placed upon the Available Speakers List. Party News & Views

A NEW LOCAL AT IRONDALE.

As a result of Organizer Thurber Lewis' recent meeting at Irondale, a new local has been organized. The officers are E. E. McLain, secretary; Wm. Mushrush, financial secretary, and John James, treasurer. Comrade McLain writes that he is confident of a large organization in the near future. The local will meet twice a month and the comrades are pushing the work along with energy and enthusiasm.

ITALIANS ORGANIZE AT ROSWELL.

Translator secretary of the Italian Federation writes that a new Italian branch has been organized at Roswell by Comrade J Fieri. A charter has been granted them.

THIS NON-MEMBER IS A BOOSTER.

Four subscriptions and a dollar as a donation comes from David Myers of Leesville, O. This booster says he is not a Party member, but his work for Socialism proves he ought to be. Thank you, comrade, for your good work and we trust that some of our laggards in the Party will follow your example and get busy hustling for the Cause.

GREAT MAY DAY MEETING AT CAMBRIDGE.

A great May 1st meeting is reported held at Cambridge. Inclement weather prevented an out-door meeting, but the comrades had a hall well filled. The program sent out by the National Office was followed and the comrades were well pleased with results. A number of new members were secured and about a hundred application cards were handed out. Five hundred Debs protest cards were also given out.

WITH OUR ORGANIZERS AND SPEAKERS.

Lilith Martin Meetings.

Comrade Lilith Martin reports good meetings at Bellaire where she filled three dates the last of April and May 1st. She reports visiting Comrade Debs at Moundsville and found him looking and feeling fine. At Akron her meeting was fine, a full hall and large collection. Massillon meeting, too, was good, as was also the one at Canton. The hall at Canton being packed to the limit.

Comrade Martin was compelled to give up some meetings lately for one reason or another, but she is meeting with very good success generally.

Comrade Martin will work in Toledo until the 8th, when she fills a date at Napoleon. She speaks at Continental the 9th and at Grover Hill the 10th.

FOUR MEETINGS AT HUBBARD. A CORRECTION.

By error it was stated in The O. S. in the issue two weeks ago that the four meetings which Local Hubbard had arranged for the month of May were on Sundays. These meetings are all on Fridays. The dates are May 2, 9, 16, 23. The first date was a Debs' protest meeting.

NOTICE TO LOCAL SECRETARIES.

Local secretaries will facilitate the work of the State Office a great deal if they will heed the following simple rules in sending in subscriptions to the Ohio Socialist.

1. When taking subscriptions ascertain if the subscriber is already a subscriber. If he is, mark the subscription a RENEWAL.

2. If you write to the State Office regarding a subscriber not receiving his paper please give the time for which the subscription was and just as important give the address of the comrade.

3. Never fail to ask for renewals of subscriptions at business meetings. Hundreds of subscriptions run out the last of April. Comrades knowing their subscriptions are out should renew at once as we cannot carry these expirations on a probability of renewal. Call the attention of the comrades to this fact and kep all members on the list.

ASHTABULA HARBOR GAINING.

A recent membership contest among the members of Local Ashtabula Harbor netted a large increase in membership, we are informed by Comrade Carrie Ellison, financial secretary. Report will be sent in soon. In the meantime the comrades are on the job day and night.

KEEPS THE RED FIRES BURNING.

"By all means we must keep the Red Fires burning. I therefore am enclosing one dollar for one year's subscription. Long live our just and noble cause."

E. V. CLARKE.

H. L. A. Holman Meetings.

Comrade Holman will fill the following dates: Newark, May 5th; Zanesville, 6; Cambridge, 7 and 8; Byesville, 9; Robins, 10; Derwent, 11; Buffalo, 12; Belle Valley, 13; Bellaire, 14 and 15; Yorkville, 16; Dillonvale, 17; Irondale, 18.

WANTS TO MAKE "OHIO SOCIALIST" NATIONAL PARTY ORGAN

At a meeting of my local (Huntington) today, I was directed to communicate with the National Office and the "Ohio Socialist" also, concerning the proposition of making that publication the National Organ of the Socialist Party.

Our local was inclined to embody this proposition in a resolution, and endeavor to get the necessary support from other locals to get it before the membership of the Socialist Party in the form of a referendum.

The following ideas were developed in the course of the discussion:

(1) Owing to the tendency of the Socialists of the different sections of the United States to develop adhesion to some Socialist stronghold, usually a center of Socialist activity, having a paper to carry its propaganda and voice the opinions of that group—Socialism has become divided into several camps, the Milwaukee Socialists, the Michigan Socialists, the Cleveland Socialists, the New York Socialists, etc.

(2) Such sectional adhesion makes against solidarity in the Socialist Party of America; and, to overcome this divisive influence, we must have a National Organ, and have it soon, if we expect to save the party.

(3) The most feasible method for obtaining a National Organ is to take over some strong, going, Socialist paper and, if possible, move it to our new home in Chicago.

(4) The "Ohio Socialist" is such a paper and can be spared by the Ohio State organization and Cuyahopa county, also, as that county has another good Socialist paper beside the Ohio Socialist.

I will add by way of comment that the comrades of Local Huntington, in touching on the subject of division in the ranks of Socialism, had no reference to the Spargo-Russell-Benson split. One only needs to have access to the National Office bulletins and the leading Socialist papers to discover bickerings, schisms and ever-widening divergence of opinion on the fundamentals of Socialist doctrine.

The charge of obstructionary tactics made against members of the National Executive Committee and the unwarranted attacks made as to the position of other leaders, convince me that there are grievious misunderstandings among us. Some of the comrades, against whom charges have been made, have given much of their best energies to the cause of Socialism, and are now called upon to suffer for their loyalty to the cause. I, for one, shall be slow in surrendering my high regard for Kate Richards O'Hare, Morris Hilquit, Adolph Germer and John M. Work. They are entitled to an opportunity for the defense of their actions or positions. As they are national characters, they are entitled to make their defense through a medium that reaches all the socialists of the United States—a national organ of the socialist party.

Further, we need a national organ that we may speak with one voice to our comrades of Europe.

We need a national organ for the sake of national organization, far more than a state needs an organ for state organization—and we need it now in the crisis of our party.

Besides all that I have urged in behalf of the immediate re-establishment of a national organ, there are other reasons that might be given, but I will not take any more of your time; for, no doubt, you have seen the same need that I have attempted to point out. The important thing now is for all parties concerned to rise to the occasion, and give us what we need—a National Organ of the Socialist Party.

Will you not try to see what can be done and let us hear from you.

Yours for the cause of Socialism,
H. F. OBERHOLTZER,
Local Huntington, W. Va.

MIDVALE MINERS CELEBRATE INTERNATIONAL LABOR DAY.

Meeting was called to order by Chairman C. E. Reymond at 10 a. m., there being about one hundred union men and members present.

The regular May day program was carried out with some additional talks from the members of Local Midvale.

In addition we were very fortunate in having with us Thomas J. Price, president of Sub. District No. 3 of the United Mine Workers of America, who gave us a very interesting talk on organization, and demanded the repeal of the espionage act, which he maintained was unjust and contrary to the constitution of the United States government, also he said that it was being used to persecute political and industrial offenders.

After which an interpreter spoke to the foreign members and other foreign attendance, which was followed by a large sale of Debs protest cards, and a very handsome collection of $34.15 was taken up.

The chairman called on several of the comrades present to read the speeches of our comrades who are in jail. Upon reading these speeches they received hearty applause. We also had with us Comrade S. H. Robertson of Canton, who gave us a very nice talk that was received with much applause.

The resolution which was sent out by the Socialist Party was read, and unanimously supported by a standing vote. There was lunch served all day, which added very much to make the affair a grand success.

The committee wishes to thank all those who were so active in making this meeting the grand success that it was.

RE WOLFE,
JOE PAULINE,
E. C. WHITE,

RECOGNIZES THE NEED OF THE HOUR

Dear Comrades: I have before me a copy of your paper issued March 19, 1919, (recently forwarded from Denver) an excellent issue. In its columns I note the 20,000 sub. drive for a "twice a week" publication before the fall campaign. The spirit of your paper throughout will surely boost our slogan, "Organize, Educate," and spur us on, more determined than ever before, to renewed efforts; pointing out the extreme necessity that the workers must recognize the final deciding wedge that is being driven down through the Socialist movement of the world, thus splitting it in twain. Lined up on one side we see the Bolshevist-Spartacan Revolutionists and on the other the Ebert-Scheidemann compromisers, who, when the crisis came, proved themselves ready and willing to run their bayonets through the hearts of their Spartacan comrades. This criminal fact has traveled over the entire world and plainly shows us that there is no longer a middle ground. The time has arrived for us to line up; as our French comrade, Eugene Pottier, wrote in his immortal "Internationale," "Tis the final conflict. Let each stand in his place." We are sadly in need of just such a paper as the Ohio Socialist, and with the aid the party membership ought and will give, success will surely follow. Mr. Williams subscribed some time ago, another $1.00 will make the 20,000 mark a little nearer. Enclosed same.

Am an old member in good standing of the Denver Local; expect to return in a few weeks, and am more anxious than ever to get back into the harness to assist in taking advantage of the greatest opportunity ever offered to the workers of America. Am now in the midst of wealthy farmers of the famous "Blue Grass Region" of Southwestern Ohio, who are practically drunk on prosperity, and I am thoroughly convinced that this class is one of the most difficult classes to reach, and must be done by other methods than propaganda leaflets. Possibly not until Babson's statement to their masters (regarding them) will come true, then the wealthy farming class will need no urging to leave the conservative ranks, and take their place where they actually belong.

Yours for the coming revolution,
LIZABETH A. WILLIAMS,
Emerson, Iowa.

RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION AT ONCE!!

Nearly one thousand notifications of expiration were mailed out two weeks ago to readers whose subscriptions expired in April. Readers who have received these notifications MUST renew at once either through their local secretary or direct to the State Office, if they wish the Ohio Socialist to continue coming to them. These expired subscriptions will be taken off the list with this issue unless renewed this week.

AN INTERVIEW WITH LENINE

NOTE:—Robert Minor, the famous cartoonist, who was formerly with the New York Call, and later an active worker in the defense of Tom Mooney in California, has now been in Russia for several months. According to an article in the Chicago Daily News, Tuesday, February 4, 1919, Minor had just arrived purports to have had with Nicholai Lenine, premier of the Russian Soviet Republic, part of which is as follows:

"What will you do if the allies send big armies against you?"

"If they send anything short of very big armies," he replied, "we shall defeat them."

"And if they do send very big armies?" I persisted.

"Then they will make a very big war," he answered, smiling, but without mirth.

Puts an Astonishing Question.

Then he asked me a question that astonished me for the way he put it, rather than for the words he used.

"How soon will the revolution get to America?" was the question. The tone was confident. He did not ask me if it would reach America, but when, as if he took it for granted that some day the red flag would wave in Washington. I did not reply, and he went on:

"I wonder how long," he asked. "Gompers can hold the labor unions, as suservient to the imperialists as he is. Debs is an old man. I wonder if he will survive his term in prison. It is a shame he was condemned. What is he like personally? I have never seen him. Why doesn't the American Federation of Labor do anything about Big Bill Haywood's imprisonment?

"Future society will be organized along soviet lines. There will be society rather than geographical boundaries for nations. Industrial unionism is the basic state. That is what we are building."

I said to Lenine I was going to Germany, and his interest quickened.

"You will arrive in time for the second revolution," he said.

Expects Bolshevik Triumph.

Lenine showed little interest in the present German control, but said he was waiting for the triumph of bolshevism.

The Masters fear Slaves who THINK. If you think right you will vote right.

MILITANT WORKERS OF EUROPE SECURE

In addition the national federations of railroad workers, marine workers, miners, dock workers, metal workers, building trades workers and transport workers formed a national alliance to work together for the common purpose of extracting the eight-hour day from the reluctant political representatives of capitalism in the French parliament, or, failing in that, to enact the eight-hour law themselves by their own economic right and power to work eight hours and quit.

The Confederation of Labor demanded that the government pass the bill before the first of May. Otherwise the organized workers of France would stage a demonstration on that day which would show that the organized workers meant business. The Confederation intimated that it would prefer to have parliament enact the bill into law, but if parliament refused the workers would be compelled to do some legislating in their own way and with the machinery at their disposal. To quote the language of the resolution passed by the national convention: "After the warning expressed by the first of May demonstrations the federations composing the alliance, with the assistance of the General Federation of Labor, will limit the period for pourparlers and fix the date for making the eight-hour day effective."

Parliament did not wait for the demonstration, but passed the eight-hour law.

BELGIUM.

From Belgium comes the information that the country is torn asunder with striking workers demanding that the labor exploiters pay the workers higher wages and grant a minimum wage of 20 cents an hour for unskilled workers, 25 cents for skilled workers, the eight-hour day, and complete liberty of trade union action.

At Bruges the workers resorted to the general strike. This is the first time in the history of this clericalized city that such a class-conscious phenomena has appeared in the economic relations of the exploiters and the exploited. But the first sight of the thing was enough for them. "We'll arbitrate!" they shouted. The strikers agreed to this and selected Anseele, a Socialist of long standing, as their representative. Of course the strikers won.

At Menin, near the French frontier, there was a general strike of all the municipal employes operating the public works. Of course the capitalist city government had to grant the demands of the strikers, and then the building trades quit work and got their wage raise. At Brussels the street railway workers walked out, and walked back without delay with their demands met. At Flemalie-Haute and Sclessin in the province of Liege, the employes of the big metal works and motor factories walked out for higher wages. In the province of Hainaut the miners are on strike and the miners organizations are ready to declare a general strike throughout the region unless the labor exploiters grant the demands with promp-

CAPITALISM SEEKS REVENGE

The capitalist class thirsty with hatred in their hearts, wild with rage, is about to commit a dastardly foul deed.

Enraged by the demonstrated solidarity of the workers of Seattle during the general strike and the success of the general strike, it is determined to exact punishment from the workers, by victimizing and seizing upon over thirty loyal workers, whose activities in the labor movement, and self sacrifice for the cause of labor, has made them the most hated and dreaded workers in the eyes of the capitalist class.

The victims of the general strike comprise the following members of the Socialist Party:

Aaron Fislerman, State Executive committeeman of Washington, and member of the State Press Board.

F. J. Cassidy, Secretary of Local Central, and a member of the State Press Board.

M. Pass, a member of the Y. P. S. L., and about 27 members belonging to other working class economic organizations.

They are charged with starting a revolution to overthrow the City government of Seattle, the State and the United States' government; conspiracy, criminal anarchy and felony.

Thousands of leaflets, dodgers and propaganda matter, the organization of the Workers, Soldiers and Sailors Council, and also some articles published in the International Weekly, which is published by the Press Board of the Socialist Party of Washington, alleged to incite the workers to seize the shipyards, from the basis of the prosecution and charges.

The arrest was precipitated on the excuse that the International Weekly which sold by the thousands of copies on the streets of Seattle on Sunday of the general strike, while the capitalist papers were permitted by the strike, contained the charged articles.

Comrades:—Behind the capitalist class of Seattle is lined up the whole capitalist class of America which was terrorized by the (first) great general strike, the governmental administration of the City, State and Nation.

The daily capitalist newspapers have told and are telling us so every day.

Behind these comrades we must line up all the workers of this nation.

Upwards of fifteen years in prison stares in the eyes of these victims of the general strike.

Your moral and financial support for the defense is urgently needed.

EDUCATOR CHALLENGED SUBJECT BOLSHEVISM

A most sensational episode occurred at the close of Louise Bryant's address on the Russian Revolution at a mass meeting at Blanchard Hall, Los Angeles.

A most savage and menacious article on "Bolshevism" by City Superintendent of Schools, Albert Shiels, appeared on April 7 in the "Educational Journal," the official organ of the public school teachers of this city. The chairman announced a gift of $100 to any charity of the city, to be named by Shiels, if he would appear in the largest auditorium in the city and reiterate the statements he made about Bolshevism and give Louise Bryant an hour to answer.

The effect was electrical. Upton Sinclair appeared upon the platform and challenged the daily press of the city to publish the matter. About $1,400 was showered upon the platform in ten minutes to test the matter and have the challenge published and the truth told about Russia. The daily papers, with the exception of one, refused, although the matter was offered them at highest advertising rates. We are now getting out a Louise Bryant emergency edition of 75,000 of the "New Justice" to tell the whole story which will be written by Upton Sinclair; also containing an exposure of the lies and distortions of the Shiels article by J. H. Byckman. Mr. Shiels says in his article that the place to deal with this question is not only in the class room, but upon the [illegible]

RUSSIAN SOVIETS REPUDIATE SLANDER

Translation from the Russian ofthe Anarchists repudiation of the Decree of the Socialization of Women. The "decree" was secretly printed and plastered surreptiously one night on hundreds of billboards and telephone posts in the cities of Samara and Saratoff (on the Volga river) by unknown persons. They were indignantly torn down by the Soviets and the Federated Anarchists came out with the following repudiation:

"From the Federated Anarchists of Samara and Saratoff:

"Enemies: You are defeated, and you are going down lower and lower. You have reached such a low level that your cause is now desperate. You wishto continue to live in idle luxury and have us work for you, and you find the revolution a menace to you. Enemies, you slander and misrepresent us when you say that we anarchists would use our liberty to enslave women.

"You forge our name to this dirty decree that your dirty hands have written. For centuries and all over the world, anarchists were fighting against all decrees, all force and all oppression. We ourselves have used force and violence only against our oppressors.

"We want to live and let live in perfect freedom. Is it conceivable that we would now issue such a monstrous and contradictory decree?

"Think for yourselves! Is it likely that anarchists would advocate, or even permit such degradation of women? You think only to provoke trouble. You are only trying to deceive the igonrant people.

"Don't you suppose that we have wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of our own?

"You provocateurs apparently don't know our strength, but you shall know. Death for provocateurs. Death, no matter who you are. We will make you pay for your dirty crimes. Anybody found circulating such dirty propaganda, will be put in the same class. Everyody, whether with us or not, who opposes such contemptible propaganda methods, desrves commendation.

"With all our soul we fight for all that is best for Russia.

QUESTION---WHAT'S THE MOTIVE?

We print below an editorial from the Chicago Tribune, one of the staunchest supporters of capitalism in this land of the free. Coming from this source the question arises—What is the motive? Is it feared that Bolshevism will sweep the world unless the United States establishes "diplomatic" relations with Socialist Russia? And will the establishment of free communication with this country and Socialist Russian stay Bolshevism? Here's food for deep theought.—Editor.

WHAT IS THE TRUTH ABOUT BOLSHEVIST RUSSIA?

And now the bolsheviki are virtually masters of Ukrania!

Isn't it about time for us to find out for ourselves just what bolshevism is and amounts to in Russia? Haven't we by this time a rather vigorous suspicion that our news of that phenomenon has been and is doctored for us—and certainly not for our benefit, for it cannot benefit America to be deceived?

When bolshevism first appeared in the Russian situation we were told it was a noisy minority which had no influence among the Russians. When bolshevism overthrew Kerensky we were told that it would not hold power for any length of time. As time passed and bolshevism did not disappear we were told it was the dictatorship of a few who were imposing their ambitious will by force. We were told that the mass of the Russian people were not bolshevist. We were told that they would rise to welcome foreign aid and overthrow the tyranny which the bolshevist handful was so mysteriously able to impose upon them. We were told that the allied troops were winning victories. They were strange victories which left the victors numerous versts farther away from their objective than before, strange victories in which the red troops suffered appalling losses while the allied forces lost few, but were able to retire with part of their own supplies, while punishing the enemy by burning the remainder. Always the red armies are, or are about to be, crushed, and now after months of almost constant defeats we read that they are virtual masters of Ukrania, that they have an army of half or three-quarters of a million men, officered by trained soldiers of the former German and Russian armies.

At the same time a representative in America of the Soviet government offers on its behalf to deposit $200,000,000 in gold in American and European banks for the purchase of supplies and asks our government "to establish normal relations between the two countries."

These are certainly not the accents of failure, weakness and despair. Lenine and Trotzky have been in power a year and a half. In spite of constant reports of defeats, famine and social chaos, in spite of the Murman and Siberian defections, they seem to be stronger than ever. There is a situation we are not permitted to see. Raymond Robins evidently tried to describe it last summer, but he could not get a hearing until the senate called him the other day. But the public has a right to know what this phase of the Russian upheaval really is and not be confined to partisan reports and sporadic rumors.

Why has bolshevism survived and grown in Russia? What is its strength there today? The measures in which we have joined up to this time seem to be futile or worse. They were not our measures. It is time America asserted her right to know what she is about, to make up her own mind whether she is pulling others' chestnuts out of the fire or following a policy consistent with her own interests.

Col. Roy Bacon of the Mellon Institute, in a speech before the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce, says that in the future TEAR GAS will be used against striking mobs, instead of clubs and revolvers..

Col. Bacon has just returned from Europe, where he was employed by our government to make gas to be used against Germany and her allies. twenty to thirty men.

From the London Morning Post comes an interesting bit of information which all wage-workers will be glad to be told about. Many British papers are very peeved (speaking moderately) at Wilson for methods he used in telling the world that Italy could not have Fiume. Just why a capitalist paper should be so shortsighted as to expose the tricks of the trade we do not know and we are not going to quote that old saw which says that "when thieves fall out, etc."

The Post says Mr. Wilson proposes the limitation of armaments in Europe, but "at the same time proposes to build a navy to lick creation in the states." It declares that, while he opposes secret treaties made by the other nations, "If he were to search his portfolio, he might find the notes of certain commercial treaties which rumor says have already been negotiated between America and certain countries—which shall be nameless—but of which the world as yet knows nothing.".

CLEVELAND SOCIALISTS' GREATEST PARADE

dashed up and down the sidewalks to clear them. Men, women and children fled through by-streets and alleys for safety.

WORKERS FIGHT BACK.

While police were freely using their clubs upon the heads of the Socialists, some fought back with naked hands and what weapons they could find. Mounted police were pulled from their mounts and other officers were beaten into unconsciousness. In a short while, however, the crowds had been dispersed from the Square, but small riots and fights occurred in many adjacent streets all afternoon as mobs searched out individuals and groups of known Socialists.

LOCAL HEADQUARTERS DEMOLISHED.

During the riots down town the local headquarters at Prospect and Bolivar Rd. was a scene of destruction. Mobs had stormed the local headquarters demolishing it almost completely. Windows were smashed out, furniture made into kindling wood. Thousands of books and pamphlets, records and files were carried away or ruined. The scene at the finish was one of utter desolation.

CONVICTIONS FOLLOW ARRESTS

The following day a great number of convictions were made among the arrested Socialists. Heavy fines and workhouse sentences were meted out to the full extent of the law. Many prisoners demanded a jury trial. The cases of C. E. Ruthenberg and Lawrence Zitt, charged with disorderly conduct, were postponed until May 5th.

RESULTS AND BY-PRODUCTS OF THE RIOT.

Two deaths resulted from the May Day riots. Seventeen police were injured, three being shot and seriously wounded. One was stabbed a number of times. The number of injured is not definitely known as many not seriously hurt dressed their own wounds or were taken care of at nearby drug stores. Number of arrests were about two hundred.

The capitalist press is now urging deportation of all radicals of foreign birth as a means of stamping out "bolshevism." Chief of Police Smith states that no more red flags will be allowed and no open air meetings of Socialists. It is believed that this move on the part of the police department is planned for the purpose of disrupting all propaganda of the party. Intimidation, it is thought., will be practiced against hall owners who would rent to Socialists and in this way make Socialist meetings prohibitive. The city council is debating several moves and plans to stop bolshevism in Cleveland and stamp out at least the EVIDENCES of discontent.

What these different repressive plans will have upon the revolutionary movement of the proletariat remains to be seen. The history of all repression in Europe has been a speeding up of the social revolutionary movement. Will it be different here? We think not. In the meantime the Socialist Party of Cleveland is going ahead with its work of educating and organizing the workers to take control of industry and the bringing about of an industrial democracy.

"conspiracy trial" growing out of the Pullman strike, as a result of which it was hoped to send Debs to prison for life. Woods died unlamented.

It was E. St. John, chairman of the Railroad Managers' Association, one of the most powerful and most successful of all the railroad managers this country has ever had, that claimed Debs and his American Railway Union, couldn't disturb the operation of the big Rock Island railroad. When the strike came and this railroad was tied up tight from one end to the other, St. John was dismissed in disgrace, and the last heard from him was to the effect that he had some petty job on some obscure railroad down in South Carolina. These are only a few of the wrecks resulting from the efforts of the few to stop the growing power of labor from asserting itself. Perhaps in prison, Debs may find time to write the full story.

As we toured by short stages across the states of Ohio and West Virgina, Palm Sunday, April 13, dodging Socialist demonstrations wherever the United States marshal had a suspicion any might develop, we speculated asto what sort of prison Debs was about to enter.

Debs recalled that his first experience with jails and prisons came during the "A. R. U." strike when he was thrown into the Coob county jail in Chicago.

he was thrown into the Cook county county jail," he said, "were huge, famished sewer rats that tormented me by day and kept me awake at night. One night as I dozed away they ate up my shoes and then came crawling and sniffling over me."

Debs then told how a rat terrier, owned by one of the jailers, came to his cell, and he pleaded with the owner to permit the dog to remain with him, knowing that that would keep the rats away. The jailer consented, but no sooner had the cell door closed upon Debs and the rat terrier, than the dog set up an unceasing howl that did not end until he was released. Even the dog refused to remain in the cell in which Debs had been incarcerated by the plutocracy of a quarter century ago.

"When I was in the Cook county jail it contained 350 human beings, 300 men and 50 women," narrated Debs. "Six unfortunates were crowded into each cell, with the result that the place became stifling hot from body warmth. The presence of swarms of lice added to the tortures suffered by these 350 prisoners, who, in their struggle against the heat and vermin, undressed until most of them were stark naked. They were often bloody from head to foot through constant scratching."

In those early days of the American Railway Union, when the workers on the railroads were seeking to build a powerful organization to combat the railroad barons, the newspapers directed a steady stream of villification and abuse at Eugene V. Debs.

"I received from 30 to 40 letters every day in which the writers threatened to assassinate me," said Debs. "While I was in jail on one occasion, I received a eltter from a boy of 18 years of age, in which he stated that he had just bought a gun and that he was coming to Chicao to 'get my blood by Saturday night.' "

Throwing Debs and other officials of the "A. R. U." in jail was one of the methods resorted to by those in power to break up the strike. The offices of the union would be raided, all the records carted away and the officials arrested. Then the kept press all over the nation would publish a report to the affect that the strike had been broken. The local officials of the "A. R. U." reading the local reports, would wire to Chicago for information. This would not be forthcoming because the officials were in jail and the records in custody of servile government officials. Demoralization in the ranks of the strikers would thereupon set in.

It is interesting to note that Debs was sent to Woodstock jail for six months, whereas his fellow officials were only put in jail one month, because, as the court stated, Debs was intelligent enough to know better than to commit the crime he was charged with, the violation of a court injunction.

When Debs was taken to Woodstock jail, the prominent citizens of the Chicago suburb seriously considered lynching the terrible agitator who had been brought amongst them. On repeated occasions they protested to Geore Eckert, sheriff of McHenry county, who had Debs in charge, that he was treating this sower of discontent "too white."

"You attend to your own business and I'l ltake care of mine," was the sheriff's answer to the prominent citizens.

In Woodstock jail as everywhere else, everyone with whom Debs came in personal contact immediately became his friend. When Debs left Woodstock jail he was presented with a set of resolutions, tear-stained, expressing the well wishes of his fellow prisoners, while the wife of the sheriff at each succeeding Christmas always sent Debs some remembrance, and after her death her daughter has continued to send Debs a Christmas card each year.

With these reminiscenses from Debs, we who were with him on his journey to prison this year, 1919, concluded that somehow he would get along at the West Virginia state penitentiary at Moudsville.

But these same reflections threw into the limelight more than anything else the gross stupidity and utter ignorance of a reigning social order, seeking to maintain itself in power by imprisoning one of its most prominent opponents.

Debs' very presence in prison breeds the discontent and protest, whose growing power and volume will force the ruling class to liberate him immediately the volume of that protest becomes threatening enough.

ELECT A NEW N. E. C.

Conservatives always defend their offices within our Party with the claim that they are "constructive."

I challenge this claim.

What have they ever "constructed" for the Socialist Party?

Except for a few memorable days at St. Louis, during which the radicals made history, our conservatives have dominated all our conventions. They have absolutely controlled our national office. They have always been the majority on our national executive committee and have had absolute power to do everything they pleased.

What have they done?

The Party needs a publishing house. Have they built it?

The Party needs a propaganda press. Have they developed it?

The Party needs a training school. Have they founded it?

The Party needs a lyceum bureau. Have they fostered it?

The Party needs a finance plan. Have they devised it?

The Party needs systematic organization. Have they furnished it?

The Party needs publicity power. Have they even realized it?

Even in these primary requirements they have failed absolutely. They have had undisputed power, yet they have constructed nothing.

The fact is that most of them are far more interested in their private business than in the Party's affairs. They are more concerned with the success of private institutions than with Socialist Party enterprise.

If you want the Socialist Party to become a real power in this country, an efficient instrument of the proletarian revolution, then do not elect to our executive committee the same old gang that would dilly-dally along in the same old way, but elect the uncompromising radicals—not merely because they are right in theory but also because they propose to get busy on the Party's constructive work.

FUTURE OF GERMANY

and food to the station and its neighborhood and for blocks around the scene resembles a refugee camp. A red guard army, composed almost entirely of workingmen, is laying siege to adjoining cities. Yesterday Bachau and Ingolstad fell in the hands of the bolshevists. Comrade Toller, now the Trotsky of Bavaria instead of the Leline, led the attack in person and after a "great victory" composed a poem celebrating the proletariat triumph. He allowed me to read it. Comrade Toller may be a great political messiah, but he is distinctly an inferior poet.

One of the most startling procedures of the new government is the amazing frequency of arrests. An automobile loaded with marines—the grinning, swaggering marine as elsewhere in Germany is a footloose and fancy free revolutionary vagrant—arrives in front of the hotel entrance every other minute. The marine guard enters the hotel and within a short space reappears with a bewildered trembling burghes. Owing to the general political confusion scores of soviet leaders themselves have been arrested. Last night a youth who is one of the most violent communists in Munich was plucked from my side while predicting the success of the world revolution and was marched off to Wittelsbach palace. I followed, wondering whether the soviet republic had again fallen but learned that some mysterious mistake had been made. As I was leaving I was placed in custody. The arrival of Dictator Levien saved me from being marched off to the omnipotent tribunal and tried for I don't know what.

ARMED WORKINGMEN KEEP ORDER.

Despite the ludicrous errors and the general confusion there is no disorder in the city. There is no plundering and no shooting down of burghers. No shop windows have been broken and no shops looted. The workingmen with guns are keeping order. Workingmen sit in Wittelsbach palace perspiring over economic problems which would stagger Prof. Luja Brentano himself.

Will it last? Will the soviets of Munich survive? In the cafes the burghers sit asking one another these questions. They no longer laugh at the "tribe of longhaired dilletantes." They have even stopped calling names and have left off assuring one another that "hanging is too good for the pack of them." They exchange chastened whispers: "Where is it all leading to? What will happen next?" They gather in well dressed groups about the red and yellow placards which blossom hourly on the walls and fences. These placards are amusingly intelligible. They are written by workingmen. The announce that an inventory of all the shops is being taken and that the huge stores of food hoarded in the basements of the bourgeoisie are being confiscated and distributed equally among the entire population. Under the original Independent socialist soviet regime these placards were received with smiles. There were no workingmen with guns then. The soviet republic was protected by the soldiers of the garrison and what several dozen bourgois leaders told me would happen happened. The garrison at the first opportunity turned upon the soviets and declared the new republic at an end.

TOILERS CRUSH WHITE GUARD.

But the bourgeoisie had overlooked a great fact. They had forgotten that Germany's real soldiers—soldiers who stood their ground for four and a half years against the world's troops—were not lounging around the garrison selling their services to the highest bidder. One night Munich's guard was overturned and the soviet republic was re-established. I then understood for the first time what had become of Germany's army. It had gone back to work. On that night it came pouring out of the workingmen's cottages in the factory districts and on the little farms. It swept the South. Bavarian white guard out of existence.

The Bavarian situation today is picturesque and uncertain. The bolshevist movement in Bavaria may suffer a momentary eclipse. Herr Noske's army may come in and make a cleanup and the Hoffman regime may return, but the workingmen with guns will remain. If America thinks that the soviet movement in Germany is an outbreak of licensed criminalism—that men and women are fighting while the red guards are a pack of plunderers—America is dangerously misinformed. I offer no bloshevist ballyhoo here, but in Berlin I saw carpenters, bootblacks and bricklayers lying on their stomachs behind barricades of dry goods boxes and dead horses; I watched them prowling over the roof tops and stalking behind chimneys; I saw them in the Ruhr district, in Dusseldorf and in the little villages adjoining the great Westphalian coal mines—grimy, unsmiling miners. And because I have seen them I know that calling names will not stop them, that bullets will not halt them, and that laws will not suppress them. What is now happening in Munich is the shadow of what the future holds for Germany—the workingman with a gun.

WE DEMAND OUR FREEDOM

COMRADES: Ten years ago,—yes, even five years ago!—few among you would have dreamed that today you would be met together to protest against the incarceration of Political Offenders in the United States of America. And if those few would have mentioned such a possibility to the rest of you they would have been laughed at. Political prisoners in America? Why, such a wild idea! AMERICA has always been the Haven of Refuge for Political Offenders from all over the world. It is our dearest, our most characteristic tradition. America recognizes the value of Freedom of expression in developing a FREE PEOPLE; and America is, fundamentally, a FREE COUNTRY.

"Why," you would have said,—"See here, don't you know that the CONSTITUTION GUARANTEES freedom of expression in America? Suppose some one should say he doesn't approve of certain things which may be going on in this country we don't care. Let him spout! If it is unfounded foolishness it can't possibly do any harm; and if what he says is sensible we want to hear it. So we can adopt his idea—or as much of it as we like."

But things are different now. We have Political Prisoners in America. Congress sat down upon that Constitution we were all so proud of. Oh, to be sure, Congress had no LEGAL RIGHT to enact legislation conflicting with the Constitution. But it did just that. Now, honestly, wouldn't you say that Congress has violated the law of the Land? For the Constitution, so we were taught, is the SUPREME LAW OF THE LAND. When one violates the provisions of an "Act" which is, itself, a VIOLATION OF THE SUPREME LAW OF THE LAND—Is one a criminal?

Did the American People decide that the old Constitution had outlived its usefulness? Did they decide to abdicate—this "Sovereign American People!"—and place the supreme power in the hands of a bunch of Corporation lawyers in Washington, D. C.? Did we do that?

You are here today, for the express purpose of ANSWERING THAT QUESTION. Proudly we have declared, "WE are the Government of THIS land." ARE WE?

Surely, WE do not sanction the jailing of hundreds of men and women whose only "crime" has been that of conscientiously trying to teach the people a better, easier, cleaner way to live! DO YOU want to send Eugene Debs to prison for ten years—or even ten minutes?

You are acquainted with Debs; you have known and loved him for years. You are justly indignant that HE should be subjected to such treatment. But ah, Comrades! There are hundreds of men and women in prison today, in our beautiful America, who are there just as unjustly as is Debs. It is in behalf of these that I would speak to you, now.

Since I have been here in the "exclusive Society of McNiel's Island," many cases have been brought to my attention of men who have been given long sentences under the Espionage Act—AND NOT ONE was a German spy, nor even accused of being one. And they tell us the Espionage Act was framed to "protect our country from the agents of the Imperial German Government." These men, most of them, were not even guilty—if one should use that word—of violating the Espionage Act (itself a violation of our country's law!) Some of them are not even members of the Socialist Organization—nor even of the A. F. of L. How did they get here?

The Espionage Act gave the necessary legal prestige, and the upset conditions attendant upon the entrance of America into the World war afforded the excuse—the cloak—for the formation of a pernicious system of spying. Thousands of young men, anxious to escape the draft, their diseased minds fed upon a diet of such literary masterpieces as "Diamond Dick, Jr.," hastened to attach themselves to the Federal Department of Justice, ostensibly to "serve their country" by ferreting out dangerous German agents! In order to prove that theirs was an "essential occupation" it was necessary, so they thought, to make frequent arrests. And I have even heard that, in order to further facilitate this important business, these detectives were given a bonus of $25 for each conviction for which they were responsible. I do nto know if this is true; I hope it isn't. God knows there were dirty tricks enough without that.

Now, I ask you—Is such a condition of affairs conducive to the "fair and impartial administration of justice?" Some one said to me, during my trial, last May, "You needn't expect the JURY to acquit you, Mr. Herman; a Federal jury always believes it is THERE TO CONVICT. And they are so afraid of being accused of disloyalty, themselves, that they actually don't dare to draw suspicion upon themselves by an acquittal." Again I will say that I do not know if that is true; you must just form your own opinion. You remember—do you not?—that there were practically No acquittals in Espionage Act cases. Can it be true that this country was so very full of DANGEROUS GERMAN SPIES? And that these amateur detectives were of such superhuman astuteness as to be certain of apprehending the guilty person

Who is it that has been imprisoned under the Espionage Act? NOT German Spies—But American Citizens! And in not one instance which has been brought to my attention were these persons guilty of any act or word truly inimical to the interests of this country, whether this country were at war or not at war.

And yet these men and women have been forcibly removed from their homes, families and firends, subjected to every humiliation which petty, brutal hirelings of a corrupt political administration could devise; dragged through the mockery of a "trial" in court, with all the attendant expense and discomfort; and, thrust into prison to serve five, ten and twenty year sentences. And a man convicted of violation of the "Mann Act"—and I am sure you will agree with me that this is one of the most heinous crimes of which a man can be guilty—gets TWO YEARS A'T MOST. And convictions under this Act are very few! Creatures of whose guilt there is absolute proof are being freed every day because of "technicalities"—loop holes placed there by our clean-minded lawmakers, as every one knows, so that these creatures can escape the penalty of the crime.

You know that the Espionage Act has begotten a system of Espionage rivaling that of old Russia under the reign of the Czar. Do we want such a condition of affairs to be maintained indefinitely? Which among you has assurance that tomorrow it will not be YOUR turn to be dragged into court to answer to the charge of violation of this Act? Hold up your hand—we want to see what you look like. Certain it is that you must be an intimate friend of Charlie Schwab—or dear old John D. himself.

While there has been much irresponsible persecution of obscure and inoffensive people, during this reign of terror, there has been a well organized and systematic attack upon the Socialist Organization and all other Organizations whose purpose and reason for existence is the better education of the Working Class to a realization of the economic system which prevails, and of the remedy for these economic ills. The master class, under the guise of "war necessity" have sought to make use of the Espionage Act to accomplish that which they have longed but hardly dared to do before—the complete and ruthless extermination of all ORGANIZED effort of the Workers to achieve Freedom for themselves. They do not care for the individual rebels—they know, full well that these individuals can be easily and cheaply disposed of. THEY KNOW THE POWER OF ORGANIZATION—and it is that power which they fear, and would destroy.

And well may they fear that power. It is the power which is going to TAKE FROM THEM THE POWER they possess today—the Economic Mastery which makes it possible for them to live in ease and luxury without doing any useful work for society; which compels the slavish service of thousands of human beings to supply them with all the good and beautiful things which this world affords.

WE, the citizens and inhabitants of this country, are going to resurrect our Constitution; re-establish a Republic in this country. And, standing squarely upon the provisions of our American Bill of Rights, we, through the medium of the POWER OF ORGANIZATION, are going to develope a GENUINE DEMOCRACY in this country of ours.

And, as the first step in that direction, WE DEMAND the immediate and unconditional release of ALL persons convicted under the Espionage Act. Whether the alleged offense were political, industrial or religious.

We will not accept "commutation of sentences." we do not seek "judicial clemency," we refuse "Executive Leniency." We have committed no crimes—violated no laws. We have been true to our country—to our people.

We will accept no compromise with political iniquity—WE DEMAND USTICE.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was adopted this evening by Local Richmond, Ind., Socialist Party of America:

Whereas, the members of the Socialist Party stand squarely upon the principle that all men should have equal opportunity and right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and

Whereas, this right and opportunity cannot exist where freedom of the press is denied, and

Whereas, in the European countries, England, France, Italy, Russia and Germany, amnesty has been granted to political prisoners.

Whereas, under the Espionage Act, designed to prevent and punish spying in the U. S., there was not a single spy convicted, and

Whereas, Eugene V. Debs and 1,500 other political prisoners in the United States have never been accused of plotting with the enemy, but have lifted their voices to pleas for human reason and human brotherhood and the crucified human masses all over the world.

Whereas, Eugene V. Debs has always been a loyal supporter of the rights of free men everywhere and a valiant worker in the class struggle to better the living conditions of the workers.

Therefore, be it resolved,

1. That members of Richmond local, Socialist Party, hereby express our sincere gratitude to him for stating our views on war at the cost of his own liberty and our sincere admiration for that heroic quality of character that caused him to stand, one of the few spokesmen, for sanity and peace and human brotherhood in a war made world, and

2. That we deplore that condition of affairs, existing in the U. S. at present whereby such a man loses his liberty and is sentenced to ten years in federal prison while a multitude of proven profiteers revel in unearned wealth paid for with the life blood of more than 200,000 American boys, go free, and

3. That we stand unequivocally for amnesty for political and religious prisoners and for the restoration of the peoples' constitutional rights of free speech, free press and right of assemblage, and

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our daily press, the Socialist press and a copy recorded on the minutes of the local.

By order of resolutions committee, March 21, 1917.

From Anarchy and Bloodshed Socialism Rises Victorious Over Its Enemies

From the carnage of the Cleveland May Day riots, Socialism rises victorious over the machinations of its enemies. With white hands and a clean heart, without malice and with enmity only toward the economic system, Socialism advances over the fallen and the maimed, over the red debauch of capitalistic hate and terrorism to greater power and achievements.

Secure in the rightness of our Cause, certain of our historic mission and glorying in our growing strength, we may now look back to that hour of horror instigated by our enemies, proud of our peaceful march and its purpose, knowing that all the desperate hatred vented upon us has but left us stronger in courage, more united in purpose and better qualified to fulfill our work as Revolutionary Socialists.

The storm of capitalist hate that swept over our peaceful and lawful march has spent its fitful force. Emerging from that stressful scene we may now view the wreckage of American ideals that lie broken and scattered about. Becoming desperate at the growing class-consciousness of the workers, realizing its helplessness before the advancing hosts of Industrial Democracy, capitalism ever seeks in red revenge and brute force to crush the ideals of the workers. They cannot be crushed. Force cannot exterminate the ideals of liberty from the human heart. Force can not stem the tide of revolutionary thought and action that is sweeping the world clean of its worn out ideas, ideals and economic systems.

The mad rush and onslaught that began the riots, the methods used by the powers that be to (mis)handle the situation that arose has swept as though with a gigantic broom the cobwebs from the eyes of thousands. They have seen as though in a monstrous nightmare an orgy of capitalistic vindictiveness unequalled in ferocity. They have seen "Americanism" in action as it really exists. They have witnessed the traditions of American life raped by capitalism in a seething flame of intolerance, they have seen substituted therefor the fiendishness of devils and the corruption of hell.

To these thousands and to the thousands who shall hear the story from their white lips these traditions of American life and liberties are henceforth blackest lies and abominations. The veil of delusion has been snatched from their eyes. They have seen the law violated and the violator encouraged by those responsible for the law's keeping. They have witnessed the brutal rule of might while law and right lay raped by their keepers. They now see clearly where they saw but dimly before. They have seen what they have seen.

A hundred parades, a hundred monster meetings could not have reacted so forcefully for Socialism as has and will this mad onslaught upon the workers. It may yet become a truism that the policeman's club is unsurpassed as an educator of the credulous, and we may expect our capitalist colleges to endow a chair in each for the purpose of turning out the best qualified in its use. True, many marchers and others have been given the "limit" and fined and sent to the workhouses for as long as the law allows. Workers have long been accustomed to expect that this would be so. Capitalist courts are but ramifications of the physical power of the State. A capitalist state requires capitalist courts to uphold capitalist interests. The capitalist court and judge instinctively recognizes the worker as an enemy, being one, he is given the limit upon all occasions.

But even the capitalist state cannot survive upon physical power and force alone. Behind all physical force, underlying it and permeating it throughout must lie the tissues of MORAL force. Without this moral power, this belief in the justness of its cause, with a willingness for great sacrifices and a tolerance of opposition forces, no capitalist can long survive the canker that eats at its heart. It is through this power of MORAL force that the Socialist movement rises ever victorious over all obstacles, all misrepresentations and falsehoods. It is by this moral force that the Socialist movement is stronger today.

Upon a thousand industrial battle fields the blood of the workers has been spilled. The masters have gloated over each seeming victory, while like ghouls they have robbed the dead as well as the living. They are dear bought victories, which drive them incessantly to greater outrages and greater blunders. In their desperation they lay open before the workers the dirty game they play upon them.

Socialism in Cleveland is stronger today than on April 30th. Stronger in numbers and stronger in moral force, it rises sublimely from the ashes of a momentary defeat to lead the workers on to emancipation and victory.

Socialism in Cleveland is on the job and will stay there long after the instigators of the May Day riots are in their forgotten graves. "The Hour of the People has Come" and the murderous machinations of capitalists, the enemies of the people, cannot prevail against it. Hail to the Revolution! Onward to Victory!

CURB FREEDOM OF SPEECH TO "CRUSH THE MONSTER OF BOLSHEVISM"---ADVOCATED

Department of Justice Inclined to Let People Discuss Social Problems Provided They Don't Advocate Forcible Overthrow of Government. Waiting for Congres to Meet.

The organized labor exploiters of the United States are definitely making use of the alleged bomb plot directed against the lives of certain capitalists and anti-labor government officials to advocate much more drastic suppression of the rights of freedom of speech, press, and assemblages than are now contained in the sedition law.

The department of justice holds that people have the right to criticize existing social and governmental institutions and to advocate changes in the structure of the government, the abolition of the capitalist system of production and the substitution of the Socialist system provided that method is not illegal. The organized capitalist, however, speaking through their mouthpieces known as as the capitalist press, have no sympathy with the soft-hearted policy of the department of justice and are going to make a drive on congress when it convenes for legislation that will prevent any and all criticism of existing institutions and advocacy of changing them.

Two Washington papers are the heart throbs of American capitalism. The Washington Post, owned by Edward B. McLean, who also owns certain coal mines in Illinois, where the workers are exploited to the existence point, is against everything that labor wants, and does not even carry the union label. The Washington Star owned by Theodore W. Noyes, is likewise anti-labor in everyone of its heartbeats. Noyes has the distinguished honor of being the brother of the manager of the Associated Press, whose offices are in the Washington Star building. They are the political mouthpieces of the nationwide labor exploiters and express the sentiments today of the people who drove the notorious espionage law through the last congress conferring upon the postmaster general the drastic powers of a thought controller.

The labor exploiting editor of the Post declares that when a "bolshevist or socialist or anarchist or any radical of that ilk publicly rails against the government of the United States, denounces its institutions and its laws, flays its judges and officers and advocates supplanting this republic with the rule of the mob he encourages and stimulates vicious persons to the commission of deeds of violence." By the "rule of the mob"

STRIKES GALORE IN MEXICO.

New York.—Strikes are quite the fashion in Mexico, according to a prominent radical in this city who has just returned from a trip to Mexico. Everywhere it is the same cry —higher wages and shorter hours. So alarmed has the employing class become that the large capitalistic papers are running series of special stories to demonstrate conclusively that the Bolsheviki are responsible for the labor unrest.

As an example of how far the strike fever has gone, the case of the domestic servants may be cited. The maids and servant girls decided one bright day that they were working altogether too long and that hours in their trade were not regulated. They struck. They demanded that seven hours of service—the hours to run continuously, and not in shifts which might make them get up at an unseemly hour and retire late at night—were all that should be asked of them. They won their point.

While in America the teachers are for the most part unorganized, the instructors of the youth of Mexico are all united in a union. This union has recently joined hands with the Central Federated union of Mexico City, and it is expected that by this combination the entire educational system of the country will be markedly improved.

Mexico is a veritable paradise for those who believe in free speech and free press. There is no censorship or suppression of ideas. Anybody can print anything he likes. The tenets of socialism are therefore well known not only to the workers, but to members of the upper classes as well, who do not display the ignorance of Marxism so prevalent north of the Rio Grande.

The cost of living has gone up tremendously, chiefly due to the United States embargo on merchandise. Many industries are awaiting rehabilitation. But as the American State Department has held out little encouragement regarding Mexico, money can be borrowed only on movable securities on a monthly interest charge of 5 per cent. There is very little currency to be had.

DEBS CRUCIFIED

Brownella Cottage, Galion, Ohio, April 19, 1919.
Mr. Eugene V. Debs, Federal Penitentiary,
Moundsville, W. Va.

My Dear Comrade:

Yesterday was the day of the Crucifixion and by their treatment of Debs the American masters crucified the Christ of the slaves in the United States.

Today is the day of the Preparation and the masters are rejoicingly saying: to hell with the gospel of socialism, for we have silenced the voice of Debs, its great preacher in the tomb of a prison.

Tomorrow, however, will be the day of the Resurrection when in earnest tones and with moving eloquence Debs will be preaching from the pulpits of a million Bolshevik hearts, ours being two of them.

Mrs. Brown and I love you. We mourn your most cruel fate and we resent it.

Affectionately yours,
MR. AND MRS. WM. BROWN.

You Must Attend the State Picnic at Coney Island Cincinnati, June 29

The State Convention Publicity Committee of the Socialist Party of the State of Ohio, hereby notifies the different Locals or Branches of the Socialist Party that the State Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio will be held in Cincinnati, June 27 and 28. The state picnic will be held on June 29, 1919, at Coney Island. It is hoped every revolutionary Socialist will be present. Speaking will be at 3:30 p. m. with Comrade Irwin St. John Tucker of Chicago as the speaker of the day. It doesn't matter, if Northern, Southern or Central parts of the state, lets get together, rally around the Reds and have a jolly and good time.

The committee also wishes to state that tickets have been forwarded to each and every Local or Branch in the State of Ohio. These tickets can be bought of Socialist Party members for 25 cents; same will cost at the boat wharf 35 cents each. We ask the comrades to sell and buy as many tickets as possible.

Furthermore we wish to state that the country store will be held during the convention at 1314 Vine street, and as usual does the committee ask comrades, friends and sympathizers for donations for such "Country Store," which will be gladly and thankfully received.

Please forward donations to the treasurer of the committee, Comrade Lotta Burke, 1314 Vine street, or the secretary, Otto F. Hoefer, 1315 Vine street.

Comrades and friends remember, under no circumstances should you miss the state picnic, but attend and help to make it the grandest ever held in the State of Ohio. A great state picnic will show the strength of our large membership, and we should not only have an attendance of 5,000, but we can easily have 10,000 attend this picnic.

The net profit will go to the state treasurer.

Helen Keller to Eugene V. Debs

DEAR COMRADE:—Of course, the Supreme Court has sustained the decision of the lower court in your case. To my mind, the decision has added another laurel to your wreath of victories. Once more you are going to prison for upholding the liberties of the people.

I write because my heart cries out, it will not be still. I write because I want you to know that I should be proud if the Supreme Court convicted me of abhorring war, and doing all in my power to oppose it. When I think of the millions who have suffered in all the wicked wars of the past, I want to fling myself against all brute powers that destroy life, and break the spirit of man.

In the persecution of our comrades there is one satisfaction. Every trial of men like you, every sentence against them tears away the veil that hides the face of the enemy. The discussion and agitation that follow the trials define more sharply the positions that must be taken before all men can live together in peace, happiness and security.

We were driven into the war for liberty, democracy and humanity. Behold, what is happening all over the world today! Oh, where is the swift vengeance of Jehovah, that it does not fall upon the hosts of those who are marshalling machine-guns against hunger-stricken peoples? It is the complacency of madness to call such acts "preserving law and order." What oceans of blood and tears are shed in their name! I have come to loathe traditions and institutions that take away the rights of the poor and protect the wicked against judgment.

The wise fools who sit in the high places of justice fail to see that in revolutionary times like the present vital issues are settled, not by statutes, decrees and authorities, but in spite of them. Like the Girondins of France they imagine that force can check the onrush of revolution. Thus they sow the wind, and unto them shall be the harvest of the whirlwind.

You dear comrade! I have long loved you because you are an apostle of brotherhood and freedom. For years I have thought of you as a dauntless explorer going toward the dawn, and, like a humble adventurer, I have followed in the trail of your footsteps. From time to time the greetings that have come back to me from you have made me very happy, and now I reach out my hand and clasp yours through prison bars.

With heartfelt greetings, and with a firm faith that the cause for which you are now martyred shall be all the stronger because of your sacrifice and devotion, I am,

Yours for the Revolution—may it come swiftly, like a shaft sundering the dark!

HELEN KELLER.

KATE O'HARE WOULD CONDUCT SURVEY OF MISSOURI PRISON

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special Correspondence.)

St. Louis, Mo.—Kate O'Hare is in the state penitentiary over in Jefferson City, serving a five year sentence because of her allegiance to her Socialist principles.

In the meantime Frank O'Hare, here in St. Louis, waits, works and watches, not only to make prison life more endurable for the wife and mother, but to leave no stone unturned that might result in her early release, which Kate O'Hare says will come with the liberation of all political and industrial class war prisoners.

I found Frank O'Hare in his office, 1011 Holland building, and he was writing Governor Gardner of Missouri, urging that Mrs. O'Hare be given permission to carry on sociological work within the prison, in lieu of her work in the prison overall factory.

"Frank and Kate," as they have been known in the Socialist movement for a score of years, have been working on this plan for more than a year. It was with this in mind that an effort was made to have her transferred to the state penitentiary in North Dakota, under the regime of the Non-partisan League, but this effort failed.

For many months, however, Kate O'Hare has been acquainting herself with all the writings of the prominent authorities on criminology and sociology, getting in personal touch with all of the well known experts in this country. This study has taken her to many of the better known universities in the land.

Mrs. O'Hare made a personal visit to Governor Gardner of this state and urged that she be allowed to do this work. He said he would take the matter under advisement, in the meantime showing considerable interest until the newspapers took up the question, when the governor retired into his shell, claiming that he hadn't known that Mrs. O'Hare was a convict-to-be at the time of her visit to his office. It is understood that an order permitting Mrs. O'Hare to carry on the work in question must come from President Wilson, although a recommendation from the governor would have considerable influence.

"Mrs. O'Hare in due time will present to the president her request to be permitted to do sociological work within the prison," Frank O'Hare wrote Governor Gardner. "She hopes to have the co-operation of scientific, medical and psychological experts in the comprehensive survey which is contemplated.

"Such permission will not be considered as a favor by Mrs. O'Hare," he continued. "She simply tenders her expert services to the public welfare, and it is simply a matter of the president's discretion whether or not her tender is accepted.

"A large number of scientific men and women are assisting in the preparation of the plan and questionnaire. It will be some weeks before this preliminary work is finished.

In discussing the imprisonment of his wife and co-worker, Frank O'Hare voices Kate's feelings rather than his own.

"Mrs. O'Hare feels that she can stay in prison just as long as the Democratic administration can afford to keep her there," he says. "All she demands is that congress and the administration make an investigation of the facts, leading up to her arrest in Devil's Lake, North Dakota, on July 29, 1917, and in face of these facts, if the administration in power can afford to keep her in prison, she is willing to stay.

"The court of last resort in this case now is the American people and they will be informed of the facts. I am prepared to carry her fight to the people of the United States and let them pass on the injustice of the conviction and imprisonment of an innocent woman. The people will be informed of the conspiracy of Bowman, North Dakota. No one even thought Mrs. O'Hare would go to prison. Now that she is actually serving a term in prison, the people are awakening. She is not requesting pardon because she cannot do that when she is not guilty."

The same fear and trembling on the part of the authorities that characterized the rushing of 'Gene Debs off to prison was shown by federa lofficials in putting Mrs. O'Hare into convict garb.

tI was after completing a 14-day farewell tour of eastern cities, making her final address at Minneapolis, Minn., April 7, that Kate O'Hare journeyed to Fargo, North Dakota, where she arrived several days before the time she was to give herself up. She surrendered herself to the federal authorities on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, April 12, at the same time that Debs was receiving his prison orders from the federal attorney who prosecuted him to come to Cleveland.

During the days that she waited before surrendering herself to the authorities, the plute papers in Fargo were very much excited, imagining that all sorts of demonstrations were about to take place. Frank O'Hare had come to Fargo from St. Louis to be with his wife and this gave the papers additional cold shivers. The atmosphere became so intense and the bourbon press so terrorized the authorities that Frank O'Hare returned to St. Louis on April 11, after assuring himself that Mrs. O'Hare's journey to prison would be made as comfortable as possible.

It was at midnight, April 12, that Chief Deputy A. S. Marshal and Mrs. Wattles took their prisoner out of Fargo on the long journey to Jefferson City, Mo. Stops were made at St. Paul, Minn., and at Kansas City, Mo., so that the prison city was not reached until the night of Monday, April 14. She was "dressed in," or became a convict, on the morning of Tuesday, April 15, the former international secretary of the Socialist Party being given No. 21,669, and being assigned to the overall factory to make 55 pairs of overalls each day.

The strict discipline of the Missouri penitentiary, which is more severe than in other states, will not be eased up the slightest particle for the woman who sat as chairman of the committee on war and militarism at the St. Louis convention (1917) of the Socialist Party. She will be permitted to write but one letter a week. The federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., is inaugurating a plan to allow all prisoners to write at least three letters a week.

When Frank O'Hare came to the prison on Tuesday, April 15, to see his wife for the first time after entering the penitentiary, he was at first refused permission to see her. It was only after considerable difficulty, and after interviewing several state officials, the capital of Missouri also being located in Jefferson City, that he was allowed to see her. And then his visit was limited to a few minutes on one day. When he returned to Jefferson City the following Sunday, Easter Sunday, he was told that he could not see her until Monday.

Both Kate Richards O'Hare and Emma Goldman number among their friends some of the most prominent women of Jefferson City. One of these had to walk rough shod over the prison officials before she was permitted to see Kate O'Hare on Saturday, April 19, and to send her some delicacies on Easter Sunday morning. All the indications are that the policy of isolating Kate O'Hare from the world is being enforced to the limit.

All of which is no doubt in keeping with the big prison plan to eliminate a human being as much as possible from the world's rushing activities. How it is all reduced to a silent, smoothly moving mechanism is probably best shown by paragraph No. 28 of the prison rules and regulations, which outlines the conduct of the convicts while at their meals. It reads:

"Should you desire additional food, make your wants known to the waiters in the following manner:

"If you want bread, hold up your right hand.

"Coffee or water, hold up your cup.

"Meat, hold up your fork.

"Soup, hold up your spoon.

"Vegetables, hold up your knife.

"If you desire to speak to an officer about food or service in the dining hall, hold up your left hand."

MILLIONS WILL HELP DEBS

Akron, Ohio.

Mr. Elmer T. Allison.

Please convey to Eugene V. Debs this missive, and tell him that it comes from one that would give his ALL in order to free him, tell him that there are millions of bleeding hearts that crave to help him, and WILL help.

Tell him that the light of "FREEDOM" will conquer the shadows of slavery, and that the awakening is at hand.

Debs Has Been in Prison 30 Days. Kate O'Hare 29 Days. WHY?

An Open Letter To the Exploiters

Sir:

I have seen in your newspapers that you are alarmed and, in my opinion, unduly resentful at the fact that the Russian workers, having established the groundwork for an industrial democracy in their country, propose to spread their propaganda and their work of emancipation to the whole world. I fail to see any valid reason for your ire; wherefore, I take this opportunity of bringing to your attention a few incidents in your own career, which should convince you that you are entirely out of order in your attacks on Bolshevism.

When one person gets into a "scrap" with another and fails to get the better of his antagonist, it is good, old practice that he take his licking like a man without meekish complaint; this provided that the opponent has used fair and generally accepted means for gaining the victory. An impartial observer cannot but admire this characteristic in man's voluntary conduct to man; likewise, the most barbarous enemy must feel respect for a conquered foe who takes his ordeal in a manly way, without foul revenge.

I was reminded of this phenomenon, Mr. Bourgeoisie, as I thought of the gigantic combat that is now shaking the world. Not the strife of individuals, nor the wars between nations, but the struggle between the exploiters and the exploited, between your class and my class.

I know, Mr. Bourgeoisie, that in a personal controversy between a member of your class and one of mine, your kinsman would be perfectly clean and fair in the fighting, as honorable as any one of my colleagues. How is it, then, I wish to ask, that when you fight as a class, you are not in the least governed by these same principles? You do know, or you ought to know, enough of the laws of evolution to foresee that there is but one end to the struggle in which you are now engaged: your own destruction and the complete emancipation of my class. The only phase of the matter about which doubt can exist is whether this end will be achieved in five or fifty years. The contest is on, the outcome is inevitable. You, with your past record, should be the last one to lament or sue for mercy. You should not attempt the impossible; you have had your sway, you have fulfilled your mission, your service is no longer required; therefore, accept your fate and give room to those who are mightier than yourself. Parasite that you are, you refuse to do this.

You own the armies and the navies, the governments, the courts, and the means of livelihood; you control the churches, the educational institutions, the press, all of which you have used and are using most generously in your own behalf. When the rising proletariat in spite of all oppression, becomes too powerful for you, when your armies and navies are no longer obeisant pawns and playthings in your hands, when your murderous, cunning, and obstructionist methods can stay progress no longer, then you become the most unscrupulous scoundrel on the face of the earth. At this point you degrade yourself, you take leave of all decency and self-respect. You, the originator of the "laissez faire" principle, the ardent advocate of the policy, "the end justifies the means," you resort to lies and slander, and you begin to—squeal.

You, whose distinction it is to have gained your power and kept it through more bloodshed than any other class, you who have caused more and bloodier wars during your brief period of existence than the sum total of all battles fought before your days; you, who have commercialized art, science, and the higher instincts of man; who have made the gap between rich and poor wider than ever, and who—let us not forget—in your early youth, overflowing with energy, threatened to extend your rule to every country of the world, you are now wailing and weeping because the working-class government of Russia is preparing to carry its idea to the four corners of the earth.

One can respect the motives of an honest opponent, one can feel sympathetic towards one who, "with perfect sweetness," as Emerson says, retains his honorable qualities in his fight for his interests; but, a cur, - hypocrite, who, seeing defeat approaching, attempts to prolong his reign by slander and accusations of unfair methods on the part of his opponents, when he himself owes his very life to those same methods—well, profound contempt and a solemn vow to speed the defeat of such a foe is the only worthy answer. You, Mr. Bourgeoisie, are that kind of a foe and my class will treat you accordingly.

Once, you were a suppressed class, chained and governed by the repressive laws of the feudal aristocracy. You were then a revolutionist, boldly proclaiming your radicalism. You fought by fair means and foul to obtain your emancipation. You beheaded kings and queens, you arranged "reigns of terror," you massacred and you plundered. Oh, you are the father of many sins of which you do not care to be reminded. You were even a confiscator and not a petty one, either. What the November Revolution in Russia will mean to the world's proletariat, the French Revolution meant to you. It transferred the governmental powers from a waning class of feudal kings and barons—and from the church—to you. The Revolution gave you unlimited means of development.

At that time, the rest of Europe was dominated and ruled by the aristocracy. These latter comprehended—as do you and your ilk today in regard to Russia—what the downfall of their institutions in France would mean to their own countries and to their class; consequently, they arranged themselves solidly against the common foe—against you.

As now, those who were dispossessed fled to other countries and are known as emigres. There they plotted against their native land precisely as do the Russian nobles and capitalists today. They urged foreign intervention as a means of restoring themselves to power. In the former, they succeeded; in the latter they failed. This treachery compelled you, Mr. Bourgeoisie, to fight for your life; it solidified the French nation, and gave it the physical and moral stamina required to meet the occasion. You accepted the challenge of the aristocracy and took to the offensive. On the 15th of Dec., 1792, you, through the newly elected Convention, issued a decree in which you ordered the French generals to abolish all existing authorities in the territories they occupied; to sweep away feudalism and nobility and to proclaim the sovereignty of the people. (The "people" then meant you yourself, Mr. Bourgeoisie.) Further, "—the French nation shall treat as enemies any people which, refusing liberty and equality, desires to preserve its prince and privileged castes, or to make accommodations with them," your decree concluded.

So-Co—May 12—EIGHT

You did not mince your words in this document, Mr. Bourgeoisie; you made it far more sweeping than any declaration of the Soviet government of Russia. The manner in which you backed up your threat boded ill for the aristocracy; it sounded the death-knell of feudalism. You knew what you wanted, you knew how to secure it; evolution was on your side and—you won.

Not by your own power alone, however, did you gain your victory. To achieve your ends it was necessary for you to enlist the aid and good will of my class, the working class, in your cause. This you did for purely selfish reasons and by misrepresenting to us your aims and purposes. You fooled us by fine phrases and high-sounding words. "Equality, Liberty, Fraternity" was your official slogan, and it served the same purpose then as does your hypocritical "democracy" at the present day. You inscribed "Equality, Liberty, Fraternity" over the entrance to your jails then; today we see your "Democracy" painted over your factory gates. You failed to explain to us that "Equality" and "Fraternity" meant simply nothing, while "Liberty" signified your right to buy and sell, to produce and consume, to hire and fire as you pleased. True, there were a few even at that early date who analyzed our nature, Babeuf, e. g., but their voices were too weak and you did not hesitate in silencing them. With this standard of bourgeois morals and tactics once set, you have pursued the same course and improved upon your tactics to this day.

You converted the comparatively prosperous handicraftsman into a miserable proletarian, not by any consent of his—if you please—but because the change benefited you. Instead of his short hours at leisurely, interesting work with numerous holidays, you abolished his holidays and "free" Mondays, you attempted to make the week ten days instead of seven, and, worst of all, you tied him down to fourteen and sixteen hours of monotonous toil in an unsanitary factory.

Not content with this, you wrested our women from the homes and put them to feed your machines. To the crowning shame of your foul deeds, you took, also, our children from their mothers' laps and forced them to sacrifice their tender bodies on your altar of greed. This, too, you did without the consent of and quite in opposition to the best interests of the workers.

With the enslavement of the proletariat and the aid of machinery, you soon piled up a surplus of manufactured products. Our meager wages did not enable us to buy back this surplus. Your own capacity for consumption (although stimulated by artificial means and most debasing desires) was not commensurate with the magnitude of that surplus; hence, something had to be done and, again, irrespective of the wishes of those victimized, you effected a solution.

Vast areas of the world were inhabited by savage and barbarous people who used little or no clothing and who lived in complete ignorance of the "Comforts" of civilization. This was the new Star of Bethlehem that pointed out to you the possibilities of a long and glorious life. You stripped the savage of his fig-leaf, and attired him in up-to-date clothes; you induced him to discard the bow and arrow and the battle-ax and taught him the use of murderous firearms; you dethroned his pagan gods and supplied him with a religion that would keep him submissive to your rule. In exchange for this charity of yours, you exacted from him the natural resources, etc., of his country, and finally you dragged him into the current of capitalist production, subjecting him to the miseries, diseases, and vices into which you had previously forced the proletariat in civilized countries.

Since then you have zealously opposed any interference with your affairs by my class. Whenever we have tried to stop your devastation, you have drenched our attempts in blood. Profiting by experience you have invented increasingly horrible methods of exploitation and suppression. Your law of acceleration goes on and on, making life more and more unbearable for the mass of us. You have stopped short of nothing in your greed for power. A list of your atrocities would bridge the space between our planet and the sun, and, still, the story of your abominable cruelties would be but half told. Your satanic exploits defy description.

The blackest night finally transforms into day, the biggest iceberg is destined to melt, sometime; and, get it once for all, the formidable giant known as Capitalism must one time—sooner or later—crumble and die.

Night gives way to the coming day quietly and without murmur; the iceburg, acted upon by the rays of the sun, gently and peaceably transforms itself into oceans of water; but you, Mr. Bourgeoisie, the mean, sneaky coward that you are, you lament your destruction, you squeal, and you appeal to your own victims to save you. You prove thereby that you lack the moral courage to accept the verdict of evolution—let alone the fact that your action also proves yourself to be incapable of saving yourself by your own power.

"The Bolsheviki intend to overrun the whole world and destroy our civilization!" you cry out when the Russian workers announce their determination to free the oppressed in all countries.

So-Co—May 12—NINE

What are your complaints, sir? Why such strenuous objection? Have you not encircled the globe with your missionaries and your agents? Why so much venom and wrath at the fact that Russia's workers send their emissaries with messages of cheer and hope to comrades in other lands? Your agents, sir, were not sent for—they had to force their way—whereas the Bolsheviki agitators are welcomed and wanted by all except you and your class. They are eagerly listened to by those whom they are sent to educate and I challenge you to furnish proof to the contrary.

"As a man soweth, so shall he also reap." If you had a right to conquer the world, why deny us the same privilege? Do not balk at us for using methods that are effective; you have done the same things yourself. If they can hasten our victory, well and good. Your system of society is in its death grapple—all "medical" aid and efforts to the contrary notwithstanding. Your wailing and weeping are utterly useless. It ill befits you, the cruellest of the cruel, to accuse your opponents of unfair methods.

Your emancipation spelled our enslavement; you ascended the ladder of prosperity at the cost of our flesh and blood. You have degraded us and reduced us to a condition in some respects below that of our savage ancestors millenniums ago. When there was food they ate; we often starve in the midst of plenty.

Our aims differ from yours. We are not going to emancipate ourselves at the expense of any other class. We demand nothing more than that which we ourselves produce; we simply intend to eliminate all possibilities for your class to live on our toil. This will exterminate you as a class, root and branch; but as individuals we hold no malice against you. We invite you to share on equal terms with ourselves the task of building up a new, classless society.

Considering your past treatment of us, you must admit this to be a fair and generous offer. It is not yet too late for you to accept it. If you do not, so much worse for yourself.

The ice is melting, the day is dawning, the emancipation of the lowly is near. Be like a man, Mr. Bourgeoisie, take your medicine—it's of your own make—and then, as far as your character of a class is concerned—depart speedily and noiselessly to the happy hunting-grounds.

Yours without respect,
JOHN WORKINGMAN.

The persecuting spirit has its origin, morally in the disposition of man to domineer over his fellow creatures; intellectually, in the assumption that one's own opinions are infallibly correct.—John Fiske.

Gompers on American Labor and Bolshevism

I have just been wrestling with the Gomperian philosophy as doped out by Mr. Gompers in his onslaught against Bolshevikism in the May issue of McClures. The first test of a philosophy is consistency—standardization. A true philosophy may be taken to pieces and reassembled promiscuously, and the parts will FIT, because they have all been formulated to an identical standard. In this test Mr. Gompers' philosophy fails miserably. He has used divers conflicting standards, and when you make his "facts" face each other you find only conflict and confusion.

Mr. Gompers has a genius for platitudes. High-sounding rhetorical periods seem to tickle him. He marshalls his platitudes and dangles them as gleefully as a kid does a bunch of tin soldiers. Then he goes blithely on and picks up and dangles another selection, and then another, each taken apparently at random. When we group his selections and make them face each other, we find the most startling and surprising lack of harmony and consistency. There is a theory, accepted by many capitalist politicians and apologists, that presumes the people to be fools, and holds that empty platitudes and high-sounding periods are more effective than profound logic. Perhaps Mr. Gompers holds to this theory. Listen:

"American labor's loyalty to the fundamental principles of American democracy stands proven to the world in a record made through months of trial by fire. A loyalty so proven in such a test may be guaranteed to stand through the comparative calm of peace." Then a little further on: "Because the condition in the American labor movement is what it is, American organized labor stands today where it stood during the days of armed conflict, the great protector of true democracy, the keeper of unceasing vigil of the citadel of right and freedom and justice."

A fellow would suppose from this assumption that American organized labor is "the great protector of true democracy, the keeper of unceasing vigil of the citadel of right and justice and freedom," that American organized labor has been in possession of these things all the while. Would American organized labor keep "unceasing vigil" over things they do not, and have not possessed? But let Mr. Gompers continue and define for us his concept of right and freedom and justice:

"And freedom, to American labor, is not a thing abstract. It is not merely a word for platform use. It is not a work of decorative rhetorical art. Freedom, for American labor, has no meaning until it is translated into terms of life—until it means an avenue to better, fuller, richer, nobler life; until it means opportunity for all to go on to the finest heights of human development, opportunity in such a form as to beckon all to the upward path. American labor believes that America means the best of America, the noblest, the truest, the kindest, the bravest, the freest—all the rest must come up to that to become a part of what labor means when it proudly salutes as the flag goes by."

Mr. Gompers' declaration of loyalty to "American democracy" would imply that American labor, in his opinion, had attained freedom, as he defines it, else what on earth is he and his Federation keeping "unceasing vigil" over? But his interjection, "all the rest must come up to that to become part of what labor means when it proudly salutes as the flag goes by," is the fly in the unctious ointment. That even Mr. Gompers is conscious of there being flies in the ointment, we have further proof. Mr. Gompers naively admits:

"There are those who think that everything in American life can be set forth bearing the label 'America' and command the loyalty and devotion of American labor. This, of course, is not the case. American labor is the unrelenting foe of every institution everywhere that makes for oppression and unfreedom and the lowering of the standard of life for men and women."

This confession that all is not exactly lovely in this land of the free is sad, but, alas! it is true. Indeed, when we take inventory of this increment "in American life," and take a retrospective view of the terrible struggle of American labor for the bare, elemental means of existence, of the McKees Rocks, the Ludlows, the Lawrences, the Pattersons, the Holly Groves through which organized labor has passed, we are impressed with the enormity of the fact that that part which Mr. Gompers sums up as "all the rest must come up to that to become part of what labor means when it proudly salutes as the flag goes by," is so enormously large, that when subtracted we wonder what the Sam Hill it is that the Federation of Labor has left to keep "unceasing vigil" over.

But possibly Mr. Gompers is dealing in futures. Listen:

"There were those—and in large numbers—who disagreed with us before the war. They cast stones at our heads and mocked the sincerity of our hearts. But in the great test our movement was the very fabric of our national life. The labor movement was an organized force doing the work of the war, holding steady and true the creative and productive forces without which there could have been no victory. Many there were who came to us and avowed agreement with our purposes. We had not changed in our purpose. They had either changed in theirs or they had come to see ours in its true light. The war has removed much skepticism. We have not done with being tested. Life is a continuous test for all things human. Just ahead of us lies a testing that will be scarcely less severe than that through which we went in the grinding months of the war."

From this language we would naturally infer that Mr. Gompers means that the great service his organization rendered plutocracy during the war, and the scarcely less and possibly greater service to be rendered in the coming struggle against Bolshevikism, will so ingratiate plutocracy that it will hand over to organized labor all that makes for the realization of "freedom, to American labor," as summed up by Mr. Gompers, and then get down on its all-fours and humbly apologize for all the dastardly meanness and recreant ingratitude that it has all the while been guilty of.

If Mr. Gompers believes this, he is indeed an optimist of the first water—especially in the light of past experiences. What assurance has he that after organized greed is through using organized labor to bat down all opposition to its ambition for abject mastery and a world safe for imperialism and capitalism, it will not turn and rend its ally, who will then stand as the last obstacle to the realization of its dream of a feudalized wage system?

Does not Mr. Gompers realize that if capital is to hand over to labor that opportunity for "a richer, fuller, freer life, until it means opportunity for ALL to go on to the finest heights of human development," there would be nothing left for the plutes to pile up and wallow in, and no leisure left them to joy-ride, guzzle the best brands and dance the grizzly bear? They themselves would be compelled to go to work for the means of their own upkeep, and this would be BOLSHEVIKISM, the very thing Mr. Gompers is contracting his followers to combat.

The ruling class cannot wallow in a surfeit of wealth and power without reducing a subject class to poverty and wretchedness. There can be no wealth where there is no poverty, for in the absence of poverty wealth would have no power. On the other hand, labor (poverty) cannot elevate itself, and ascend "to the finest heights of human development" without dethroning the vampire power of capitalism (organized wealth). The struggle of the masses to elevate and emancipate themselves, on the one hand, and of organized wealth to retain the mastery, upon the other, constitutes what is known as "the class struggle," and Bolshevikism is merely the acute and incidental phase of this struggle. Now let us hear what Mr. Gompers has to say about the Bolshiviki, in part:

"There is a movement of destruction abroad in the world today. The philosophy of despair has its fanatic adherents. The lean body has furnished many a weak mind as prey to the teachings of reaction masked under a pretense of progress. Those who see wisely into the future must, if society is to be saved from fires more consuming than those we have known, so shape the course of the world as to offer this hideous wraith of destruction no foothold. The lean body has a right to the opportunity to get food. If it is denied that right it is fair sport of the teacher of ruin. If it is denied that fundamental right it will sooner or later furnish a weak mind likely to fall a prey to whatsoever may come promising relief, no matter how unsound or impossible may be that promise.

"Russia stands before our gaze like a flaming torch of warning. A thing called Bolshevikism has reared its ugly head in that sad and sorry land. Bolshevikism is a theory, the chief tenet of which is 'the dictatorship of the proletariat.'

"Leaving out of consideration for the moment the story of devastation and murder that has marched with this theory into practice, we must set down the theory itself as abhorrent to a world that loves democracy. We shall progress by the use of the machinery of democracy, or we shall not progress. There is no group of men on earth fit to rule the rest of the world. It is this central idea of Bolshevikism that makes the whole of it outcast in the minds of sane men. It is this focusing point of it all that makes it an enemy to our civilization"

Mr. Gompers is peeved with the bolsheviki because it is "the dictatorship of the proletariat." It is "class rule" of a different sort to what he has been used to, and he does not relish the innovation. Perhaps he thinks we have never before had class rule upon this planet. If he thinks this, he had better study history a bit. As a matter of fact, since the dawn of civilization the world has never witnessed anw other form of state than that of a dictatorship of a ruling class. The state itself was first evolved as an instrument of repression to keep slaves taken in war in subjection. As the form of enslavement changed phases, the state underwent modifications. The odium we see attached to labor had its genesis in the hatred entertained for prisoners of war who were enslaved and constituted the working class of that period. In feudalism, the serf, the descendent of the slave taken in war, inherited this wealth of hate and opprobrium. Today, under capitalism, the "free" wage worker is the joyful heir of the historic odium that besmirched the ancestral chattel slave.

Perhaps Mr. Gompers is afraid that the dictatorship of Lenine and Trotzky will be abused to enthrone this pair and their pals in a position of absolutism on the backs of the Russian people, thus again tricked back to languish under a new despotism, no better than the old. Many people who probably know better have advanced this wail. Mr. Gompers need lose no sleep over this apprehension. Throughout all history, there has not been a single instance of a personally owned empire. In all cases the throne of power has been a puppet throne, the monarch apparent merely being the chairman of the board. In autocracies and kingdoms this puppet, or executive, did business for a titled aristocracy who were the owning and ruling class—the junkers. In democracies the power behind the throne is the aristocracy of wealth, who rule by reason of their ownership, also—a little distinction, but precious little difference. In new Russia, under the dictatorship of the proletariat, the workers being the owning class through the instrumentality of their government, are the ruling class—always and everywhere the owning class is the ruling class, and they rule in proportion to their ownership; that is the reason why our Rockefellers and Morgans have immense power, and our farmers so precious little, and our proletariats none.

Political power is not a primary but a secondary power. Political power arises from and is conditioned by industrial and economic power. That class or group having no industrial power and no economic power, CAN HAVE NO POLITICAL POWER. Industrial power and economic power are the manifestations of, and arise directly from, ownership. Hence we see that that class or group having no ownership in the productive utilities of their nation can have no real voice in its government. Political "democracy" supposedly shared by a working class dominated by an industrial and economic autocracy, is an empty bauble. The power of ownership in private or corporate hands is so enormous when buttressed by industrial and economic absolutism as to dominate absolutely all the ramifications of the political state. Our kaisers of great wealth have learned that the franchise, or "democracy" if you wish, is a harmless plaything in the hands of men industrially and economically enslaved. So long as it amuses and satisfies the workers, the capitalists are more than willing for them to retain it.

The hopelessness of betterment by laws made and enforced by the lackeys of capitalism, is sensed by Mr. Gompers himself. Listen:

"The field is littered with the whitened bones of those who have gone seeking salvation by laws. This the American labor movement has recognized, and there is no immediate danger that this philosophy will be desetted in favor of whims and caprices of similar portent."

Mr. Gompers ignores, or is unconscious of, the fact that capitalism has "gone seeking salvation through laws"—and found it. The Gomperian

THE ARMISTICE OF CAPITAL AND LABOR

We are advised by the daily press thatthe president will call an armistice of capital and labor, and adjust matters between them. No one will deny for one minute that all concerned from the president down to the humblest working man in the convention that the president will call together, would like to solve this problem and eliminate all friction between them.

Those who have a grasp on present construction of our social system know that there can not be any lasting peace or adjustment between them as long as we recognize the present status, as a measure, whereby to adjust matters. The statement that they were going to first see that labor should receive all that he earned is utopian under the present system. The intention is ideal, but let us take a look at our present social ethics and see how impossible of solution it will be until there is a new basis established upon which can be built peace and justice. The great industrial corporations have been inflated with watered stock based upon their ability to earn a given dividend. An industry that can earn a dividend of several hundred per cent when it was first organized was looked upon as an ideal scheme to increase its stock capital and sell it to innocent purchasers. The purchaser was only concerned in placing his money where it would secure him an income without any physical effort on his part. The large industrial institutions have all participated in this. It brought millions of ready cash into the pockets of the original promoters. If a factory that cost one million dollars earns a million dollars a year, instead of decreasing the cost of the article they make and raising the salary of its employes and only taking out a reasonable profit as designated by the present social scheme, they devise schemes to issue stock and sell it basing its value on the fact that it will return a good income to the purchaser. This is what is called inflating the stock. Society has permitted this and allowed innocent purchasers to acquire this stock. It does not matter how sincere they may be to give labor all that it earns. This includes the producer of raw materials and the laborer that stands at the flywheel of industries and creates the finished product. He is forced to

ART UNDER THE BOLSHEVIKI.

London.—When a nonsocialist organ like that quoted below engages in praise of the working men's government of Russia, the facts cited are not likely to be challenged. "Common Sense," the liberal organ owned by Lord Landsdowne and edited by F. W. Hirst, speaks as follows of "Art Under the Bolsheviks" in its edition of March 29:

"The general impression conveyed to the reader of the English press is that the Bolshevik regime is one of sheer destructiveness; that art has perished and morals gone entirely by the board. The lie about the marriage law has been sent all round the world, and though now admitted by the New Europe to be a lie, the mischief has been done. Now we learn on unimpeachable authority that life in Moscow provides more aesthetic pleasures than London. Challapine is singing nightly to packed houses in opera—French, German, Italian, as well as Russian; the ballet is in full swing, and on any evening in the week the theaters offer a wide choice of classical and modern plays—Shakespeare and Moliere, as well as Tchekow and Gorki. Moreover, in Petrograd the Hermitage and Alexander III Museums are now more full of pictures than they ever were before. They are well looked after, no pictures have been stolen or damaged. On the contrary, many people have sent to these galleries the best works out of their own private collections. As regards the terrifying statistics given as to the decline in the population of Petrograd it should not be forgotten that it has for long been the deliberate policy of the Russian government—a policy attempted by Kerensky, unsuccessfully, and carried out, successfully, by the Bolsheviks—to induce the inhabitants of Petrograd to evacuate."

Let Us Think It Over

There is no doubt that the tendency of the Socialist Party in the United States, during recent years, has been disappointing to every truly revolutionary Socialist. We have never been able to realize very great enthusiasm for our reform platforms. The "immediate demands" have always seemed to us as futile as "baying at the moon." We have never been able to see the sense or utility of making "demands" that no one notices; and of delivering ultimata that are thrown into the waste baskets of the ruling class.

WHAT WE NEED IS POWER! Power is the magic key that will open the doors of the prisons and enable us to achieve the Revolution. The great question is: How can we arouse, win and organize the power of the workers in order to accomplish their emancipation?

Only a great genius, or a great egotist would attempt to give a categorical or dogmatic answer to this question and I do not pretend to be a great genius. I hope I am not the other thing, but I will try to state what seems to me, some important considerations.

First. We cannot expect to win the workers to our ranks with platforms of one hundred and twenty paragraphs that nobody will read. Platforms that are apparently efforts to satisfy everybody's notion of what needs to be done but really satisfy nobody's. We cannot expect to rally the workers for the Revolution by boring them with a long list of reforms that must first be inaugurated under capitalism before they can ever see the Promised Land, that mysterious goal—Socialism.

Most people do not care for details. They don't want to be bothered. They want to know the principal purpose, the chief characteristics and the salient features of anything, but they are moved by catch-words, phrases and slogans more than by profound and extended dissertations. A prominent speaker and national organizer once bored our audience insufferably and gave our Local a serious setback by explaining in great detail the reforms inaugurated by the Socialist administration of Milwaukee.

In this I agree with the "Left Wing," patching up the faults and infirmities of the capitalist system does not seem to me the proper work of a revolutionary Socialist organization.

Second. We cannot expect to win the confidence and support of the workers by making "demands" of the bourgeois governments. It implies an inferior position. We want the power to do what we want done ourselves. When we get the power we will not have to make any "demands," we will take and do what we think is for the best interest of the working class. So, we must come out clearly and state just what we ourselves propose to do when the workers unite with us and give us the power. I know that some will raise the old objection to this and claim that not "we," but "they," the workers themselves, will do what will be done, but that is only a quibble. We are the apostles of the Social Revolution. Are not "we," the enlightened, class-conscious, revolutionary Socialists trying to arouse, educate and organize the mass of unthinking, deluded workers into the way of their salvation? If not what are we trying to do? But just what do we propose for the workers to do when they respond to our appeals, or what is practically the same thing, what do "we" (all of the enlightened, organized, class-conscious workers) propose to do when we have the power? We must answer that question in order to win the confidence of the workers.

Until quite recently we did not really know how to answer it. We could only generalize, expound our foundation principles and propose a few timid steps toward the great unknown adventure. Recently, however, we have glimpsed imperfectly the efforts of those who have been forced to cut the Gordian knot and do or be doomed in the effort to actually establish a system of Socialism.

Some of these attempts to establish Socialism seem to be half-hearted, faltering, futile, failures if not dastardly betrayal of our cherished cause. We are angered and disgusted by such tactics. But, other attempts appear to be courageous, thorough-going and true, and as successful asthe adverse circumstances will permit. These tactics appeal to us strongly. They fill us with enthusiasm. But let us not be swept "off our feet" by our enthusiasm. Le us not become blind to facts and deaf to reason. Let us think it over. There is no need for haste. There is no emergency. The Revolution is not breaking out in America yet. We have a long ways to go.

In my experience as a member of the Socialist Party I have seen many "Wonderful New Discoveries," or the alleged re-discovery of great Marxian principles that had been overlooked or neglected, hailed as the short and only routes to Socialism, but I have never seen that they got us anywhere.

So, let us think over this "Left Wing" stuff awhile and see if it is really so wonderfully important after all. We must remember that America is not Russia. In Russia, so I am informed, the great mass of the people hated and feared the tyrannous government of the Czar. They were potential rebels. In America the great mass of the people revere and love their government. They lick the hands of those who oppress and rob them. They not only vote to uphold the bourgeois government, but they fight for it. They attack all who denounce and challenge it. They are potentially obedient slaves who hug their chains and are the unwitting cause of their own misery.

The tremendous events in Europe will eventually have an effect to awaken the workers here, but any one can see that the time is not yet ripe. Lenin has said so himself. So let us be calm about this Emergency Convention and not rush into any immature half-baked action. If the "Left Wing" is right it will only gain strength and avoid dissension by waiting. We will not have any revolution in the United States before next spring and in the meantime we may have learned a great deal. We should learn rapidly from the experience of Europe and some of our present opinions may not appear so cocksure by that time.

The only emergency that confronts us now is the fact that many of our most true and trusted leaders are in prison or on their way, unless the ruling powers relent, and our most elementary rights are apparently about to be permanently denied. No emergency convention can conceivably help this situation and it may seriously aggravate it. So let us continue our work of organization and education, watch and study the events in Europe, close up our ranks, conserve our resources, disseminate the truth and rally such support as we can for our imprisoned comrades at home and our embattled comrades in Europe.

But above all let us stick together and avoid bitter and vicious attacks upon all who do not think as we do, nor fall for our "Wonderful Discovery" right away. The comrades of the "Right" and "Center" are no doubt just as true and Revolutionary as we are and if we are right they will eventually be with us. Many of them are going to prison for us and we who are free are ingrates indeed if we impeach their loyalty to our cause because they do not agree to everything we propose.

Let us take counsel together awhile and go before the workers next year with a platform that will mean something and represent our mature deliberations.

"NOT AT WAR."

Even a capitalist editor can stometimes see the maze of contradictions into which capitalistic interests have led this nation's government since it became embroiled in European wars to make the world safe for democracy. How long will the workers allow the criminal farce to continue against the Russian Socialist government? "Not art war, just slaying for pastime" fittingly describes "our" expedition into Russia. Read the following from the Huntington, W. Va., Dispatch of May 8:

PASTIMES OF PEACE.

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 6. (Russia)—Allied troops advancing southward along the Murmansk railway on Saturday captured Mesalskaya, 25 miles south of Urosozero, a war office announcement says. The Bolsheviki resistance was strong.

Let's see. We are not at war with the Russian Bolsheviki. A few days ago when a well-known citizen of New York asked to have the Soviet representative in the United States interned as an alien enemy or prosecuted for seditious practices, the Attorney General of the United States declared that no such process could be taken because the United States was not at war with the Bolsheviki.

And yet Allied troops, a large part of whom are Americans, are not engaged in defensive warfare merely, but in aggressive warfare against the Bolsheviki, after having been hard pressed by them during the entire winter.

We are not at war with the Bolsheviki, but our troops advance against them and compel them to retreat, after showing strong resistance.

We are fighting, charging, retreating, capturing towns and cities, or evacuating towns and cities as the fortunes of war may dictate. But we are not at war. We cannot intern the Bolsheviki minister. We are merely engaged in the friendly pastime of slaying and being slain. It is not war because officially we are unwilling to call it war. We have promised to bring the American soldiers home by June 1, because we are not at war with the Bolsheviki. But just to ward off ennui and to enliven the dull routine of camp life, while waiting for June 1, the fighting continues.

Well, we're living in a wonderful age. We've been frankly told that mentally and morally, "narrow, selfish and provincial," and perhaps inquiry into the war with the Bolshevists in North Russia proves that we are all we've been called.

Maybe, under the millennial dispensation we are entering, the fighting in North Russia is merely a pastime of peace. But when troops advance twenty-five miles and capture a city after "strong" resistance it sounds like war.

Tell him that the hundreds of thousands of noble sons that gave up their happiness, their homes, their lives for freedom's sake, cry out to those sons and daughters of toil, to continue the battle for "FREEDOM"—Freedom of speech, of soul, of mind, Freedom for that great martyr, EUGENE V. MAY 1ST SUCCESSES TO START ORGANIZATION DRIVE

Dear Comrade State Secretary:

Success! A GREAT SUCCESS!!

That's what the comrades say about our campaign for thousands of May 1st meetings.

International Labor Day was more widely and enthusiastically celebrated May 1st, 1919, than ever before.

From Florida to Washington, from Maine to California—locals by the hundreds, encouraged by the promise of a printed program of speeches, of posters and meeting supplies, decided to "break the ice" and CELEBRATE.

THEY DID. You would have realized this had you witnessed the shipping of hundreds of thousands of protest postal cards, Debs' application blanks and posters to remote rural communities as well as to the large industrial centers.

WE FEEL ELATED! So should you. You helped, Comrade, and we here voice our appreciation of the co-operation you gave.

We have not heard from other state secretaries as yet, but the Ohio state office alone placed 31 speakers for May 1st meetings in that state.

Reports from locals will soon reach this office. We shall print as many of these reports as we can find space for in the next national office Bulletin. Look for them. They will prove that our locals are IN ACTION.

These thousands of May 1st meetings will constitute the BEGINNING of a special ORGANIZATION and PROPAGANDA campaign which we hope to initiate VERY SOON.

ORGANIZATION is needed if we are to get Debs, Mrs. O'Hare and other imprisoned comrades out of jail. PROPAGANDA is needed if we are to convince others that Socialism is RIGHT and the imprisonment of Socialists WRONG.

Yours in Comradeship,
A. WAGENKNECHT.

A BANNER MONTH.

This has been some busy office this month, and it is the first month since I have had charge of the office when the activities fulfilled my idea of a state headquarters of a political party. Three national referendums have been conducted through this medium and an election of officers of the state party organization has been brought to a close. More dues stamps have been purchased within the present month than for any month during the year ending April 30th.

To be sure, the work done does not reflect any glory on the administration of this office, as if we had carried forward to a successful conclusion some aggressive campaign or had carried out constructive work on a plan initiated by the state secretary. The fact is, all we did was routine—keeping the machinery of the party going, but we feel elated about it just the same; because we had about come to the conclusion that the said machine had been so crippled by collision during the war that she was nearly ready to fall to pieces. The comrades are manifesting more spirit in their communications—all breathe of renewed devotion to the cause and a determination to stay in the struggle for industrial freedom to the end.

One need not go farther than the "American Bastile," as Comrade Nich Reinhart calls the state penitentiary at Moundsville, to find the reason for this warmth of feling. The workers of the great mining industry of West Virginia have brought home to them the devotion of Comrade Debs to the laboring class and his sacrifice in their behalf, when he is brought to this state to end his days behind prison walls. They need only to hark back to the days of the Great Strike in the coal fields and recall the scenes of the struggle on Cabin Creek, at Cedar Grove and at Eccles, as Comrade Frank Graham pointed out in his letter to the Ohio Socialist last week to arouse their manhood.

Colossal blunder of our master class courts, to think they can rid the country of the influence of so great a soul, by shutting him away behind stone walls! The enforced silence of this staunch friend of labor is a more eloquent appeal to go on with the struggle for industrial democracy than a thousand speeches from him on the platform. Yea, I tell you, "if these hold their peace, the very stones will cry out."

THE NEW ORGANIZATION.

For the State Secretary-elect and the incoming State Committee, we bespeak the good will and co-operation of the membership of the entire party of this state.

As to the personnel of the State Committee, it is not necessary to say anything by way of commendation or introduction, as nearly all are experienced and well-known workers in the party—tried and proven.

As to the State Secretary-elect, from our intercourse in the past few months, we have observed his activities with anticipation of a call to a broader sphere of usefulness for him. He impresses me as clean-cut, radical, alert, accurate and competent. Though most of the stronger locals are again active and the machinery of the party is in fair working order, he will find opportunity to exercise all his talents and time in increasing the efficiency of the organization.

I realize that not much has been done in the last six months in the way of aggressive party work, but neither Comrade Franklin or myself had the time or funds to do much more than keep the machinery of the party intact. Taking the matter seriously, I regretted that the state organization, while I was in charge, was not functioning properly. The State Secretary is virtually head of the party and exercises power under supervision and with the advice of the State Committee. Working together, they represent a power like an engine. If an engine has only power enough to run "idle" or drive an empty machine, it may make some noise and might amuse onlookers to see the wheels go round, but does not accomplish anything. Do you get my point? When the state organization is functioning properly, it ought, like a good engine, pull a load or drive the machine that would turn out a lot of Socialists.

As I am now retiring from the office of State Secretary, I wish to say that I have tried to serve the best my time and ability would permit me to do, and I want to thank the comrades for their co-operation and the courtesy they have shown me.

I hope some time to become acquainted with the comrades that I came to know through correspondence. Having placed myself in a position to attract the notice of the membership of the state, I expect to give a good account of myself in the local affairs of the Socialist movement so that you may not be ashamed to have owned me as a comrade. Yours fraternally,

H. F. OBERHOLTZER,

As one of the many speakers assigned to speak at a Debs Protest Meeting, May 1, 1919, I started upon my mission from Toledo, Ohio, at 8:52 in the morning.

I could not get away at 5:00 a.m., which is the time of the only morning train direct to Conneaut, Ohio, where I was to speak, so went by steam to Cleveland, arriving at 11:30 a.m., and left by electric at 2:00 p.m.

On the train I had read of the bomb plots throughout the country, and not believing them to be true, I saw in this alarming newspaper story the setting for the first act of the tragedies which were to occur throughout the day and night of that eventful May 1.

Instinctively I knew at once these stories were but a harbinger of what was to follow—a sort of premeditated preparation of the human mind for anything that might occur—a shock-absorber as it were—preliminary to the wholesale slaughter which would follow during the day. . . .

The subsidized press calls these slaughters "riots" and must ever blame the victims—the unarmed—and that is what they called the one I witnessed in Cleveland, May 1.

Yes, I witnessed it and was not excited, and I know it was a slaughter and not a riot. I saw the parade as it peacefully marched into the square amid cheers from the thousands who had gathered to welcome their coming.

I had a good view and I saw the beginning of the game when the mounted police, pretending to keep the traffic clear, deliberately drove their horses into the line of marchers after the head of the parade had entered the park proper. They crowded the marchers onto the sidewalk and followed them swinging their clubs and then from nearby came hundreds of policemen afoot and in patrols and like wild men they beat their unarmed victims with their clubs and dragged them away.

There was no call for police because there was a riot—the police were held nearby to start their bloody orgy for the affair did not last more than twenty minutes from the time the head of the parade entered the square until the end.

A Riotless Riot

I left Cleveland at 2:00 p.m. and arrived at Conneaut at 6:30. The meeting here was to begin at 7:30, so I had no time to meet the comrades and immediately proceeded to the Workers' Hall where I learned before entering that another riot was to be staged.

The local newspaper had agitated the citizens. The mayor had forbidden the meeting. The chief of police and the sheriff were already at the door. The hall was one-third filled with regular and deputized policemen and the orders were, "No meeting in Conneaut."

Organizer Eiseman had informed the mayor the meeting would be held regardless of his orders. The mayor said it would not. Chief of Police Merrow and Sheriff Eldred were there to enforce the orders of Mayor Smith—there with a regiment of policemen. Organizer Eiseman and the Conneaut Comrades were there to hold a May Day Protest Meeting.

The meeting was held. The speakers spoke. The Finnish chorus sang the Marseillaise. The chief and the sheriff and the police went home in peace. We went home in peace.

And now, behold! The Conneaut Press is angry because there was no bloodshed! It mourns the fact that at Cleveland and other cities workers were assaulted and murdered so gloriously, and Conneaut let May Day pass without one drop of blood.

Now they are trying to create a battle between the mayor, the chief of police, and the sheriff.

Here's the frame-up in newspaper clippings from the Conneaut News Herald. Read this and see how riots are started:

Poison Gas

"Propaganda is at large seeking to secure amnesty for all so-called political prisoners. The United States Government is brave enough and dutiful enough to send to prison a few handfuls of the disreputable creatures that have befouled the name of the fair land that feeds them. Hundreds, perhaps thousands more should have gone. Deserving ones have escaped the black wall. Now as an aftermath to leniency the snake in the grass is again showing its head and is not only getting away with spreading its poison but is demanding liberation of its dirty confederates."—Editorial in Conneaut News-Herald, Apr. 30.

Now read on and "nail the lies."

Inciting to Riot

"Mayor M. R. Smith late today issued orders to Chief of Police Merrow to notify all parties interested in a proposed 'Debs Protest Meeting' to be held in the Workers' Hall, lower Broad Street, tomorrow night, that the meeting could not be held in that or any other hall in the city or in the open within the city.

The meeting for tomorrow night had been variously advertised. There were to be two out-of-town speakers and a message from Debs, recently sentenced to prison by the federal government. Feeling against the meeting became so strong and talk of Bolshevik propaganda so general in various parts of the city and undertone riot action against it heard, that Mayor Smith, after being approached by a number of citizens, took the above action."—Herald, Apr. 30.

Another "alleged" fact that was all lie:

"Reports from an apparently reliable source at press time this afternoon are to the effect that Sheriff Eldred will be here this evening from Jefferson for the purpose of preventing the holding of the radical meeting stopped in the city but which it was reported would be held in the township outside the city. It is understood a number of deputies have been sworn in for the occasion."

Now read the report of the meeting and note the squeal of these bloodthirsty anarchists who are angry at the police for not having started a slaughter, even after the press had promised immunity by calling it a Bolsheviki riot:

"One hundred and fifty persons (in fact, there were 500), including women and children, gathered in Workers' Hall last evening to hear a message from the convicted Debs and protest against his imprisonment. As per schedule they heard speeches eulogizing Debs and other convicts, one expressing the belief and hope that the time will come when Debs' picture is in every school room in the country.

"He characterized Debs and others like him as martyrs, comparing their status to that of Christ. The time would come, he said, when Debs would be recognized as one of our biggest citizens.

"The speaker also told his audience to be ready to respond to a call to be issued for July 4 or the day after, for every worker to lay down his tools and not work.

It was a very tame performance. Nothing was said that was interpreted as seditious although it was considered by the few "outsiders" present as un-American.

"A radical local Socialist presided at the meeting, one who it is understood, is well versed in the tenets of the radical Reds. The speakers' chief aim, in accordance with the posters announcing the meeting, by one means or another, was to protest against imprisonment of persons for violation of federal laws, or deportation of the Reds by this government to countries where their ideas are now resulting in carnivals of bloodshed.

So-Co—May 12—SEVEN

"WHY?"

"What the News-Herald wants to know is why Chief of Po[illegible]e Merrow did not carry out the ord[illegible] of Mayor Smith issued to him W[illegible]nesday to prevent the meeting a[illegible]rtised for last night being held?"

contribute to the earnings of this excess stock. You can see that unless there is a sacrifice of this fictitious valuation there can be no true adjustment. Society allowed the distiller and brewer to invest billions of dollars in their institutions. Society arrived at that time in history that is used the old Roman maxim "The welfare of the people is the supreme law of the land." We have not yet conceded this in our other social institutions. We virtually confiscated millions of wealth of the distiller and brew through a legal process. Will society do the same to the other large industrial institutions in order that we can get justice and not allow a few to sweep in the wealth that working people create? Unless we eliminate this burden there can be no solution of this problem.

We can see that there will be no concession by either side. Nothing short of the old Roman law will eliminate the difference. There are still a great many people who hold to the theory that capital is due a return on its investment. This may be so under private ownership of the socially used institutions. Modern thinkers see that this is simply a dead weight and makes every person contribute to the idlers. If you hold a handful of this stock, although you might have inherited the money with which you purchased it, you can live a life of idleness and draw your living from the labor of others. Let us take an example of some of our best and largest institutions of this country and see if that theory will hold water. Does any idler draw interest or profit from the capital invested in our post office, public schools, our public wagon roads, our public sidewalks, parks, lakes, rivers, public state buildings? We can see where they would inject this false theory if they were privately owned. No one is to be cussed for these conditions. Society condoned it. Society must undo it, and will. Putting salve on a cancer never cured it. It may fool the patient a few hours. It must be removed to secure lasting results. Impress this lesson on your mind and watch the final conclusion. The materialist conception of history is the only way to forecast positive results.

WAGENKNECHT REPORTS ON DEBS TRIP TO PENITENTIARY

April 29, 1919.

To the National Executive Committee,

Comrades: I desire to make a short report of my trip with Eugene V. Debs to the Moundsville penitentiary.

Wearied by a night ride from Terre Haute to Cleveland during which Comrade Debs only had an hour's sleep, he was taken by the federal authorities from the Cafsey Hotel, Cleveland, early Sunday morning, April 13th, and rushed to the Moundsville penitentiary.

It took more than twelve hours to get to Moundsville. No time was allowed by the United States marshal for lunch at noon and very little time was given Comrade Debs to eat dinner when we finally arrived at Wheeling. The trip completely exhausted Comrade Debs, so much so that in the last of seven changes of cars and depots, he could hardly mount and dismount the car steps.

I characterize the methods used by the authorities, their total disregard for Debs' age and his comfort as particularly brutal and inhuman.

Had either one of the lawyers who defended Debs in court been present when the federal authorities took Comrade Debs in charge several days of respite might have been gained for him in which he might have rested and attended to his many personal affairs.

I sent many telegrams ahead just as soon as I learned which route to the penitentiary we were to take. I subsequently learned that the Socialist locals in and near Moundsville had disbanded and because of this we met with no comrades to cheer Debs on his way to his cell.

After investigating conditions of the party in Moundsville and Wheeling I learned that in both places the Socialist locals had succumbed because of the war hysteria. It seems to me that the Socialists, rather the former Socialists of Wheeling, have turned pro-war and are engaged in profitable politics. Most of those who were seen deported themselves as if the incarceration of Debs near Wheeling was more of an affliction than an honor and I dare say that their "good political standing" in their city will not permit them to be of any service to Debs while he is in prison.

Returning to Cleveland I learned upon Wednesday that the automobile in which Comrade Debs was spirited away from the federal building was hired by the Cleveland Plain Dealer from the Walte garage. The Plain Dealer reporter met Debs at the Union depot when Debs arrived in Cleveland and gave Comrade Debs to understand that he was connected with the secret service department. It was the automobile which this reporter used in which Debs was subsequently taken on a flying trip through Cleveland's main thoroughfares and side streets and finally landed at the Erie depot.

The question arises—why this close affiliation between the Plain Dealer and the federal authorities? By what right did the United States marshal use the automobile of a capitalist daily paper? Why did not the marshal engage an automobile at the expense of the United States if one was necessary? It shows the very close affiliation between the Democratic Plain Dealer and the Democratic federal officialdom. The Plain Dealer hangs the European revolutionists editorially about three times a week, and the United States marshal undoubtedly wanted to do his little part in co-operation with this paper here in this free country of ours.

Photographs of Debs and those who accompanied him were obtained by me in Cleveland. These will be used in a pamphlet which we contemplate publishing, showing pictures of the penitentiary as well as pictures of Debs on his way to prison.

I have the following suggestions to make. These suggestions also hold good in the case of any other

THE DEATH TRAIN OF SIBERIA

We have made many assertions as to who are the powers of darkness and who the powers of light in Russia. We have made them in the face of an avalanche of contrary statements in the press and periodicals of this country. Our belief in the truth of what we were saying rested upon a general knowledge of the nature of the class-struggle against capitalism everywhere, upon a careful and studious reading between the lines of the lies in other publications, and upon private information which came to us through channels suppressed or ignored by those publications. We have never had any doubt of the essential truth of what we were saying. But we have not before had the power to make it visual and unescapable to our readers that we have today. We ask you to read through to the end this article, "The Death Train of Siberia," and then read through to the end the report of Lunacharsky, the Bolshevik commissar of education. Both are in a sense "official reports." Which side are you on when you finish them? M. E.

This is the story of an incident in the attempt to overthrow Bolshevism in Russia, by massacre. It is the story of the deliberate and inhuman killing of men and women and children by the Czecho-Slovak and Kolchak monarchist forces in Siberia. It was first made known in this country by a brief and unrevealing dispatch which appeared in the New York Times.

The whole dreadful truth has now come to light, and the Death Train of Siberia stands revealed in its sinister magnitude as one of the most horrible outrages upon humanity, not merely of this war, but in all human history. The facts are these:

In the fall of 1918 the Bolsheviki took the city of Samara. It was captured from them a little later by the Czecho-Slovaks, who proceeded to throw into prison hundreds of Red Guards, and others suspected of Bolsheviki sympathies.

The city was soon re-taken by the Bolsheviki. And when the Czecho-Slovak forces evacuated the city, they loaded these imprisoned Red Guards and Boleshevik sympathizers together with all the other people then in the city prisons, on a train. Fifty car-loads of herded humanity, packed as closely as if they were already the corpses they were intended and destined to become. That was in September. . . For six weeks the prisoners on that train did not see the light of day, except when the doors of the car were opened to throw out the dead. This assertion may seem incredible; but it needs to be amended only by the exception of a car-load of women prisoners, who were expressly kept for the uses of the officers of the convoy. . . . . The rest left the train only as corpses—and in that six weeks eight hundred starved and frozen and pestilence-stricken bodies were thrown from the train to rot. It had become the Death Train, known all over Siberia, as it must become known all over the world, as a symbol of the blind hatred and fiendish vengeance of the enemies of Bolshevism.

After six weeks, it was halted at Nikolsk by some American Red Cross workers, who defied the authorities, held the train against orders for six days, and rescued from this perambulating inferno some two hundred victims. And then the train resumed its dreadful progress back and forth across Siberia. . .

This Death Train, it should be remembered, is an incident in the rule of terror exercised in Siberia by the Czercho-Slovak and Kolchak forces, with whom the American, British, French and Japanese forces were, and are, co-operating.

It is through the correspondence of these American Red Cross workers in Siberia that the whole story has reached America at last. We quote below some portions of the diary of Mr. Rudolph Bukely, formerly an American banker in Honolulu, now with the American Red Cross in Siberia. It is the record of a six-day interruption of this prolonged massacre. . . We have omitted certain portions of his story which deal with the heroic efforts of the Red Cross men to relieve the suffering of the victims, and we have emphasized some passages in black type; otherwise the narrative stands as he wrote it night by night after long days of unimaginable deeps of horror. It is an extraordinary and utterly convincing story of a horrible thing which we believe the world will not soon forget.

"It is the eighteenth day of November, 1918. I am at Nikolsk-Ussu 'k in Siberia. In the past two days I have seen enough misery to fill a lifetime. . . .

"I have read many times of the Black Hole of Calcutta. I have been told of Russian prisoners returning from German prison camps wrecked by starvation and tuberculosis. Only four weeks ago, as a four-minute man, I was preaching the doctrine of 'hate.' Today, I humbly ask forgiveness for my thoughts of hate, and pray from the depths of my soul that I may be allowed to play my part, though a small one, in trying to improve the condition of men, whatever their nationality, so that perhaps some day this world may emerge into the great Brotherhood, and that such things as I have seen may become impossible. . . . .

"I have seen, through the windows of box cars whose dimensions were twenty-four feet by ten, forty animals who once were human men, women, and children; faces glared at me which I could not recognize as those of human beings. They were like beasts' faces, of a species unknown to man. Stark madness and terror stared from their eyes, and over all the unmistakable sign of death. . . .

"This 'train of death,' for by that name all Eastern Siberia now knows it, left Samara approximately six weeks ago. Men of the Russian railroad service are stationed as far west as Manchuria Station, some twelve hundred miles west of here, through which the train must have passed at least three weeks ago. Since then it has passed through Hailar, Titsikar, Harbin, Moolime, going on and on like a thing accursed, through a land where its stricken passengers found little food and less pity. . . .

" . . . . It left Samara. . . in charge of some Russian officers. It had on board at that time twenty-one hundred prisoners of all sorts. They were apparently civil prisoners. Some were Bolsheviki, others had been released from the prison at Samara. Many of them said they were thrown into jail for being against the Bolsheviki at the time the Bolsheviki were in control; and when in the course of the fighting the Czechs and Russians occupied Samara, they simply cleaned out the whole jail, packed the prisoners into this train, and sent them out west. Between that day and the day before yesterday, when we found this loathsome caravan in Nikolsk, eight hundred of these wretches had died from starvation, filth and disease. In Siberia there is misery and death on every hand, on a scale that would appal the stoutest heart. There were as near as we could count, thirteen hundred and twenty-five men, women and children penned up in these awful cars yesterday. Since last night six have died. By and by they will all die if the train is permitted to go on in such conditions. . . .

"It seems a wicked thing to say, but the thought has surely come to me that to kill these people painlessly would require perhaps three dollars' worth of poison or ten dollars' worth of ammunition; and yet for weeks this train of fifty cars has ben wandering, driven on from station to station, every day a few more corpses being dragged on. Many of these people have been in box-cars for five weeks in their original clothing. There are from thirty-five to forty in a box-car, measuring say twenty-five feet by eleven, and the doors have seldom been open save to drag out the bodies of the dead, or some woman who might better be. I have been told that when they first started there were as many as sixty in many of the cars, but death has weeded them out. I have climbed into these cars at night with my flash light. I have gone into them in the early mornings and examined them. I have seen men with the death rattle in their throat, half naked, with lice and vermin visible on them; others just lying in a semi-unconscious stupor; and others with the whining grin of imbeciles, holding out their hands for a few cigarettes or kopecks chuckling with glee like apes upon being given them.

"Of anything like sanitary provision this train has nothing, and the accumulation of filth in which these people have lived and are dying is absolutely unspeakable. The Russian officer who was in charge of the train has made inconsistent statements about the reasons why these people have been subjected to such awful deprivation and abuse. He tries to make the best story of it possible. They were supposed to have been fed regularly at the different stations along the route, but often for days at a time there has been no one to give them even bread. Were it not for the kindness of the poor villagers who, with tears running down their cheeks, men and women alike, give them what little they can afford, they would be absolutely without nourishment.

"I have talked with a woman doctor (a prisoner on the train) who was doing Red Cross work with the Red Guards. She would have done the same work for any one. A highly educated, intellectual woman, forty years old. She has been on this train for weeks. I have talked to a girl under eighteen years of age, beautiful, refined, intellectual. She was formerly a typist and bookkeeper in the mayor's office at Samara. The opposition party got in, she applied for the same job and got it. Later the authorities heard of her former ocupation and she was sentenced to six days in jail. She was taken in the great net. She has been on this train for weeks, and unless the Red Cross comes to her aid she will die on this train. All the clothing she has on is a filthy blouse and skirt, a sort of petticoat, a pair of stockings and shoes. No coat, in this fierce winter weather.

"I have talked to a man who has not the brains left to know the difference between a Red Guard and one of any other color. His wife quarreled with another woman, who evidently lodged complaint. That night he was arrested in his home, accused of being a Red Guard. He has been in the box-car for five weeks. He will die within forty-eight hours. . I have seen them die, and the following morning I have seen their bodies dragged out of the cars like so much rubbish. The living are indifferent, for they know that their turn will come next. . . . While the prattle about liberty, justice and humanity goes on, ... our hands are bound by 'diplomacy.' . . . . We are holding the train. That is the main thing. It should have begun going back toward Samara last night, but it has not gone and I do not think that the Russian train officials will dare to send it out with us on the spot all the time, opening the cars ourselves, talking to the prisoners, giving them what hope of help we can, and taking photographs every day. We are doing all this without authority, and in the face of this horror we don't care who cares.

"It is impossible to tell in print the story of the unfortunate women who have been imprisoned here under these awful conditions. They are treated better than the men. You all know why. In one car are eleven women. We have sat with them and talked with them in a mixed jargon of French, Russian, and German. On the inside of the car hangs a piece of string. On it are four pairs of stockings owned by these eleven women. The floor is covered with refuse and filth. There are no means of cleaning it, neither brooms nor buckets. They have not taken off their clothes for weeks. In the center of the car is a little wood stove, and there are pieces of wood and coal on the floor. All around the sides of the cars run two rows of planks, on which the inmates sleep at night and sit hunched up by day. If there ever is any official food for the prisoners these women get the first pick, and their physical condition is much better, since eleven of them have a car which would accommodate thirty-five men packed in as they are.

"Two more days have now gone by. Since we arrived a cooking car has been put on the train, with a large iron kettle, and yesterday the guards claim to have given the prisoners a little soup. One kettle for thirteen hundred and twenty-five people, and soup passed through a window a foot by a foot and a half, by means of an old rusty can! . . . Yesterday one of the women was taken out of one of the cars by a Russian officer. He will return her when the train pulls out. . . . In this car is also an emaciated creature that was onec a man. He was a journalist. His wife is in the same car. She has a very few days to live. When the men stand they fill the entire car. On the two rows of planks built along the sides, the dead and the living sleep as best they may. We were told by the guards this morning at half-past eight that three men had died during the night and the bodies had been removed. As we walked past the train a man hailed us from one of the cars, and the guards were told that there were dead inside. We insisted on the door being opened and this is what we saw:

"Lying right across the threshold was the body of a boy not over eighteen or nineteen years old. No coat, merely a thin shirt, in such tatters that his whole chest and arms were exposed, for trousers a piece of jute bag pinned around him, and no shoes or stockings. What agony that boy must have suffered in the Siberian cold before he died of filth, starvation, and exposure! And yet 'diplomacy' prevents us from taking charge and giving aid. But we are holding the train!

"We climbed into the car and found two other dead lying on the second tier of bunks amongst the living. Nearly every man in that car was sunken-eyed, gaunt, and half clad. They were racked by terrible coughing. They had the stamp of death on them. If aid does not come quickly they will die. We looked into a few cars only, but at one window we saw a little girl perhaps eleven years old. Her father, she said, had been mobilized into the Red Guard. So now father, mother, and child are on that train and will die there . . .

"It is the 22nd of November. This morning we got up at seven o'clock and left for the hospital where we had an appointment with Dr. Selesnieff, the military chief. When we arrived we found patients with only three doctors and three nurses. Two patients had died during the night, and the doctor had discovered nearly all the living to be suffering from diseases of different kinds, including two cases of typhus. We have since learned that a week or so ago two men were put off the train suffering from the same terrible scourge. . . .

"Dr. Selesnieff gave us his official report of the conditions, setting forth, in corroboration of the stories that have been told me, that during the weeks that the train had been moving to and fro, passengers had died daily from a variety of causes, including typhus, dysentery, influenza, and ordinary starvation.

"'The people on the train have remained for weeks without warm food, without boiled water, and many even without bread. . . . According to the testimony of officers in charge of the train, the commandant of the station reports that he had orders to send the train back to the west, but I am sure that among the passengers there are still a number of people so sick and exhausted that further sojourn in these cars will prove fatal.'

"We are still holding the train by means of the co-operation of the Czech lieutenant, and in case of need he agrees he will put the engine out of order. Last night the station master showed us telegraphic instructions to the effect that the train positively must pull out at one a. m., but it is still here. . . . Dr. Manget arrived last night, advising us that General Graves had had a long conference with the Japanese and Russian commanders, both of whom had assured him they would do all in their power to co-operate, but this seems to mean very little.

"We are still holding the train and have made arrangements with a Russian bath some three-quarters of a mile from here to wash all the prisoners tomorrow for four hundred and fifty roubles. They will start at six o'clock in the morning and walk to the bath. . .

"November 22—It is bitterly cold. There was a heavy snow storm last night. . . .

"The baths are all ready and we are waiting for the first contingent. In the distance, against the snow, we can see a body of men advancing very, very slowly and with great difficulty. Many stumble as they walk and have to be supported by the other prisoners. . . .

"The first sixty have gone in and now there is a fire burning in the yard where the disgusting clothes are burning. Inside, the unfortunates have each been given a piece of soap and are scrubbing themselves while the guards carry out the clothes and put them on the fire. The wagon has arrived with eighty sweaters, four hundred and fifty pairs of socks, and one hundred and twenty pajamas.

"Tomorrow when this train pulls out it will have nine hundred and twenty-five Red Crosses on it but I must still call it the 'train of death.' There is no use disguising the fact that these people are nearly all going to die, for as soon as the train shall have pulled out the old conditions will return and there will be once more the corpses thrown out day by day from each car.

"November 23—Today we leave for Vladivostok. We have done all that we could do. We have just learned that there are thirty additional cases of typhus in the hospital and heaven knows how many on the train. We have bought buckets and brooms for the cars, which will help a little.

"Later I came down from Nikolsk in a box-car with three American soldiers. It was bitterly cold. We had no stove, but by alternately crouching together and then at times wrestling and mauling each other around we managed to keep fairly warm. We finally reach Vladivostok at about nine forty-five. I am hoping that I may be allowed to go out in Siberia with Dr. Rosett and hunt for other death trains. We may not have accomplished much, but we at least saved a couple hundred lives—for a time. . . ."

If any doubting readers still hesitate to believe that such atrocities have been committed by the reactionary forces to which the United States government has been lending its aid in Siberia, we refer them to the official organ of the Red Cross, the Red Cross Magazine for April, in which appears the full account from which we have quoted the excerpts printed above. There the whole story is told, with photographs; and yet not the whole story, for it is stated in an editorial note that "propriety has demanded the exclusion of much that is unprintable" in Mr. Bukely's damning record of the facts as sent to Red Cross headquarters. . . . We are also indebted to the Red Cross Magazine for this further authentic information concerning the Death Train, which is appended to Mr. Bukely's story.

"Mr. Bukely's prophecy that the death train would still be a death train was fulfilled. As it went on over the Trans-Siberian, first west then east, back and forth, driven from town to town, the miserable news of it kept filtering into Vladivostok. The official reports of the Red Cross commission on December 9, said: 'We had understood that the train of prisoners would be taken about ten miles from Nikolsk, on account of the unrest caused there by its presence, and would be held at this distance where we could keep closely in touch with developments.' On December 6, however, Colonel Emerson, of the Russian railway service corps, telegraphed from Harbin that the train, now with thirty-eight cars of prisoners, had left Titsikar for Chita. Thus we had first information that the so-called train of death was again on the road and was being taken into western Siberia. . . .

"The officers in charge of the train received a telegram not to unload any of the prisoners within the border of Manchuria, but to take them to Chita, and at Harbin the officers were informed that the sick would be taken care of in the hospital at Foveyordie, which is twelve versts (about eight miles) west of Harbin. This was merely a hoax to get the train out of Harbin. . . Our next information was that the train had gone west beyond Chita.

"Another week (Dec. 16). It now appears that after rolling toward the west this train has again been turned and headed toward Vladivostok. . . The train is simply being passed from point to point. . . .

"On and on, days and nights, weeks running into months the wretched company ever dwindling as death takes its cruel and incessant toll."

To this account only one thing needs to be added, and that is a casual sentence from the Associated Press cable dispatch of November 22 to the New York Times: "Other trainloads of human freight in similar straits are now on their way eastward over the Trans-Siberian railroad."

A PREACHER OF CLASS HATRED

Of CLASS HATRED,

I ever heard of.
And yet he didn't wear

Rags or overalls;
He wasn't even one of these
Parlor Bolsheviks.
He would have been amazed
And highly indignant
If anyone had doubted
That he was a most LOYAL

And RESPECTABLE AMERICAN.
Why, he was a COLONEL,
Just back from France,
Where he had been perfecting

Various GASES

To be used against The HUNS;
He was the director

Of the Mellon Institute,

A most estimable citizen.

And he got up before

The CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

In Pittsburgh,

And said to them: "Hereafter

Of CLUBS and REVOLVERS

To disperse MOBS

Of STRIKERS."
And I thought perhaps
He meant some tear-gas

To make the strikers

WEEP
For their SINS.

But a little farther on

I read in horror:

"This TEAR GAS

Is more EFFICIENT

ONE DROP of it

Will be enoughto KILL

TWENTY or THIRTY persons."
Yes, that was what he said
Cool and calm
As a cucumber;
And it was printed
In the Pittsburgh Despatch.
And nobody ever seemed

To think of arresting him

For talking enough CLASS-WAR

I thought of our "mobs"

Of shipyard workers

And I thought of that

Dapper Colonel

And his TEAR-GAS

Bragging of how

He could kill them off

In bunches of thirty,

CURB FREEDOM OF SPEECH

the editor of the Post means, of course, the rule of the masses, which we are supposed to have already in the United States. Under our system of government it is administered by political parties, and those political parties stand for definite social policies. But according to the labor exploiting editor of the Post because, forsooth, some feeble-minded person might perhaps be persuaded to make a fool of himself because he heard some one speak disrespectfully of a federal judge, therefore one must not criticize the federal judge. The editor of the Post specifically mentions Debs' alleged statement that the justices of the supreme court are "bewigged old fossils" and "with every drop of my blood I despise them." The editor suggests that there may be a distinct connection between this remark attributed to Debs and Scott Nearing's recent alleged "denunciation" of the American government andthe "bomb plot" directed against certain government officials. It characterizes such talk as "criminal" and demands speedy laws which will put a stop to it.

The labor exploiting editor of the Washington Star is equally as emphatic that freedom of speech must be curbed instanter if the sacred institutions of labor exploitation are to survive. The Star undertakes to link up the bomb plot with the radicals by the stretched conception that those who are "preaching" radicalism "are not the same as those who are secretly making and mailing bombs. But they are encouraging them, possibly directing them. The assassins are trying to do the work that these bold advocates of revolution are advocating."

Well, the advocacy of Socialism is the advocacy of a revolution for it demands the qusting from power of the capitalist class and the abolition of the capitalist system of production and distribution andthe accession of power by the working class and the establishment of the Socialist system of production and distribution. And that is the revolution which the labor expoliters like the editor and owner of the Star fear. Labor exploiting editor Noyes, who does not even carry the union label in his paper, would deal very, very drastically with those working people who boldly declare that they have the right to own and enjoy the social equivalent of the new wealth they produce and that they are going to undertake to change existing political and industrial institutions in order to guarantee them in the enjoyment of that right. This is the way Editor Noyes would curb the advocacy of such ideas:

"There should be no hesitation in applying the espinago and seditious acts to cause the immediate arrest of those who are thus fomenting radical reaction and the overturn of the government. . . . This menace cannot be fought by indirection. It must be grappled squarely. The privilege of free speech is constantly being abused. The laws are daily being violated in the name of discussion of public questions. Shrewd speakers are inflaming the minds of discontented persons, fanatics who have a distorted view of issues and an absolutely wrong concept of the functions of the state. . . . The war is not over. The laws that were enacted for the protection of the government as war measures are still in force. Seditious talk is punishable. A vigorous policy of suppression and a course of speedy trials and punishments are demanded in the interest of public security."

These two extracts from the Post and the Star indicate the program that the labor exploiters will attempt to drive through the coming congress in order to prolong their system by the wholesale suppression of criticism of the various institutions which support it. Editor Noyes and the rest of this gentry profess to be greatly concerned in the "interest of public security." They mispeak themselves. They are solely interested not in the "security" of the public, for that would mean the working class, but in that peculiar security to the life of an idler and loafer inseparably connected with the ownership the "securities" known as stocks and bonds, which ownership gives them the legal right to deprive the working class of a large portion of the wealth the working class produces. No, it is not the "interest" of public security they are worrying about, but rather the "interest" which the labor exploiter enjoys through his function as a coupon clipper.

When labor exploiting coupon clippers get the United States government to declare as seditious language denouncing their function and the institutions which legalize their privileges to live in idleness on the labor of the working class, then they will indeed have a "democracy" that is worth fighting for. And this is the kind of a "democracy" they are going to ask the coming congress to guarantee them.

philosophy has never comprehended the mighty truth that law—the state

So-Co—May 12—FIVE

—is a mass instrument, a mighty instrument in the hands of the class that wields it, but it is not divisible. They cannot wield it in part who cannot wield the whole. This fact is the basic idea underlying "the dictatorship of the proletariat" as practiced by the Bolshevikists, and the dictatorships that have been wielded by all ruling classes throughout the ages. This fact easily accounts for why industrial unionism has failed, and must fail, as an instrument of emancipation of a subject class so long as the political state remains in the hands of the master class. But this is not saying that industrial unionism is not a valuable instrument to be used in wresting the powers of state out of the hands of the master class. It is.

But Mr. Gompers does not believe in comprehensive industrial unionism. He believes in trades unionism—in collective bargaining. He is a general who leads guerilla charges, and blazes away at massed columns who fight with heavy artillery and gas, armed only with popguns. The warfare he directs has no objective other than a little more beef and cabbage for his followers. To get this, he "bargains" and fraternizes with the enemy, when the enemy will come across, and when it will not he starts a fight, and often loses what beef and cabbage he had before.

Although Mr. Gompers' summary of what constitutes "freedom for American labor" is comprehensive, and measures up to the demands of the most radical and uncompromising, yet the sad fact remains that his program provides no possible means of attaining such an ideal. "Opportunity for all to go on to the finest heights of human development," is a fine and a legitimate ideal. Nothing short of this is satisfying or worthy, and yet the fact remains that so long as the capitalist system of exploitation for the enrichment of the few obtains and dominates the lives of the masses, it is just as impossible to attain that ideal as it is to explore the moon.

And yet we find Mr. Gompers a staunch adherent and a doughty partisan of the capitalist system as he finds it. He calls it "democracy" and rushes to its defense on all occasions. He seems to have a childlike faith that somehow or other the lamb of labor and the lion of capital are twin brothers. When the interest of the lion is menaced, as it is just now by Bolshevikism among the lambs, we see Mr. Gompers rush to the defense of the lion. What would the poor lambs do without the lion to protect them?

In the historic struggle between capital and labor it is amazing to find the commander-in-chief of labor's forces leading the charge on his own lines—but this fact reflects no discredit upon the intelligence of the commander-in-chief of the capitalist forces. I do not love either him or his cause, but I do admit that he is "some general"—I mean, the capitalist general is.

Of course, Mr. Gompers would never admit that he is leading the charge on his own lines. According to his philosophy, "the interest of labor and capital is identical." When capital is menaced, labor is menaced. Just now capitalism is being menaced by Bolshevikism. Unemployment is the breech through which this monster is advancing upon the poor capitalists, in this land of the free. Some folks are so rude as to intimate that this condition of unemployment has been conspired to by the capitalists, themselves, in order to force down wages again. Be this as it may, there is a "Great and Growing Fear—NO WORK." Now, if capitalism should take Mr. Gompers' advice and feed the beast, Bolshevikism, out of existence, it would necessitate re-employment on a colossal scale. This would frustrate capitalism's design, to reduce wages again to the bare subsistance level. If there be no such design, and the present state of unemployment is consequent to market reactions, then to resume production on the colossal scale required would mean enormous losses to the capitalists. The iron law of capitalist production rules that where no profits are to be made, THERE WILL BE NO EMPLOYMENT.

But suppose capitalism does not elect to feed the beast out of existence, but to "stamp it out." Mr. Gompers has promised the support of "American labor" in this crisis, and it is presumable that it will be forthcoming, no matter what program the capitalists select. In the crisis just past, the war, labor was in extraordinary demand at high wages. Labor aided by working like blazes and getting well paid for it. Now it is different. Now labor cannot aid by working, there is little work. Organized labor might aid by turning the jobs over to the "lean and hungry fellows with the "weak minds." This might turn the trick; how would it suit Mr. Gompers? Again, "labor" might aid by standing in solid phalanx as a mighty "moral" force, but it is likely that mere moral and verbal force will be ineffective to move the lean and hungry fellow with the weak mind. He will demand something more substantial—either in his stomach or on his luckless head. If they elect to give him "his" on the cocoanut, will "American labor wield the club? A bill of particulars along this line, from Mr. Gompers, would be mighty interesting reading.

A READER COMMENTS.

Comrades: The letter in the last issue of the O. S. from the young man in which he spoke favorably for religion, interested me. That he thinks is proven by the fact that he is a Socialist. What a sad condition that such as he should have the poison of the preachers poured into him when they have little or no power of resistance. But there is hope for him.

Has he failed to notice how the Christian religion has broken down under the stress of war in all the so-called civilized countries? Has he not seen how mum the ministers are when such grand men as Comrade Debs, such noble women as O'Hare are sent to prison for no moral crime? Nor do they protest against the unspeakable crime of sending the Allied soldiers against Soviet Russia.

I would like to suggest to this young American that he read one of the greatest books, Paine's Age of Reason. Then read Ingersoll and Tichenor of St. Louis.

Read cyclopedia accounts of the Inquisition, Witchcraft Delusion and The Crusades. He will finally learn that no other band of cut-throats weathered the storms of time like the Christion religion or much surpassed it in the magnitude of its crimes.

imprisoned comrade. I suggest that the national office appoint or that the committee elect an official visiting committee, whose duty it shall be to look after the wants, the prison comforts of Debs and all others. In the case of Debs this is of particular importance for there are no loyal Socialists in close proximity to the penitentiary.

Also, the imprisonment of Comrade Debs and Comrade O'Hare presents an opportunity to call for funds to free them. These funds should be used for publicity and organization purposes. One or more pamphlets should be published at once. Leaflets for free distribution should be printed. Posters demanding the freedom of these and all prisoners should be sent all locals to display in headquarters and public places. Organizers should be employed by the national office to tour the country in behalf of better organization and to unify the varying efforts made by locals of the party in behalf of our imprisoned comrades. Unless there is objection, such a campaign will be initiated by the Department of Organization and Propaganda.

Yours in Comradeship,

in relation to the bombs recently mailed to prominent persons:

"It is earnestly to be hoped that the person or persons who are guilty of placing bombs in the mail will be promptly apprehended and placed under restraint. This insane act is doubtless the work of some mentally unbalanced person. In our opinion it is idle to blame it on the so-called radical movement. There is no evidence that the radical movement does that sort of thing. From newspaper dispatches it seems likely that an attempt will be made to fasten the crime upon some one prominent in the radical labor movement—as was attempted in the Mooney case. If any such attempt is made, this Bureau will use every resource at its command to assist the accused in getting a full fair and impartial trial. There must be no second Mooney case."

"Within a week we set up a Soviet. Our old Leonty found out all about it and said to us: 'Well, now that we have come to this point and that we call ourselves Bolsheviks, it is proper that we should destroy and build.' But what? There is nothing to destroy in the village. Then the soldier said: 'If we are communists, we must requisition things. Is there any bourgeoisie in the place?'

"'We beg your pardon,' said we, 'ne have no such thing in the village.' "'Nonsense,' said he, 'you don't know. I'll find them for you. Let me have a talk with the people.'

"We got him sixty men, and they all went to a large village, forty versts away. The next day they came back with the booty: a dozen rich peasants and 10,000 rubles in the czar's money.

"'Look,' says the soldier, 'here is some bourgeoisie for you.' We ask them: 'Is it you?' 'Yes,' they say, 'it's us.' 'Well,' says he, 'be calm. We don't take 10,000 rubles from every one of you.' 'How much do you want?' they say. We move away a bit to talk it over. 'Three thousand,' is our answer. The bourgeoisie naturally start shouting at the top of their voices: 'It's too much. Take two!' saw new hope arise in the breasts of the radical minorities of the Socialist Parties of various countries. It was upon this day that Karl Liebknecht made his famous address in Potsdamer Platz.

May Day of the following year was a day of hope reborn. The Czar had been driven from his throne. The Russian "under dogs" were coming into their own. And best of all, a new, free Russia was holding out the promise of peace to a war-weary world. A year later the Russian situation had changed. A combination capitalist and workers' government had given way to a dictatorship of the proletariat. Workers' rule had been established. A new milestone in the emancipation of the working class had been reached.

Another short year crammed full of important events passed. May Day, 1919, arrived. The clarion call of the wage slaves for a free world was heard around the earth. The world was virtually aflame with May Day demonstrations. The lowly had come into their own in several countries. Working men, women and children had received a taste of freedom from capitalism's chains and the spirit of this freedom was sweeping around the world with lightning speed. From heart to heart, from city to city, from country to country it leaped, gladdening the souls of toil-worn labor in large industrial centers as well as in remote communities.

In Paris on May 1, 1919, the peace conference had to walk and knew not where to eat. The workers of that city ceased work as one man. There was no chuck, chuck of the limousines of the peace conference delegates heard that day. Nor yet the sizzle of palatable viands in the process of cooking. Labor of the city of Paris had decided to rest and rest it did. As usual, the sabers of the hirelings of the ruling class attempted to allay the workers' happiness and turn a peaceful demonstration into riots. However, no matter what happened upon the streets of the city, the wheels of industry in the large city of Paris were at a complete standstill on May 1, 1919, and by that and that alone do we gauge the power of the Paris workers.

In Chicago dozens of mass meetings were held. Thousands of workers refused to labor and many shops had to close their doors for the day. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, a union of thousands of workers engaged in the needle industry, celebrated this May Day by closing every shop in which they were employed. The largest hall in Chicago was engaged for the day and amid speech making, music and dancing, International Labor Day was fittingly celebrated. A few arrests of demonstrators were made by the police for "disorderly conduct." From a capitalist point of view the workers were of course conducting themselves most disorderly—entirely out of order with the prescribed rules of the masters.

A monster parade and meeting was held in Minneapolis, the biggest May Day celebration in the history of the city, writes State Secretary John Dirba. Capitalist newspaper dispatches told of a demonstration 32,000 strong in Detroit, with thousands of union men in line. We take it for granted that the kept press did not lie this time, at any rate, not in our favor. The Boston May first demonstration was interfered with by police and soldiers. In New York a mob of marines, young enlisted men who had not seen service abroad and were spoiling for fight, visited the New York Call building, Rand school and Novy Mir, a Russian Socialist paper, and attempted to wreck these places. In this instance, the police, sworn to maintain order, did make an attempt to do as they were sworn to do, and many of the marines suffered broken heads at the hands of the police force.

The Cleveland story has already been told, but let us again emphasize that the rioting was not started nor carried on by either the thousands of paraders nor the thousands of people lined along the curb watching the May Day demonstration. Orders had gone forth to the Socialist Party branches and labor unions in line that under no circumstances were they to pay any attention to what was said by outsiders along the line of march. No arguments were to be engaged in and every precaution was taken to have a peaceful demonstration.

We dare say that the Chamber of Commerce did not want a peaceful demonstration; Cleveland's industrial lords did not want it; many politicians, capitalism's crumbeaters did not want it. The result was that we did not have it. From evidence gathered from many sources Cleveland Socialists now deduce that the rioting was started by hoodlums and street corner loafers, led in instances by one or two soldiers. Many of the rioters were boys of about 16 and 17 years of age. Many of the older toughs were intoxicated and most of them were undoubtedly paid for their work, and had probably been given a good share of the money in advance with which they bought courage at so much per glass.

The hoodlums seemed to have received a general order from "higher up" which in effect was—"wherever you see red, tear it off." Red is very much in style in ladies' wear at present and because of this, many women not at all in sympathy with the Socialists, many women of the upper class, were roughly handled. Red waists were torn from women; red hats were trampled under-foot by the rowdies; red feathers were plucked out of high-priced headwear; red ribbons were torn from children's hair. Men, whether Socialists or not, lost their neckties even if they only so much as contained a red dot. Age made no difference to the hoodlums. They saw red, and old men and women suffered equally with the young. One well dressed old man, not at all connected with the demonstration, was [illegible] nearly [illegible] had [illegible] to death preached a powerful sermon upon the following Sunday against the inactivity of the police during the rioting. Cleveland Socialists are now distributing thousands of leaflets to the homes of Cleveland, which in strong language, places the blame for the May 1st rioting where it belongs.

In Youngstown the city police put in a full day's work pulling red badges from the coats of Socialists, plucking red roses from buttonholes and making a collection of red ties. A parade of Russian Socialists was dispersed by mounted police. Morris Abrams and Chas. Baker, state organizer, addressed the immense throng from the fire escape at the third story of a building after which the police permitted the opening of Diamond hall and the mass meeting to proceed.

The Ohio May Day demonstrations were exceptionally successful. The State office of the Socialist Party placed more than 25 speakers with as many locals. Other locals and members at large took advantage of the printed speeches sent out by the national office. The weeks preceding May 1st were busy ones in the state office. Hortense Wagenknecht, who is acting temporarily as state secretary, reports orders for literature the best ever received; locals in unusual number entered into the spirit of the day and the demand for speakers was [illegible] large that many [illegible] disappointed.

THE MARTYRDOM OF KATE O'HARE

(By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.)

I sat in the office of the man, the lawyer, who had argued the case of "the United States versus Kate Richards O'Hare" in the high courts of the land.

He is a St. Louis Republican who hates Democrats, and therefore easily and vigorously denounces all the anti-liberty legislation of the Democratic administration at Washington, D. C.

But he shakes his head in sadness and despair when the question of Kate O'Hare's early liberation from Missouri's bastile is brought up and discussed. This isn't because he feels that the Democrats would not like to grant Kate O'Hare a pardon. He feels that they would like to—under certain conditions. Those conditions constitute the unsurmountable barrier.

If the political and industrial class war prisoners of the nation would plead for pardon on bended knees and with deep humiliation, the chances are that they would soon receive their release. This is the same cowardly spirit that would originally have prevented their indictment, conviction and sentence.

This is not the spirit that permeates the soul of a Debs and O'Hare; or any one of the hundreds of other class war prisoners slowly rotting away in America's bastiles, awaiting the day of their deliverance either through the falling of the beneficent hand of death upon their bent shoulders, or through the opening of their prison portals by an aroused and awakened working class.

Kate O'Hare was a former international secretary of the American Socialist Party. When the emergency anti-war convention of the Socialist Party gathered at St. Louis in April, 1917, she received the highest vote for the places of honor on the committee on war and militarism. She therefore became the committee's chairman, and her name appeared first on the report that sent the St. Louis proclamation as it is now known throughout the world, to the convention for discussion and adoption. All this, Kate O'Hare considered as but part of her work in the working class movement.

After the convention she continued her work as a speaker and writer in the Socialist movement. Her activities would not have aroused the forces of government anywhere except in a nation that had surrendered itself to blind prejudice, a consuming jingoism and that paraded its despotism behind a masked hypocrisy consisting of subtle and meaningless phrases.

Kate O'Hare, like so many others, in time became the victim of the Democratic administration's double dealing. She could easily have escaped the consequences had she surrendered her integrity. This she refused to do and she was put on trial in a hostile environment, before a prejudiced judge, under conditions that made conviction sure and a severe sentence certain. She was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for making a speech that would have passed unnoticed in any other civilized land.

There was yet time for surrender. Yet she held true to her cause and its principles in the face of lawyers' advice, in spite of the overwhelming heart tug of her four children, rapidly approaching young womanhood and young manhood. The dark prospect of soon entering a prison hell could have been completely wiped away by a capitulation to the forces of the dominant social order. But there was no capitulation, no surrender, no weakening anywhere. That is why Kate O'Hare is today suffering the prison martyrdom that comes to those who champion the cause of the oppressed and the downtrodden.

If the broad masses of the workers had remained as true to its spokesmen, as spokesmen like Kate O'Hare have remained true to them, then we would have no class war prisoners today. But Kate O'Hare and the others have advanced even beyond the vanguard of their own class. The question that remains is, how long will it take the workers to come to the rescue with an awakened protest and a militant solidarity born of an organized strength that knows no peer.

Forward to the awakening, Comrades! Forward to the realization of the power of our strength when organized! Forward to the early liberation of all political and industrial class war prisoners.

ANTI-SOCIALIST LEGISLATION

brought here by European immigrants, the immigration committees will immediately report out bills prohibiting immigration entirely for a number of years. Johnson of Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, is the most ignorant anti-Socialist bigot in the house. He has seen enough Socialist literature to know that the Socialists propose to abolish the capitalist system of labor exploitation, and true to his desire to live in idleness on the labor of the working class he will recommend any measure which is drafted to keep out foreign-born Socialists. Johnson is also intensely anti-I. W. W. He has seen the profits of the lumber industry in his state threatened because of the incessant demands of the I. W. W. workers for more and more and ever more wages. The house committee will lose no time in reporting immigration prohibition measures.

The senate judiciary committee, using as its basis the lies uttered before the Overman sub-committee in its alleged investigation of bolshevism, is scheduled to report the most drastic anti-Socialist measures under the guise of bills to prohibit the advocacy of the use of violence to overthrow the government. At the present time foreign-language papers cannot be circulated through the mails except by the special permit of the postmaster general, who has strangled many foreign-language Socialist papers because of his charge that they were carrying on propaganda in opposition to the purposes of the government in the prosecution of the war. The judiciary committee will report a measure either prohibiting entirely the publishing of foreign-language papers or will extend the present measure so that the postmaster general can strangle them for being hostile to the labor exploiting purposes of the government in times of peace.

COLUMBIANA COUNTY PICNICS

Just a few lines to let you know about our picnic May 4.

The comrades began to gather at the home of Comrade Zimmerman at Leetonia at an early hour with well-filled baskets. They came from East Liverpool, Youngstown, Salem and many other points.

The musicians were there. They gave many fine selections of music throughout the day.

The comrades enjoyed a fine dinner, prepared by the ladies, which appealed to all appetites by the way it disappeared. After dinner the comrades engaged themselves in discussions of Socialism, Bolshevism and Capitalism, also labor conditions in general.

Then the chairman of the day assumed control of the gathering and proceeded to sell literature to the amount of $4.40 and two O. S. cards.

Among the speakers were Comrades Larimore, Lewellyn, Ellison, Bonsall, Farmer, Leigenthaler, Schriber, Lanpher, Jenkins and a number of others. Comrade Bundy delivered the main address of the day. The collection was $18.51, so I think we had a most delightful day. We sent resolutions to Comrades Debs, O'Hara, Hennessey and others.

a well attended meeting with C. V. Ulrich as the speaker. Akron Socialists and unionists were given gratuitous protection in that a platoon of police led their May Day parade. S. L. Newman of the Machinists union was the principle speaker of the day.

The mayor of Martins Ferry, where Tom Lewis was booked to speak, organized the soldiers several days before the international holiday and no meeting or parade was permitted. The Martins Ferry Socialists gave notice that they would hold their meeting even if they had to have it in a boathouse in the middle of the Ohio river. Socialism in Zanesville was boosted by police interference, Henry J. Hahn being ordered to cease speaking because of trouble started by some tool of the old order. A crowded hall placed the Cincinnati May Day meeting in the list of successes.

SOCIALISTS UPHOLD FREE SPEECH.

It was the Socialists who upheld the right of free speech on May 1st. Many mayors and police chiefs had denied Socialist locals the right to hold meetings on International Labor day, and had done this even though the Socialists never made request for permission. These autocratic ukases issued by our little city czars received no attention, the Socialists declaring that neither a mayor nor a police chief had a right to abrogate the first amendment to the U. S. constitution. In many places demonstrations were held despite the fact that they were forbidden and the result was that the police powers were helpless in the face of the determination of the thousands of demonstrators.

It is now agreed among Socialists that the "nation-wide bomb plot" was staged especially to discourage May Day meetings. This bomb plot was exploded in Chicago when two of the leading newspapers of that city printed exact photographic reproductions of the wrapper and address of the bomb package sent to Judge Landis. That the address was faked was proven when comparison was made between the addresses printed in the two newspapers. Each newspaper insisted that it had an exact photographic reproduction of the address and yet in both instances the address was written with a different typewriter in two different ways, in one the use of capital letters predominating and in the other the reverse being the case.

Hereafter May Day will loom big with promise. With a working class that understands better than it understood before the meaning of pro[illegible] brotherhood, a working [illegible] more desperately

SOME STORIES OF OUR MAY DAY MEETINGS

MONSTER MAY DAY PARADE IN AKRON.

A big demonstration was held here on May Day. The Machinists union and the Molders union, each had a committee of five to make arrangements for a mass meeting. The Socialists were invited by members of these two committees to join with them in a big celebration.

The Socialists accepted and joined in and helped to make the demonstration one of the largest and best that has been held in Akron for many years. The Socialists hired the Barberton Ladies' band for the occasion. The German branch brought along its own band, composed of its own members. When the ladies band saw this volunteer band in line, they dropped out and disappeared from the scene. It was not good unionism for them to march and play with a band that was not paid for its services. Then to cap the climax the molders committee refused to march in the parade because the Socialists were there, with banners which demanded free speech, free press, free assemblage, etc. But what got the goat of the committee of the molders was a banner which read as follows: "We demand amnesty for all political prisoners."

Tom Mooney is a member of the molders' union, but the committee balked at marching with this banner displayed. The Machinists' delegates stood loyally by and showed that this particular union is one of the most militant and progressive unions in existence. They said, go on with the parade and let the molders do what they please.

So away went the parade, down Main, up Howard to Exchange and thence to Perkins Square where over five thousand people gathered to listen to speakers from the Machinists' union and the Socialist Party.

Everything passed off peaceably, but it would only have taken some such fool action as happened in Cleveland on that day to have had the same results in Akron as happened in Cleveland.

During the meeting a declaration of the stand of the Akron workers regarding political and industrial prisoners was adopted by unanimous vote and ordered forwarded to the president of the United States. The resolutions are enclosed and I ask you to publish them to show our readers that Akron workers are alive to the conditions which confront us and stand ready to do their best in the efforts to free those men and women who have been taken from our ranks and lodged behind prison bars.

The Akron local is alive and doing business all the time. We have been somewhat unfortunate in the matter of having a regular correspondent for the Ohio Socialist, so the news of the activity of Akron Socialists has not appeared regularly for some time past.

I can now say that the Socialists of Akron are on the job and hold propaganda meetings every Friday night regular, and many other meetings from time to time. Regular meetings are held on each Friday at 50 South Howard street and all visiting Socialists are cordially invited to look up the place and see what we are doing.

P. B. STROBEL BRAVES OPPOSITION AT MAY DAY DEMONSTRATION IN MT. VERNON.

After repeated refusals by Mt. Vernon papers to publish announcements of the May Day meeting, which was to be addressed by Jos. W. Sharts of Dayton; after the city authorities refused to issue a permit for a meeting on the square, a small audience managed to gather in one of Mt. Vernon's halls to listen to the speaker of the day.

Police were stationed at the hall doors and so far as we can learn, kept many persons who had come to take part in the meeting from entering the hall.

When those who attended the meeting left for home they were egged by a small party of rowdies, encouraged in this action by the business men of the town. P. B. Strobel was compelled to kiss the flag. Just what for he does not know, but suspects it was because thousands of new millionaires had been created since the war started. On his way home a number of these rowdies assaulted Comrade Strobel.

"I have heard from a number of people since this affair and learn that it has raised much resentment in the hearts of the average man and woman," writes Comrade Strobel. "The effect of this rowdyism will be to unite the radical forces of Mt. Vernon and this means a stronger and larger local for this city. Three other citizens were made to kiss the flag and were in other ways abused. This will all react to our benefit."

POLICE CAPITULATE IN YOUNGSTOWN MAY DAY DEMONSTRATION.

A few of the following bits of information may interest the readers of the O. S. At about 1 p. m. 350 of our Russian comrades left East Youngstown and marched over four miles to Youngstown, where they were met by mounted police and told they could not parade "without a permit." All afternoon the Public Square surged with an immense throng, fully 60 per cent being in sympathy with our movement. The balance of the people assembled were armed A. P. L. secret service men, police, soldiers and curiosity seekers. All day and evening the mounted "Cossacks" rode into the people on the Square and even onto the sidewalks. The "protectors of the people," the city police, were busy violating the law by pulling off red ribbons, red roses, red ties, from the persons that happened to be wearing them. Women were encouraged by the police to assault the persons of our women comrades just because they wore crimson waists or ties. Assurance was given through the papers by the police department that the demonstration would not be molested if we carried no red flags, several days before. We carried no flags of any [illegible] but wore ribbons [illegible] words: "Free [illegible] flags." At 7:30 p. m. over 10,000 met on the Square, some to hear the speakers, others, perhaps, to oppose the "Bolsheviki," as the papers gave our meeting front page advertisements, regarding the carrying of "red flags" and the "Bolsheviki" parade.

The newspapers here seem to regret the well behaved demonstration on our part and are denouncing us as "one-cylinder Bolsheviki." Anyway the meeting on the Square was broken up by the city authorities, "who violate the law at will." Comrade Abroms, our city organizer, and Comrade Chas. Baker spoke to the people from a third story fire escape to the surging throng in the Square, and great was the chagrin of the "tools of the Chamber of Commerce." The chief, worsted by this successful ruse, called loudly to Comrade Baker, "Get in there! I'll let 'em in." And 1,200 people rushed into Diamond hall, making it a dramatic occasion. Over 4,000 comrades were left outside sorely disappointed.

Our large halls have been taken away from us by police orders now, but if they imagine they can suppress our complaining voices they are sadly mistaken. "Sooner or later the lid will fly off."

Youngstown has now a stronger radical movement than is generally known in our party circles.

Newspaper stories state that the foreigners were deluded as to why they were asked to quit work on May day and join in the parade. Some foreigners were said to have become incensed at finding out "it was no Liberty bond" parade, etc.

In fact, every reason was given for the behavior of the "foreigners" except the truthful one.

We feel all the stronger in this valley for our May day demonstration, which was our first general celebration. We look with confidence into the needs of the future and we will respond to the support of our principles at instant notice.

Yours,
F. J. CATLIN.

CONNEAUT SOCIALISTS STAND THEIR GROUND.

Our May day celebration here terminated in being the biggest victory that the workers of this city ever won. For three days previous to the meeting the local capitalist papers contained inflaming articles trying to incite people to riot against the meeting. On April 30th the mayor issued a proclamation, suppressing the meeting. Immediately we informed the mayor that the meeting would be held in spite of his proclamation.

The meeting was held as per schedule. Thos. Devine was our speaker. The whole police force, sheriff and about 12 or 15 deputies were there. No trouble occurred and we collected $10.66 defense fund, which will be forwarded to National Office.

ASHTABULA CELEBRATES.

Will you be able to publish a notice in the O. S. to the effect that the May Day and amnesty meeting held under the auspices of the City Central committee Ashtabula Socialist Party, was a decided success.

A few features of the meeting were the fine music furnished by the Finnish Comrades band, the singing by the ladies' quartet and the gymnastics performed by the Athletic club of the Finnish branch.

The speaker, T. J. Lewis, gave the audience a very humorous conception of the trials of the Henry Dubb under Capitalism. His talk was highly appreciated as it was very instructive and many expressed the desire to hear him again.

The collection, sale of books and applications for membership shows that Ashtabula is waking up.

MAY DAY MEETING AT COLUMBUS.

Local Columbus' May Day meeting was held May 5th, with Comrade Scott Nearing as the speaker. Owing to the free advertising in the capitalist press, owing to the unusual difficulties we had to contend with before the meeting, a good audience was on hand.

The meeting was advertised in one paper as a Debs' protest meeting. Both the other daily papers came out with the statement that the Socialists were disloyal and that the authorities would not allow the meeting to be held. We came back at them Sunday morning in the Journal with Nearing's picture and a statement that he would speak on economics. In order to ward off trouble, admittance to the meeting was by tickets only. These were sold by our local members.

Monday the public was again informed by our capitalist press that Safety Director Thatcher had given orders that the meeting was not to be allowed. Nevertheless, we proceeded to gather at the hall on schedule time and when the opening time came the crowd was on hand. When the meeting was about to open, in comes Policeman Gump, who asked for a private interview with those in charge. Comrade Bachman, Nearing and the writer, during the ensuing interview, were told by this strong arm of the law that he would not stand for any berating of the flag nor any abusing of the officials of the government. We assured him that that was not our mission. We stated that if the profiteers of the country cared half as much for the flag as the Socialists did, we would have better times than we have and invited our friend Gump to stay and hear the speech. He did so and acted like a little gentleman, but that was understood before we invited him, so you see he is not what his name would indicate.

Comrade Nearing gave one of the best lectures I ever heard and made it plain that owning a man's job and taking part of what he earns because he owns the job is the same in principle as chattel slavery and the divine right to govern, because one inherits the ownership of the natural resources. He made it so plain that [illegible] Gump could understand it.

Soviet Russia Scores the Peace at Versailles

THE RUSSIAN SOVIET BUREAU HAS ISSUED THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT, DATED MAY 8th.

The peace treaty as published in the papers today, has all the characteristics of old-fashioned diplomacy of "give and take" and of "balance of power." It can not bring peace to the world. It is very eloquent in respect to what it does not say. It studiously avoids the Russian question.

While the rest of the world is being prepared for peace, the Allies seem determined to continue that war against Russia which as never been declared, which not only has not been approved by nations or other countries, but, on the contrary is bitterly opposed, whenever the rank and file of the peoples have an opportunity to express their opinion.

The peace treaty provides that the Brest Litovsk peace treaty be abrogated. The Brest Litovsk treaty has already been abrogated by the Russian Soviet government itself. They were compelled to sign it only because they had no other alternative, and because the Allies refused to aid Soviet Russia against the designs of German imperialism.

The decision of the Allied powers at the peace council to terminate the Brest Litovsk treaty, however, is not only superfluous, but certain other conditions of the new peace treaty, in fact, mean a continuation of the strangling of Russia started by the imperialists at Brest Litovsk.

"German troops at present in territories to the east of the new German-Polish-Russian frontier shall return as soon as the Allied and associated governments deem wise." This, translated in terms of the actual situation means that German troops are to remain on Russian territory to prevent the workers there from asserting their rights to self determination.

"They (the German troops) are in no way to interfere with measures of national defence," says the Russian clause of the peace treaty. This apparently does not mean that they shall not interfere with measures undertaken by the majority of the people in those parts of Russia, namely the workers whose aim is to unite with the Federal Soviet Republic of Soviet Russia. It means on the contrary that they shall aid the small reactionary cliques of aristocrats, who under the guise of Lettish, Lithuanian and Esthonian nationalism are bitterly fighting the Lettish, Lithuanian and Esthonian workers.

President Wilson once said that the attitude which the Allied nations are going to take in respect to Russia is the acid test which will determine the nature of the ideals. The peace treaty presented at Versailles has undergone that acid test and the result is not encouraging to idealism.

The sixth of the fourteen points announced by President Wilson on January 8, 1918, reads as follows:

> "The evacuation of all Russian territory and such settlement af all questions affecting Russia as will secure the best and freest co-operation of the other nations of the world in obtaining for her an unhampered and unembarrassing opportunity for the independent determination of her own political development and national policy and assure her of a sincere welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing."

Nothing of the promises contained in this clause has been kept! There will not be an evacuation of all Rus-

Big Field For American Business in Russia Seen by Consulting Engineer

(From "The Wisconsin News," May 3, 1919.)

The Soviet government of Russia, representing 150,000,000 people, is asking for trade relations with the United States, and is willing and ready to pay cash and give concessions.

This assertion is made by L. I. Bobroff, consulting engineer in the Majestic building, who has returned from New York, where he was in conference with representatives of the Soviets.

"Russia does not need food; she can feed herself," said Mr. Bobroff. "What she is in need of is the finished product; shoes, clothing, tractors, shop equipment and trucks. Tractors are needed for cultivating the land, and motor trucks for transporting the food from the farm to the city until the railroads are extended. Transportation is an important factor in every country, and especially in Russia, where distances are great.

CALL UPON PRESIDENT TO HALT RIOTING

President Wilson was urged to issue a statement against mob violence of the character which marked the celebration of May Day in an open open letter written to him last week by the National Civil Liberties Bureau of 41 Union Square, New York City. The letter which is signed by Albert DeSilver, director of the bureau, after mentioning the happenings throughout the country, calls attention to the dangers inherent in refusing persons who feel themselves aggrieved, the opportunity to assemble and to air their grievances. The letter in full follows:

May 2, 1919.

My Dear Mr. President:

The very grave disturbances which attended the celebration of the International Labor holiday yesterday bear a significance which cannot be passed over lightly. In Boston, in Chicago, in Detroit, in Cleveland—in many other places parades and meetings and other peaceful demonstrations were violently dispersed by mobs and in some cases by the very officers of the law who should have secured the protection guaranteed by our laws to the gatherings. In Cleveland, according to press dispatches, army tanks and motor trucks were used to disperse meetings and parades of Socialists and Labor Unionists and one person was killed and scores wounded in the ensuing riots. In New York City, the police department succeeded in protecting mass meetings in Madison Square Garden from assault by a mob of 3,000 soldiers and sailors, but organized mob violences went on unchecked in other parts of the city—meetings were broken up and men and women brutally beaten by the score. Direct incitement to violence of this character has been current for months and the attention of those in authority has been called to it without avail.

Mr. President, these facts present a grave challenge to our American institutions. Can it be that those who feel themselves aggrieved are not to be ermitted peaceably to assemble and to give voice to their grievances? Can it be that the protection guaranteed by our constitution is not to be shared equally by all?

The growth of such a belief is a direct threat against the orderly pro-

ANTI-SOCIALIST LEGISLATION TO BE GIVEN RIGHT OF WAY AT SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS

The political representatives of the labor exploiters will give anti-Socialist bills the right of way over every other measure when congress meets in special session on May 18.

The alleged plot to send bombs through the mails to men more or less prominent in supporting the capitalist system of wage slavery has increased the zeal for speedy action on the part of the anti-Socialist law makers, and the May Day demonstrations of labor's hostility to the industrial autocracy of the labor exploiters has added to the obsession of the capitalist congress that it is possible to wipe out the industrial unrest with a number of drastic anti-Socialist laws much like those which Bismarck and the Kaiser imposed upon the workers of Germany in the last century when the Socialists there began to show signs of vigorous growth.

There has never been a congress since the establishment of the government of the United States more appropriately endowed to enact repressive legislation against the working people than the one which meets on May 18. At the elections last November the voters defeated every radical and progressive and Socialist with the exception of Berger of Wisconsin and Nolan of California. An attempt will be made to unseat Berger because he is a Socialist.

In their fear at the amazing strides of the Socialist revolutions in Europe and their horror at the thought of the working class of the United States absorbing some of the European revolutionary, class-conscious spirit of the proletariat, the capitalist congress will not hesitate to ride rough shod over constitutional guarantees in their legislative orgy to crush the rising Socialist spirit throughout the land.

Drastic as are the espionage laws now in force, the capitalist junkers now running the legislative branch of the government will not hesitate to re-enact them as peace time measures, but will make them more effective.

Carried away by the hallucination that the present Socialist spirit stirring the workers in the United States is an imported article and is

TERRIBLE STATISTICS

London.—Terrible statistics were given by J. C. Davison, M. P., a former sanitary inspector, in his speech in the House of Commons on the housing bill recently. There were 3,500,000 people in England, he said, who live in less than half a room each; 7,060,000 who have less than a room apiece and 23,000,000 who live in tenements of from one to five rooms. Over 500,000 more houses were required merely to allow for the provision in England of one room per head. These conditions were reflected in the rates of infantile mortality, which, Mr. Davison reminded the house, were as high as 160 per thousand for miners, and 150 to 250 per thousand for unskilled laborers while for doctors it was only 40, and for the middle classes generally only 77 per thousand. Not 400,000 new houses were required as had been stated by those responsible for the bill, but a million, if the present insanitary houses were to be replaced.

"Revolution" Is Cry of French Proletariat

The great Jaures demonstration of March 6th and the decisions taken at the Socialist Party congress of the Federation of the Seine on March 13th, both demonstrated the decided turn to the left which the Socialist Party has taken since its last congress in October, when the party by only a small majority overturned the former conservative majority. More than fifty thousand men and women wearing red sashes, red flowers, and carrying red banners paraded within

THERE IS NO OTHER WAY OUT. We are forced to do it. Truth is, we are now forced to do what we believe should have been done years ago.

WE MUST GET A PRINTING PLANT OF OUR OWN, and we must get it at once. We must make this investment or we may have to give up the OHIO SOCIALIST.

AND NOW READ WHY.

Following the May Day disturbances in Cleveland we were literally thrown upon the street with our weekly paper, the OHIO SOCIALIST. The printer had been threatened by certain powers behind the throne and without so much as giving us time to secure another printer, he demanded that we leave his premises.

Then began the hunt for another printing shop equipped to print our paper. Lo and behold, all large printers in Cleveland, as one man, refused to have anything to do with our powerful and growing OHIO SOCIALIST.

This means but one thing. The ruling class of Cleveland and Ohio have decided to suppress our paper. It proves that the large employing printers have an understanding not to publish for us. It shows that the same powers that paid the hoodlums and rowdies to start a riot at Cleveland Socialists' May Day demonstration have now resolved to stamp out a free press, a press that cannot be bought nor bribed.

Unable to find a printer in Cleveland who would print last week's issue of the OHIO SOCIALIST, we were compelled to hurry all manuscript to the printing plant owned by the Socialists in Dayton, Ohio. This issue was also printed at the printing plant owned by the Dayton comrades. We placed the question of purchasing a printing plant before the Ohio state executive committee and by a majority vote we were instructed to proceed in establishing a printing plant owned by our party.

THIS THEN IS A CALL FOR HELP.

Are we going to allow the OHIO SOCIALIST to be killed? And the answer is—WE ARE NOT! We know that the Socialist press shall not suffer suppression as long as there are sufficient dollars in the pockets of our thousands of readers—for these dollars will fly our way without question or hesitation, once the call goes out for help.

And THIS IS THAT CALL FOR HELP. We call upon every reader of this paper to rush a contribution for a PARTY OWNED PRINTING PLANT to us AT ONCE. Let every one give a dollar or more. Contributions in smaller amounts are, of course, very welcome. But most supporters of the OHIO SOCIALIST can give a dollar, five dollars, ten dollars or more.

And remember, you are not giving the money away. You are putting it to the best use a Socialist better way to into the hands and buy equipm ideals and prin ally secure Indu dom.

It is bad to have a shadow upon the heart; it is worse to have a cloud upon the brain.

In recognizing eternal truth, we approach mighty close to eternal life.

Capitalism is a hopeless body lying upon the ground with both eyes pecked out. Around the carcass a thousand financial vultures are battling for a share.

Superstition is brain rust—a phantom that fastened itself upon primitive man in the cave. Man finally emerged from the cave, but that phantom still occupies the cave of man's intellect.

BIG FIELD FOR AMERICAN BUSINESS

ernment comes from the remnants of the old regime, which seeks the restoration of another czar. I wish the American manufacturer to get the truth of the situation. A New York newspaper printed an article the other day that our goods are barred from Italy, while the goods of the other allies are favored. This will result in all countries if we don't take advantage of the Russian situation and the Russian market.

"The Soviet government is not only ready to pay cash money acceptable to the American business man, but it also is willing to send back here products which we need, such as hides, flax, hemp, furs, lumber, grain, platinum, metals and minerals.

"We have made mistakes regarding Russia in the past, but let us not make one of the most fatal mistakes regarding the Russian market. If we delay and do not extend to Russia the helping hand now, how can we expect her to extend her hand, her market? Our delay will permit Germany or some other nation, England—she is after the Russian market—or even the smaller nations, whichever gets in and gives the Russian Soviets help, will control the Russian market for many years to come. For us to be shut out of the Russian market we cannot afford as a nation.

U. S. LIKED IN RUSSIA.

"Russia needs help and she will get it. No other nation among the allies is so well liked in Russia, as ours. We are in a position to help them and we should.

"I can secure from the Soviet representatives orders for Wisconsin manufacturers amounting from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000, if our government will give us an export license for shipment of goods to Petrograd and allow us to use the cables for the transmission of gold from Russia in payment for the goods.

"Let us not deceive ourselves. We ned the Russian market and need it badly for the solving of our unemployment problem. We must give a job to every man and woman who needs one. Let us go after the Russian market and supply to Russia all the finished and unfinished products the Soviet Russian government needs. Let us not forget that self-preservation is the law of nature and in my opinion the preservation of our own peace lies in the giving of employment to every man and woman who depends on a job for their daily bread. The Russian market will finish the job."

Mr. Bobroff is in negotiation with a number of Milwaukee and Wisconsin manufacturers regarding huge orders for immediate shipment to Russia. He contemplates an early trip himself to the land of the former czar.

SCOTT NEARING'S LECTURETTES

KILLING THE GOOSE.

No wise man will kill the goose that is laying golden eggs. Such direct action hampers production.

The American workers have been the "goose" for many a long day. Golden eggs they have laid, all studded with precious jewels. These eggs have been gathered by the masters until 35,000 of them are rated as millionaires. Still they are dissatisfied. If they were but reasonable, or even decent in their demands, the chances are that the goose would go on laying for a long time to come, but the sight of much wealth has driven them mad. They want more, ever more—though the goose is doing its best. The masters have so far over-reached themselves that they are dangerously near to killing the goose.

Mr. Roger Babson warns them of their folly in a special letter to business men headed—"Bolshevism—Its Cause and Cure."

> "The people are not opposed to property as such. They are rather opposed to the small groups who are not content to control their own property, but who wish to control the property of everybody else. It is well enough to storm against Bolshevism, but such scolding will never prevent its spread. The real cause of Bolshevism, as brought out in the recent governors' and mayors' conference in Washington, is the fact that properties are being operated by small groups for their own benefit, rather than for the benefit of the owners, the employes, or the public. . . .
> "If the lawyers and bankers would only retire from our prominent corporations and seek to have them managed by the real owners and the employes, this Bolshevist craze would soon disappear or would at least be postponed for another generation. If, however, these interests continue to hang on like grim death to such properties, as they are now doing, they will ultimately pull the structure down on their own heads."

Grafters, bourbons, tories, and parasites cannot learn. They are blinded and number by the system that shelters and protests them. History contains a long record of their stupid blunders, and to that list the American ruling class is hastening to add another instance by killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.

CAPITALISM IN MASSACHUSETTS

Massachusetts is one of the leading industrial states of the Union. Her manufacturers are long established. Her commerce is stable. She is rich. How does she treat her workers?

The industries of Masachusetts depend upon the workers for their prosperity. The workers produce all wealth. The Massachusetts industries reward most of them with starvation wages.

Charles F. Gettemy, director of the bureau of statistics of Massachusetts, has just published figures showing the wages paid to adult men by Massachusetts industries in 1917. During that year experts placed the cost of a decent living for a family of five—man, wife and three young children—at $1,350 to $1,500. That year there were 530,890 men employed by the industries of Massachusetts. That year 71,843, or exactly 13.5 per cent of these men received a weekly wage in excess of $1,300 per year. Of the total number of men 9.1 per cent were working for less than $12 per week; 20.8 per cent were being paid wage rates between $12 and $15 per week; while 35.4 per cent were receiving wage rates of $15 to $20 per week. This is the record of exploitation from one of the chief industrial states in the Union.

Capitalism can do as it pleases in Massachusetts. Many of the towns are unorganized; the Socialist Party is weak; the workers, of many nationalities, are lacking in solidarity. Capitalism, free to work its will, does the one thing that it always does in such cases—it pays wages upon which workers, with their wives and children, suffer, and starve, and die.

BANK CLERKS UNITE.

The Wall Street Journal, in an article on bank clerks' wages, notes that the underlings in the financial world are among the worst paid and the most responsible of any people doing clerical work. The temptations to dishonesty under the circumstances are almost overwhelming.

Such a scandalous situation cries aloud for remedy. The Journal has an answer, "Our banks make large profits, and proudly point to the increased surplus for the year and the additions to capital account. But some day some one with a little brains, with his heart and courage in both hands, will unionize the bank clerks, the tellers and even the cashiers, and they will have a constructive interest in the well-advertised undivided surplus. This is not Bolshevism; it is plain common sense addressed to business men, and in the interests of those who, with industry and application, will be our bankers and business men of the future."

That is plain common sense. It is the kind of thing that Tom Mooney and Eugene V. Debs have been saying all their lives. It is a fact that any intelligent worker in the modern industrial world cannot fail to recognize.

"Bank clerks, and all others workers of the world, unite!"

For once, we join voices with the Wall Street Journal, shouting in unison.

A GROWING DANGER.

The committee on tariffs and taxation of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers announces a new menace to the well being of the people of the United States. Japan is developing cotton manufacturing to an extent that threatens to cut under American competition. It is, therefore, necessary, for the United States to come back with some kind of economic retaliation.

Japan "promises at no distant date to become a serious competitor of American mills, not only in foreign fields, but in our home markets." The ways and means committee of the house will, therefore, be asked to see that "the interests of the textile industry" are properly safeguarded.

Japanese manufacturers are threatening American profits. Trade rivalries breed trade wars. Trade wars lead to military conflicts. Here is a growing danger for the people of the United States as well as for the cotton manufacturing industry.

WHAT WILL YOU DO THEN?

Industry is slowing down. Unemployment is increasing. Tens of thousands of soldiers are being demobilized each month. There are less jobs to be had inside the gate and there is a longer line outside waiting for jobs.

Your wages are good; your union is strong; but some day, when you get your envelope, you will be told—"no work for you after this week!"

What will you do then?

High wages will not help you. The union will be impotent.

You will be out of a job, and you will stay out of a job, until you can find another boss willing to hire you. The machine, on which you work, will stand there idle; your landlord will demand the rent; the children will ask for bread and you will have none to give.

You will understand, on that bitter day, that you will never be a free man until you own the machine beside which you work and the product that you create. Workers, you make the world. It is yours. Take it and be free.

THE HIGHER THE FEWER.

There are more than one hundred millions of people in the United States. The last complete returns from the treasury department (1916) show that less than 500,000 of these persons paid income taxes.

121,691 had incomes over $	10,000
17,085 had incomes over	50,000
6,633 had incomes over	100,000
582 had incomes over	500,000
206 had incomes over	1,000,000

The higher the fewer.

Among the families of the tens of millions upon whose tiny incomes no tax was assessed, men, women and even little children rose by the factory whistle and gave the best part of their days and the best part of their lives to the work of feeding, clothing, housing and in other ways providing for the human race. The whole family, by its labor gained a bare subsistance.

Among the families with five and ten thousand a year, the men went to the offices; the women remained in their homes; the children attended school. The incomes were adequate and they were earned by the father alone.

Among the families with fifty, a hundred and five hundred thousand, sometimes one member worked; sometimes no one worked. The figures show that from two-thirds to ninety-nine hundredths of these incomes consisted of rent, interest, dividends and profits—the return paid by those who own the tools, with which the men, women and children of the toilers must work in order to live.

Among the toilers, the whole family works and often starves. Among the wealthy owners frequently no one works—yet all live in abundance.

The higher the fewer.

This crazy, economic patchwork is the foundation of the "civilization" about which we hear so much from the Chicago Tribune and the New York Times. It is the handiwork of parasites and plunderers. Day after day it cries aloud to heaven for mechanics and artisans who will take it in hand and rebuild it from the bottom.

THEY CANNOT RESUME!

The wheels of industry have stopped turning in Europe. For the present, at least, they cannot resume.

The European world is at a standstill. Ten millions of men still are in the armies—using without producing. Commerce has been interrupted; railroads have been destroyed; factories are crippled; fruit trees have been cut down; the seed grain has been eaten; homes have been burned; millions of workers are out of work; those who have work are so hungry that they are no longer efficient; above their heads tower mountains of debts, and week by week slips by without any promise of peace.

The old world has come to an end. Its machinery is worn out; its methods have failed to make men happy and free; its race has been run.

Yonder is the new world. A world of bread, peace, enlightenment and liberty. Already the peoples of Russia, Hungary and Bohemia have entered in to possess it. How much longer will it be before the workers of Italy, France and Great Britain leave capitalism to bury its dead and join their comrades?

EXPORTS.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, said in a public interview on March 21st, "If the other lines of industry show the same industry, as they undoubtedly will, we have nothing but an era of wonderful prosperity ahead of us."

The Judge and the other prophets of coming prosperity base their predictions on the outlook for exports. "Our enormous export trade for January and February," writes one such authority, "record breaking though it is, is sure to continue to grow by leaps and bounds."

The exports of the United States have been higher during the past eight months than ever before in the history of American commerce. The total for the current fiscal year will be around 6½ billions. For January alone the export total was over 622 millions. These records are high, but unless another war breaks out in Europe they will fall off heavily during the next six months.

Note how the exports are divided. Asia and South America together received a little over 13 per cent of the total exports. Nearly one-third of the exports were to Great Britain, while Belgium, France and Italy received a quarter of the exports. Great Britain has already established an embargo on the importation of certain foreign manufactures. Belgium, France and Italy are borrowing money from the United States with which to pay for the goods that they purchase. None of these countries is at the present time on a sound credit basis. They can continue to buy from us while we continue to lend to them.

Within six months the American Army of Occupation will probably have returned to American soil. The British embargo will have cut off hundreds of millions of American exports. Belgium, France and Italy will no longer be borrowing from the United States. All of the commercial nations of Europe will be competing bitterly with America for the markets of Asia, South America, Africa and Australia. Prosperity cannot be built on exports in any case. Still less can it be founded on exports to a shrinking foreign market.

planations and excuses the following day as to why the meeting was permitted. One reason given was that on account of the fact that tickets were sold, no law could be found to prevent it, as no law was violated. Director Thatcher apparently did not know that, but he is a Democrat and might be excused on these grounds. But Chief Carter is not a Democrat, so might be expected to know something, and he permitted the meeting to be held

Anyway, the Socialists got a lot of free advertising through the ignorance of some one who is supposed to know something and does not.

Clifford and Ruthenberg Charged with Assault to Kill

Tom Clifford and C. E. Ruthenberg were arrested on Wednesday and charged with "assault with intent to kill" on two policemen who were injured in the Cleveland May Day riots resulting from the attack upon the Socialist procession by the organized gangsters and hoodlums aided by the police.

It is not charged that Ruthenberg or Clifford personally attacked the policemen. J. J. Fried is charged with the attack on one of the policemen, and an unknown person called John Doe with the attack upon the other. Clifford and Ruthenberg are dragged into the matter on the theory that speeches made by them induced persons to participate in the May Day parade.

These charges indicate to what length the ruling class is willing to go in the fight against the workers. Every person who witnessed last Thursday's fighting in the down town streets knows that it was not the Socialists who precipitated the fighting. They merely defended themselves when they found that there were no police to protect them. Yet now an attempt is being made to railroad Clifford and Ruthenberg on trumped up charges, in a similar manner to the way Mooney was railroaded to prison in the San Francisco preparedness parade bomb cases.

Both men have been released on bail. The first hearing will come up on May 20. In addition to local attorneys Seymour Stedman of Chicago has been retained to fight the cases.

SOVIET RUSSIA SCORES THE PEACE

sian territory. There will be no "co-operation of the other nations in the world in obtaining for Russia an unhampered and unembarrassed opportunity for an independent determination of her own political development and national policy." The very mentioning of this promise in view of the actual policy of the Allies toward Russia is a bloody irony. Not only do the other nations refuse to co-operate with Russia, but they deliberately destroy supplies owned by the Russian people. They refuse to allow any goods to enter Soviet Russia—goods which Soviet Russia is willing to buy with cash and to transport at her own cost. The only thing which the Allies permit to enter Soviet Russia is weapons of murder, supplied to those little groups of reactionaries who want once more to enslave the Russian people. In place of bread the Russian people get bullets, in place of co-operation, the Rusian workers are being hampered and harrassed in their heroic efforts to re-establish their economic life. In place of an "unembarrassed opportunity for the independent determination of her own development" and a "welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing," the Allies seem to be ready to continue their illegal warfare against Russia, for one purpose only—in order to impose upon the Russian people institutions which are not of their own choosing.

The rest of the world shall have peace. So the conference at Versailles decrees. But not Russia! The murderous henchmen of German imperialism, who have not changed although they have put on themselves the guise of socalled democracy, are found good enough to be officially received at Versailles. The peace treaty finds it necessary to protect or at least to pretend to protect their most vital economic needs. The German prisoners are to be returned. Trade is to be resumed with the German empire. But Soviet Russia, millions of whose sons have fallen in a struggle into which they were led by the Czar for the furtherance of policies which now victoriously determine peace policies in Paris—she shall not only be left more isolated from the world than Imperial Germany ever was, but she will have to continue to defend herself against renewed attacks. Russian prisoners of war are still kept in Germany, and in France; thousands of Russian soldiers not only are being prevented from returning home but they have been sent by the hundreds to slavery and death in Africa, only because they dared to express their sympathy toward the aspirations of the workers in Russia.

There seems to be not a scintilla of justice and common sense left when the attitude of the Allied governments toward Soviet Russia is being determined. It is being announced today that armies of occupation are to be withdrawn from Germany by August 31st. Simultaneously it is being announced that thousands of new troops are to be sent to Siberia. Shiploads of munitions are also being sent there. Bullets in place of bread! Hatred in place of friendship! Imposing of hateful institutions on the Russian masses—in the place of a "sincere welcome under institutions of their own choosing."

It has been said repeatedly that there can be no world peace if there is no peace with Russia. It offers war and new sufferings.

Soviet Russia stands ready today, as she has been many times before, to make a peace with all other nations. She has offered repeatedly to make such a peace. Yet—while the representatives of German imperialism are received in gala at the assembly at Versailles the Russian masses have not even received a reply to their oft repeated peace offers.

AMERICAN DEPORTEES NOT WANTED.

Sydney.—No sooner was word received in Australia that the American government was carrying out a series of deportations of I. W. W. men and other radical unionists, than the anti-labor Commonwealth Government gazetted a regulation preventing any person from landing in Australia without a passport, whether as a passenger or as a member of a crew of any vessel. Included in the regulation is power given to the military to apprehend any person or member of ship crew who deserts and has no passport, and any person who it is thought is likely to desert a ship, and arrange for their deportation from Australia. The idea is to prevent any person deported from another country from landing in Australia.

WANT SOCIALISM TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS.

Australian labor folk are demanding that the education of deaf, dumb, and blind children be free and compulsory, that present methods of education be abolished and working-class economics and socialism be taught in the schools, as well as the teaching of love of humanity and abhorrence of war, the teaching of industrial history instead of present history curriculum, the abolition of teaching of dead languages, the adoption of metric weights and measures, the teaching of common law, and that school text books deal with social conditions as they exist today and what they would be like under labor ideals.

WORKERS WIN TRAMWAY STRIKE.

After a strike of eight weeks, the Perth (Western Australia) tramway men have won a great victory. Perfect solidarity was sustained, and not a wheel turned on the street railways. The men, on the conclusion of their fight marched back to the barns singing "The Red Flag" and other labor songs, carrying banners through the streets. Prior to the strike they were the worst paid street-car workers in Australia—today they are the best-paid. Besides increases in wages, there is no victimization, the union has a say in the arrangements connected with running the service which gives the union the power to compel every man to be a unionist, workers travel to and from work free of charge, special late trams at night be run to the point nearest their homes. In addition they get holidays after every 12 months of servi

ARE WE AT WAR WITH BABIES?

We have kept silect too long. It is time that the press and pulpit of this country should shout it forth, until it rings in the ears of those diplomats over in Paris.

What are the preachers of Chist in this country thinking of that they have not opened their mouths to call down the curse of a just God on those who are starving women and children? Are we at war with babies—even German and Russian babies?

We bother over this and that detail of nationality and boundary-line. In this we are all of us guilty. As Alfred Noyes wrote once in a biting poem:

> "And if, at a touch of a silver bell
> They plunge a nation into hell
> The blood of peasants is not red
> A thousand miles away."

No, the pinched faces of children and old women are not real to us, as we sit here in our well-fed Northwest. Nowhere else, on the wide world today, have people the food that we have. But occasionally we read statements like these, to jar us from our complacency:

"I ate at a big public soup-kitchen in Berlin. One plate of noodle soup. * * * There were so many old women, gray-haired and dressed in threadbare clothes at my table. Their faces were so white and thin, and their cheeks so hollow. * * * There were lots of boys and girls too. * * * In no time at all the plates were empty and the children were looking astonished at the empty dishes and wondering what had become of all that soup."

The man who wrote this had had a good breakfast and looked forward to a good dinner. But the 300,000 people of Berlin who were being fed thus, looked forward to no supper and no breakfast. Babies are being born in Berlin after ten months, instead of after the customary nine months, because the mothers are too starved to bring children normally at birth. Medical journals say that a whole generation of children is growing up wrecked in health to poison the future of a race.

The article that tells of this starvation closes with the words: "And so the mothers and children of Germany expiate the crimes of Imperial Germany." Have done with this hypocrisy! The Kaiser is not starving these women and children. It is we and our Allies who are starving them. They suffer for our sins, not for the sins of their rulers.

Their rulers are gone. If we, usurping the place of the Almighty, presume now to deal forth life or death at our own good pleasure, if we choose that women and babies shall starve while we decide how much money can be wrung from the broken bodies of these victims, let us not pose behind the hideous pretense that we are executing Justice. We are executing nothing but our own brutal will, and putting ourselves in the class of the hated oppressors of the world whom we went forth to conquer.—Seattle Union Record.

"A REASONABLY DECENT LIVING."

The conservatism of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen is made evident in the address of its Grand President W. G. Lee, at the convention of that body at Columbus last week. To quote Mr. Lee: "We believe in the expressions of our president and all the other authorities of the government who have declared emphatically their belief that the American workman is entitled to a wage that will ensure a reasonably decent standard of living."

How modest, "a reasonably decent standard of living." It is astonishing how conservative the well paid officials of some labor unions become after years of fat feeding at the union trough. To dare to speak of a decent standard of living for the producer of all wealth is to add insult to injury. The insufferable effrontery of labor's misleaders is a phenomenon of these times.

While the railway workers of Great Britain are joining with the miners and other transport workers in a gigantic combination of labor for the purpose of exercising a greater control of the government with the avowed purpose of reducing the hours of labor and raising the standard of living of the workers to the highest possible point this apologist "believes" the American worker is entitled to a "reasonably decent standard of living."

One might be persuaded that according to Mr. Lee, there are two standards of "decent" living, one "reasonable" the other unreasonable. If the American workers' standard of living is one of decency then what are we to think of the standard of living of the exploiters of American workers who get the cream of the product of his toil?

Speaking of the reconstruction program offered by the American Bishops of the Catholic Church, Frank P. Walsh says, "The workers are grateful for any sign that those in high places are heeding their call for justice." To which we add that the less confidence the workers place in such signs the better they will be off, for justice comes not from above but from below.

Press dispatches state that President Wilson's next message to congress will consist of but a few hundred words—we express our thanks.

All government, says Mr. Wilson, is based upon force. Governor Cox says that if there is any physical manifestation of that force (to correct evils in the government) he will take care of it. And we think he will have a big job if such a manifestation does occur.

AVAILABLE SPEAKERS

Here is a revised list of speakers upon whom the locals may call. Terms are five dollars and expenses. Other names of qualified speakers will be added from time to time. Comrades who feel that their services are useful to the party upon the platform are requested to secure the endorsement of their locals before making application to be placed upon the Available Speakers List. Locals should make application for the speaker nearest them to save expenses.

HAS YOUR LOCAL DONE BETTER?

"You will find enclosed $7.00 for Industrial Freedom Certificates. This makes 24 this local has sold." Thus writes Comrade Rex Wolfe, secretary of Local Midvale. Considering that this local is one of our smaller ones, we think the comrades have done their full share in the purchase of these certificates.

"At a meeting held May 1st, Local New Bremen, by unanimous vote, indorsed the Left Wing Manifesto and Program as published in Revolutionary Age."—Walter Conradi, Acting Secretary.

CAMBRIDGE PLANS EDUCATIONAL DRIVE.

Comrade L. B. Skinner, secretary of Local Cambridge, writes that the Local is entering upon an extensive educational campaign by means of a city wide distribution of leaflets and papers each week. This is to be followed out for several months and then intensive organization work will be taken up. Success will follow this method and the Cambridge comrades are to be congratulated upon their energetic manner in which they have entered upon this work. It pays to keep at it. If you don't believe it, ask a Cambridge comrade.

THIS RED ARMY MAN COULDN'T THINK OF STOPPING!

"You said Red Letter Day and sent two subscription cards, which were not enough, for I put into action my 250 centimeter howitzer, took good aim at five dissatisfied Cleveland Plain Dealer perusers, went over the top and bagged all five. Hope these five will put the finishing touch on that 5,000."—H. F. Siedslog, Akron.

COMRADE F. N. PREVEY ANSWERS CAPITALISTS' RIOTERS.

A fitting answer to the instigators of the riots against the Socialists of Cleveland on May 1st is to hand from Comrade F. N. Prevey of Akron. The answer consists of $25 for subscriptions for the Ohio Socialist. Comrade Prevey shows the spirit that is felt throughout the nation which has been stirred up amongst the people by this latest assault upon law-abiding workers. It is the spirit that makes socialism grow in spite of all the deviltry of which our enemies, the capitalist class, is capable. Every knock is a boost, every assault upon the workers but creates a stronger sentiment for socialism. Comrades are requested to make a mental note of this answer of Comrade Prevey's to the enemy and to make every effort for the furthering of our cause to the end that murder may not again be committed upon our comrades and fellow workers. Follow his example.

VISIT HENNACY.

Comrade A. A. Hennacy, who just finished serving a prison sentence of three years in the Atlanta penitentiary, is now incarcerated in the county jail at Delaware, Ohio. He is now serving a term of one year for refusing to register.

Comrades living in the vicinity of Delaware are requested to visit Comrade Hennacy often. Comrade Hennacy is permitted any number of letters as well as candies, fruits and other comforts. Visitors from other cities will be permitted to see him at any time. Party members may mail packages containing prison comforts to Comrade Hennacy.

SOCIALISTS CELEBRATE INTERNATIONAL LABOR DAY AT NORFOLK, VA.

The largest and most enthusiastic Socialist meeting that has been held in that city for many years was held by the Socialist Party at Norfolk, Va., on May 1st. Despite the inclement weather and the bomb plot scare several hundred attended the meeting and enjoyed the orchestra music, the talk by Comrade Lowe and the addresses by Debs and others which were read. A resolution demanding the release of all political prisoners was adopted and ordered published.

THIS LETTER MAKES US FEEL GOOD.

Dear Comrades: Your sample copy at hand. I want to thank you for it, and glad am I to see a true, red-blooded, straightforward Socialist paper still in the land. I have read your matter on Debs, and I cannot find words to express my indignation, not only for the treatment of that "Noblest Roman of them all," but for the other 1,500 or 2,000 victims of an assinine democracy that would jail Christ were he here in the flesh.

There is but one thing to do, comrades: make Debs our standard-bearer again next year, and if they are fools enough to keep him in jail that long we will elect him president in spite of h— and high water. Kate Richards O'Hare would make an A-1 vice president.

Let us go into this next election hammer and tongs, and there will be some "high-class" profiteers and manglers of the constitution that will wish they hadn't.

Let us do all and everything "perfectly legal and according to law." But let us do it. Let us call a general strike on those political parties that hand out such doses to labor.

Fraternally,
SUMNER W. ROSE,
Biloxi, Miss.

Local Zanesville desires to be known as favoring the Left Wing Manifesto and Program as published in Revolutionary Age.

MAY 1 AT BELLAIRE.

A good program, a good crowd and a street car workers' strike is what Comrade Fred Walchli reports for May 1st at Bellaire. Comrade Lilith Martin was the speaker at this city.

HE HELPS IT TO COME.

"Enclosed please find five dollars for which send as many copies as this will pay for one year. I am mad as hell about the May Day performances in Cleveland and other places, but our day is surely coming.—C. M. Johnson, Sharon Center, O.

HARVESTING AT CANTON.

Eight applications for membership are part of the results of the May 1st meeting at Canton, reports Comrade Ernest Sykes. A very enthusiastic meeting was held in spite of inclement weather.

"It affords me great pleasure to inform you that Local Hamilton, at our last meeting adopted the Left Wing unanimously. Am more than pleased with Local Hamilton and am satisfied we are getting closer together every day."—Wm. Feighery, Corresponding Secretary.

FARMERS COMING TO SOCIALISM.

The farmers, wirtes Comrade D. A. Pepple of Rossburg, are turning radical and judging from their conversation are breaking away from the old parties and coming over to the Socialist party. He writes that the last six months have wrought a great change in the minds of the farmer class and the common people. The farmers, he says, will shoot the ruling class with their ballots.

EMPLOYERS' EXAMPLE TEACHES CLASS-CONSCIOUSNESS.

For gathering Ohio Socialist subscriptions among his shop mates, Comrade Frank Centliver of Troy was released from his connection with his bosses' job. Nevertheless he is still at it, as his recent letter containing two more testifies. Right here we wish to express our appreciation of Comrade Centliver's good work for the O. S. It's hard to kill a real RED by starvation.

THIS IS THE WAY TO FIGHT.

"The intellectual degenerates of Mt. Vernon," writes Comrade P. B. Strobel, "have passed a city ordinance against the carrying of the red flag." To counteract this the Socialist local has organized a study class in scientific socialism. Can you beat it? No, you can't. Education of the workers is the only way to beat the misinforming game of capitalism.

LOCAL NILES RANKS HIGH.

Eighty-four dollars were received this week at the State Office from Comrade Edwin Peterson, secretary of Local Niles, for Industrial Freedom Certificates. This large sale of these certificates makes Local Niles rank among the highest.

Other locals are still remitting for certificates. Recently Local Warren sent in seven dollars. Many individuals are also paying for certificates. Why not ask your local secretary for one, if by chance you have not yet bought one? They help free our comrades who are in prison. Buy one.

TO KEEP UP THE SUPPLY.

"I am sending you these twelve subs, because all the Bolshevists are to be driven out of Toledo, if the mayor and our eminent divines in the pulpit have their way." Thus writes Comrade A. W. Haritt. He adds that the local Council of Soldiers and Sailors have about five hundred members and more are coming in every day.

Virginia Comrades:

Again we meet. Holy gee, how time does fly! We are one month nearer what—freedom or bondage? Be assured that the game that is to give us the one or the other is on and soon the play will be fast and furious. The fate that is to decide the destiny of the world throughout the next thousand years or so, is now in the dice box, and is being shaken furiously. Both master and slave realize that this is the last desperate throw, "7 come 11," who is the dice loaded for? If the slave wins, mastery will disappear from the earth, and with it slavery. Then all will be given opportunity to go on to "the finest heights of human development" in a world where justice and equity reign supreme and want is no more—the "kingdom of heaven upon earth," for which Jesus of Nazareth martyred himself in vain two thousand years ago. If the master wins, then well may the slave cower. The lash of want will hiss upon his luckless back, with no hand near that dare be lifted to stay it.

The Titans are fighting to the death. Abject mastery is to be the reward of victory. The new epoch is to be an unmixed epoch. The world has reached the point where it can no longer exist "half slave and half free." We are now living in either the dawn or the twilight, which? If it be the dawn, soon will the glorious light of day flood a stricken world, and liberty and justice stalk forth with none to make them afraid. If it be twilight, then soon will the black night settle down, and the beasts of night stalk forth to rave.

Human progress has been by epochs or ages. Isolated tribes of men in widely remote parts of the earth, as they ascended from stage to stage, passed through identical phases of development. Each age was characterized by peculiar tools and peculiar social usages. The stone age developed in America was precisely similar in all its characteristics to the stone age developed in Europe or Asia, separated by thousands of miles of ocean. The time might have been widely apart,

Although nature has these periods all charted out ahead, yet it seems to be the law of progress that the transition stage from one to the next is always marked by commotion and travail. Although the mighty forces of nature are at work, yet it must be remembered that these work through human agency. Just how responsive is the human increment will condition how fast, and in what manner will be ushered in the new order. Time, to great nature, is of no consequence. A thousand years are as a day. An accident, a trick of fate, or a humanity yet too inert, might delay the birth-date for a thousand years. But in the end we know for a certainty that this damn'd and doomed system must and will pass.

I have not said this to discourage you, but to warn you how much may depend upon your own action. Do not depend upon great nature to do the trick alone. She works, but SHE WORKS THROUGH YOU. And when you lay down on the job, nature waits. The accident, and trick of fate factor, the loaded dice, we cannot calculate with. They are inscrutable, but they exist. To illustrate: Suppose that a Lenine had not been at hand in Russia, or that one of the many imperial-anarchist missiles had laid him low, and that the leadership in the Russian revolution had remained lodged with the Kerensky's, does any one doubt that the revolution would finally have been lost to Bourgeoisie Imperialism, perhaps to Autocracy? Then does any one doubt that with Russia subdued all hope would be vain for a world-wide awakening, at least for a long time? MORAL: Many diverging factors enter into the sum-total of human progress. We cannot determine which is to be the most important, but we can do our duty as we see it.

Local Roanoke turns up as punctually and methodically as soldiers at drill. When the "Spirit of the Red Devil" gets there and starts something he will find a well trained bunch of assistants, and the trail well salted down with sawdust.

Pretty soon the red spirit is going to start something at Danville. When he gets going there he will makes the plutes rub their eyes. The place is chuck full of sinners economically damn'd, and when they begin hitting the sawdust trail—

this comes natural to them, perhaps, as there are many of them electricians by trade. Norfolk is in the throes of a big revival. "The spirit of the Red Devil" is moving mightily upon the hearts (is it heads-) of men and many there be who are repenting their economic and political sins. More power to the spirit.

Again Comrade Edson of Norfolk turns up with a donation and a letter chuck full of kindness and encouragement. May his tribe increase.

Comrade McBrayer is a coal miner. We are losing him because the coal barons are working slack in the Virginia fields, and he is forced to move out to better his condition. Say, you don't suppose this means cheap coal next winter, do you?

First man to the bat with a ballot in the party election is Comrade Fadely of Mt. Jackson—no I shall not tell you how he voted—darn'd if I do.

Say, if you hear an ignorant cuckoo cussing out the Bolsheviks, just ask him for a bill of particulars on what these Bolsheviks really do stand for, aside from murder, free-love, atheism and a few other things, all of which they do

Have You Voted?

Referendums for the election of three members for the national executive committee from this district; the election of four international delegates and one international secretary and the question of holding an emergency national convention this year are now before the state membership.

Go to the next meeting of your local or branch AND VOTE. As a member of the Socialist Party you are obliged to assist in conducting it. You only then do your full duty toward the party when you take an active part in all organization affairs.

Vote upon the referendums now before the party membership by getting a ballot at the next local meeting.

LOCAL SECRETARIES ATTENTION!

If you do not wish the vote of your entire local thrown out, you will have to mail the result of the vote in your local, in tabulated form, to the state office before May 21st. This notice pertains to national referendums "B" and "C."

For, you see, although a soldier, he is still a stranger, while Leonty is our own man. They kept us waiting for quite a bit of time. At last they came back with a queer sort of an affair, and there were four strangers with them. 'Who are these people?' ''Lectricians.' 'All right!' we say, 'call them what you please,' provided they do the work.'

"They got out the machine from the box. It was sure a funny sort of a machine, like nothing we say. Nevertheless, it was clear that it was well worth its price. The 'lectricians got busy. "'It would be fine,' we said to him then, 'if every one had such a little lamp in his izba.' 'It's easy enough,' was his reply. And he fixed up lamps in every house. VICTOR BERGER, SOCIALIST CONGRESSMAN, DENIED SEAT IN CONGRESS

"PENDING INQUIRY"

Socialist Veteran's Second Entry Into National Legislature Marked By Denial of Seat Until Anti-Socialist Politicians Judge Him "Pure and Undefiled" in Patriotism.

The capitalist conspiracy to unseat Victor Berger, in the the new national congress is under way. Having been unable to get the Socialist representative from the Fifth Wisconsin district behind the bars of prison before congress convened, it lost no time to unseat him as soon after as possible.

That the political henchmen of the capitalist class would leave no stone unturned to keep the duly elected representatives of the working class out of congress was to be expected. The workers are to be denied representation in the national congress if the political lackeys of capitalism can put it across. They have taken a method of keeping him inactive for the present by denying him his rightful seat by ruling against his being seated "pending an inquiry into his conviction under the espionage act.

"The voters of the Fifth Wisconsin district elected me to represent them in congress by the emphatic majority of 5,560 votes over Joseph P. Carney, Democrat. Seventeen thousand eight hundred and twenty-two electors voted for me, and 12,315 voted for Carney. I am therefore the regularly elected representative from that district. The government of the United States as outlined in the Constitution is a representative government. If the members of the house of representatives still believe in representative government and the integrity of the Constitution, they will raise no objection to my taking my seat with the mandate from the duly qualified voters of the Fifth Wisconsin district. If the members of the house of representatives unseat me, the voters of the Fifth Wisconsin district will re-elect me, and with an emphatic majority, just as soon as the special election is called."

Victor L. Berger, Socialist congressman from Milwaukee, Wiscinsin, made this straight-American declaration today to the representative of the Ohio Socialist regarding the bluster and the impertinence with which certain anti-Socialist congressmen have expressing their determination to reflect the demands

Clifford and Ruthenberg Held For Grand Jury Indictment

The powers that be in Cleveland, having themselves caused violence and bloodshed in the streets of the city by their savage attack upon the Socialist May Day demonstration, are going to try to saddle the blame for their acts upon Socialists.

This was disclosed in the hearing held Tuesday in Judge Howell's court, as a result of which C. E. Ruthenberg and Tom Clifford, together with J. J. Fried, were bound over to the grand jury.

Evidence submitted before Howells attempted to prove that J. J. Fried had struck an officer with his fist. Although Attorney Horace Neff, representing Fried, pointed out that striking a man with a fist could not conceivably constitute an assault with intent to kill and at most, if proven, would constitute assault and battery only, still the charge of assault with intent to kill was allowed to stand by Judge Howells and Fried was bound over on that charge.

The prosecution did not attempt to prove that Ruthenberg and Clifford had struck any one or had any part in the violence on May Day. One of the witnesses for the prosecution, a member of the Loyal American League, testified to the reverse, that he had seen others assaulting Tom Clifford.

The only evidence offered by the prosecution in regard to Clifford and Ruthenberg, was an alleged quotation from a speech by Tom Clifford in which he was charged with saying that "if the capitalists start anything May Day, we will finish it," and a quotation from another speech in which he is said to have said that Socialists would be willing, if need be, to give up their lives for their cause.

In regard to Ruthenberg, the only thing offered was a quotation from

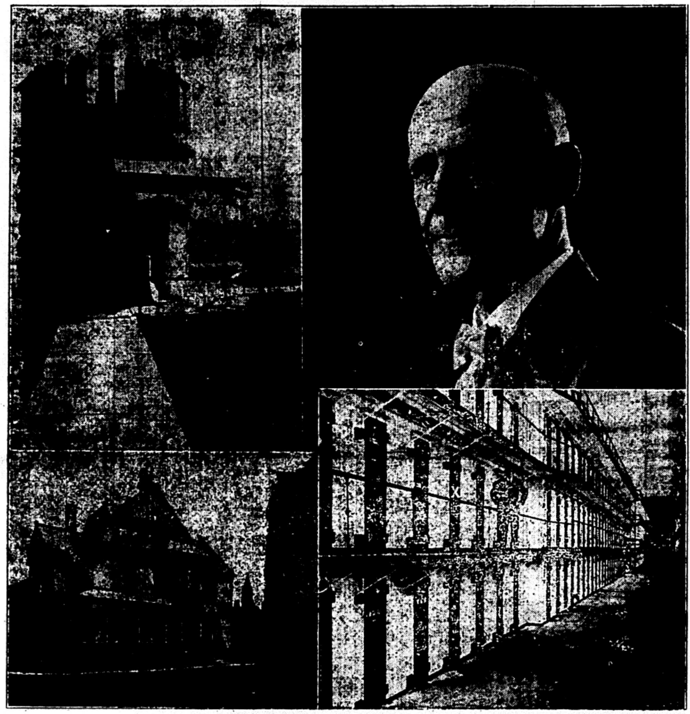
Where 'Gene Debs Will Spend 10 Years Unless—

"I stand on the threshold of going to prison with malice toward none and with perfect faith in the rectitude of my course and an absolute confidence in the justice and ultimate triumph of the cause to which I have gladly given my life. TO ASK A PARDON WOULD BE TO CONFESS GUILT."—DEBS

Guard With Rifle Watches Over Debs' New Home



There are armed guards that patrol the turrets that overlook the West Virginia state penitentiary at Moundsville. These are intended for 'Gene Debs as well as for all the other thousand prisoners, from a murderer serving a life sentence, down to a mere wife beater, since the United States government, in its infinite wisdom, does not recognize such a being as a "political prisoner." We see the armed guard and the prison turret in the upper left hand corner of the above picture. In the lower right hand corner we have a view of the cell block in the south wing of the prison, four tiers of cells rising one above the other. Upon his arrival Debs was thrown into the fourth cell, on the second tier, marked with an "X". Note the guard nearby. It was through the bars of this cell that Alfred Wagenknecht, David Karsner and J. Louis Engdahl bade Debs "Good Night" the first evening of his imprisonment. It was in this cell that Debs ate two meals the next day because the Warden did not want him to exert any of his "revolutionary" influence on the mass of the prisoners in the common dining hall. In the upper right hand corner we have Debs himself as he appeared on entering prison. In the lower left hand corner is the picture of the Debs' home in Terre Haute, Ind., which 'Gene has left behind him, but to which the workers of the nation are called upon to restore him at the earliest possible moment.

As you read this, Debs has already served

DICTATORSHIP OF PROLETARIAT ESTABLISHED IN WINNEPEG

Revolutionary Tendencies of Canadian Labor Seen In Vote to Secede From A. F. of L. and Form O. B. U. of All Workers.

A second "Seattle strike" has been in progress in Winnipeg for several days. The union workers, 30,000 strong, have been out with far-reaching demands in the form of increased wages and better working conditions. The entire city has succumbed to the control of the strikers' committees The city administration is helpless in the face of the united workers. Practically all government of the city is in the hands of the workers and are being administered from the Labor Temple instead of from the city hall.

Although the government has at hand thousands of soldiers, they have found nothing to do. The workers have been perfectly peaceful and have lived up to their slogan, adopted at the beginning of the strike, "win the strike by doing nothing." Police are on duty by permission of the strikers. Milk, water, lights, etc., are being handled entirely by the workers.

One of the most significant moves of the strikers to win was seen in the choking of the

WOULDN'T DARE JAIL A DEBS IN ENGLAND

An American Business Man Gives Some Inside Information About Conditions in Europe.

England has good reasons for doing all she can to pacify her people, shutting out importations to give her people work, grabbing whatever she can to bring wealth to her islands. An extremely intelligent American observer, a business man of large interests, just returned from England, says:

"England is hanging on the edge of a labor revolution and the big men know it. They are afraid to refuse labor anything. They would not dare, in England, to jail a labor leader or other radical leader, as we jail Debs and others. It would give them civil war in twenty-four hours."

Other countries are in positions as bad, according to this clear-eyed western American observer.

"In Amsterdam," said he, "there are eighty-five thousand men out of work. Conditions there are close to anarchy. Policemen stand on streets in groups, never singly, as, alone, their lives would not be safe. All of Europe, conquerors and conquered, is in a condition of dangerous unrest. Conditions are made more difficult by the fact that workers, exhausted by the war, demand their full share of government, highest wages, and at the same time the right to do less and less work."

OHIO SOCIALIST. OUTLAWED BY BIG PRINTERS, STARTS CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $10,000 FOR PARTY OWNED PRESS & PRINTING PLANT

Outlawed! Yes, outlawed by the big printers of Cleveland. The printers of Cleveland have refused to print the Ohio Socialist. Printer after printer, equipped to print a paper such as the Ohio Socialist, has turned us down flat. In fact, they have agreed among themselves not to print for us. That's the reason the Socialist Party of Ohio is now compelled to do what it should have done long ago—buy its own press and printing equipment.

That's why, comrade, we are asking you —IN WHICH OF THESE COLUMNS WILL YOUR NAME APPEAR?

We believe you see the necessity of the Socialist Party owning the means of getting out its propaganda. We believe you are with us in this big drive to own and control the tools with which we must carry on the Party's work for Socialism. We believe you are with us to help raise $10,000 for a printing press and other equipment to print the Ohio Socialist.

We believe you are going to help us raise this amount. We know you will help all you can. So we have laid out this space of seven columns for the purpose of giving credit to each and every comrade who helps. Not every comrade can give a hundred dollars, not every one can give fifty nor even twenty-five, but hundreds of comrades CAN give ten dollars, hundreds and hundreds CAN give five dollars and thousands CAN spare one dollar for this purpose.

Remember, comrades, when you make a contribution to the Ohio Socialist Press Fund, you are not giving your money to a private individual, you are giving it to the Socialist Party, to the Socialist movement, to the working-class.

Here are the names of the comrades who have responded to the call for this fund since the announcement of our purpose in last week's issue. We hope to receive your donation and to print your name in one of these columns next week. And whether your name goes in the first column or the last one, it will be appreciated and will help greatly in buying our press.

Manifesto Issued March 10 and Signed, C. Rakovsky, N. Lenin. M. Zinoviev, L. Trotsky, F. Platten

TO THE PROLETARIAT OF ALL LANDS:

Seventy-two years have gone by since the Communist Party of the World proclaimed its program in form of the manifesto written by the greatest teachers of the proletarian revolution, Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. Even at that early time, when Communism had scarcely come into the arena of conflict, it was hounded by the lies, hatred, and calumny of the possessing classes, who rightly suspected in it their mortal enemy. During these seven decades Communism has traveled a hard road; storms of ascent followed periods of sharp decline; successes, but also severe defeats. In spite of all, the development at bottom went the way forecast by the Manifesto of the Communist Party. The epoch of the last decisive battle came later than the apostles of the social revolution expected and wished. But it has come.

We Communists, representatives of the revolutionary proletariat of the different countries of Europe, America, and Asia, assembled in Soviet Moscow, feel and consider ourselves followers and fulfillers of the program proclaimed seventy-two years ago. It is our task now to sum up the practical revolutionary experience of the working class, to cleanse the movement of its admixtures of opportunism and social patriotism, and to gather together the forces of all the true revolutionary proletarian parties in order to further and hasten the complete victory of the communist revolution.

I.

For a long span of years Socialism predicted the inevitableness of the imperialistic war; it perceived the essential cause of this war in the insatiable greed of the possessing classes in both camps of capitalist nations. Two years before the outbreak of the war, at the Congress of Basle, the responsible Socialist leaders of all countries branded Imperialism as the instigator of the coming war, and menaced the bourgeoisie with the threat of the Socialist revolution—the retaliation of the proletariat for the crimes of militarism. Now, after the experience of five years, after history has disclosed the predatory lust of Germany, and has unmasked the no less criminal deeds on the part of the Allies, the State Socialists of the Entente nations, together with their governments, again and again unmask the deposed German Kaiser. And the German social patriots, who in August, 1914, proclaimed the diplomatic White Book of the Hohenzollern as the holiest gospel of the people, today, in vulgar sycophancy, join themselves with the Socialists of the Entente lands to accuse as arch-criminal the deposed German monarchy which they formerly served as slaves. In this way they hope to erase the memory of their own guilt and the gain of good will of the victors. But alongside the dethroned dynasties of the Romanoffs, Hohenzollerns, and Hapsburgs, and the capitalistic cliques of these lands, the rulers of France, England, Italy, and the United States stand revealed in the light of unfolding events and diplomatic disclosures in their immeasurable vileness.

The contradictions of the capitalist system were converted by the war into beastly torments of hunger and cold, epidemics and moral savagery, for all mankind. Hereby also the academic quarrel in Socialism over the theory of increasing misery, and also of the undermining of Capitalism through Socialism, is now finally determined. Statisticians and teachers of the theory of reconciliation of these contradictions have endeavored for decades to gather together from all corners of the earth real and apparent facts which evidence the increasing well-being of the working class. Today abysmal misery is before our eyes, social as well as psychological, in all its shocking reality.

Finance-capital, which threw mankind into the abyss of war, has itself suffered catastrophic changes during the course of the war. The dependence of paper money upon the material basis of production was completely destroyed. More and more losing its significance as medium and regulator of capitalistic commodity circulation, paper money becomes merely a means of exploitation, robbery, of military-economic oppression. The complete deterioration of paper money now reflects the general deadly crisis of capitalist commodity exchange.

As free competition was replaced as regulator of production and distribution in the chief domains of economy, during the decades which preceded the war, by the system of trusts and monopolies, so the exigencies of the war took the regulating role out of the hands of the monopolies and gave it directly to the military power. Distribution of raw materials, utilization of petroleum from Baku or Roumenia, of coal from Donetz, of cereals from the Ukraine; the fate of German locomotives, railroad cars, and automobiles, the provisioning of famine-stricken Europe with bread and meat—all these basic questions of the economic life of the world are no longer regulated by free competition, nor yet by combinations of national and international trusts, but through direct application of military force.

Just as complete subordination of the power of the State to the purposes of finance-capital led mankind to the imperialistic shambles, so finance-capital has, through this mass slaughter, completely militarized not alone the State but also itself. It is no longer able to fulfill its essential economic functions otherwise than by means of blood and iron.

The opportunists who before the war exhorted the workers, in the name of the gradual transition into Socialism, to be temperate; who, during the war asked for submission in the name of BURGFRIEDEN and defense of the Fatherland, now again demand of the workers self-abnegation to overcome the terrible consequences of the war. If this preaching were listened to by the workers, Capitalism would build out of the bones of several generations a new and still more formidable structure, leading to new and inevitable world war. Fortunately for humanity, this is no longer possible.

The absorption by the State of the economic life, so vigorously opposed by capitalist Liberalism, has now become a fact. There can be no return either to free competition nor to the rule of the trusts, syndicates and other economic monsters. The only question is who shall be the future mainstay of state production, the Imperialistic State or the victorious proletariat. In other words, shall the entire working humanity become the feudal bond-servants of the victorious Entente bourgeoisie, which under name of a League of Nations aided by an "international" army and an "international" navy here plunders and murders, there throws a crumb, but everywhere enchains the proletariat, with the single aim of maintaining its own rule? Or will the working class take into its own hands the disorganized and shattered economic life and make certain its reconstruction on a Socialist basis?

Only the Proletarian Dictatorship which recognizes neither inherited privileges nor rights of property but which arises from the needs of the hungering masses, can shorten the period of the present crisis; and for this purpose it mobilizes all materials and forces, introduces the universal duty of labor, establishes the regime of industrial discipline, this way to heal in the course of a few years the open wounds caused by the war and also to raise humanity to a new undreamed-of height.

The national State, which was given a tremendous impulse by capitalistic evolution, has become too narrow for the development of the productive forces. And even more untenable has become the position of the small States, distributed among the great powers of Europe and in other parts of the world. These small States came into existence at different times as fragments split off the bigger States, as petty currency in payment for services rendered, to serve as strategic buffer States. They, too, have their dynasties, their ruling gangs, their imperialistic pretensions, their diplomatic machinations. Their illusory independence had until the war precisely the same support as the European balance of power; namely, the continuous opposition between the two imperialistic camps. The war has destroyed this balance. The tremendous preponderance of power which the war gave to Germany in the beginning compelled these smaller nations to seek their welfare and safety under the wings of German militarism. After Germany was beaten, the bourgeoisie of the small nations, together with their patriotic "Socialists," turned to the victorious Imperialism of the Allies and began to seek assurance for their further independent existence in the hypocritical points of the Wilson program. At the same time the number of little States has increased; out of the unity of the Austrian-Hungarian monarchy, out of the different parts of the Czarist Empire, new sovereignties have formed themselves. And these, as soon as born, jump at each other's throats on account of their frontier disputes. Meanwhile the Allied Imperialists brought about certain combinations of new and old small States through the cement of mutual hatreds and general weakness. Even while violating the small and weak peoples and delivering them to famine and degradation, the Entente Imperialists, exactly as the Imperialists of the Central powers before them, did not cease to talk of the right of self-determination of all peoples, a right which is now entirely destroyed in Europe and in the rest of the world.

Only the proletarian revolution can secure the existence of the small nations, a revolution which frees the productive forces of all countries from the restrictions of the national States, which unites all peoples in the closest economic co-operation on the basis of a universal economic plan, and gives even to the smallest and weakest peoples the possibility freely and independently to carry on their national culture without detriment to the united and centralized economy of Europe and of the whole world.

The last war, after all a war against the colonies, was at the same time a war with the aid of the colonies. To an unprecedented extent the population of the colonies was drawn into the European war. Indians, Arabs, Madagascans battled on the European continent—what for?—for their right to remain slaves of England or France. Never did capitalist rule show itself more shameless, never was the truth of colonial slavery brought into such sharp relief. As a consequence we witnessed a series of open rebellions and revolutionary ferment in all colonies. In Europe itself it was Ireland which reminded us in bloody street battles that it is still an enslaved country and feels itself as such. In Madagascar, in Annam, and in other countries, the troops of the bourgeois Republic have had more than one insurrection of the colonial slaves to suppress during the war. In India the revolutionary movement has not been at a standstill for one day, and lately we have witnessed the greatest labor strike in Asia, to which the government of Great Britain answered with armored cars.

In this manner, the colonial question in its entirety became the order of the day not alone on the green table of the diplomatic conferences at Paris, but also in the colonies themselves. The Wilson program, at the very best, calls only for a change in the firm name of colonial enslavement. Liberation of the colonies can only happen together with liberation of the working class of the capital cities. The workers and peasants not only of Annam, Algeria, Bengal, but also of Persia and Armenia, can gain independent existence only after the laborers of England and France have overthrown Lloyd George and Clemenceau and taken the power into their own hands. Even now in the more advanced colonies the battle goes on not only under the flag of national liberation, but it assumes also an open and outspoken social character. Capitalistic Europe has drawn the backward countries by force into the capitalistic whirlpool, and Socialistic Europe will come to the aid of the liberated colonies with its technique, its organization, its spiritual influence, in order to facilitate their transition into the orderly system of socialistic economy.

Colonial slaves of Africa and Asia! The hour of triumph of the Proletarian Dictatorship of Europe will also be the hour of your liberation!

II.

The entire bourgeois world accuses the Communists of destroying liberties and political democracy. That is not true. Having come into power, the proletariat only asserts the absolute impossibility of applying the methods of bourgeois democracy and creates the conditions and forms of a higher working-class democracy. The whole course of capitalistic development undermined political democracy, not only by dividing the nation into two irreconcilable classes, but also by condemning the numerous petty bourgeois and half-proletarian elements, as well as the slum proletariat, to permanent economic stagnation and political impotence.

In those countries in which the historical development has furnished the opportunity, the working class has utilized the regime of political democracy for its organization against capitalism. In all countries where the conditions for a workers' revolution are not yet ripe, the same process will go on. But the great middle layers on the farm lands, as well as in the cities, are hindered by Capitalism in their historic development and remain stagnant for whole epochs. The peasant of Bavaria and Baden who does not look beyond his church spire, the small French wine-grower who has been ruined by the adulterations practiced by the big capitalists, the small farmer of America plundered and betrayed by bankers and legislators—all these social ranks which have been shoved aside from the main road of development by capitalism, are called on paper by the regime of political democracy to the administration of the State. In reality, however, the finance-oligarchy decides all important questions which determine the destinies of nations behind the back of parliamentary democracy. Particularly was this true of the war question. The same applies to the question of peace.

If the finance-oligarchy considers it advantageous to veil its deeds of violence behind parliamentary vote, then the Bourgeois State has at its command in order to gain its ends all the traditions and attainments of former centuries of upper-class rule multiplied by the wonders of capitalistic technique: lies, demagogism, persecution, slander, bribery, calumny, and terror. To demand of the proletariat in the final life-and-death struggle with Capitalism that it should follow lamblike the demands of bourgeois democracy, would be the same as to ask a man who is defending his life against robbers to follow the artificial rules of a French duel that have been set by his enemy but not followed by him.

In an empire of destruction, where not only the means of production and transportation but also the institutions of political democracy represent bloody ruins, the proletariat must create its own forms, to serve above all as a bond of unity for the working class and to enable it to accomplish a revolutionary intervention in the further development of mankind. Such apparatus is represented in the workmen's councils. The old parties, the old unions, have proved incapable, in person of their leaders, to understand much less to carry out the tasks which the new epoch presents to them. The proletariat created a new institution which embraces the entire working class, without distinction of vocation or political maturity, an elastic form of organization capable of continually renewing itself, expanding, and of drawing into itself ever new elements, ready to open its doors to the working groups of city and village which are near to the proletariat. This indispensable autonomous organization of the working class in the present struggle and in the future conquests of different lands, tests the proletariat and represents the greatest inspiration and the mightiest weapon of the proletariat of our time.

Whenever the Masses are awakened to consciousness, Workers', Soldiers', and Peasants' Councils will be formed. To fortify these Councils' to increase their authority, to oppose them to the State apparatus of the bourgeoisie, is now the chief task of the class-conscious and honest workers of all countries. By means of these Councils the working class can counteract that disorganization which has been brought into it by the infernal anguish of the war, by hunger, by the violent deeds of the possessing classes, and by the betrayal of their former leaders. By means of these Councils the working class will gain power in all countries most readily and most certainly when these Councils gain the support of the majority of the laboring population. By means of these Councils the working class, once attending power, will control all the field of economic and cultural life, as in the case of Russia at the present time.

The collapse of the imperialistic State, czaristic to most democratic, goes on simultaneously with the collapse of the imperialistic military system. The armies of millions, mobilized by imperialism, could remain steadfast only so long as the proletariat remained obedient under the yoke of the bourgeoisie. The complete breakdown of national unity signifies also an inevitable disintegration of the army. Thus it happened, first in Russia, then in Austria-Hungary, then in Germany. The same also is to be expected in other imperialistic States. Insurrection of the peasants against the landowner, of laborer against capitalist, of both against the monarchic or "democratic" bureaucracy, must lead inevitably to the insurrection of soldier against commander and, furthermore, to a sharp division between the proletarian and bourgeois elements within the army. The imperialistic war which pitted nation against nation, has passed and is passing into the civil war which lines up class against class.

The outcry of the bourgeois world against the civil war and the red terror is the most colossal hypocrisy of which the history of political struggles can boast. There would be no civil war if the exploiters who have carried mankind to the very brink of ruin had not prevented every forward step of the laboring masses, if they had not instigated plots and murders and called to their aid armed help from outside to maintain or restore their predatory privileges. Civil war is forced upon the laboring classes by their arch-enemies. The working class must answer blow for blow, if it will not renounce its own object and its own future which is at the same time the future of all humanity.

The communist parties, far from conjuring up civil war artificially, rather strive to shorten its duration as much as possible—in case it has become an iron necessity—to minimize the number of its victims, and above all to secure victory for the proletariat. This makes necessary the disarming of the bourgeoisie at the proper time, the arming of the laborers, and the formation of a communist army as the protector of the rule of the proletariat and the inviolability of the social structure. Such is the Red Army of Soviet Russia which arose to protect the achievements of the working class against every assault from within or without. The Soviet Army is inseparable from the Soviet State.

Conscious of the world-historic character of their mission, the enlightened workers strove from the very beginning of the organized socialistic movement for an international union. The foundation-stone of this union was laid in the year 1864 in London, in the first International. The Franco-Prussian War, from which arose the Germany of the Hohenzollerns, undermined the First International, giving rise at the same time to the national labor parties. As early as 1889 these parties united at the Congress of Paris and organized the Second International. But during this period the center of gravity of the labor movement rested entirely on national ground, confining itself within the realm of national parliamentarism to the narrow compass of national states and national industries. Decades of organizing and labor reformism created a generation of leaders most of whom gave verbal recognition to the program of social revolution but denied it in substance. They were lost in the swamp of reformism and adaptation to the bourgeois state. The opportunistic character of the leading parties of the Second International was finally revealed—and led to the greatest collapse of the movement in all its history—when events required revolutionary methods of warfare from the labor parties. Just as the war of 1870 dealt a deathblow to the First International by revealing that there was not in fact behind the social-revolutionary program any compact power of the masses, so the war of 914 killed the Second International by showing that above the consolidated labor masses there stood labor parties which converted themselves into servile organs of the bourgeois state.

This includes not only the social patriots who today are openly in the camp of the bourgeoisie as preferred confidential advisers and reliable hangmen of the working class, but also the hazy, fickle and irresolute socialist Centre which is today trying to revive the Second International, i.e., the narrowness, opportunism, and revolutionary impotence of their predecessors. The Independents of Germany, the present Majority of the Socialist party in France, the Independent Labor Party in England, and similar groups, are actually trying to re-establish themselves in the position which the old official parties of the Second International held before the war. They appear as before with proposals of compromise and conciliation and hereby paralyse the energy of the proletariat, lengthening the period of crisis and consequently increasing the misery of Europe. War against the Socialist Centre is a necessary condition of successful war against Imperialism.

Spurning the half-heartedness, hypocrisy, and corruption of the decadent official socialist parties, we, the Communists assembled in the Third International, feel ourselves to be the direct successors of the heroic efforts and martyrdom of a long series of revolutionary generations from Baboeuf to Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg. As the First International foresaw the future development and pointed the way; as the Second International gathered together and organized millions of the proletariats, so the Third International is the International of open mass-action of the revolutionary realization, the International of deeds. Socialist criticism has sufficiently stigmatized the bourgeois world order. The task of the International Communist Party is now to overthrow this order and to erect in its place the structure of the socialist world order. We urge the working men and women of all countries to unite under the Communist banner, the emblem under which the first great victories have already been won.

PROLETARIANS OF ALL LANDS! IN THE WAR AGAINST IMPERIALISTIC BARBARITY, AGAINST MONARCHY, AGAINST THE PRIVILEGED CLASSES, AGAINST THE BOURGEOIS STATE AND BOURGEOIS PROPERTY, AGAINST ALL FORM AND VARIETIES OF SOCIAL AND NATIONAL OPPRESSION—UNITE!

UNDER THE STANDARD OF THE WORKINGMEN'S COUNCILS, UNDER THE BANNER OF THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL, IN THE REVOLUTIONARY STRUGGLE FOR THE POWER AND DICTATORSHIP OF THE PROLETARIAT, PROLETARIANS OF ALL COUNTRIES, UNITE!

THE NEW ERA HAS BEGUN! THE ERA OF THE DOWNFALL OF CAPITALISM — ITS INTERNAL DISINTEGRATION. THE EPOCH OF THE PROLETARIAN COMMUNIST REVOLUTION. IN SOME COUNTRIES, VICTORIOUS PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION; INCREASING REVOLUTIONARY FERMENT IN OTHER LANDS; UPRISINGS IN THE COLONIES; UTTER INCAPACITY OF THE RULING CLASSES TO CONTROL THE FATE OF PEOPLES ANY LONGER; THAT IS THE PICTURE OF PRESENT WORLD CONDITIONS.

Humanity, with its entire culture now lying in ruins, faces danger of complete destruction. There is only one power which can save it—the power of the proletariat. The old capitalistic "order" can exist no longer. This ultimate result of the capitalistic mode of production is chaos—a chaos to be overcome only by the great producing class, the proletariat. It is the proletariat which must establish real order, the order of communism. It must end the domination of capital, make war impossible, wipe out state boundaries, transform the whole world into one co-operative commonwealth, and bring about real human brotherhood and freedom.

World Capitalism prepares itself for the final battle. Under cover of the "League of Nations" and a deluge of pacifist phrase-mongering, a desperate effort is being made to pull together the tumbling capitalist system and to direct its forces against the constantly growing proletarian revolt. This monstrous new conspiracy of the capitalist class must be met by the proletariat by seizure of the political power of the State, turning this power against its class enemies, and using it as a lever to set in motion the economic revolution. The final victory of the proletariat of the world means the beginning of the real history of free mankind.

The Capture of Political Power

Seizure of political power by the proletariat means destruction of the political power of the bourgeoisie. The organized power of the bourgeoisie is in the civil State, with its capitalistic army under control of bourgeois-junker officers, its police and gendarmes, jailers and judges, its priests, government officials, etc. Conquest of the political power means not merely a change in the personnel of ministries but annihilation of the enemy's apparatus of government; disarmament of the bourgeoisie, of the counter-revolutionary officers, of the White Guard; arming of the proletariat, the revolutionary soldiers, the Red Guard of Workingmen; displacement of all bourgeois judges and organization of proletarian courts; elimination of control by reactionary government officials and substitution of new organs of management of the proletariat. Victory of the proletariat consists in shattering the enemy's organization and organizing the proletarian power; in the destruction of the bourgeois and upbuilding of the proletarian State apparatus. Not until the proletariat has achieved this victory and broken the resistance of the bourgeoisie can the former enemies of the new order be made useful, by bringing them under control of the communistic structure and gradually bringing them into accord with its work.

Democracy and Dictatorship

The proletarian State, like every State, is an organ of suppression, but it arrays itself against [illegible] the opposition of the despoilers of labor, who are using every means in a desperate effort to stifle the revolution in blood, and to make impossible further opposition. The dictatorship of the proletariat, which gives it the favored position in the community, is only a provisional institution. As the opposition of the bourgeoisie is broken, as it is expropriated and gradually absorbed into the working groups, the proletarian dictatorship disappears, until finally the State dies and there is no more class distinction.

Democracy, so-called, that is, bourgeois democracy, is nothing more nor less than veiled dictatorship by the bourgeoisie. The much vaunted "popular will" exists as little as the undivided people. In reality, there are the classes, with antagonistic, irreconcilable purposes. However, since the bourgeoisie is only a small majority, it needs this fiction of the "popular will" as a flourish of fine-sounding words to reinforce its rule over the working classes and to impose its own class will upon the people. The proletariat, on the contrary, as the overwhelming majority of the people, openly exercises its class power by means of its mass organizations and through its Councils, in order to wipe out the privileges of the bourgeoisie and to secure the transition, rather the transformation, into a classless communistic commonwealth.

The main emphasis of bourgeois democracy is on formal declarations of rights and liberties which are actually unattainable by the proletariat, because of want of the material means for their enjoyment; while the bourgeoisie uses its material advantages, through its press and organizations, to deceive and betray the people. On the other hand, the Council type of government makes it possible for the proletariat to realize its rights and liberties. The Council power gives to the people palaces, houses, printing offices, paper supply etc., for their press, their societies and assemblies. And in this way alone is actual proletarian democracy made possible.

Bourgeois democracy, with its parliamentary system, uses words to induce belief in popular participation in government. Actually the masses and their organizations are held far out of reach of the real power and the real State administration. In the Council system the mass organizations rule and through them the mass itself, inasmuch as the Councils draw constantly increasing numbers of workers into the State administration; and only by this process will the entire working population gradually become part of the government. The Council system also builds itself directly on the mass organizations of the proletariat, on the councils themselves, the revolutionary trade unions, the co-operatives, etc. Bourgeois democracy and its parliamentary system sharpen the separation of the masses from the State by division of the government into legislative and executive powers, and through parliamentary mandates beyond popular recall. The Council system, by contrast, unites the masses with the organs of government by right of recall, amalgamation of legislative and executive powers, and by use of working roads. Above all this union is fostered by the fact that in the Council system elections are based not on arbitrary territorial districts, but on units of production.

In this way the Council system brings about true proletarian democracy, democracy by and for the proletarians against the bourgeoisie. The industrial proletariat is favored in this system because it is the most aggressive, best organized, and politically ripest class, under whose leadership the half-proletarians and small farmers will be gradually elevated. These temporary privileges of the industrial proletariat must be utilized to draw the small farmers away from the control of the big landowners and bourgeoisie and to organize and train them as helpers in the building of the communistic structure.

Expropriation of the Bourgeoisie and Socialization of Production

The breakdown of the capitalistic order and the disruption of capitalistic industrial discipline makes impossible the reorganization of production on the capitalistic basis. Wage wars of the workingmen—even when successful—do not bring the anticipated betterment of conditions of living; the workers can only become emancipated when production is no longer controlled by the bourgeoisie but by the proletariat. In order to raise the standards of productivity, in order to crush the opposition on the part of the bourgeoisie (which only prolongs the death struggle of the old regime and thereby invites danger of total ruin), the Proletarian Dictatorship must carry out the expropriation of the greater bourgeoisie and junkerdom and convert the means of production and distribution in to the common property of the proletarian State.

Communism is now being born out of the ruins of Capitalism—there is no other salvation for humanity. The opportunists who are making utopian demands for the reconstruction of the economic system of capitalism, so as to postpone socialization, only delay the process of disintegration, and increase the danger of total demolition. The communist revolution, on the other hand, is the best, the only means, by which the most important social power of production—the proletariat—can be saved, and with it property itself.

The Dictatorship of the Proletariat does not in any way call for partition of the means of production and exchange; rather, on the contrary, its aim is further to centralize the forces of production and to subject all of production to a symmetrical plan. As the first steps toward socialization of the entire economic system may be mentioned: the socializing of the great banks which now control production; the taking over by the state power of the proletariat of all government controlled economic utilities; the transferring of all communal enterprises; the socializing of the syndicated and trustified units of production, as well as all other branches of production in which the degree of concentration and centralization of capital makes this technically practicable; the socializing of agricultural estates and their conversion into co-operative [illegible]

As far as the smaller enterprises are concerned, the proletariat must gradually unite them, according to the degree of their importance. It must be particularly emphasized that small properties will in no way be expropriated and that property owners who are not exploiters of labor will not be forcibly dispossessed. This element will gradually be drawn into the socialistic organization through the force of example, through practical demonstration of the superiority of the new order of things, and the regulation by which the small farmers and the petty bourgeoisie of the cities will be freed from economic bondage to usurious capital and landlordism, and from tax burdens (especially by annulment of the national debts), etc.

The task of the Proletarian Dictatorship in the economic field can only be fulfilled to the extent that the proletariat is enabled to create centralized organs of management and to institute workers control. To this end it must make use of its mass organizations which are in closest relation to the process of production. In the field of distribution the Proletarian Dictatorship must re-establish commerce by an accurate distribution of products; to which end the following methods are to be considered: the socialization of wholesale establishments, the taking over of all bourgeois-State and municipal apparatus of distribution; control of the great co-operative societies, which organizations will still have an important role in the production epoch; the gradual centralization of all these organs and their conversion into a systematic unity for the rational distribution of products.

As in the field of production so also in the field of distribution all qualified technicians and specialists are to be made use of, provided their political resistance is broken and they are still capable of adapting themselves, not to the service of capital, but to the new system of production. Far from oppressing them the proleteriat will make it possible for the first time for them to develop intensive creative work. The Proletarian Dictatorship, with their co-operation, will retrieve the separation of physical and mental work which Capitalism has developed and thus will Science and Labor be unified. Besides expropriating the factories, mines, estates, etc., the proletariat must also abolish the exploitation of the people by capitalistic landlords, transfer the large mansions to the local workers' councils, and move the working people into the bourgeois dwellings.

During this great transition period the power of the Councils must constantly build up the entire administrative organization into a more centralized structure, but on the other hand constantly draw ever increasing elements of the working people into the immediate control of government.

The Way to Victory

The revolutionary era compels the proletariat to make use of the means of battle which will concentrate its entire energies, namely, mass action, with its logical resultant, direct conflict with the governmental machinery in open combat. All other methods, such as revolutionary use of bourgeois parliamentarism, will be of only secondary significance.

The indispensable condition for successful struggle is separation not only from the direct servitors of Capitalism and enemies of the communist revolution, in which role the Social Democrats of the Right appear, but also from the Party of the Centre (Kautskians), who desert the proletariat at the critical moment in order to come to terms with its open antagonists. On the other hand, there are essential elements of the proletariat, heretofore not within the Socialist Party, who stand now completely and absolutely on the platform of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat in the form of Council rule, for example, the corresponding elements among the Syndicalists.

The growth of the revolutionary movement in all lands, the dangers of suppression of this revolution through the coalition of capitalistic States, the attempts of the Socialist betrayers to unite with one another (the formation of the Yellow "International" at Berne), and to give their services to the Wilsonian League; finally, the absolute necessity for co-ordination of proletarian actions—all these demand the formation of a real revolutionary and real proletarian Communist International. This International, which subordinates the so-called national interests to the interests of the international revolution, will personify the mutual help of the proletariat of the different countries, for without economic and other mutual helpfulness the proletariat will not be able to organize the new society. On the other hand, in contrast with the Yellow International of the social-patriots, the Proletarian Communist International will support the plundered colonial peoples in their fight against Imperialism, in order to hasten the final collapse of the imperialistic world system.

The capitalistic criminals asserted at the beginning of the world war that it was only in defense of the common Fatherland. But soon German-Imperialism revealed its real brigand character by its bloody deeds in Russia, in the Ukraine and in Finland. Now the Entente states unmask themselves as world despoilers and murderers of the proletariat. Together with the German bourgeoisie and social-patriots, with hypocritical phrases about peace on their lips, they are trying to throttle the revolution of the European proletariat by means of their war machinery and stupid barbaric colonial soldiery. Indescribable is the White Terror of the bourgeois cannibals. Incalculable are the sacrifices of the working class. Their best—Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg—have they lost. Against this the proletariat must defend itself, defend at any price. The Communist International calls the entire world proletariat to this final struggle.

DOWN WITH THE IMPERIALIST CONSPIRACY OF CAPITAL!

LONG LIVE THE INTERNATIONAL REPUBLIC OF PROLETARIAN COUNCILS!

A LEGITIMATE USE OF RIDICULE

As a rule it is poor policy to resort to epithets and sarcasm when trying to interest conservatives in Socialism. Tolerance, kindness, patience—these are usually the weapons that win in the long run. But occasionally one encounters a prospect so exacerbatingly dogmatic, so maddeningly flippant and so abysmally ignorant that the only method left to pierce his complacency is to use his own weapons. Some people can be stirred into genuine thought by being pricked a trifle with the sharp rapier of sarcasm. Others need to be bowled over by a blast from a blunderbuss.

A few days ago I mailed a post card to a friend. The post card appealed to this person to do all in her power to help secure the release of Eugene V. Debs and the other political and industrial prisoners of this country. Shortly after, the card was returned to me with the following scribbled across it in red ink:

"If you want to send junk like this to me, please put it in an envelope. I don't want it coming to my name uncovered."

Immediately I sent the following reply:

"My Dear Friend: Today is the 13th—an unlucky day for you, for you're scheduled to receive a verbal trouncing. You need it, because your brain is petrified. You've got to be stirred out of your hopeless lethargy. You have sunk into a disgraceful stage of innocuous desuetude—your life is evolving into pure inanition. And as such, you are beginning to be an object for pity.

"I would not speak in this tone, but when you returned the card I sent you in which I sincerely asked you to lend at least your MORAL support in the task of releasing the greatest friend of liberty the United States has had for a generation. It irritated me, and I feel that no ordinary bomb will jar you loose from your contemptible nonchalance.

"First, you are a coward. You expressed no particular objection to having the card sent you—but you wanted it covered. You're afraid, primarily, of public opinion. You're so weak-spined that you want always to side in with the majority, no matter whether that majority is right or wrong.

Second, you are a hypocrite. You yelled your head off in support of the war to 'make the world safe for democracy.' And yet you contemptuously spurn assistance to a man who contributed, perhaps, more than any single person, to preserve the slight amount of democracy which already existed in this country.

"Third, you're an ignoramus. You have the ineffable hardihood to condemn a man, to refuse to help him, when you have not studied the man nor his work.

"These are harsh words, perhaps. But they are vitally necessary in a hardshell case such as yours. There is nothing fundamentally the matter with your brain—only certain convolutions are hardened and impervious to new ideas. Your sphere of activity seems to be confined to eating, drink-

THE NEW FORMS OF DEMOCRACY.

Turning from the task of "making the world safe for democracy" world capitalism is now attempting to "make democracy safe for the world." In its efforts to play the part of seeming a certain kind of world benefactor, it is aided by every boot-licking editor who can be corralled by promises, intimidation or open threats.

An investigation of the peculiar form of democracy for which so much solicitude is felt reveals some interesting phases of the ever growing class-struggle. Democracy, we have been taught heretofore was the only certain cure for such evils as arose under its rule. This was in the distant past before Roosevelt was outclassed by a super-word mongerer and we had more democracy but heard less about it.

Democracy, it seems, in order to be safe for the world, must be of a certain form and with measurable limitations. It must not be of an "extreme" type. It must conform to certain standards commensurate with the welfare of the capitalist class and must be so cribbed with limitations that the economic position of the world's exploiters is left unmolested while they ride safely upon the backs of the workers. Democracy within these bounds is "safe." When it becomes rebellious and seeks to break through the cribbage, it becomes "dangerous" and a "menace to the world."

The attempt of the apologists of capitalism to justify the Allies' violation of Wilson's pet point—"self-determination for all nations"—as applied to Russia is one of the most illuminating bits of mental gymnastics which it has been our pleasure to witness.

In one of the biggest household magazines of the country we find this wonderfully logical bit of reasoning: "We are not at war with Russia and never have been. Then why does not President Wilson withdraw our armies from Russia and allow the Russian people to decide for themselves what sort of government they will have?" And the editor proceeds to answer his question. "Simply because the present government of Russia is but destructive of civilization." Then he proceeds to claim it is the duty of the Allies to stamp it out.

And right here we want to know of what value is this point of Wilson's "self determination for all peoples," if it is to be cast overboard at the whim of any group of commercial pirates strong enough to do it and to institute a reign of slaughter against another race and people when the government of their choice does not suit the plunderers? Wherein lies its potency for world peace? If it has any why is it not used for that purpose today? Is it not a fact that Wilson is the first to prove the shallowness of his own program when he violates in Russia his heralded point of "self determination"?

As a matter of fact the only "democracy" the capitalist class of this country or of any other will voluntarily submit to is the kind that leaves the slaughter of the workers in their hands. The kind that allows them the privilege of untold robbery, or exploitation, of control through the economic resources of the lives and welfare of the workers of the world. All else is anarchy and "dangerous democracy." This is one point the workers of the whole world are fast learning, whatever they know or care of the famous "fourteen."

WHAT GOMPERS CANNOT SEE.

A tidal wave of restless humanity is sweeping across the world. A social calamity threatens the peoples of Europe.

Our land is not altogether free from the sparks of the fires of human dissension, strife and turmoil, which are threatening the very foundations of some of the European nations.

So writes Samuel Gompers in an article purporting to give a solution for the economic evils of the nation. If Gompers were anything but a congenital compromiser and crumb picker, his mind would react to the march of democracy across the world. Born with a temperamental inclination toward "keeping things as they are," he sees in the violent upheavals in Europe nothing save an eruption of dissension and a crumbling of all that seemed staple and sound.

So used is he to view the world and the race as a static quality, that the slow evolution that has been going on in society, having reached the stage of evolution, he is immediately thrown into a state of querulous panic.

Those forces which seem to be "threatening the very foundations of some of the European nations" are but the birth pangs of a New Society breaking asunder the walls of the parent system. The "dissensions" which Gompers deplores are a natural product of the conflicting interests of different social classes.

"The social calamity" which threatens the people of Europe is not the New Society which is bringing forth in suffering, but the old, outworn and broken down system of private ownership of all men's means of living, which if longer continued would indeed have brought chaos to the race. It was the inadequacy of this decrepit economic system to minister satisfactorily to the needs of humanity in the hour of its supreme trial that is at bottom the cause of Europe's agony.

Just how far in the rear of the world's march is Gompers is seen in his view of world events. While the world's workers hail the Social Revolution as the great hope of the race, he looks on through the smoked glasses of reaction and compromise.

Since the Bolshevists took control of Russia's industries capitalists have learned the meaning of the apostle's words: if a man will not work, neither shall he eat.

It's all right in a song to raise the question of how to keep the boys on the farm after a sojourn in Paree, but we observe that the whole cry of the boys over there is for one more chance at the old home place and the sanity that surrounds it.

One thing the daily press has not exploited—that is, the joy of bullying the Bolshevists in six feet of snow with frozen feet.

AVAILABLE SPEAKERS

Here is a revised list of speakers upon whom the locals may call. Terms are five dollars and expenses. Other names of qualified speakers will be added from time to time. Comrades who feel that their services are useful to the party upon the platform are requested to secure the endorsement of their locals before making application to be placed upon the Available Speakers List. Locals should make application for the speaker nearest them to save expenses.

LIKE HOLMAN AT PLEASANT CITY.

"Comrade Holman was with us on the 11th. Although we had short notice of his coming, we had a good meeting and were well pleased with his lecture. Would like to have him come again."

A. G. DEEREN.

READY FOR SERVICE.

A dollar from Comrade J. S. Faubus for May Day sub cards. If I can be of further help to you please command me, adds Comrade Faubus. We'll keep you in mind, comrade.

PAYS TO TAKE A CUSSING.

That it pays to take a cussing seems to be proven by what a comrade from Tennessee writes. We'll leave out all names, but this comrade sends in two subscriptions and adds: One of these subscribers cussed me for five years before the war for being a Socialist, but see where I have him now. Well, comrade, you got the cussing, now we'll see if the O. S. can make him apologize.

CANTON SOCIALISTS ATTENTION.

All members of Local Canton are hereby notified to be present at a special meeting at headquarters June 4th, for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention which convenes at Cincinnati June 27th.

ERNEST SYKES, Sec'y.

EVERY KNOCK IS A BOOST FOR SOCIALISTS.

Every knock is a boost so far as the Socialists of East Liverpool are concerned. As a result of the agitation stirred up in that city on May Day and several strikes which have been inaugurated since, the owners of the hall in which the local met closed it to them. The local soon secured a better place in the Trades and Labor hall and are now better satisfied than before. The East Liverpool Tribune gloats over the fact that a new city ordinance provides that a permit be granted all street speakers before a meeting can be held. This is supposed to curb Bolshevism, etc. If the editor of the Tribune had an ounce of brains he would know that the strikes of labor in that city are evidence that the growth of Bolshevism has received no set-back. But who expects him to see what is before him?

OUR JOB, SAYS THIS COMRADE.

Beuena Vista, Va., May 5, 1919.

Dear Comrades: We must, must build up a larger circulation. We must open the doors of the American bastiles; the families of our imprisoned comrades must be provided for. All this can be done and the system of injustice can soon be removed if we will work to that end. I feel that old Virginia is beginning to wake up from its long sleep.

Yours for humanity,
J. W. HUMPHREY.

FOREIGN BRANCHES ORGANIZED

A Russian branch has been organized at Steubenville. The new local consists of 10 members at time of organizing. Comrade J. Pishko is to be credited for the work of organization.

At Alliance an Lithuanian branch has been organized by Comrade Thomas S. Astrauskas. The branch has five members.

CHAS. BAKER ORGANIZES AT FREMONT.

Another local has come back into the fold of active ones. The comrades of Fremont have effected reorganization by the efforts of Comrade Chas. Baker. Local Fremont consists of 10 members. To all our new locals we extend the heartiest comradeship and wish them a generous growth and development.

JOSEPH ROBB AT GIRARD.

Comrade Fred Kline, secretary of Local Girard, writes that Comrade Jos. Robb of Cleveland delivered a good address there the 17th. Despite bad weather, a good crowd was on hand. They showed their appreciation by giving undivided attention and a good collection.

PREACHERS AND REACTIONARIES COMBINE.

From Tiffin comes the news of a new city ordinance compelling persons desirous of holding a street meeting to obtain a permit from the mayor. Along with this latest development of the kind of "democracy" we have been fighting for, the preachers of Tiffin combined in a Sunday morning onslaught upon the Socialists and Bolshevists. True to their historic policy the ministers may be expected to follow where their paymasters lead.

ANOTHER $5.00 FROM COMRADE COOK.

Another check for five dollars comes in from Comrade Allen Cook of Canton for O. S. subscription cards. We don't know just how many five spots Comrade Cook has turned in for subscriptions, but they come in mighty regularly. Comrade Cook is one of our best boosters.

LILTH MARTIN OGANIZES NEW LOCALS.

Comrade Martin is having great good fortune of late. At Forest she secured five members-at-large. Owing to peculiar conditions there she did not organize a local. At Dunkirk a local of five members was organized.

At Dola, Comrade Martin held one of the best meetings on her tour. Owing to the fact that the trustees of the school took some time to debate whether the meeting could be held in the school house, a good deal of free advertising was secured. When they decided that the meeting could be held providing the speaker was not "unpatriotic," a full house greeted Comrade Martin. The population thereabouts is but 150. Nevertheless a local of eleven members was organized. A collection of $9.50 was taken and $2.50 worth of literature was sold.

AKRON SOCIALISTS ACTIVE.

Local Akron is doing business at the same old stand and its activity is increasing from week to week. The American branch holds a regular business meeting every Friday night at 50 S. Howard street. At every one of these meetings some speaker, who has been engaged in advance, winds up the meeting with about a half hour talk, after which a general discussion is held until the subject is threshed out.

Through this method new members are constantly being admitted. At the last meeting of the City Central committee there were over 30 members taken in. The German branch is especially active and always doing business.

On May 30th, the last Friday in the month, there will be held a mass party membership convention for the purpose of reorganizing the City Central committee. Under its present form the C. C. C. is inefficient and not representative of the active movement.

It is hoped the general party meeting will be able to work out a form of organization which will be more workable and more satisfactory to all the branches."

The undersigned was elected regular correspondent for the O. S. and will try to keep the readers informed of Socialist activity in Akron.

Fraternally,
JOHN C. CHASE.

STOP IT!

The National Executive Committee of the party, without excuse of reason and without giving that organization an opportunity to be heard, expelled the entire Michigan State organization from the party at its meeting last Saturday.

The only shadow of an excuse for this action was found in the fact that the Michigan party adopted a constitutional provision at its recent convention, opposing the advocacy of social reform measures in that state.

The purpose of this action in expelling 6,000 members from the party without giving those members an opportunity to be heard in their own defense, was evidently a desire to influence the election of the new National Executive Committee. Ballots were to be counted on May 28th, and by expelling the Socialist Party of Michigan prior to that date the vote of the state is eliminated.

No more desperate attempt to maintain its control of the party has ever been attempted in the history of the organization; democracy within the organization was never before so outrageously raped as in this action. The party membership should promptly rebuke the National Executive Committee, which in its last hours in office took such contemptible action.

Local Cuyahoga County, at a joint membership meeting last Sunday initiated the following national referendum:

Resolved, by the joint meeting of the branches of Local Cuyahoga County, representing an average of 1,821 members in good standing for 1918, that we initiate the following motion, to be submitted to referendum of the party membership in the United States:

Resolved, that the action of the National Executive Commitee in revoking the charter of the Socialist Party of Michigan be rescinded and annulled.

Every local that stands for fair play and decency in party affairs should immediately send their seconds to the National Office.

Workers' Council Resolution

Whereas, organized capitalist hatred has thrown into the jails the bravest spokesmen of labor for terms more savage than those meted out to political prisoners by the old autocracies of Russia and Germany, because they dared to speak what they thought the truth, and refused to prostitute their conscience, and

Whereas, laws ostensibly intended for the punishment of enemy spies, have been used by the powers that be to crush every expression of labor's solidarity and forward-looking thought, and

Whereas, the imprisonment of these people is primarily a manifestation of the struggle between capital and labor, a war which transcends the war between groups of nations, be it

Resolved, that we call upon the class-conscious workers of the country to exert their industrial powers to force the release of the class war prisoners.

Ten Days That Shook the World

BY JOHN REED.

John Reed was in Russia during and for months after the proletarian revolution. He has given in this big book much inside information that has not appeared elsewhere. You will find many chapters in it of great interest and value. Order of State Office Socialist Party of Ohio. R. D. No. 2, Brecksville, Ohio. [illegible]

MAY DAY IN PRISON

PRISONERS IN LEAVENWORTH CELEBRATE WITH RED FLAG PARADE AND REVOLUTIONARY SPEECH-MAKING.

Unlike the dreary weather which has met the capitalists in most of their parades, either to boost Liberty loans or augment recruiting, the sunshine and mild breezes came out in their best spring raiments as if to help all they could to give the oppressed worker confidence in himself. It was a May Day such as you might imagine the fairies would have chosen for their may-pole dance and spring frolic.

For us it was no occasion for light hearted gaiety, but one for serious reflection and determined preparation for the task which lies before us when we get out of this place. The morning program began in cantonment6 when all the conscientious objectors arose and sang the International. Next the hardy Russians stood and sang with lusty voices their Memorial Hymn. I thrilled within to see these simple determined men stand up and echo the melody which inspired their compatriots to their supreme effort in 1917, when Russia broke her chains and autocracy fell thundering to the ground.

Rodolf, faithful student of Marx, followed with an interesting account of Karl Marx's life, in which he pointed out his great work in laying the philosophical foundation for the present social movement the world over. He told of Marx's suffering for his chosen work, and because he refused to compromise with the capitalist system for the sake of making a decent living for his family. He closed with a plea for purposeful suffering.

The singing of the red flag by all Reds concluded the meeting.

HAVE RED PARADE.

After early mess I was aroused by the resounding song of the Russians. I hurried to the window, saw the parade of the C. O.'s and hastened to join them. Leading the procession of men, four abreast with locked arms, walked Bill Kantor wearing a D. B. storm hood turned inside out to show the flaming red lining. A few pases back of him marched Carl Haessler carrying a broom on which was tied a "Liberator" cover picture of Lenine. The Russian contingent followed close on his heels singing as if they were actually marching to freedom. Behind them came the American Socialists headed by a C. O. carrying Abraham Lincoln's picture (same source) aloft on a broom. Red flags and bits of red blanket around the arms added color to the group of numbered men.

The "wobblies" followed with their banner of red with I. W. W. painted on it in black. Strangeland's red numbers added its quota of red to the parade.

We miscellaneous, so-called "religious objectors," brought up the rear and added our bit to this expression of class consciousness and determination to be free from the oppression of capitalism.

We paraded around the "wired-in city" while all the sentries in the two adjoining cantonments on the other side of the stockade "turned out" to see us. Some cursed at us, several applauded, but most stood fixed wondering what it was all about. Passing automobiles were stopped to allow their curious occupants to gaze in amazement at the Red Parade. Just as the column turned into cantonment 6 the executive staff came upon the scene—in answer, no doubt to the call of one of the sentries up in the towers along the stockade.

After admonishing us against any further out-door demonstrations and stating surprise at our using our permission to be excused from work in such a manner to observe May Day, they left us to finish our program indoors. Red flags were everywhere in evidence in the barracks, but not a word was said against them. Carl Haessler reassured the officer that we would stay inside with our celebration for the balance of the day. But we had finished our parade—probably more successfully than our fellows on the outside.

A RED PROGRAM.

"Wobbly" Gergotz then mounted the improvised rostrum and delivered an impassioned and convincing argument for a more widespread use of the economic arm of the revolutionary movement. His plea for Industrial Unionism and the General Strike as a means of securing complete control of the tools of production, could not be denied.

The rest of the afternoon Carl Haessler read us another chapter from "Man and Superman," by Bernard Shaw.

Our evening program should have opened with a game of horseshoes between the "wobblies" and Socialists but the stealing of their places at early mess delayed matters a whole hour and cut out the game.

Carl Haessler started the ball rolling by reading from the Kansas City Times about Red celebrations in Europe and South America, also about preparations in various United States cities.

Clark Getts followed with an eloquent exposition of the course events would likely take in the U. S. during the transition from capitalist to worker control of the industries. He made clear to us the function of "political action" in education and general propaganda work for the revolution. On the whole he felt that Russia's Soviet form would lend itself very well to American conditions; and during the transition we would have to resort to a dictatorship of the proletariat to put everybody to work.

The floor being then thrown open for discussion, Markowitz explained that a "dictatorship" in the U. S. must not be winced at, for it was a familiar modus operandi here, where less than five per cent of the people control the means of production, and the channels of intercourse. Isn't a dictatorship of the proletariat just as justified as one of the bourgeois? Snyder followed with a warning against leader worship and blind devotion to leaders from the intelligentsia. He told us to rely on leaders from among the workers and thus preclude the danger of being misled by some upstart intellectual, who would not lead straight in a crisis.

The singing of the "Marseillaise" by all concluded the program.

The spirit of the day was predominantly serious. There was no tendency, not the slightest, of any glorification of our sacrifices since imprisonment. That was all forgotten and burned in the flames of enthusiasm and determination, which swept through the assemblage of earnest men eager for the liberty to serve the cause of human emancipation as free men.

ERLING H. LUNDE.

VICTOR BERGER, SOCIALIST CONGRESSMAN

of the labor-exploiting plutocrats to slap the Socialist Party in the face by preventing the representative of 1,000,000 American Socialists from taking his seat.

Berger was recently sentenced by Federal Judge Landis in Chicago to serve twenty years in the federal penitentiary for having written Socialist editorials in the Milwaukee Leader during the war which congress declared against Germany and Austria-Hungary.

It is significant that the house of representatives steering committee, which devoted considerable time in its secret session today to discussing the procedure to unseat Berger, reached no definite conclusion as to the plan to be pursued. It is no ordinary election contest in which elements of fraud enter. Berger's election is not contested. And the steering committee has got to devise some denial of democracy to override the constitutionally expressed will of the voters in Berger's district.

BERGER'S STAND ON WAR UNCHANGED.

Berger stands today right where he stood when war was declared, and right where he stood when the anti-Socialist Judge Landis gave him twenty years for printing Socialist editorials. He insists on his right under the United States Constitution to discuss war, the causes of war, methods of financing war, methods to abolish war, and all other public questions connected with war.

"I was exercising my lawful rights in all that I wrote and published and in every word that I spoke from the platform concerning the war," said Berger. "Citizens holding opinions contrary to mine had an equal right to speak and publish their opinions, so that the public might hear both sides.

"Neither I nor my opponents had the moral or the constitutional right to suppress the free utterance of any citizen's opinion with regard to governmental acts and policies which vitally affected the welfare of all citizens."

Although the Socialist-hating officials of the department of justice charged Berger in the indictment with having conspired to interfere with the armed forces of the United States, the Socialist congressman charges that the entire trial proceedings at Chicago conclusively demonstrated that he was not being tried for alleged interference with the armed forces of the United ed views in favor of the abolition States, but rather for his pronounc-of individual ownership for profit of the socially necessary means for the production and distribution of wealth and the substitution of social ownership, with its consequent indictment, trial, conviction and execution of labor exploitation. It is Berger's impression that the jury which convicted him was dominated by the prevailing psychological of the anti-Socialist and plutocratic newspapers, whose owners believed that the time had come, for the continued safety of the capitalist regime, a representative Socialist must be sent to jail. This atmosphere resulted in a jury being picked composed of anti-Socialist retired farmers and real estate dealers—a jury which knew about as much regarding the constitutional rights of American citizens and the fundamental principles underlying democratic forms of government as a Hottentot.

"It is significant," said Berger, "that under the espionage act, according to the report of the attorney general himself, not a single man was convicted of being a paid German spy, or even convicted of trying to find out military secrets. So far as there is a record, those accused of such offenses under the espionage act have been either acquitted or interned without imprisonment, because they were not citizens. But American citizens, on the other hand, have been sentenced to as high as twenty years in the penitentiary for remarks made in private conversation about the war.

Berger discussed the extent to which the government authorities have used the espionage law to suppress and abolish the fundamental rights guaranteed every citizen by the Constitution of the United States. "Free speech and free press have been abolished!" he exclaimed. "If one speaks or writes the truth as one sees it, one does it at the risk of being sent to the penitentiary for 10, 15 or 20 years.

"The manner in which that unjust and unconstitutional law was used to secure my conviction for a crime which I never in word, deed or spirit contemplated or committed, was a travesty upon impartial justice—as is the sentence imposed upon me by a sensational and prejudiced judge.

"I doubt if the house of representatives will refuse to seat me because of the alleged 'conspiracy' to interfere with the armed forces of the United States with which the indictment charged me. Members of congress know that I am no more guilty of a conspiracy in connection with this war than is Woodrow Wilson."

BERGER FIRST SOCIALIST CONGRESSMAN.

Representative Victor Berger is one of the founders of the Socialist Party of America. He was the first Socialist elected to Congress, the voters of his district choosing him as their representative in 1910.

He was nominated by the Socialist Party of the state of Wisconsin as its candidate for United States senator in the special election held in April, 1918. Two weeks after his nomination, the anti-Socialist agents of the department of justice, thinking they saw a grand opportunity to make political capital out of the espionage law and prevent a large Socialist vote, extracted the indictment from a federal grand jury. But the voters of Wisconsin showed their contempt for this prostitution of a federal law for the purpose of partisan politics by casting 110,000 votes for Berger, the Socialist.

With the indictment and trial still pending, the Socialist Party nominated Berger to represent the Fifth district of Wisconsin in the house of representatives at Washington. Again prostituting the federal law to the gutter of anti-Socialist politics, the agents of the department of justice corkscrewed three more indictments out an anti-Socialist federal grand jury in which he was charged with writing Socialist articles explaining the Socialist position on the war and war problems. To cap the climax of brothel anti-Socialist justice, and to "insure" Berger's defeat for congress, the agents of the department of justice had the grand jury return still another indictment in which Berger's platform in his campaign for election to the United States senate was called in question.

But in spite of all the indictments and in spite of all the calmor of the capitalist papers and the so-called "loyalist" societies, the voters of the Fifth district gave Victor Berger a clear majority of 5,560 over Joseph P. Carney, Democrat, with Stafford, Republican, trailing along in the rear with 10,530 ballots to his credit.

It is the express election-day mandate of the 17,822 Socialist voters in Berger's district that certain anti-Socialist politicians in the house of representatives are to try to nullify by refusing to permit Berger, Socialist, to take his seat.

In the meantime his right to his seat is recognized by prompt payment of his wages.

By NOMAN THOMAS, Editor "The World Tomorrow."

Figures are dull enough but here are some that ought to stir the most unimaginative among us: India contains some 300,000,000 people. The average per capita income is $10 per annum. On the basis of prices at the end of 1916, rice sufficient for one meal a day would cost $10.95 per annum. Taxes on the basis of the new budget average about $1.40 per capita. Is it any wonder that large sections of the population are living under famine conditions, that between 5,000,000 and 7,000,000,000 of these undernourished people died of influenza, and that 75,000,000 are receiving barely one square meal in two days? This starving people contributes to Imperial Britain in drain of one sort or another for the benefits of administration and interest on capital an amount estimated at from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000. Her new budget calls for the expenditure of more than $200,000,000 on the military—about 48% of the total budget.

These figures give the background of Indian unrest which is today economic even more than political. The Montague-Chelmsford home rule bill will not meet this economic situation. Meanwhile its passage has been held up in Britain while in India not constructive legislation but extremely coercive anti-sedition laws have been passed. In consequence of this miserable situation there have been a series of strikes among the grossly underpaid laborers in British owned industries, and political riots in the leading cities. Finally—and most significant of all—the hitherto apathetic peasantry have rebelled in district after district not only against British rule, but in favor of the ancient system of communal land ownership. The viceroy is "satisfied that open rebellion exists" and has put about one-third of the country under martial law. This revolt is the achievement of a people deprived of all arms and of any general popular education, attained by methods ranging from passive resistance inspired by that extraordinary modern saint, and friend of the oppressed, M. K. Gandhi and Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, the poet, to terrorism after the Russian pattern organized by the Young India party. No sane observer can believe that India will immediately gain her independence; that she should show so rapidly growing a desire for it is a fact more significant even than such important European news as the fate of fiume. It vitally concerns the workers of America and Europe, whose radicalism too generally ignores Asia. No solidarity of the working class, no human brotherhood, is complete or secure which ignores or excludes the vast populations of the ancient and virile civilizations of India and China. Lajpat Rai—himself an Indian home ruler, not an extreme nationalist—writes in "The New Republic" for April 26th, "a feeling of unity against the west is developing in the Orient," and he points out the terrible possibilities of this spirit of hatred fostered by our western imperialism. It is obvious that in the nature of things the competitive system cannot bring about a fair solution of the relations between Asia and the West; the point we must emphasize is that in the long run the acid test of all forms of co-operation will be found in their capacity to assert an inclusive brotherhood in which the free peoples of Asia may share.

DICTATORSHIP OF PROLETARIAT

capitalist press. "The greatest victory the strikers achieved," said James Winning, president of the Trades and Labor Council, "was the choking of the daily press. No greater victory has ever been achieved. There was no vindictiveness in this move, but the press had started its campaign of misrepresentation and it had to be choked." No papers are issued in Winnipeg during the strike except by permission of the strike committees. A press censorship has also been established. No newspaper stories concerning the strike situation are sent out of the city without passing scrutiny of the strikers' committees unless they are carried across the international boundary by train.

The strikers appear to hold the handle of the whip and all indications point to a successful conclusion for the workers. The second great general strike on the American continent will undoubtedly go down in history as a step forward for the American proletariat and will prove an example for the future.

The following article taken from the Nation throws some strong light on the psychology of the working class of the great Dominion to the north. Labor in Canada exhibits a far more revolutionary tendency than can be said of his brother in the U. S. A.

ONE BIG UNION.

(By GORDON GREY.)

The aim of progressive labor men and women in Canada who are voting for organization along industrial union lines and complete separation from the American Federation of Labor is "One Big Union." This radical action was not taken hastily. It is the outcome of years of dissatisfaction with the policies of those controlling the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations. The war has brought discontent to a head. The labor movement of Canada has certain characteristics peculiar to itself, but it is no more distinctive than the industrial development which it reflects. Canada is a nation within the British empire, but industrially its progress is more like that of the United States. Its commercial organizations, its religious associations, and its newspapers follow those of its big neighbor. This imitation of the methods of the United States continues despite activities of an aggressive Canadian and British-born element which favors British customs.

No one, however, should misunderstand the labor movement of Canada. It is far from nationalistic. In sections where feeling is most bitter against the American Federation of Labor it is intensely international. Less than ten years ago national unionism did exist in Canada and it had a hold among Quebec's French-Canadians; more than one prelate addressed the faithful, giving warning against the pitfalls of international unionism. Employers encouraged this nationalistic labor viewpoint and with their newspapers frequently condemned "foreign labor agitators" who came to Canada from the United States to offer advice during labor troubles.

Most employers and newspapers have changed their views of labor unionism and now favor affiliation of employes with the American Federation of Labor. They recognize the ever-widening gulf between that organization and the labor movements of other continents. The more employers and politicians show their friendship for President Gompers and the Federation, the more do labor men condemn both. Resentment against the policies of the official family of the Federation is most noticeable in Canada's Pacific coast province and, to a lesser extent, in her prairie provinces. Class lines are most clearly drawn in British Columbia, the last stopping-off place for native-born and British-born Canadians. These residents of Canada's Far West have an especial familiarity with the progress of events in Australia and New Zealand because Vancouver is the most important point of communication on this continent for Canada's two sister nations.

Certain men, recognizing the failure of advanced social reforms in Australia and New Zealand, began years ago to spread clear-cut Marxian socialist doctrines in British Columbia. They have had a lasting effect on the situation. Formidable strikes of powerful western unions, independent of the American Federation of Labor, and the extensive development at one time of the Industrial Workers of the World in the Pacific coast province, also sowed seed now ripening in the "One Big Union."

Labor in eastern Canada, however, is not so radical. The nearer a Canadian city is to Washington, D. C., and Indianapolis, the two principal seats of politics within the American Federation of Labor, the more conservative its labor unions are likely to become. The residence in Ontario and Montreal of Canadian members of executive boards and organizers of craft unions also contributes to the "saner" labor viewpoint. This difference between eastern and western thought has been noticeable at annual conventions of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, a legislative body of American Federation of Labor unions in Canada which performs certain functions within the scope of Federation matters. The congress, however, is more radical than the American Federation because a reform Socialist and Labor party element forms a "center" or middle-of-the-road group which crosses swords with the Gompers or ultra-conservative labor faction.

The declaration of war in 1914 opened an era in Canadian labor circles. Canada entered the struggle at its start; the United States did not. Efforts of craft-union officials to keep the United States out of the war naturally made it impossible for officers in Canada, to consult them on problems growing out of the struggle. Small strikes and even general strikes were numerous. The more they saw the power of the general tie-up the more did Canada's union men and women resort to it—and this in defiance of union officials who threatened sympathetic strikers with expulsion.

Two and a half years passed, and the United States entered the war. With its entrance came President Gompers' reversal of established labor policies, his "peace" with open-shop employers, and the acceptance by him and by other labor spokesmen of positions on various political commissions and boards. Canadian workers who paid dues into international headquarters—many of them fathers and brothers of men who had died in battle two or more years before—felt the Gompers war program to be a defeatist labor policy, and, still defiant, continued to strike.

When the United States adopted conscription Canada's government promised labor it would not take similar action. In December, 1917, however, the Dominion government held a general election on the conscription issue and won by the aid of a "doctored" franchise and solemn promises to farmers that their sons would not be taken. A few months later it began to draft farmers' sons. This made the farmers join with the union labor men in denunciation of the government. The tillers of the soil sent to Ottawa the largest delegation in Canada's history to protest, but, though practically the delegates were voters, the house of commons refused to receive a deputation of two farmers or to permit them to make five-minute speeches on the floor of the legislative chamber. A few weeks later President Gompers arrived in Ottawa and Canada's senators actually went in a body to the house of commons in order to attend a joint session addressed by him. Influential daily newspapers which denounced Canadian labor men featured his address under screaming headlines, while the Dominion department of labor printed hundreds of thousands of copies of it and distributed them without charge in every section of the country. The aged chief of the Federation also spoke before the Ottawa Trades and Labor assembly, denouncing independent political action.

No one event did more to arouse Canada's workers against their government. Men whose loved ones had died on Flanders fields, at a time when President Gompers denounced the war, resented his lectures on how they should conduct themselves to prove their loyalty. Even the Toronto Industrial Banner, a labor paper favorable to President Gompers, craft-unionism, and minor reforms, and opposed to industrial unionism and other radical doctrines, attacked the Federation president, while western labor papers printed bitter denunciations of him. Feeling mounted against the politicians at Ottawa. Labor grew less conciliatory; general strikes on a scale unprecedented in North America, became frequent and shook Canada to the very foundations. Government employes—the postal workers—went on strike from Montreal to the Pacific coast, and in several large cities completely demoralized the postal service.

This hostility towards the government showed itself at the annual convention of the Dominion Trades and Labor congress held in Quebec in September. Western delegates, who were not numerous because of the distance, clashed with pro-government delegates, but their radical proposals were defeated. They decided, therefore to hold conference of western labor delegates in Hamilton, a city of Ottawa chosen for the next convention, just prior to the Dominion meeting of the congress next year. Governmental pressure and the signing of the armistice, however, led to a change in this plan. Hardly had the western delegates returned home before a series of extraordinary orders-in-council curtailing freedom of speech and press began to issue from the government. Within three weeks more prohibitory orders were issued affecting labor than during the four years of war, and not even the cessation of fighting on the western front put a stop to the development. Socialist organizations were proclaimed illegal, socialist papers suppressed, and the importation of socialist literature, if published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., of Chicago, was prohibited. Possession of Plato's Republic, if in the Kerr edition, was considered an offense punishable by five years' imprisonment, or a $5,000 fine, or both.

Labor in Canada met this challenge. It backed the Socialist party, an illegal organization, when it held a mass meeting in Vancouver at which the chairman announced that he would sell Kerr's publications. Two orders-in-council were thereby broken at one time. Labor unions, in defiance of their internationals, called general strikes to bring about the release of political prisoners. The Winnipeg Trades and Labor council's official paper announced on its first page that it would refuse to obey certain orders of Canada's chief censor. It was the realization that there is power in might and that organization is the most efficient way to use that power effectively that brought about the organization of "One Big Union." Labor saw the need for quick action. Unions of the province of Ontario from the head of the Great Lakes west, and of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia, decided to hold an inter-provincial conference as soon as possible instead of waiting until September, and Calgary, Alberta, was selected as the convention city. The British Columbia Federation of Labor also determined to hold its convention in the same city—although it was outside its own province—just before the larger gathering.

Australian labor's adoption of the "One Big Union" following governmental oppression; the spread of I. W. W. propaganda in Canada despite orders-in-council making it a criminal offense to advocate its principles or to circulate its literature; and the undisguised satisfaction with which various Federation of Labor officials seemed to welcome the imprisonment of the advocates of the "One Big Union" in the United States, doubtless had something to do with the British Columbia convention's vote in favor of "One Big Union" and of secession from the American Federation of Labor, but sheer oppression did most. The inter-provincial conference also voted in favor of "One Big Union." It endorsed the Soviet form of administration, condemned reform by legislation and the petitioning by labor delegations of politicians in legislative halls, demanded freedom of speech and press, and sent greetings to the Russian Bolsheviki and to the German Spartacans. This decision in favor of "One Big Union" of all workers, it is believed by labor men, led to the government's announcement of a commission to study the feasibility of joint control of industry by capital and labor. The commission is to rush its investigation and report by June 1—the date set by the western labor conference for a general strike of all western Canadian workers for a thirty-hour week, release of all political prisoners and freedom of press and speech.

American Federation of Labor unions in western Canada are now voting on a referendum to form "One Big Union" and secede from the Federation. The vote is favorable in many important cities and industrial sections. In certain other places, however, the result is in doubt. It is the opinion of employers as well as of employes that labor in Canada will soon frankly adopt the "One Big Union" method of battling for its rights and for its ultimate triumph.

DEB'S SENTENCE

The Chicago Tribune of April 9th attempts to justify the imprisonment of the foremost champion of liberty in the United States on the ground that Debs had denounced the laws that were imposed on the people.

The history of the United States has many examples of the things that Debs is charged with. Opposition to infamous laws stands to the credit of those who had the moral courage to oppose them. Jefferson's and Madison's opposition to the "Alien and Sedition" laws gained them the popularity which landed them in the presidency. The opposition to the laws to protect the institution of chattel slavery made immortal the names of Wendell Phillips, Lloyd Garrison and others who had the manhood to oppose laws that oppress the people.

How many people are there today who look upon John Brown as a criminal? Very few. Most people look upon him as a martyr in the cause of human freedom although at the time of his execution the press, the same kind of a press as we have now, printed the same kind of justification as appears in the Chicago Tribune. Still the memory of John Brown will always be honored.

DEMOBILIZATION

In response to a question concerning the respective forces of the Allied and enemy armies on the day of the armistice and today, the British minister of war has published the following figures concerning demobilization among belligerents:

	Nov. 11, '18	Feb. '19
England	5,680,000	4,663,000
France	5,075,000	3,800,000
Italy	3,420,000	2,500,000
United States	3,707,132	2,400,000
Germany	4,500,000	820,000
Austria	2,230,000	106,000
Bulgaria	500,000	129,000
Turkey	400,000	70,000

CHICAGO LABOR ORGANIZED FOR MOONEY DEFENSE

The conference on the Mooney case held Saturday, April 19th, and called by the Chicago Federation of Labor, filled its meeting hall to overflowing, and resulted in the organization of a permanent Chicago Mooney Defense League. This occurred at the instigation of Secretary E. N. Nockles. Delegates from each Labor Union in Chicago and vicinity, whether affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or not, constitute the league. All are invited. The next regular meeting held May 3, 8 p.m., at the Federation building, 166 West Washington street.

A rousing vote recommending the general protest strike program to begin July 4th, was favored by fifty-five unions to one against. The South Chicago Steel Workers' council, representing 60,000 organized men of the Calumet, and adjacent districts, went on record as favoring this general protest strike program to secure justice for labor and free Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings.

The statement that the legal constitution of that state prevents California from giving Mooney justice and that the adopted constitutions of some big unions contain clauses that prevent labor going on a general strike to get justice for Mooney brought hoots and jeers.

"Suspend the constitution and get justice" was shouted. "We did it in war-time to make the world safe for democracy. Let us do it now to preserve it," was the sentiment that prevailed. Constitutions were made to preserve freedom—not to prevent it.

Thomas H. Tippett, who represented the United Mine Workers, spoke eloquently of Peoria, Illinois. "This is one city in the United States that will protest with a general strike, whether any others do or not. Peoria is 100 per cent American," said Mr. Tippett. "Even our mayor, judges and policemen are for justice to labor and Mooney. Whoever does not favor a square deal must be crooked," is Peoria's philosophy.

Maud McCreery of Milwaukee, one of the women who addressed the National Mooney Labor Congress of las January, lectured the organization committee session, especially on details of the acceptance of the General Protest Strike in Wisconsin. The rank and file of organized labor is being aroused there and elsewhere as never before.

The Chamber of Commerce in California recently published a pamphlet entitled "The Mooney Case and the Bolsheviki." Organized labor readily has accepted the challenge. It is not being scared by any "bugaboos." An increasing number of Mooney Defense Leagues is the answer. They believe in self-government at the hands of the rank and file—whether you call it Democracy or Bolshevism.

The permanent organization of the Chicago Mooney Defense League elected F. B. Meister, Coopers' Union No. 15, chairman, and A. Johannsen, representing the Carpenters' District Council and the International Workers' Defense League, as secretary. These are assisted by an organization and publicity committee of seven members. Permanent office headquarters have been granted by the Chicago Federation of Labor free of all charge to the Defense League until Mooney and Billings are freed or guaranteed a new trial and a square deal. Organized labor and the progressively-minded public evidently are in earnest in their desire to see this case settled right.

EUGENE DEBS

A dreamer? yes, a dreamer, but
His dreams are all for you,
He dreams the dreams that nations dream,
And nations' dreams come true;
He dreams the dreams that sowers dream
When sun and rain assure
A field of silken tasseled corn
From seed that must mature.
His ship sails on a sunlit sea—
A tide that never ebbs—
For country, home and liberty,
Come voyage on with Debs.

a speech made on Market Square a month before the first of May in which he said that the workers of Russia won their freedom by organizing in the industries and that the German workers were following the same road, and that even in England the shop stewards movement was showing that the road to emancipation lay along the same path, and urged the workers to organize in the industries and form a workmen's council. The only other speech quoted from was made as chairman of the Scott Nearing meeting at Acme Hall, in which Ruthenberg urged those present to remain away from work on May Day and join in the demonstration to make it a "red letter" day for the workers.

Nothing in any of the speeches quoted even remotely suggested any violence. The speeches urged the education of the workers through aggressive propaganda and the organization of their power and argued that when a MAJORITY accepted the ideal the Socialists advocated, the new society would come into existence.

Yet in the desperate attempt to saddle responsibility for the savagery displayed on May Day by those who attacked the Socialists upon the Socialist organization, the attempt is being made to railroad Clifford and Ruthenberg to prison on the basis of these speeches.

In regard to what happened on May Day, it was brought out by the evidence of the prosecution's own witnesses that the violence on May Day was begun by men from a Victory Loan truck, who tried to wrest a red flag from a soldier who carried it at the head of the parade.

LIFE IN U. S. FEDERAL PRISON

Here are some prison experiences of Ammon A. Hennacy of Columbus, O., as he relates them in a letter to his sister. You will know a great deal more of prison life in one of our "model" federal prisons after you have read this series of illuminating experiences. After serving nearly two years for activities against the government's war plans, Comrade Hennacy is now at Delaware, Ohio, doing a nine months bit for refusing to register.

Comrade Hennacy is now allowed a great many privileges not heretofore granted him. Good things to eat can be sent him as well as letters and reading matter. Comrades who wish to make life a bit more sunshiny for an imprisoned comrade should remember Comrade Hennacy. Address him at County Jail, Delaware, Ohio.—(Ed. Note.)

Delaware, Ohio, May 14, 1919.

Dear Sister:

Now that I am in a jail where I am permitted to write and am allowed to have my typewriter I will tell you about some of my experiences during the past two years that I have spent in prison.

First, regarding the six weeks that I was in the Columbus, Ohio, county jail, of which William Slack is sheriff and Mr. Hill a chief deputy. On May 30, 1917, I was placed in a cell by myself and not allowed to see my folks or a lawyer for several days. I was not permitted to receive newspapers, but "trustees" told me that orders had been received from Washington to "shoot me at sunrise" unless I registered on June 5th. Having had no previous jail experience I did not know if this threat was true or not, for I was held on a charge of treason which was punishable by death. I made up my mind to refuse to register anyhow and take the consequences.

U. S. District Attorney Bolin told me that he would see that I received all of my mail and would send out any letters that I wished to write. One letter that came to me from Socialist members of the Wisconsin legisaltures was published in the newspapers; while I did not learn of its arrival until I saw it in the paper later. It was only after considerable trouble that I was allowed to read a letter from my sweetheart, while going up on an elevator, and compelled to return the letter at once. None of the letters written by me were ever delivered.

A notice was put in the paper saying that Sheriff Slack was afraid to leave me out with the other prisoners for fear they would kill me, but that he had told me I could go out if I cared to risk my life. This was, of course, an excuse to keep me in solitary and break my spirit. I challenged a deputy to name one man in prison who had expressed a desire to injure me and he could not name one person. No offer was made to leave me out with the other prisoners. It was only by paying an outside barber 50 cents that I received one shave in six weeks.

I arrived at Atlanta federal penitentiary Friday, July 13th, 1917. Attendance at chapel was compulsory so on the following Sunday I listened to a patriotic plea from the pulpit. As a matter of principle I refused to stand up when patriotic songs were played; it happened that I was not noticed, for I was seated near the middle aisle, while the guards were stationed by the windows. In fact I never stood up on such occasions while I was in the penitentiary, and always was lucky enough to be out of reach of the eyes of the guard.

I asked Deputy Warden Brock to move me from a small cell in the old cell house to a larger cell in the new cell house. He replied that no Socialists were wanted in the new cell house for they would have a chance to talk to more people there. At this interview the deputy seriously tried to argue that Socialism meant dividing up.

I put in an application to attend night school in the prison, as I wished to study Kleiser's course in English. My application was repeatedly turned down by the superintendent who said that he had received orders from the officials not to allow Socialists to attend school. I then organized a study class in Mill's "Struggle for Existence;" about twenty of us meeting once a week in the yard on Saturday or Sunday afternoons when we were allowed outside to see the ball games. Our class was discontinued when rainy weather set in.

On one occasion a cell mate of mine found a mistake of several dollars in his account. According to the rules of the prison he reported this error to the warden. I might say

ATTENTION!

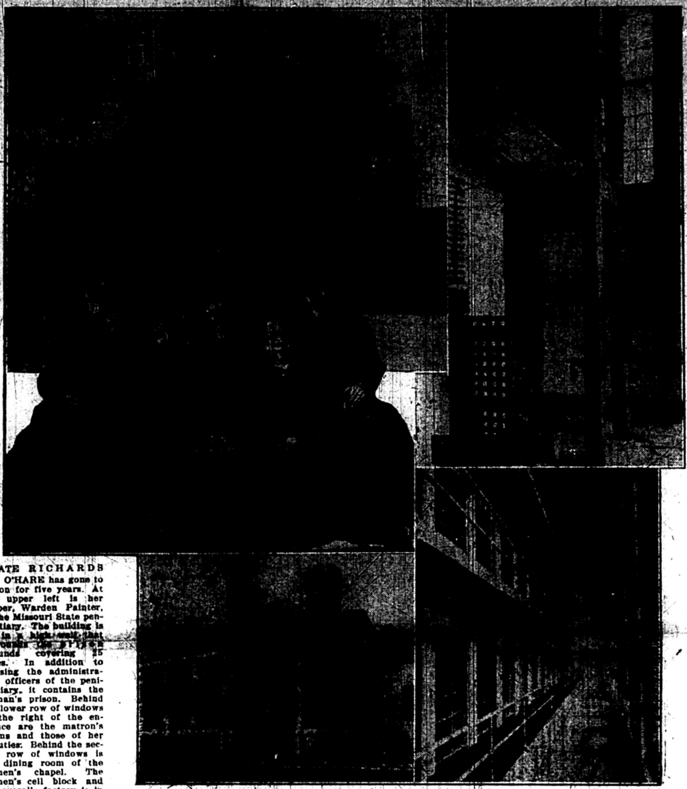
On page 3, under the heading of "News and Views," you will find an article severely criticizing the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party for expelling and suspending nearly 40,000 members from the party.

A little minority of seven national executive committeemen sitting around a table, with only committeemen Katterfeld and Wagenknecht voicing determined opposition—a little minority of seven committeemen out of fifteen threw nearly 40,000 members out of our organization.

No more dastardly trick than this was ever played upon our party. Read about it on page three. Endorse the motions for national referendum made by Local Cuyahoga county, which also appear upon page three. More about these high-handed actions of the autocratic seven next week.

KATE O'HARE GOES TO PRISON FOR SOCIALISM



KATE RICHARDS O'HARE has gone to prison for five years. At the upper left is her keeper, Warden Painter, of the Missouri State penitentiary. The building is set in a high wall that surrounds the prison grounds covering 25 acres. In addition to housing the administration officers of the penitentiary, it contains the woman's prison. Behind the lower row of windows at the right of the entrance are the matron's rooms and those of her deputies. Behind the second row of windows is the dining room of the women's chapel. The women's cell block and the overalls factory is in the rear of the building. So the women eat, sleep and work in the same building. Their "playground" is behind the high wall to the right of the prison. In the shadow of the building is the O'Hare family, Kate Richards O'Hare and her four children. At the upper right is the prison whipping post. The yarden told me that this form of punishment had been abolished but there are those who shake their heads. At the lower right is a typical block of cells. Mrs. O'Hare occupies one of these. At the lower left is the entrance to one of the men's cell buildings, visible from the women's prison. It is in this atmosphere that Kate O'Hare has been condemned to spend the next five years of her life, making 55 pairs of overalls each day. How many days of that five year sentence will she serve? The answer must come from the workers of the United States.

IF TOM MOONEY WERE A MILLIONAIRE

If Tom Mooney, as a millionaire, had "clean-d" the Chamber of Commerce crowd for a few more million, he never would be and never could be "framed-up." Instead he probably would have been made president of the Chamber of Commerce and asked, at his wealthy leisure, to tell how to "turn the trick."

But Tom Mooney, himself a union molder, helping first to organize the electricians, and finally the street car men, hit the Chamber of Commerce crowd in the place where they carry their heart and where it hurts the "hardest"—their pocketbook. Rena Mooney, faithful wife and efficient music teacher, enthusiastically helped him. Both were marked victims for hanging and the penitentiary ever since.

WHO THREW THAT BOMB.

Nobody knows who threw the San Francisco preparedness parade bomb in July, 1916, but organized labor can guess as well as anybody. Fortunately, the Mooney's were actually photographed five minutes before the explosion, on top of the Eilers Music Co. Studio building, a mile and a quarter distant.

Frank C. Oxman, "millionaire" catleman, chief witness, whose testimony convicted Mooney, wroto his infamous "frame-up" perjury letters in December, 1916. These letters were discovered and published worldwide in April, 1917—more than two years ago. He offered to buy witnesses to back up his own testimony. The same San Francisco legal machinery which worked so well for millionaires, white-washed Oxman, who has gone "scot free" ever since, even after using the U. S. mails for

RUSS REDS BUILD GREAT SCHOOLS FOR ALL PEOPLE

$700,000,000 BUDGET PROVIDES STUDIES FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

(By Frazier Hunt.)
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

The Bolsheviki have been able so far really to construct two great things—a fighting red army and a comprehensive educational program for Russia's millions. Today the red army is fighting on a 4,500 mile front, while with regard to education for the first time in the history of the country all children between the ages of 8 and 16 are compelled to go to school.

Soviet officials are prouder of their educational and cultural program than of anything else. It has been a pet part of their idea of the advancement of the masses, and there really have been remarkable strides in leading Russia's uneducated millions along educational lines. All factories have their schools for both young and adults, and there are countless lectures and cultural entertainments for workmen.

Briefly, it is one of compulsory education, with universities for all those who show special abiliy or desire. Books are to be furnished free, and every child is given free noon lunches.

All private schools are abolished, and every child up to 16 years is given exactly equal educational opportunities. In the days of the czar only children of the better classes had really good opportunities to study, but with the revolution the great cry for education was the first one answered.

It is hard for an American to realize how great was this yearning for education among the poorest, most ignorant peasants and workmen. Instinctively they knew that without education their lot could not be greatly improved, and so during the years of the czar's regime they could only dream when a real chance for education would come to all. The Bolsheviki are really bringing this.

"Our appropriation for education for this year is 7,000,000,000 roubles, or $700,000,000," Louncharski commissaire for public education, told me with pride in a recent interview. "During the last year we have established 7,000 new village schools of the lower grades.

"We have opened 3,000 schools of the second degree and twelve schools of higher education, including five new universities and a number of workers' universities. To do all this and to keep all other schools running we have had to overcome many obstacles. We have been terribly short of fuel; we have had a hard time furnishing he midday lunches that we plan to give free to all children, and temporarily we have ben unable to carry out the plan to give all children free clothing as well.

"Vocational phases are being worked up as rapidly as possible. Things are going ahead, but many of our finest ideas cannot be realized until normal life is resumed. Lack of shoes and clothing, for instance, have in some country districts kept 60 per cent of the children at home.

"We have lacked paper to print our books on, and have had to get along the best way we could in a score of lines. But we are bringing education to the masses—that is the big thing."

Some weeks ago I attended the opening of the Moscow workers' university. There was something really fine and pathetic about the audience gathered. For the most part they were working men and women and soldiers of the Red guard who saw now their dream of educa-

Socialists Respond Loyally to Call for $10,000 To Buy Party-Owned Printing Press and Plant

No sooner had the first knowledge of the determination of the Socialist Party of Ohio to raise a $10,000 printing press and plant fund among its members and the readers of the Ohio Socialist reached them than the dollars began to slip from the hands of the loyal comrades throughout the nation into the mail for us. Considering the short while the comrades have known how the capitalist printers have boycotted the Ohio Socialist and refused to print for us, the response has been most encouraging.

We are proud of the letters of encouragement which the comrades have written us and we want you to read them on another page. These letters prove to us what we have believed all along—that once the workers were made to realize the necessity of owning all the equipment necessary to carry on our propaganda they would respond liberally with their financial support. Once it is driven home to them that the workers must depend entirely upon their own efforts, their own initiative and ability to carry on the work of winning their emancipation from wage slavery, they would put into our movement more energy, more enthusiasm and more dollars. Read these letters, they are filled with this spirit and will show you how necessary it is for YOU to join the thousands of foresighted comrades who see this necessity.

Capitalism is making it ever more and more plain to the workers that their freedom depends solely upon themselves. If they would be free, they themselves must strike the blow. If they are to reap the benefits of organization, they themselves must do the organizing. No capitalist boss will assist in the work of freeing the workers from the bonds that bind them. If the workers want the truth they, too, must find the truth and publish it to the workers. The capitalist class have organized to suppress and distort the facts of the world to the workers. They have invested millions of dollars and employ every means to keep the truth from the working-class. The only way the workers can get the truth is to equip themselves properly to print and send it broadcast over the world.

Too long have Socialists neglected to gain the control of the equipment necessary to properly carry on our propaganda. We have depended upon the good will of some employing printer, upon chance and good luck for the very first necessity of our movement—a printing plant, for without a printing plant no education of the workers is possible. Without the printing press, we are unable to accomplish one-thousandth what we should. Our dependence upon our enemies has caused the downfall of many a worker's paper. Only by accident are we able to continue publication. We have depended upon our enemies and, as we deserved, we came to grief. When the masters decided it was to their interest to throw us in the ditch, they did so.

The working-class and especially that part of it which calls themselves Socialists, have got to learn and learn NOW that they have got to stand on their own legs and on their own legs only. The class lines are drawing tighter. Capitalism refuses to longer furnish the means of its own destruction. It refuses to put into the hands of the working-class the only weapon which can put capitalism out of business. That weapon is the printing press. It is the weapon of today. Without its control by the workers no freedom for the workers is possible. With its control, the workers can march on to freedom for freedom can come only through the education of the workers. Ownership of our own printing press and equipment is the royal road to power. Let every reader join in helping to get that power.

Below we are glad to publish the names of the comrades who have contributed to the Ohio Socialist Press fund since last week. They have helped today, YOU should help tomorrow. Send your dollar, five dollars, ten or a hundred if you can. Pledge yourself to contribute a certain amount for a few weeks or until this 10,000 dollars is raised.

VICTORY LETTERS

Points About Our Party-Owned Press Fund from Comrades Throughout the Nation.

READ THESE LETTERS, THINK ABOUT WHAT THEY CONTAIN. GET THE SPIRIT OF THESE COMRADES AND HELP BOOST THE $10,000 PRESS FUND WE ARE RAISING FOR OUR OWN PRINTING PLANT.

TREMENDOUSLY IMPERATIVE.

"I enclose $1.00 for our Printing Plant Fund, all I can spare just now, but I assume that there are 2,000 comrades in Ohio and adjoining states who will each send in $5.00 within the next 30 days, making $10,000. Within that time I shall forward check for my $5.00.

It is tremendously important that we own our own printing plant, and I know we can furnish the wherewith. Let us do it now and allow nothing to lag.

"CHAS. BONSAL, Salem, O."

THIS IS THE SPIRIT THAT WINS.

"I am so situated at present that I haven't much ready money, but will send you five dollars now and will try to raise twenty-five as soon as I can. Do not let the Ohio Socialist die under any consideration. I am yours for the revolution.

"WM. STEWART,
"Leetonia, O."

ANOTHER STONE IN THE FOUNDATION.

"Dear Fellow Workers: Enclosed find five dollars as per call for press and to lay the foundation for a "Socialist daily.". Yours for success. J. W. FUNK, Creston, O."

GLAD THE BOSS KICKEK US OUT.

"Enclosed find one dollar for the printing plant. I am glad the bosses have kicked us out and told us if we stand we must stand alone. Comrades, let us raise our heads and stand like men. Let as place our last dollar behind the press. Knowledge is power. The truth will make us free. More to follow.

"W. G. EVANS, Zanesville, O."

SHORT, BUT TO THE POINT.

"Here I am sending one dollar for the printing plant of the Ohio Socialist. Your comrade,

"FRANK BAXAY, Neffs, Ohio."

A TWO DOLLAR GIFT.

A donation of $2.00 from Comrade J. H. Sims of Bethel shows that he is with us. Comrade Sims says he has a building and lot he wants to sell and turn over part of the proceeds to the Press Fund. Here's hoping he sells them.

CRIMINALLY NEGLECTED OUR GREATEST WEAPON.

"I am with you, comrades, heart and soul. Here is my small contribution of $1.00 toward the building of our great "Ammunition Plant"—a Socialist-owned printing plant. All hail the Cleveland plutocracy and their paid hirelings for their noble work of injecting the spirit of common-sense in the ranks of our party.

"You have criminally neglected to build up the greatest and strongest weapon of the Class Struggle—the Socialist Party press. And not until now, when we are rapidly aprpoaching a great crisis in our party movement, when we are on the eve of entering the land of dreams, when the enlightening voice of the conquering proletarian is of the utmost importance, not until now we say, are you beginning to realize that you are working at a great disadvantage. You have not the weapon that your foreign speaking comrades have so wonderfully perfected.

We must have a strong, live, fighting Ohio Daily Socialist to counteract all the attacks of the enemy. So let's all pull together, comrades of Ohio, let's show our wisdom and class-consciousness and willingness to build something that we should have had at the very beginning of our movement. Yours for a Daily Ohio Socialist.

"MAX SHRODEK, Toledo, O."

FOREIGN COMRADES SUPPORT US.

"We read your appeal in the last issue of the Ohio Socialist. The un- [illegible] Nick Mayor, $1.00; Frank [illegible]vich, $1.00; Tony Turnovich, $1.00; John Capon, $1.00; John Glisoroff, $1.00; Elia Glisoroff, $2.00; Alex Dimitroff, $1.00.

A BOOST FROM IOWA.

"Received your paper this morning and am always glad when it comes. Saw your appeal for funds, accept my small donation of $2.00 to help the cause. F. C. WARNCKE,
"Davenport, Iowa."

WOULD BE LOST WITHOUT IT.

"Herewith enclosed are two dollars (truly wish I could make it two hundred) toward buying printing plant. Hope you will be successful. We would be completely lost without the Ohio Socialist which brings us facts and stands ready to fight for the people. Will do more if possible. WM. OPP, New Phila, O."

SECRETARY WERNER RESPONDS.

"Enclosed find one dollar for the new printing plant.

"C. H. WERNER, Barberton, O.
Local Secretary."

ANOTHER DOLLAR.

"Enclosed find one dollar to be applied on fund for printing plant.

"W. F. BRADFORD,
"Cincinnati, O."

THREE BOOSTS FROM HUBBARD.

"The Ohio Socialist just came to hand, the first item that caught my eye was, 'Buy a printing plant,' and before going any further, I sat down to write this note and send my mite. Comrade T. J. Stalnaker just came in. He saw the heading and asked me what I was doing? Told him I was sending my mite, he hands me a dollar and says he wishes it was a great deal more. Comrade Ed B. Patterson also came in and before he had read the whole article said, 'I've been on strike for seven weeks but here goes for a dollar. This makes seven dollars toward the first $1,000, the balance should be in the State Office inside of a week.

"T. H. DAVIES, Hubbard, O."

HERE'S THE STUFF OF WHICH REVOLUTIONISTS ARE MADE.

"I am a working man and as poor as any worker, but by the living God, if they all thought as I do, those Cleveland thugs would be sorry they started trouble May Day. You can see that I am a poor writer. If I was a good one I would tell you what I think of the city of Cleveland and the Cleveland Plain Dealer. (Plain dealer, but not square dealer). As I cannot write, I will do the next best by being one of the first 200 com- [illegible]

FROM CONNEAUT, TOO.

A note from Comrade Israel N. Basky, of Conneaut, O., reads: "Here is two dollars for our party-owned printing plant." And we just wonder how many more comrades CAN and WILL do the same.

BOTH RIGHT.

Two dollars comes in from Comrade Joe Drasic of Lorain. Comrade Drasic writes that while getting the postal order the clerk asked why he was sending the money to us? He said we were the same as Debs. "I told him," writes Comrade Drasic, "to never mind, that you were both right." To which we add that a nosey clerk got a good answer.

ANOTHER DOLLAR.

Just a couple of lines from Comrade Forest Eskew, of Roy, W. Vt. He sends a dollar for the new plant.

FROM A FAMILY OF REBELS.

Here's the first Socialist family to respond in a body. Father, mother, sons and daughters join hands and pocketbooks to help us buy the dandy printing plant for the Ohio Socialist. One of the most inspiring things in the Socialist movement is to see an entire family co-operating in the best [illegible]

[illegible] Fund up with the local at the next meeting. We hope the local comrades will be as generous as Comrade Kritsel.

FOR THE NEW PLANT.

"Enclosed please find one dollar as my contribution towards purchasing a printing plant for the Ohio Socialist.

"O. R. JOHNSON, Akron, O."

A FIVE-SPOT BOOST.

"Please find five dollars for the Ohio Socialist printing plant.

"D. E. THOMAS, Barberton, O."

EVERY TRUE SOCIALIST WILL.

"I enclose two dollars as a donation on the first thousand towards putting in a printing plant. Every true Socialist should put his shoulder to the wheel and see this thing through, now that the necessity of the matter is upon us. We should go over the top without any trouble.

"RUSSELL CALKINS, Lima, O."

Where theology enslaves the mind the tyrant enslaves the body.

Our insane asylums are filled to overflowing with the victims of mistaken theology.

Sexual perversion, which is a direct result of religious prudery, and religious demenia, are the two chief causes of insanity.

The world is overstocked with misbegotten children born from undeveloped and unwilling mothers.

"Our" prison gates swing open to receive two classes of prisoners. One class intellectually developed far beyond the juries of their age and the other class mental direlicts—damned from birth; and our society is so ignorant they cage these two classes in the same cage.

There is no such thing as land values. What is usually meant by the term land values is really social value.

Capitalists' profits are wage slaves' losses.

Workers get wages—Shirkers get dividends.

In 1850 the worker received as wages 25 per cent of the value of the products of his labor. In 1916 the worker received only 15 per cent of the values he creates. Here is the cause of the increasing social unrest.

The best way to conquer nature is to obey her.

The production records of the past fifty years prove this truth: the more work the workers do the less reward he receives for doing it.

A local booster ad reads: "Help the boss and the boss will help you," but I've always noticed its up to you to help the boss first.

The same ad continued, "Stay where you are at and success is sure," but again it is only success for the boss that is sure.

Injustice is ever the parent of crime.

There is no limit to the kind or size of machine man may build. There is no limit to the facts he may discover. There is no limit to the possibilities of the spread of science. There is no limit to enlightenment and once man gets the minds of his fellows enlightened as to who or what are the obstacles that stand betwen them and a nobler social life, there is no limit to the possibilities of social advancement. Let us work without ceasing to spread the glad knowledge which shall dissolve the mists of ignorance, fear, and superstition even as the rising sun dissolves the mists of morning.

Pitiless, Poisoned Publicity

New Poison Gas Issued Against Innocent Union Labor Organizers—Mooney and Billings. The Chamber of Commerce Crowd Now Clamoring That the Mooney-Billings Defense Is Itself a "Frame-up."

The spectacle of pickpockets and thieves shouting "look out for pickpockets" and "stop that thief" is now being enacted on a gigantic scale.

The Chamber of Commerce crowd, the only class who has constantly and still do commend the conviction and life-imprisonment of Mooney and Billings on frame-up evidence secured at their behest, are now themselves shouting that the Mooney-Billings defense is itself a "frame-up."

Organized labor, through immense effort and at enormous expense, has so surely and completely fastened the label of "Frame-up-ers" on this Chamber of Commerce crowd that in special 20-cent magazines and certain select newspapers, they are issuing new poison gas publicity, pitilessly attacking already long imprisoned, but innocent men. In screaming headlines and long columns of childish chatter, the methods of defense and the general strike program designed to secure freedom for Mooney and Billings are being dubbed "a frame-up," "plan of Bolsheviks," "threatened revolution," etc.

But the very proof of the innocence of these men was supplied by the Chamber of Cemmorce's own kind, and also chief witness against Tom Mooney—the millionaire Oregon cattleman, F. C. Oxman. The "frame-up-ers" were caught working at their dirty job of convicting innocent union labor organizers. Here are his letters offering to purchase testimony to back up his own "frame-up" evidence.

Ed Rigall of Illinois was a boyhood friend of Oxman before Oxman went west and became a millionaire cattleman. Rigall was not in San Francisco at the time of the explosion and refused to testify against Mooney. Mrs. J. D. Rigall is Ed Rigall's mother, who has never been to San Francisco in all her life.

The existence of these two letters was uncovered and possession of them obtained by well-known labor officials who are highly regarded in this country—E. N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and John H. Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation

RED BLOOD VS. PRINTER'S INK.

In the long run, it's the cheapest—printer's ink. Cheaper than red blood. More efficacious too, as a means of keeping what you gain. As an idea is stronger than physical force, so is the means of spreading that idea by means of printers' ink stronger than a club or a gun to beat or to shoot an idea into your fellowmen. The rise of ideals over force throughout the world proves it. The rise of democracy (as far as it has risen) over plutocracy and imperialism proves it. The growth of the idea of democracy in politics, in industry, in schools, in our common daily life proves the impossibility of killing an idea by letting blood.

The idea of rule by might is passing from the world-forever we hope. The race seems to be groping for a footing upon a higher plane than that of physical force in the relations of individuals to the social organism. The world has changed. The old weapons are outworn. The times demand the recognition of the new. The capitalist state rests upon physical force as exemplified in the policeman's club, the soldier's gun, the machine gun and the dreadnaught. These are the physical agencies by which the capitalist state is maintained. But an idea is even stronger than all these apparently impregnable forces. Why? Because these forces are useless unless guided by the brain and hand of man. An idea in the head of the necessary human agency may render the entire physical powers of the capitalist state impotent for power over the workers. The powers of the capitalist state are powerful only as proletarian ideas are weak in the minds of the workers. The idea is supreme. The club will not be wielded, the gun will not shoot, the dreadnaught remains at anchor unless set in motion first by an idea, then by the hand moved by the idea in the brain.

Here is where printer's ink comes in. So long as the ideas in the heads of the workers are the ideas of the ruling class, just so long will the policeman's club be laid upon the head of the worker. Just that long will the striker be shot at the factory gate. Just that long will the dreadnaught carry death to other workers across the seas. What is needed is to supplant the ideas of the boss with the ideas of the workers. Then and not until then, will the physical powers of the ruling class and the capitalist state be rendered useless to harm the workers. Until this fact is recognized the worker is laboring at a disadvantage. Much of his work of agitation and organization is useless. He is building upon quicksand. Ideas rule and physical powers are subject to them.

Socialists recognize this fact generally in a sort of half-hearted manner. Our entire work is one combatting the ideas of the ruling class with those of the worker, yet how insufficiently have we planned to carry on that work. How criminal have we lacked judgment in securing to ourselves the first essentials of such a tremendous battle! Here are we, a small minority, setting out to conquer the world of capitalism by the power of ideas without so much as a pint of ink, in a day when the printing press is known to be the only weapon by which we can ever hope to accomplish our end. Such imbeciles we Socialists sometimes are! If it wasn't for the good luck we have and the forces of evolution favoring us we could never in a thousand million years accomplish a tenth of what we have.

So far, we have got along by good luck. But who wants to trust to luck in a world that capitalism is organizing to put us out of commission? Do you? We don't believe you do. We believe you are beginning to see that more than luck is necessary if Industrial Democracy is to be established in America. Don't think evolution of industry is going to set the world down in front of you some fine morning. It isn't, not until we use a lot of printer's ink telling the workers what evolution means and what Industrial Democracy will mean to him, his wife and children. But we haven't any ink, nor paper, nor press either. We depend upon some member of the capitalist class to furnish us that—until he says, get out.

Say, comrade, don't you think it is high time we Socialists woke up? Don't you think it is time we put a little common sense into our work and quit trading with and depending upon the enemy to free ourselves from their chains? Don't you think it is high time we began to stand on our own feet?

We think you see the point, comrade. Help us put it across. Help with your donation of a dollar or a hundred dollars the equipping of a printing plant with which the Socialist Party can carry on effectively its work of gaining the world for the workers.

ATTEND THE STATE PICNIC.

Attend the state picnic? Surely. But perhaps you have not heard about it? Well, its like this: the Socialist Party members, like all really live people, like to get together occasionally and interview each other about many things. They like to talk about party affairs, party progress, the latest news from Russia and Germany and other revolutionary centers of the world. They also like to talk just to talk and to SEE each other—a common enough human fault or virtue which ever you choose to call it. Any way the Socialist Party of Ohio will hold its monster annual picnic, June 29th at Coney Island, Cincinnati. This place is an island in the Ohio river. It's a great place for picnics and the Socialists will have the entire island and all it contains for this day.

Local Cincinnati has full and complete charge of all picnic affairs. It has leased the grounds, the boats to carry the crowds and everything else necessary to make the great day one of complete joy and comradeship for the thousands of Socialists who will journey there on June 29th.

Fully ten thousand people should be present. The state convention will meet at Cincinnati June 27 and 28. Many Socialists will make it a point to take in not only the picnic but the convention as well. The committees in charge of picnic affairs have sent to all locals throughout the state tickets to the picnic grounds. These are now 25 cents each. At the gateway they will cost 35 cents. Moral—buy your ticket NOW. Also sell some to others. Get the picnic spirit. Pass it around to others. Help make the picnic the greatest ever.

You remember what a great success the "Country Store" was last year at Canton? The comrades are making preparations for another this year at the spacious headquarters at Cincinnati. Comrades are requested to make donations for sale at this event, which will occur during the convention. Anything from a red ribbon to a roundhouse will be appreciated. Send your donations to Lotta Burke, 1314 Vine street. Mark the article with your name and the price which it should sell at.

And now just another word. You are going, of course. Thousands more are too. There will be music, speaking by some of the best talent in the Socialist Party. There'll be fun and frolic galore. There'll be comradeship and good will. There'll be everything to make the day an historic one in the annals of party affairs. Be there with your family. It surely will be a great day.

AVAILABLE SPEAKERS

Here is a revised list of speakers upon whom the locals may call. Terms are five dollars and expenses. Other names of qualified speakers will be added from time to time. Comrades who feel that their services are useful to the party upon the platform are requested to secure the endorsement of their locals before making application to be placed upon the Available Speakers List. Locals should make application for the speaker nearest them to save expenses.

RESOLUTION.

Whereas, the State committee of the Socialist Party of New York has put a referendum to vote in that state, which, if carried, will expel the Left Wing Socialists of that state from the Socialist Party, and

Whereas, the Executive Committee of Local New York, unwilling to [illegible] and all members of said branches who adhere to the Left Wing, and

And be it further resolved, that we send a copy of these resolutions to National Executive Secretary, to the State Secretary of the Socialist Party of New York, to the chairman of the Executive Committee of Local New York, and also to the New York Communist, the Ohio Socialist and the Revolutionary Age, for publication. Respectfully submitted.

R. E. LIVELY,

FORTY THOUSAND MEMBERS EXPELLED BY DESPOTIC GROUP OF SEVEN

Without Trial or Chance to Be Heard in Their Defense, 7 of the National Executive Committee of 15 Expel and Suspend Nearly One-Half the Socialist Party Membership.

Violating every principle of fair play and square dealing and disregarding every constitutional provision, the National Executive Committee at its session in Chicago, May 24 to 30, expelled without a trial the state organization of the Socialist Party of Michigan, constituting about 6,000 members; suspended the Russian, Lithuanian, Lettish, Polish, Hungarian, Ukrainian and South Slavic Federations of the Party, constituting more than thirty thousand members, and worst of all—and let it be said to their everlasting shame—are autocratically holding up the national membership referendum for the election of a new National Executive Committee, International Delegates, International Secretary, and the holding of a national convention.

Never before in the party's history have Socialist Party officials been so lost to all sense of decency and square dealing. A wilful group of seven members of the National Executive Committee usurped power which the constitution does not grant them and which the Socialist Party membership never intended any servants of the party to have. This despotic group of seven did not act as the party's servants, but as dictators and tyrants to defeat the expressed will of the party membership and to perpetuate itself in office.

Unbelievable as it may seem, seven officials of the party had the monumental effrontery to assume the right to expel and suspend 40,000 members. Think of it. That such a dastardly deed should ever be perpetrated upon the rank and file of our organization is almost beyond comprehension. And yet it was done—it was done by those whom you elected to serve you. Instead they are betraying you, disrupting the organization. Their every act at the meeting denies the right of the membership to fully and freely express itself upon the questions of party principles and tactics.

The intention of these autocrats are plain as daylight. Like a tidal wave, the demand for a Socialism which stands true to the working class at all times has swept the party. The thousands of comrades who are sincerely working to win the party to a more revolutionary position are known as the LEFT WING. This Left Wing understands clearly that the Scheideman brand of Socialism stands for the betrayal and defeat of the working class, and that only the Socialism of Liebknecht and Lenin has within it the potentialities of victory and success. It was to "rescue" the party from this Left Wing influence, to clean out of it all who stood bravely against pure and simple reformism, that the National Executive Committee, seven voting in favor and two against, threw nearly forty thousand members out of the party.

The following course of events seems to have been determined by the autocratic seven, very largely by caucusing outside of regular sessions and voting as a unit.

1. They started with an attack upon the Socialist Party of Michigan. They seized the fact that the outcome of the referendum elections of a new National Executive Committee would not be in their favor. They knew that Michigan would vote overwhelmingly against all members of the wilful seven running for re-election. So they trumped up the charge that the decision of Michigan not to make campaigns on the basis of reform measures constitutes a violation of the party constitution.

There was no trial, no opportunity for defense offered to the Michigan comrades. A motion to allow Michigan a chance to interpret their action was voted down. The right to appear at a trial was denied.

2. But the expulsion of Michigan was apparently not sufficient to decide the elections in favor of the reactionary moderates. At a subsequent session, accordingly, it was decided to destroy the whole election.

The National Executive Committee instructed the secretary not to tabulate the vote or make it public. They nullified the referendum vote, destroyed the will of the membership in order to retain control. Most of these National Executive Committee members are out for re-election, are interested parties, and as interested parties, knowing that the referendum defeated them for re-election, are now by this action perpetuating themselves in office.

There were absolutely no valid grounds for this drastic action of sabotage. No proof of alleged irregularities was offered. Federations had voted solid against the moderates.

This sabotage of the will of the membership was camouflaged as an "investigation" of the ballots, the investigating committee consisting of three of the most reactionary Right Wingers. The next morning, realizing how raw the deal looked, one comrade was added to the committee whose name deserves respect.

This action is a violation of the party constitution, which specifically prohibits executive officials from interfering with the processes of the membership.

It is a violation of the spirit of the party, an attempt to isolate the party from the currents of Revolutionary Socialism now vitalizing every Socialist Party in the world.

The National Executive Committee's action is equivalent to stealing the elections. The party must act sternly to rebuke this official chicancery.

3. After this betrayal of the party the despotic seven seemed to fear the results of the National convention, which had been called for August 30th. A way had to be devised to control the convention. Happy thought: Suspend the federations that have endorsed the Left Wing, and we are safe. Another caucus held. Result: Suspension of the Russian, Polish, Hungarian, Ukrainian, Lithuanian, Lettish and South Slavic Federations from the Socialist Party—over thirty thousand members. A plain attempt to assure the election of reactionary delegates to the National convention to approve the abominable actions of the National Executive Committee majority.

No written statement of all the charges against them were given the translator secretaries. Their request for two weeks' time to communicate with their Executive Committees was voted down. No real trial was granted them. They were unceremoniously kicked out.

Adding insult to injury, the seven autocrats then voted to kick out the seven translator secretaries, representing over 30,000 members, out of the national headquarters building. They were given only a limited number of days to vacate the National Office premises, and no provision was made to maintain their connection with the party, pending the judgment of the convention on the entire matter.

The purpose was clear. It was conscious. It was a deliberate move to crush the revolutionary spirit now prevailing in the Socialist Party.

Any party member, any group of party members, have the right to propose the principles and program of the Left Wing, or to endorse them, in an effort to have them adopted by the whole party. No little committee of officials or politicians has the right or the power to pass judgment upon the mental processes of the mass of the party's membership.

But the National Executive Committee: No, WE must control.

Destroy the votes of our foreign comrades. Prevent them from voting for delegates to the convention. Let the Moderates RULE or RUIN the party. That was the policy of the National Executive Committee.

4. In spite of all these dirty tactics, the little group of reactionary autocrats did not yet feel themselves secure. They still fear that they will not be able to control the coming National convention. So they formed a corporation, nearly all the directors of which are of the same stamp as the wilful seven, and into the hands of these directors is to be placed the entire property of the Socialist Party, including the new headquarters building upon which $10,000 has been paid. These directors cannot be recalled by the party membership as long as they retain membership in the party, and only four, a minority, can be removed in three years' time.

One member of the National Executive Committee confessed openly that they wanted such arrangement so that they could control the property "for Socialism" even if the convention was captured by the opposition.

Consider these facts. Most of these committeemen were candidates for re-election to the National Executive Committee and candidates for election as International Delegates. They realized in various ways that the Left Wing had swept the party, that the old officialdom and betrayers of Socialism had been beaten. They knew that Revolutionary Socialism is conquering the party, that the official machinery of the party is about to pass into the hands of the Left Wing. So they crush the will of the membership. In the light of these circumstances their acts become doubly despicable. They are shown up as hysterical attempts by the present inactive, tragically inefficient officialdom to perpetuate itself in office against the will of the membership.

But these desperate tactics of the right wing members of the National Executive Committee must not be construed alone as a frantic effort of defeated officials to retain control of the party. This is part and parcel of the controversy upon principles and tactics in the party. It is the struggle between the Right Wing and the Left Wing—between moderate petty bourgeois Socialism and revolutionary proletarian Socialism.

The moderates on the National Executive Committee show no realization of the problems of the international revolution. They do not see the need of reconstructing the party policy in accord with the experience gained by our comrades in Europe. [illegible]

[illegible] ary Socialism will conquer the party. It will prevail despite the sabotage of the wilful seven and their kind. Let no comrade feel disheartened. Let not one member quit the party in disgust. They want the Left Wing to desert the party. They want us to leave the party machinery in their hands. They will be disappointed in this. We know their game. We shall not play into their hands. We will not quit. Every Left Winger will work night and day for the reinstatement of the nearly 40,000 members whom the reactionaries are trying to sever from the party in violation of the party's constitution. Every radical will work with might and main to get new members and build, build, build the Left Wing and the party. Every revolutionist will STICK and stick until the victory is ours and the Socialist Party is completely won for Revolutionary Socialism.

The slogan of the moderates is: "Split the party for moderate, petty bourgeois Socialism." The slogan of the Left Wing is, "Conquer and unite the party for revolutionary Socialism, for the Communist International."

Make an uncompromising stand, comrades. Insist that the referendum votes be counted and the will of the membership [illegible]

A TALK ABOUT YOUR MONEY

Are you keeping an eye upon the monthly financial reports of the Socialist Party of Ohio? Why not always remember that the money in the state treasury is your money and that you should be interested in its expenditure as well as the source from which it is received?

The balance on hand has been steadily increasing for many months now. Today we have more money in the state treasury than we ever had before. The Ohio Socialist has been a wonderful source of income to our party during the last several months. Support of our state paper has been so whole-hearted that income for subscriptions has far exceeded expenditures for printing.

The income for initiation stamps was highly gratifying for the months of April. A total of $398.50 was received for these stamps and that means that 1,594 new members joined our ranks last month. Read the financial report which follows and which is compiled every month by Comrade Elizabeth Bertram, who for months has given her services as bookkeeper to the party without charge.

CALL FOR A NATIONAL CONFERENENCE OF THE LEFT WING

Call for a National Conference of the Left Wing of the American Socialist Party, issued by Local Boston, (Louis C. Fraina, secretary); Local Cleveland, (C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary); and the Left Wing section of the Socialist Party of New York City, (Maximilian Cohen, secretary).

The international situation and the crisis in the American Socialist Party; the sabotage the party bureaucracy has practiced on the emergency national convention; the N. E. C. aligning our party with the social-patriots at Berne, with the congress of the Great Betrayal; the necessity of reconstructing our policy in accord with revolutionary events—all this, and more, makes it necessary that the revolutionary forces in the Socialist Party get together for counsel and action.

This call is therefore issued, for the holding of a National conference of the Left Wing of the American Socialist Party, to discuss:

1. The crisis in the party and action thereon; the conquest of the party for the party, for revolutionary Socialism.

2. The New International; ways and means to prevent the party aligning itself with the "International" of the social-patriots, of the Ebert-Scheidemann gangsters, and the wavering center; affiliation with the Bolshevik-Spartacan Communist International alone.

3. The formulation of a declaration of principles and purposes of a national scope of the Left Wing of the American Socialist Party.

4. Forming some sort of a national council or bureau of the Left Wing for propaganda, securing of information and spreading information.

5. To express and draw together the revolutionary forces in the party to consider other means of furthering the cause of revolutionary Socialism.

This call is issued to locals of the Socialist Party, branches and Left Wing groups within the party. The test of admission, provisionally, will be acceptance of the Manifesto of the Left Wing of the Socialist Party of Greater New York.

Left Wing locals are invited to send delegates officially. Where a local officially refuses to participate, branches or minority groups in the party accepting the principles of the Left Wing should send delegates. Representation—one delegate for every 500 members. No local or group should send more than four delegates. Locals or minority groups with less than 500 members are [illegible] to one delegate.

The conference will be held starting [illegible] June 21, in New York [illegible]

FLEA AND DONKEY.

A flea nestled in the ear of a donkey. The flea bit off the tip of a pore and lunched at leisure. The donkey brayed and kicked. Moral: The interests of fleas and donkeys are identical. (See revised code, Civic Federation.)

Without fleas, donkeys would have no incentive to kick and bray, and would soon completely lose their donkeyality.—Eugene Victor Debs, 1902.

RALLYING SONG.

Glorious! Glorious!
We'll make the Bolsheviki victorious!
Praise to the plutes,
They're making more of us,
While Gene lies in prison all alone.

Tune, "At the Cross."

Composed by Ohio Bolsheviki quartette.

A DOUBLE-FISTED BLOW.

Comrade Steve Weigner of Louisville, Ky., strikes a double-fisted blow at capitalism when he remits two dollars, one for the printing plant and one for an Industrial Freedom Certificate. A printing plant of our own will help us to free our comrades as nothing else can.

LOCAL R. I. DONATES $5.00.

The first Socialist local to remit on the press fund is Local Rock Island, Ill. Comrade Perry Shipman sends in a five spot for this live local. Ohio locals should get a hump on themselves if they don't want to be left behind the comrades out of state.

ANOTHER FIVE DOLLAR BOOST.

Comrade H. L. Overhulse of Malinta is another five-dollar booster. Other smaller boosts came in this week from the following comrades: J. E. Sewickley, $1.00; John Verin, $1.00; R. P. Bucher, $1.00; Edward Marshall, $1.00; A. G. Kraft, $1.00; Geo. Turner, $1.00; Wallace Watson, $1.00; Henry Hagerman, $1.00; Frank Hagerman, $1.00; W. E. Hagerman, $1.00; Etta Rufener, $1.00; J. A. Stumbaugh, $1.00; John Vehre, $3.00.

LIFE IN U. S. FED. PRISON

right here that Warden Frederick G. Zerbst has been connected in some official capacity with prisons for about twenty-five years. He is sauve, feigning a Christian attitude and a spirit of fairness. He will, however, permit the use of dishonorable means to accomplish his aims. He has the deep set, rat-like eyes, lobeless ears, and undershot jaw generally attributed to criminals. If he happens to feel in a good mood he may be fair to you; otherwise there is no semblance of justice in his actions nor any appeal from his decisions. On the morning when my friend appeared he evidently was not in a good humor, for he would allow him to order no more goods, although at Chirstmas time he relented, my friend receiving an order then.

In the fall of 1917 when the government inspector from Washington arrived we had an extra good dinner; jelly being served in addition.

A man by the name of Popoff, doing five years for counterfeiting, went to sick call and instead of being laid in was put in the hole for playing off sick. Later a poem that he had written was refused by the editor of the pirson paper, this editor being appointed by the warden from his staff of "stool-pigeons." Popoff had an invention which aimed to improve the submarine which he desired to have patented, but the deputy warden would not allow him to communicate with the patent office.

Deputy Brock was a kind man personally, but he allowed the prison politicians to get special favors for themselves and their friends; there being, of course, the third mess for politicians and "stool-pigeons." This is called the beefsteak mess. You see there is a class struggle in prison as well as on the outside.

Because of these grievances and the injustice in general Popoff felt that if he could cause officials from Washington to investigate conditions at the prison he would be accomplishing much towards getting justice for himself and the other prisoners. On December 27, 1917, Popoff struck Deputy Brock on the back of the head with an iron bar and killed him. He was chained with his hands above his head from the bars of his cell for twenty-seven days. At his trial several politicians who had not seen the murder appeared to testify against Popoff. He was given life imprisonment in Atlanta; sentence to begin at the expiration of his five year bit. He was immediately put in the hole and has been kept there for fifteen months now, every effort being made to develop his worst instincts by the inhuman treatment which he receives.

At the time of the above tragedy I was working on the paint gang; my business allowing me to have access to many parts of the prison, I heard many prisoners say, "Popoff got the wrong fellow; he should have hit the warden instead." William McCoy, 65 years of age, of the famous McCoy-Hatfield feudists in Va., who was doing five years for trying to start a revolution against the draft and the capitalist class of his state, was reported to have made the above statement, and was put in the hole by the warden. Zerbst called me to see if I had anything to do with the murder. I told him that if I had been in favor of murdering that I would have enlisted; and convinced him that I had had nothing to do with the affair.

In February, 1918, when Frank Marrion, having served ten years in prison, criticized the U. S. penitentiary in the Atlanta papers against the unjust treatment which they were receiving. The next morning after Marrion left, a prisoner asked for a clean bowl at the breakfast table, such request being of common occurence. This prisoner was told that 30 days of his "good time" would be taken away because he was trying to start a riot; when in fact he knew nothing of Marrion's article.

On Saturday and Sunday afternoons I usually played basket ball. One Sunday early in March I forgot to wear my basket ball shoes so I did not play that day. I met a prisoner out on the ball grounds who wanted me to read a poem contained in a letter that had been sent to him. I did so and conversed with him for less than five minutes.

Later as we were going to our cells a guard by the name of De Moss called me out of line, asking me my name and number. In a surprised tone I gave him this information, whereupon he said, "Oh, I'm not going to report you. I just wanted to ask you about some color cards, as I'm going to paint my house." I told him to come down to the paint shop the next day and we would look over the color cards and thought no more about it.

The next afternoon I was called before Deputy Warden Schaun, who said that DeMoss had turned in a report against me for plotting against officers, saying that he had noticed me the day before talking to a certain follow, and that he could not get near enough to us to hear what we were saying, for every time he would approach we would look frightened and move away. He said he was sure that we were plotting.

I had to laugh, and told the deputy how preposterous such a charge was, and of the lie that DeMoss had told in saying that he would not report me.

"Oh, DeMoss is one of the old guards here and would not tell a lie," the deputy said.

I suggested that if he would tell one lie that he would probably tell another one and said that I wanted to face him; but "prison justice" does not allow you to face your accusers. I said that I had not seen a guard while conversing with this other fellow and that I had not tried to move away. Schaun said something about my plotting to get over the wall, and would not allow me to talk any more, and ended the conversation by telling me that I was not allowed to go out in the yard for an indefinite period.

At this time I was foreman of the paint gang, and asked to be transferred to outdoor work in the construction gang, fearing that continual indoor living would be deterimental to my health.

Upon reporting to construction work the next week and asking the guard for permission to leave the gang for a few minutes, he said:

"Alright, Hennacy, 7438; I got your number, so step lively."

I was much surprised for this was a new guard whom I had never met before. The work consisted of excavating preparatory for the construction of the new cotton mill. Jacklets, the guard, would make us work in the drizzling rain when we had no change of clothing and no means of drying our wet garments.

At this time I was troubled with neuralgia and toothache. Some prisoners worked under cover, digging and loading wheelbarrows, while others wheeled the dirt out in the rain to a bank and dumped it. Everyone wanted an outdoor job and hated to push a "Georgia buggy." There generally was a rotation of jobs for all. One morning while working in the rain my tooth hurt so much that I asked the guard if I could work indoors until I felt better.

"I have to stand in the rain myself and run the risk of getting pneumonia," he replied.

"Yes, but you have a raincoat and rubbers," I rejoined.

"What do I care about your toothache; it don't hurt me any," he growled.

I asked him to take me up to the hospital so I could get laid in, but he said he would take me to the deputy instead and have me put in the hole if I didn't get to work. As it was only half an hour until dinner time, I decided to wait until afternoon and then go before the deputy. But after dinner it rained so hard that work was impossible, so I was saved this time.

Later I was placed under "chain-gang" Hughes, one of the most cruel guards in the penitentiary. We had to wheel loads of concrete up a steep incline. About forty of us were lined up as if the prisoner at the head of the line [illegible]

[illegible] About this time we were given orders that for dinner on Friday's. I took part in the agitation for a silent strike; writing up posters calling on the prisoners to stay in their cells and refuse to go to dinner on Friday. The strike was a success and we had no more fish.

When you have been deprived of your privileges for three months you are supposed to address a slip to the deputy asking to be reinstated. I did so early in June and he refused my request. As is the custom I then appealed to the warden. Accordingly I was called to his office on June 7th. He read my request and I told him the circumstances of the case.

"Why, DeMoss is one of the most conscientious guards we have. If he would do an injustice to a prisoner he would seek him out and apologise to him," said Zerbst.

I replied that I would like to talk to DeMoss fact to face and have him repeat those charges against me.

"Here you are wanting to go out in the yard, when in fact you agitated on the outside and still talk Socialism in here, too," said Zerbst.

"I don't deny that, for I consider that I have a right to express what I think is right in a free country," I replied.

"I think you are a plain fool," he said, angrily.

"That is a matter of opinion," I rejoined.

"Why, the last reports I have had are that you are plotting to kill officers. Eighteen persons have expressed their willingness to testify against you, and you have been agitating about other things, too," said the warden, rising from his chair and pounding on the table.

I told him that as far as plotting to kill officers was concerned that he himself had admitted in January that I was not the kind of a fellow who would commit such crimes. And asked him if I had been doing so much plotting why he did not catch me red-handed instead of framing-up on me.

At this he flared up and said.

"It makes no difference whether you are guilty of plotting to kill or not; I have no time to investigate, but I am going to put you in solitary anyhow."

"Here, guard, take this fellow," he yelled to Dean, the guard in the front hall.

When Dean delivered me to Fry to take me to solitary he said:

"Give it to him hard, the warden said."

I was seached and put into a cell by myself in isolation. The cell was about 20 feet long, 8 feet wide and 20 feet high. A very dirty window was at the top of the far end of the cell. In the middle of the wooden door was a small hinge, which when lifted up from the outside enabled the guard to peer through the intervening glass and see the inside of the cell. A small funnel-shaped hole about the size of a pencil was in the center of this hinge through which some one was generally peeping to see if the inmate of the cell was doing anything which was not permitted.

On this day the white bread ovens were broken down, so I was fed on corn bread and water for four days. I asked Deputy Schaun if I was allowed to have a Bible and he replied:

"You are allowed to have anything you can get."

"But how am I to get one?" I asked.

"I don't know," he growled, as he walked away.

At last after I had asked for a Bible several times I received one in two weeks. Of course I was allowed to receive no mail or to communicate with any one outside or inside of the prison. Neither the Protestant or the Catholic chaplains ever came near the hole to inquire after the physical or mental condition of the prisoners.

On Thursdays I was taken just outside of my cell into the hall, where under the strict surveilance of the guard I wash shaved. On Fridays I was allowed to take a bath in a cell across the hall, with a guard present to see that I did not communicate with the negro who handed me my clothes. I now received my regular meals but did not have much appetite.

Each morning the doctor peeped into my cell and asked how I felt.

During the first week I suffered severely from the toothache, and asked him for some medicine, which he sent to me later. The next morning he asked me how my tooth was, and when I told him that I was alright now he immediately turned to the guard, saying:

"We've got him buffaloed," and looked in a sneering way towards me. He evidently thought that I was bluffing about my toothache and was afraid to complain of it the second time.

Even the prison authorities recognize red as the color of revolt, for I was given a red card; as is the custom with those put in solitary, in third grade.

The continued monotony of solitary confinement fixes your mind upon the trivial incidents of meals, shaves, baths, and the visits of the doctor. It either makes or breaks a man; you cannot drift. Only a continual conscious effort will prevent physical or moral degeneracy. I determined that I would do everything within my power to build myself up. Accordingly I took physical culture exercises for half an hour before breakfast, dinner, supper, and before going to bed.

Many days the only break in the killing monotony during eight hours would be the arrival of soggy corn bread and rotten meat for dinner. I did not eat meat nor much greasy food while in the hole, for I realized that without sufficient exercise I could not properly digest this food. No one who has not subsisted on bread and water in solitary confinement for some length of time can appreciate the moral effect of a good meal. I always had the "blues" right after I had expected something half-ways palatable for dinner and was disappointed; just a little extra dainty would make a person see the bright side of life. Fasting in pleasant surroundings is a different thing entirely.

I could see Alexander Berkman's bald head at the tailor shop window across the way sometimes, although it was too dark in the hole for him to see me. I would look at him and renew my courage; for if he had spent four and one-half years in a real dungeon I felt that I could do thirteen months in this hole.

I would walk from corner to corner of my cell eight steps each way. I planned my walking so that I traveled over four miles each day.

The guards in the hall laughed and talked all night so that, although I went to bed at 8 p.m. I never slept before midnight, and would always awaken when the guard turned on my light and slammed the hinge on my door about 3 a. m. Of course I had bed bugs in my cell, but I was used to them now.

Those evening hours were the lonesome ones. I did not worry over my confinement for I knew that it was all a part of the class struggle; but I did worry over the fact that you folks and my sweetheart might not know what the reason was that you could not hear from me. Each night I thought of you all and of my friends and comrades; I thought of our common ideal of Peace, Socialism and Democracy. This kept me from becoming embittered, destructive, and from lowering myself to the level of hatred and fear which animated my persecutors. Sometimes I would feel like picking up a chair and trying to kill one of the damned, smiling hypocrites, who used their refined cruelty to slowly wear me out, instead of the old methods of torture which they condemned.

the Mooney strike on July 4th. [illegible] the entire valley lies peacefully, as if awaiting the storm—the storm that will strike terror into the hearts of our plutocracy—the kind of fear that tells them that their dupes care not to be enslaved any longer. The working class here need now but one thing to hear and feel—of that champion of labor our imprisoned comrade, Eugene V. Debs. To let our fellow slaves know and feel the agonizing torture of a soul destined to die—dying ever so slowly in a man-made prison for the mere lack of their class-consciousness. Yours for the Freedom of all political and industrial prisoners.

If Mooney and Billings were only millionaires, the constitution of California would not imprison them for life on such evidence. [illegible] tion. The objects of constitutions are to insure justice and millionaires always get an interpretation favoring "justice" to themselves.

Mooney and Billings would then have been walking the streets freely for the last three years instead of "doing time" at heart-breaking work in penitentiaries.

No doubt Tom Mooney and his beautiful musician wife would be living in style on Knob Hill right now in San Francisco, if only they were millionaires instead of efficient organizers and teachers of the working class. Young Billings would be free to run luxurious yachts back and forth through the beautiful Golden Gate of San Francisco bay if only he were the son of an Astorbilt or even a convicted war-time billionaire profiteer. But he is only a boot and shoe factory worker with a fine faculty for organization, who makes small wooden models of yachts for fun.

HOW LONG—OH, HOW LONG!

How much longer than three years must Mooney and Billings wait for their freedom—because they are not millionaires?

No amount of poisoned publicity paid for by the Chamber of Commerce millions has been able to destroy the fact that "frame-up" Oxman wrote these letters and that the Rigalls received them by U. S. mail. Still Mooney and Billings remain in prison under life sentences. California will not free them. Organized labor is voting on a general strike program as the weapon of last resort to secure liberty for these two innocent trade union labor organizers and to enforce a "fair trial" which is insured by the United States constitution.

Early in the last week of May more than 700 unions in the United States have voted in favor of the general strike program to begin July 4th. Votes reported to the Mooney federal intervention committee show seven to one favoring the general strike. It is evident that organized labor is in earnest. Poisoned publicity cannot forever keep men from freedom.

RUSS REDS BUILD GREAT SCHOOLS

tional opportunity coming true. At the speakers' table were four men—three ostensibly working men and the fourth a white-collared intellectual. It was a drama they were playing, a drama new to Russia but old to America. They were bringing the schools to the common people.

This workers' university is to have different colleges and departments and on general lines is to follow ordinary universities. Most courses, however, are to be practical, and the whole study course is to fit a student for practical life. Students are to be sent from different districts of soviet Russia, being chosen by the local district authorities, and all expenses while attending college are paid.

IMPERIAL UNIVERSITY TO GO ON.

In no way is the school to interfere with the old Moscow imperial university, meaning that the old intellectual life is to go on, but, in addition, that higher educational opportunities are to be opened to workers who previously were denied college chances.

There is little to quarrel with in the whole Russian attempt at cultural developments. Theaters have been assigned to the working people, new art galleries opened, and every issue of the government and party papers carries a list of free lectures and entertainments for workers.

I have visited a number of these soviet theaters, and have been interested to find with what proprietorial sense the working people attended these theaters. The real working people come here with their families, and, if they choose, they sit through the performances with their hats on—partly due to the cold weather. Ten other theaters are open where the old and new bourgeoisie might go.

Each great trade union of factories takes a block of seats at the soviet theaters, and either gives them out or sells them at a low price to workmen. In all there are seven of these soviet theaters in Moscow, and they have become a sort of new social club of the masses. The men who formerly used to spend their wages and evening drinking vodka now go to the theater and hear a very decent production of the old operas and standard Russian plays.

NO VODKA IN RUSSIA.

Vodka drinking, by the way, is a lost art in Russia. The country is actually absolutely dry. In Petrograd I was confidentially informed that one might possibly round up a bottle of cognac for $60, but in Moscow the cheapest grade was $90, while it is said a short quart of vodka is $39.

There are no two sides to the wet or dry question in Russia. Stamping out vodka at the start of the war was probably one of the really great things the czar did, and the Bolsheviki have seen the wisdom of keeping the country dry.

The rotten court, the parasitic upper class, and vodka kept Russia's millions under the iron heel. When the czar took away vodka he gave the moujik nothing in its place.

The soviets are trying to do this through soviet theaters, concerts, lectures and entertainments. They have opened much that is fine and artistic to the workmen. He is appreciating all this, but he wants the comforts of life and real liberties as well. He wants food, clothing, shoes, and more freedom of expression and [illegible]

THE OHIO SOCIALIST

Official Organ of the Socialist Parties of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and New Mexico

No. 72 | Published at Cleveland, Ohio. | WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1919 | Address all mail to 3207 Clark Ave., Cleveland, O. | $1.00 A Year

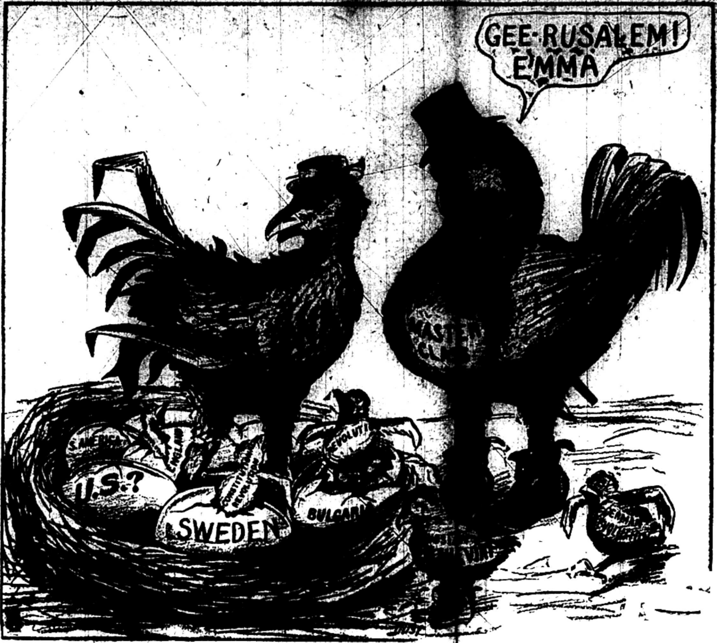
CAPITALIST "NON-PARTISANS" WILL REDEEM PIQUA, O.

You can be a Republican, or a Democrat, or a Bull Moose in Piqua, Ohio, if you want to, but you can't vote for either in the coming city election. The political and economic bosses of the city have seen to that. If you are a Socialist you can vote the ticket. If you are not a Socialist you must vote the Non-Partisan ticket, for that is the only ticket there is. It doesn't make any difference what your convictions are. You may be a dyed in the wool Republican, or you may have voted the good old Democratic ticket all your life, like your father before you, nevertheless you will have to lay your lifelong principles (or prejudices) upon the shelf as far as voting is concerned at the next election in Piqua. You will have to do it because the political and economic bosses of Piqua have, in the fullness of their wisdom (and fear of Socialism), decreed that it should be.

Piqua is one of the cities which the Socialists took control of two years ago. They elected a mayor, two councilmen and the safety director. Needless to say, the old gang who had always run city matters to suit themselves and their favorites have been exceedingly sore since that fatal day. About every dirty piece of skull duggery that could be pulled off has been tried in order to get the Socialist administration in bad not only with the voters and workers generally, but attempts were made to secure the conviction and imprisonment of the Socialist officials upon charges preferred by the government alleging interference with its war activities. All means to oust them failed, however, much to the disgrace and chagrin of the gang which were at the bottom of the persecution. Socialism is stronger in Piqua today than at the time of the election two years ago. This fact is admitted by the opponents of Socialism there.

It is for this reason that the two old parties have wedded and now masquerade under the non de plume of "Non-Partisan" which in reality means "non-worker," non-everything except the old gang methods and control of the city by the big business element of Piqua. The mouthpieces of this hybrid organization admit that even by combining all opposition parties against the Socialists their chances of election are mighty slim. But this is the only method whereby they can have the smallest hope of winning, hence the throw.

At a recent meeting of this bunch of delectables which lasted a whole 25 minutes and was attended by at least that number of sponsors of the organization, a list of candidates were "nominated" for all city offices. J. Harrison Smith heads the ticket as candidate for mayor. Smith is an also ran of the vintage of several seasons back who always failed to reach the goal. Piqua workers are on to the game and while the Non-Partisans fret and fume and slander the workers' candidates, they just go ahead sawing wood and adding to the education of the wage slaves along educational lines, knowing that when the workers once learn the meaning of Socialism they will just naturally have to give it their support.



"UNEXPECTED RESULTS"

STILL ON DECK

Like our beloved spokesman, Gene Debs, as he entered prison, the editor of the Eye Opener wishes to announce that "We are still on deck and fighting."

A very illuminating letter has just been received from William H. Lamar, solicitor for the post office department (commonly referred to as the nation's thought controller, as follows:

Postoffice Department, Office of the Solicitor.

Washington, D. C., May 15, 1919.

Mr. Louis Engdahl, Editor The Eye Opener, 1642 N. Halstead Street, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: Referring to your communication of March 25, I beg to inform you that the action you request this office to take in regard to the February issue of The Eye Opener would amount to censorship, which the law does not permit. I am accordingly without authority to comply with your request.

Yours very truly,

W. H. LAMAR, Solicitor.

The February issue of The Eye Opener contained 12 pages. The issue was declared non-mailable after being held up for two weeks. A letter was thereupon addressed to Mr. Lamar urging that the post-office censorship indicate four or eight pages of the 12 that would be considered mailable. After a delay of almost two months the above reply was received. The postoffice holds that to kill an entire issue is not censorship. This is only another mystery in the mysterious censorship used here in the United States to crush a free press.

Our record for the year 1919 is as follows: January issue sent out after being held up five weeks; February issue declared non-mailable after being held up two weeks;

VICTORY BONDS SOLD AT THE POINT OF GUNS

When it comes to teaching by example the essential principles of democracy, the kind of democracy that the world has been made safe for, the faker patriots of Holland, Mich., take the cake from anything that has come down the pike since Wilson took the middle of the road.

During the late Victory loan drive some business men grew sore at two Socialists, Ryner Dyk and his father, because they refused to subscribe, for good and sufficient reasons to themselves. Thereupon the super-patriots gathered about them some discharged soldiers and visited the homes of the comrades.

During the search of the premises which ensued, a quantity of Socialist literature was discovered. These as well as personal letters and communications were run through by the valiant laborers in the field of democracy.

When the comrades again refused to subscribe they became the target for every kind of vile curses that could be mouthed. They were called pro-German and damned by each and all for their Socialist beliefs. So low have the defenders of this variety of democracy fallen in their zeal to spread its virtues over the earth that nothing is too vile for them to resort to.

When in spite of their curses and abuse the comrades still refused to be bulldozed, five guns in the hands of the soldiers were drawn upon the comrades. In this manner the

WAR PLACES AMERICAN BANKER IN SUPREMACY

Bankers Plan Imperialistic Rule Over World. Workers Not Consulted. Sphinx' Question Still Unanswered.

The United States emerges from the Great War in a position of unprecedented economic power. In 1912 America was still a borrowing nation. In 1919 she is the creditor of the world.

The property of other nations is heavily mortgaged by war debts. The debt of Great Britain equals 44.4 per cent of her total wealth. The debt of Italy is 50.4 per cent; the debt of France 54.6 per cent; the debt of Germany 60 per cent; and that of Austria-Hungary 96 per cent of the total national wealth. The entire present national debt of the United States is only 9.6 per cent of her total wealth.

The United States has loaned the Allies a total of nine and a quarter billions. She holds a mortgage on almost ten per cent of their net wealth. The net wealth of Great Britain (wealth minus debt) is 50 billions; of France 30 billions; of Italy 12 billions; of Japan 27 billions. The net wealth of the United States is 225 billions. The United States has been forced to bond less than 10 per cent of her total wealth. Her net wealth is greater—nearly 100 per cent greater—than the combined net wealth of her principal allies.

The value of exports over imports (the trade balance) for the calendar year 1918 amounted to over three billions of dollars in favor of the United States. The indications are that for 1919 there will be a trade balance almost as heavy.

Before the war billions of American securities were owned in Europe. Of these securities two and a half billions have been brought back to the United States.

There is in the United States over three billions in gold money. Compare this amount with the 400 million stock of gold in the Bank of England, and the one billion, one hundred million stock of gold in the Bank of France. The United States has vastly more than her share of the world's gold supply.

The United States is the greatest manufacturing nation on earth. She produces, through high industrial efficiency, a huge annual surplus of wealth, which must seek investment somewhere. Prior to the war, the foreign investments of Great Britain, Germany and France totaled nearly forty billion dollars. The foreign investments of the United States were a mere nothing compared with this amount.

Now the tables are turned. German foreign investments are wiped out. Her surplus is gone. Great Britain and France will be busy restoring the economic life at home. The United States today is prepared to invest more money in foreign enterprises than any nation in the world. From this time forward, she will be in a position of unquestioned superiority as a lending nation. The United States is on the verge of a period of financial imperialism that will eclipse anything that modern society has known. Resources, efficiency, investable surplus, freedom from heavy debt, equipment with adequate man-power—in all of these directions, the United States far outdistances her nearest competitor.

Competition for trade and for investment oportunities will be very bitter during the next few years. It is little wonder that France and Great Britain are seeking protection in a Triple Alliance with the huge reservoirs of American credit. Will this Triple Alliance hold when these reservoirs, filled to overflowing, threatens to submerge the capitalism in less favored lands?

Manifest destiny is calling the United States to take her position as the greatest financial imperialist nation on earth. Her economic future possesses all of the allurements that vast wealth and unchallengable power can command. In a few—a very few years—there will be, not a "Big Five;" not a "Big Three," but a "Big One," and that one will be the United States.

The bankers already have recognized this fact. They have accepted it in the person of Thomas W. Lamont, member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., financial advisor to the American peace delegation in Paris; and leader of the group of international bankers that is to be responsible for the Chinese loans.

The economic supremacy of the United States is not a theory. It is a fact. Manifest destiny is directing the Ship of State. Isolation has been abandoned. The theory that American diplomacy could not be expected to back American investments has been forgotten. Administrative officials and financiers agree on the principle and on the practice. The United States is to be the money-lender of the world!

Thus far, it is the bankers who have spoken. These plans are bankers' plan. The people are still to be heard from.

What do the American people think of imperialism? Are they content to pay the price? Are they willing to support a huge navy; equip and maintain a large standing army; bind themselves in alliances with foreign powers; engage in petty quarrels; participate in devastating wars; give their fathers, husbands and sons for cannon fodder; labor, sweat, produce the immense surplus of wealth that will be needed to supply the demand for American capital? Are they satisfied—the masses of the people—to live narrow lives in narrow houses, while the owners of wealth and the holders of power wallow in luxury? Are the American people ready to pay this price?

Others have been willing to pay. The Roman workers paid. So did the workers of France. The British workers have been paying for more

It's High Time We Socialists Quit Trying To Build Our House With Borrowed Tools

Raise your eyes half an inch.

Read the headline once again.

Does it mean anything to you?

We hope it does. It should, because as socialists we have been most criminally guilty of the "borrowing habit." Fact of the matter is, we, as socialists, have about depended entirely upon the good will of our neighbors (capitalists) for about every thing we needed in the building of our house.

We never thought it was necessary to own anything with which we worked. It was so much easier to borrow of our friend the enemy.

Let us draw a parallel.

You are starting to build a house. The ground is before you and you have a grand blue print of your future dwelling from cellar to garret. All the material is to hand ready for assembling. You pull off your coat ready for the big job.

But you have no tools to build with. Not a spade, nor a pick to dig the basement; not a hammer nor saw, nor square nor plane. All the material with which to erect a dwelling for the comfort of your old age, for the happy childhood of your children and their children, plenty of labor power just aching to get busy at the work of construction; but not a tool in your possession.

Then it dawns upon your mind that your house will be a long time unoccupied unless you get some tools on the job. You feel in your pockets only to discover that you haven't even a jackknife. Some how it doesn't occur to you to invest a few dollars in shovels, picks, saws, hammers and other essential implements of the building trade. Not at all. But you have a most brilliant idea. You think, "sure, I can't build this house (and Lord knows I need it bad enough) without tools and though I haven't any, friend capitalist has a full chest of the very best. True, enough, he and I don't agree as a general thing, and quite often we have considerable trouble and come to mortal blows, but maybe he will lend them to me." It's a great idea, so aborrowing you go.

Well, you get the tools and you start to excavate for the foundation that is to be laid beneath your house. And just about the time you have made a good start and are beginning to take pride in your achievements, and faith in the development of your work, along comes your friend the owner of the tools. He has a bad look on his face which proves that he and you have had another "difference." And he wants his tools returned. It doesn't cut any ice with him that your house is unfinished, that the roof is but half on and the interior exposed. It isn't his house. But the tools ARE his and whether you like it or not you have to return them for they are HIS. He just owns these tools or borrows them, whether loaned them as long as it suited HIS convenience. Your house can rot in the rain for all he cares.

This is an example of what we socialists have been doing all along. We have started to build the house of the New Society. But we have neglected to get possession of the tools to build with. We have depended upon securing the use of the tools owned by our capitalist enemies with which to do the building. And many's the time we have paid dearly for our folly. Often we have had to suspend operations because he refused to longer lend to us. Many times our house has been left open to the winds and storms on account of our neglect in so providing ourselves against the day of adversity.

Yes, we have paid dearly enough for it it would seem. We have seen our propaganda obstructed, our papers and magazines destroyed. The work and sacrifice of many hard working comrades utterly thrown away as a result of our dependence upon our enemies. We had the borrowing habit and we used it to the limit. We became experts in the use of it and as a result we learned to our sorrow that we borrowed more trouble than anything else.

That is the lesson we have learned of the past. That's what the result of our building with borrowed tools has taught us. And that is why we are going to quit We refuse to see the work of the Socialist movement disrupted, disorganized by some owner of the tools with which we must work which by all the rules of common sense should be our own. We refuse to see our papers that have been built up by the hardest of hard work, worry and effort destroyed by some owner of a print shop which is no better and often not half so well equipped as one we could outfit ourselves if we only would think so. We refuse to see the progress of our movement hampered because of the fact that we refuse to do the obviously necessary thing—own the tools with which we work. We refuse to longer tolerate such an impossible condition of affairs.

We are going to quit trying to build our house with our enemies in possession of the tools we must use, and likely at any moment to withdraw them. Comrades we are going to get those necessary tools. We can get them just as soon as we realize the foolishness of doing without them. We know there are thousands upon thousands of socialists and near socialists who agree that borrowing of our sworn enemies is the most foolish thing possible. We know they will help us to quit the evil habit of borrowing and establish our own PRINTING PLANT just as soon as they learn we wish to. Perhaps you are one of these comrades who realize that the future of the Socialist movement depends a great deal upon whether the Socialist Party we are to control our own printing plant or have it controlled by our capitalist enemies.

In possession of a modern printing press and equipment the Socialist Party can accomplish wonders in the way of propaganda. Without such equipment, our enemies hold the handle of the whip.

It is for these reasons that the Socialist Party of Ohio is carrying on this campaign for a party-owned printing plant and making a drive for $10,000 dollars to pay for it. And while you read these lines comrade, ask yourself if it isn't possible for you to help a bit in getting that ten thousand together for this purpose. We are sure that you can boost a bit—perhaps a good deal more than you thing at first until the NECESSITY of it dawns upon you.

The campaign has just opened, but already the response has been most generous. Comrades from many parts of the country have proved by their financial response to this call that they are ready to subscribe the needed funds to make it possible to quit building with borrowed tools. Below are the names of comrades who have subscribed to the Ohio Socialist Party Press Fund during the last week. They have subscribed the amount at the head of the column in which their name appears. Next week we shall have a larger number of names to report and we want to see YOURS among them. Let us hear from you this week.

May Day 1919 a Monument To the Revolution

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT,
Director of the Department of Organization and Propaganda, Socialist Party.

Never was International Labor Day more widely, enthusiastically and courageously celebrated than on May 1st, 1919.

From the largest industrial center to the remotest community, comrades one and all clasped hands upon that day to pledge a renewal of their determination to free our political prisoners, yes—and to free the world from capitalism, the arch-criminal of the ages.

The world is afire with a new purpose. The workers in their millions, with clenched fists and determined mien, are marching forward, claiming the earth as their own. Nothing can stop them. They have risen in their might. They have gained sight. They have learned the weakness of that arrogant minority in whose keeping the wealth of the ages has rested.

Forward and onward to a new world; a masterless world—that was the spirit of May Day. And it was this march of the millions that the city czars and the hoodlum hirelings of our industrial lords tried to stop. Just as well try to stop the earth in its orbit or the ebb and flow of the tide.

Let this be remembered forever. Capitalism is in a panic. It jumps in fear of its own shadow. It invented bomb plots and published nation-wide through its kept press that the Socialists were going to begin a bloody revolution on May Day. All this had its purpose. This was the stage-setting which upon May Day gave them the excuse to assault peaceful demonstrations of workers gathered to express their joy at the steady progress of mankind toward industrial freedom.

IT WAS NOT THE SOCIALISTS NOR THE THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS OF LABOR UNIONISTS WHO RIOTED UPON MAY DAY.

No more peaceful demonstrations were ever organized than these thousands of May Day meetings and parades which after all only constituted a showing of numbers constituting the forward looking army of labor.

IT WAS CAPITALISM THAT RIOTED. Capitalism in hysterics. Capitalism tottering into its grave.

But why pay attention to these last dying kicks of a rotten order. The lesson of May Day, 1919, is not to be found in the viciousness of capitalism so much as in the solidarity of labor. And May Day, 1919, proved that labor is uniting.

In cities where demonstrations of 2,000 workers were voted great successes in previous years, demonstrations of from 20,000 to 30,000 workers were had this year. In communities that never heard of International Labor Day the ukases of city czars abrogating free speech and assemblage were defied and workers gathered to celebrate and demonstrate. Yes, even in hundreds of rural communities, far away from the field of class clashes, comrades gathered in meeting to protest the imprisonment of Debs and all other political prisoners and to demand their unconditional and immediate release.

Hundreds of thousands of protest postal cards passed through the mails on May 1st, 1919. And "FREE THEM" posters by the thousands advertised our May Day meetings. Hundreds of thousands of Socialist Party membership application blanks were distributed May 1st and thousands of new members were added to the ranks of the only workers' political party.

The Socialist Party may well be proud of its leadership in the thousands of May Day mass demonstrations this year. Never before did the party machinery respond more loyally and never before did it perform its duty so well.

Debs' May Day message, Kate Richards O'Hare's May Day message and the messages of other imprisoned and convicted Socialists were listened to by hundreds of thousands of workers—men, women and children anxious for the new word which spells the new day. May 1st, 1919, was indeed the harbinger of proletarian brotherhood and industrial democracy.

We want peace! But it is the peace of a class-free world that we demand. The working class has hoped, worked, fought, suffered and died generation after generation. It now sees the red dawn of the rising sun of Socialism in the east. Taking lessons from the lands where the Sun of Socialism now shines brightest it is assuming a more erect posture in this class divided United States. It is gaining in courage. It demands its rights.

There was a new spirit abroad in the land upon May 1st, 1919. And it is that which makes May Day 1919, a monument to the revolution.

To the thousands of comrades who so unflinchingly stood by their colors, who so painstakingly organized the thousands of May Day demonstrations, who so willingly gave their co-operation, to these thousands the Department of Organization and Propaganda, Socialist Party, expresses its sincere appreciation.

Ever onward and forward. There is no road to yesterday. Tomorrow belongs to us. And in this day let every comrade prove worthy of the future that lies before us.

LABOR CRUSHED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

In Japan the persecution of Socialists is as severe as ever. My husband was imprisoned for the fifth time last autumn, with him a number of comrades also. It was on account of some labor papers which were very moderate. He came in February, but he is not yet quite well.

The foreign books which are prohibited importation amount to more than 800 kinds, among them most of Socialist books. The books sent by Kerr & Co. were mostly confiscated, the Commmunist Manifesto also.

The English paper, "Japan Advertiser," was suppressed recently because it reprinted the Japanese Socialists' resolutions sent to the Bolsheviki. We know very little about the disturbances in Korea, because the government does not allow the papers to report about it. You may well imagine in what situation we are here in Japan. No liberty of press and speech at all. Even the personal freedom of the people is one of the very limited kinds, for the government is always suspicious and spying on us. The mere term of "socialism" is enough to frighten the government. And no open discussion on socialism is allowed. The government declared even the essays against socialism may be exposed to the danger of suppression, because through them people may know something about the true nature of socialism, or may serve to arouse the curiosity of the people and urge them to study about it.

The strikes and labor unions are not yet allowed. Laborers are shamelessly exploited. The factory laws there are of course very insufficient in themselves, but the government is too weak to enforce them upon the capitalist. Can you believe that most Japanese girl workers' working day is 18 hours? Their annual income $50 average. The official report tells us that 13,000 girl workers are dying of consumption every year. They have no chances to be enlightened by outer influences because most of them are shut up in the dormitories. The cases of their ill treatment do not attract much attention because they know no outside people, and no capitalist paper consents to write about such cases. As for the labor paper, the government is always anxious to suppress it and imprison its editors. After all, the Japanese people are living under the darkest oppression of of bureaucracy. And as the people's discontent is growing stronger, the oppression becomes severer.

The government forbids Socialists to go abroad. Many comrades want to go abroad, but they can not. Comrade Sakai wanted to attend the conference at Berne, but the government did not give him the passport. The government is in utmost fear of the Bolsheviki influences. They have no conviction in their strength against the democratic tendency, so they take every means to suppress it beforehand out of fears.—From a Letter From a Japanese Comrade.

Manifesto of Workers' Council of Waist and Dress Industry

The recent conference of the Waist and Dress Industry, held in the People's house, New York, May 3rd and 4th, 1919, indicates a healthy move on the part of a section of New York's workers, toward industrial democracy. This is the first industry in the city that has successfully established a council basis in its workshops along Russian and British lines, and promises to be the forerunner of a nation-wide movement for the emancipation of the proletariat.

What was only a few weeks ago estimated as a mere handful of persecuted workers, libelled and misrepresented by the yellow and so-called radical sheets alike, miraculously flourished at this conference to the proportions of over fourteen thousand (half the recognized industry) represented by 320 delegates elected in the various shops.

All through the meeting, a spirit of protest, not only against existing conditions, but even more strongly against the false leaders of labor and stagnant trade unionism was keenly felt. Scott Nearing, in opening the conference, vividly portrayed the evils of craft unionism and spoke in favor of Workers' Councils in every industry to replace the incompetent and harmful officialdom of dying trade unionism. This matter was dwelt upon in the speeches of some of the members of the previous executive committee, whose attitude to trade unionism was no less antagonistic.

At the conclusion of a two-day sitting, the following manifesto was unanimously adopted.

We, 320 shop delegates of the Waist and Dress Industry, at a conference held at the People's house, 7 E. 15th street, New York City, May 3rd and 4th, 1919, realize that trade unions, instead of bringing about class-consciousness and solidarity among the workers and uniting them against their exploiters, breaks them into craft groups and thereby weakens them and serves the interests of the employing class. We also realize that our emancipation from life-long drudgery depends entirely upon our solidarity and class-consciousness.

We, therefore, proclaim to all the workers of the Waist and Dress Industry the inauguration of a Workers' Council.

The Workers' Council sets out to educate and organize the workers along class-conscious and industrial lines; to break the corrupt and demoralizing influence of craft-union officialdom; to have the workers ready to go on with production when the time comes for them to take over the industries.

We urge the workers in each shop to elect shop committees which shall handle all grievances between the workers and their employers. These shop committees shall meet in general conference to adjust problems concerning the entire industry. The time has come when the workers must prepare to take charge of the industries.

We, therefore, call on the workers in every industry to take matters into their own hands, form workers' Councils, and manifest their allegiance to the rising solidarity of the workers the world over.

It is obvious from this manifesto that this is no alleviative step, but a radical advance inspired by the successful introduction of similar systems in several European countries. The shop committees are autonomous, but are joined in an industrial federation for matters pertaining to the industry at large, and are guided by the basic principles of the Workers' Council.

It is not to be wondered at that this thorough-going organization should meet with opposition in its initial phases, not only from the common foe—the capitalist—but, sad to say, also from those who are sitting in the saddle of the present labor movement.

This opposition is analogous to the blind war waged against labor's true friends in Germany, and, formerly, in Russia, by the Scheidmann and Kerensky factions. But opposition is strongest when the seat of reaction is endangered. The seed of rebellion has taken root in American soil. It was inevitable, when revolution was flourishing throughout the world.

Workers, you are the weavers of your own destiny! For ages you have wrought yourselves a fate of misery and degradation. It is for you, now, to weave a new fate—to usher in an era of social equality and brotherhood! Onward for the goal!

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, The most sacred traditions of our country have been glorified in the thought that, since the founders of this great republic were political and religious exiles, it was a foregone conclusion that the United States of America must always be a "Haven of Refuge" for the political and religious exiles of ALL countries; not tradition alone, but our common school histories have persistently taught these ideals, and an amendment to our national constitution expressly stipulates that "The rights of the citizenship to free press, free speech and free assemblage shall not be suspended or abridged;" and,

Whereas, The development of the present capitalist system with its autocratic control of the appointment of the Judges of the Supreme Court has filled those positions with men who have ASSUMED the power to set aside these most sacred rights of the citizenship and, at the behest of their "Economic Masters" impose sentences of from ten (10) to twenty (20) years' imprisonment upon any who are brave enough to exercise their constitutional right of publicly expressing their honest convictions; and,

Whereas, The passage of the "Dick Militia" law, the "Conscription" and other militarist laws culminating in the enactment of this most obnoxious "Espionage" law, are calculated to completely destroy the spirit and purpose of our most cherished traditions and ideals and establish in their stead the most reactionary and despotic "Autocracy of Wealth" the world has ever known, thus making the blood-stained footprints of Washington's army at Valley Forge and the more recent drenching of Europe with Americans' blood an absolutely vain and meaningless sacrifice if we now submit to these usurpations,

Therefore resolved, That all loyal and patriotic citizens should DEMAND, and all who subscribe to these resolutions DO demand, the immediate withdrawal of all United States representatives to the present peace conference at Paris, and the severance of all relations with foreign countries which seek to bind us in any "League of Nations" having for its purpose the perpetuity of the present war-breeding Imperial-Capitalist-System; the immediate withdrawal from foreign countries and the DISCHARGE of all officers and enlisted men now in the military service of the United States; the immediate repeal of militarist laws (including the Espionage law) which endangers our democratic institutions, and the immediate discharge of all those men and women who have been arrested, convicted or who are now in prison as a result of the usurpation of power in the enactment and enforcement of the Espionage law; and be it further

Resolved, That all who subscribe to these resolutions and demands, will do all in their power to unite all liberty loving people upon the only peaceful method we may employ to emphasize our earnestness in this demand, upon a program for a general cessation of all work beginning on (the date to be decided later) and continuing until these demands are complied with; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions shall be circulated among all Civic, Federated and Fraternal organizations for signatures, that copies be sent to our state legislators and to our representatives in congress.

Kenmore Ohio, May Day Resolutions Committee.

Paste this resolution upon a sheet of paper, sign and circulate it among your friends, then mail to your state legislators and representatives in congress.

There are 76 lawyers in the U. S. senate and 320 of the 440 members of the house of representatives at Washington are lawyers; and they are but attorneys of the great industrial combinations who are the real rulers of the government.—Ex-Senator R. F. Pettigrew.

[illegible] Wilson [illegible] Good Samaritan [illegible] in his oil and his wine and now he is trying to set the unfortunate one on his own ass, preparatory to conducting him to the inn where safety and entertainment are provided for both great and small. Presently, doubtless, he will take out two-pence, and depart his way, though, to be sure, the perfect fulfillment of this pleasing parallel will be seriously jeopardized if, as some contend, the Modern Good Samaritan intends to charge interest on the disbursements which his bowels will have caused him to make."—From the Scottish Review.

EGYPT'S SORROW

The Egyptian agricultural laborer or fellah is the great and most important asset of the country. Under the English protectorate, as under the English occupation, his lot is the worst in any civilised country, most certainly worse than the worst laborer in the most backward country in Europe. From sunrise to sunset he is tied to the soil for long hours under a broiling sun. He interrupts his continuous labor only to snatch one hasty and utterly inadequate meal, consisting of a small piece of kneaded wheaten or maize bread, seasoned with a very little salad, and only occasionally with a little cheese. His only clothing in all seasons is a short cotton shirt. His dwelling is a vile hut of the most primitive construction, some three or four yards square, with no aperture except the door, and with a small chest for its only furniture. It cannot be otherwise, when his day's wage is no more than from eight pence to ten pence. There is, of course, no such thing as a legal minimum wage for the fellah.

The fellah has the advantage of no insurance, accident, or relief laws, and he has no legal protection of any kind against the most scandalous exploitation. Lacking the most elementary provision for securing hygienic conditions, he is the prey of all kinds of endemic diseases and epidemics. Amongst his class infant mortality rises to appalling heights. Thus a French authority, M. de Chambert, in his "Enquete sur la condition du fellah egyptien," in 1909 calculated that three-fourths of the children of the fellahin die at a very early age. Within recent years, too, a new scourge, which always accompanies advancing English civilization, is playing havoc with the fellahin. This is drink. Of late years under English influence and encouragement, the fellah, the most temperate of all laborers, has taken to alcohol, manufactured in small Egyptian distilleries, and frightfully adulterated, in order that his miserable wage may allow him to purchase it. Having conquered the population of the towns, where it is consumed not only in the cafes and drink shops, but as well in the groceries (is not the tempting spirit grocery a right British institution?) alcohol is now rapidly conquering rural Egypt. And what is more serious, although we do not agree with our Egyptian friends when they considered it more surprising, is that no real supervision of the traffic and no energetic or sincere effort to oppose the spread of this plague has been made by the protecting government of a country where the dominant religion, that of 94 per cent of the population, prohibits the use of alcohol.

Russian Anti-Soviet Propaganda in Germany

Recruiting of Russian Prisoners of War to Be Used Against Soviet Russia.

A recent number of the Leipziger Volkszeitung contains an article that throws an interesting light on the character of the present government of Germany, as well as on those counter-revolutionary elements which are eager to use the Russian prisoners at present still in Germany against the government now in power in their own country. The article indicates that the forces of reaction will stop at nothing in the effort to regain control of their former fields of exploitation. The text of the article is as follows:

The Germany of William II which aided the Russia of the czar, was the backbone of the blackest reaction, conducted a revolutionary propaganda during the war in the entente countries, because it believed it was thus serving its imperialistic aims. The Germany after William II, the Germany of Ebert and Company, is carrying an a similar policy, with this exception: it is now supporting not a revolution beyond its boundaries, but a capitalistic reaction.

In Germany, agitation is being carried on among Russian prisoners, in order to create an anti-Bolshevist army out of them. The propaganda is being managed by Russian officers, who are working hand in hand with the entente commission. The center of operations for this propaganda is in Berlin. It is said that Lvov, who a short time ago was seeking aid in Paris for the Russian bourgeoisie, is now in Berlin for the same purpose. Of course he has not been arrested.

The propaganda is not successful. With the aid of false reports about Russia and promises of money, only a few hundred Russian officers have been gathered for this purpose. They are kept strictly cut off from the outer world. In order to permit no dissatisfaction to arise among them their camp is kept abundantly supplied with money and foodstuffs by American officers.

In Saxony (Leipzig is the largest city in Saxony) this recruiting is also going on. In the prisoners' camp of Ebersdorf, in the last few days, two Russian officers tried, in German, to win over the prisoners for an anti-Bolshevist army. The [illegible] on sending a delegation to the provisions commission in Berlin, in order to provide themselves with prices information. This delegation found that the provisions commission is no longer in existence. They were finally referred to the entente commission. The letter gave them fine words to the effect that in the spring they were to be sent by the entente, for pure love of humanity, to Archangel or to the Denikin army, which, it was said, was the only way of sending them to Russia. But the delegation displayed no eagerness to serve as cannon fodder on the Archangel front or in the Denikin army.

Entente officers and Russian reactionaries are preparing in Germany for a war to be waged by the capitalists of all lands against Socialistic Russia. The [illegible]

[illegible] and [illegible] (particularly the [illegible]) [illegible] have unanimously adopted the following resolutions and signed to [illegible]

WHEREAS, there are now in prison in this country several hundred persons (Eugene V. Debs, Thos. J. Mooney, Wm. D. Haywood, Kate Richard O'Hare, et al.) convicted according to law on various charges, most of which may be summarized as obstructing the United States in the conduct of war; and

WHEREAS, All are victims of an interpretation of the necessary means to secure the welfare and success of the nations in war, and some of them are suffering as the result of a devotion to an interpretation of such means differing from the majority, but presumably no less high-minded and unselfish; and

WHEREAS, The war is now over and this nation should follow the historic example offered by other governments in the past, and set free those prisoners for whose detention a national crisis no longer offers excuse; and

WHEREAS, The political prisoners fall into various classes according to legal definition, but particularly in the people's minds they form two groups: the victims of the selective law and the Espionage Act; and

WHEREAS, Persons were convicted in circumstances of popular excitement, and it might be questioned whether those convicted had, or could have had, a fair and impartial trial; and

WHEREAS, The United States has entered the Congress of Nations with a program of justice and democracy and freedom for all nationalities for a better world for all mankind; and

WHEREAS, No better foundation for its work can be established than an act of amnesty to release those whose imprisonment is a scandal and rock of offense to democracy everywhere; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That we demand as a matter of essential justice to our citizens of faith in our historic democracy and loyalty to our own cause and of a better world, that all political prisoners be set free and the selective service and Espionage Act be immediately repealed; and be it further

RESOLVED, That as inasmuch as we believe to be wholly within our constitutional rights, as American citizens, we will continue to protest collectively and individually, and to support all legal steps taken to the end that all of the aforesaid conditions are fully realized; and be it further

RESOLVED, That copies of these resolutions, properly attested by the chairman and secretary of this meeting be forwarded to the labor press in whom we have the most confidence, also to the president of the United States and to the senators and representatives in congress from the state of Michigan.

Attest;
H. T. AUCKERMAN,

than a century. Now the turn of the American workers has come.

To the people of America, as to the people of every other empire, Fate has presented this question—"The Question of all time." (Written by E. E. Miller.)

"Beside the road of time the gaunt Sphinx lay
Half buried in the dust of cities dead.
A mighty nation came with ringing tread;
The monster rose; the traveler stood at bay
And heard the riddle; 'What is there to say
When idlers feast and toilers lack for bread?
No answer came; a struggling gasp instead

"Told that the Sphinx had clutched another prey.
Empire on empire fell, the question still Unanswered, and today our young land hears
It asked. She hears; her lips half apart with will
To speak; yet she is silent and appears
To halt in sudden doubt 'twixt two replies—
Still closer draws the Sphinx with baleful eyes."

Manifest destiny is calling to America—the manifest destiny of imperialism and world dominion that called to Carthage, Rome, Spain, Germany, Russia and England. The rulers of American economic life—the bankers, manufacturers, merchants, traders—all of the profiteers are answering the summons eagerly; gleefully. For them it means riches, unimagined and boundless power. But the workers—who must carry this imperial program upon their backs—what is their answer to this manifest, imperial destiny?

Letters of Encouragement

Containing [illegible] for the Party-Owned Printing Plant from comrades who realize its great necessity to the Socialist Movement. LET US HEAR FROM YOU THIS WEEK, COMRADE.

WHY DIDN'T WE DO IT SOONER?

"I have never understood," writes Comrade R. F. [illegible] of Steubenville, "why it would not have been advisable long ago to own our printing establishment. It seems to me it would have been much more economical and convenient. I am glad, therefore, that the State Office has arrived at such conclusion." And to this we add, that the Socialist Movement has outgrown the dilly-dally, go-as-you-please methods of the past. Future progress DEMANDS up-to-date methods. That's why we are going to establish a modern printing plant. Help us do it.

HE HAS A REASON TO BE IN THE MOVEMENT.

"Here is my little mite to help buy a printing press of our own. I am in the movement to do all I can." Yours for the International.—H. O. Davis, Nortonville, Ky.

THIS BOOST WILL HELP.

"Enclosed find five dollars to help buy the new press. Success to you."—Dr. W. Van Netta.

A BOOST FROM ANOTHER STATE

Some comrades in Ohio may be surprised to learn of the support which the Ohio Socialist receives from locals and comrades in other states. The Ohio Socialist is one of the most popular Socialist papers in the country with a national circulation. This fact is attested by the ever growing list of subscriptions received from all parts of the country—these subscriptions together with the many letters of encouragement we receive proves this. Last week we reported a five dollar press fund donation from Local Rock Island, Ill. This week we are glad to receive a similar amount from Comrade Dora B. Musser of Local Battle Creek. A letter from the Ohio Socialist to her brings this gratifying result from the local of which she is the secretary.

COMRADE BUNDY RESPONDS.

Comrade Geo. Bundy of Warren, O., ex-state executive committeeman, and Comrade Mrs. Bundy respond this week with a liberal donation of ten dollars each toward the Press Fund.

LOCAL HAMILTON GETS IN THE BIG COLUMN.

Local Hamilton is the first local in Ohio to respond to the party call for the Press Fund. And it is some response, too. Fifty dollars the local sends to the State Office through Secretary Clifford King. Local Hamilton evidently intends to retain its reputation for Socialist activities. It is Hamilton that has the most Ohio Socialist subscribers of any city in the state in proportion to population. Hamilton comrades have proved their fealty to revolutionary socialism many times. Their generous donation to the Press Fund is another indication of the spirit which dominates the comrades of this big socialist stronghold.

HE SEES THE NECESSITY.

"I believe in and see the necessity of the Socialist Party," writes Comrade Repine of Charleroi, Pa. He further states that he is with us as far as he can go and would like to appear in the 2,000 dollar column but being a wage slave he must, for the present, content himself with the two dollar column. We thank you, comrade.

THE LOCALS ARE FALLING IN LINE.

Local Barberton is another Ohio local which contributes to the Press Fund. Five dollars Comrade Secretary C. H. Werner sends us from the local and three dollars from local members. We hope that every local will follow suit and make as liberal a donation as their treasury will allow. In fact, for this particular fund we believe it would be good tactics to hit the local treasuries pretty heavy. What do you think about it, comrades?

OWNERSHIP IS THE THING.

"We want our name in one column as helping to buy the printing press and as we can only spare one dollar, put us there. Ownership, that's it. We certainly think the Ohio Socialist fine. Enclosed find 25c for a bundle."—Jeff Sinnett, Glencoe, Okla.

HE WISHES IT WAS 500.

A note from Comrade T. H. Robertson of Canton, O., states that he wishes his contribution of five dollars was five hundred instead. And so do we, but since it can't be we know there are many hundreds, yes, there are thousands of comrades who can spare one dollar each to help buy a printing press for the Ohio Socialist. What's more they are going to do it, too. Watch them do it!

AND STILL ANOTHER LOCAL CONTRIBUTES.

It's Local Warren, Ohio, this time. Here is the letter from Comrade Secretary C. R. Swope. Read it. Doesn't it sound encouraging? "Enclosed find check for $25 which is a donation from Local Warren for 'Our Party-Owned Press and Printing Plant.'" You will hear from me again soon with a few more to help buy a barrel of ink, ha, ha."

And by the way, admission tickets have been sent to all Party Locals in Ohio for sale to members. Buy them from your secretaries. At the gates they will cost ten cents more than if bought from him.

HERE'S OUR WARNING TO YOU.

Here's our warning to you, comrades. Thousands are planning to be present at the State picnic. And our warning to you is: Plan to be there too. Meet your comrades at the State picnic.

ANOTHER GIGANTIC FAKE.

Another gigantic fake has been pulled by capitalist conspirators. A number of bombs were exploded in a number of cities over the country at about the same hour of the same day in an attempt to fasten upon the radical element of the workers the stigma of murderers and destructionists. The entire bomb episodes from the alleged May Day discoveries of bombs in the mails up to the present time bear all the ear marks of a detestable plot of capitalist conspirators to fasten guilt upon the workers and lay open the road for the enactment of more stringent laws against the few remaining liberties which are allowed us.

We hear very little about the bombs found in the mails May 1st. The daily press made a sensation, very likely prearranged, at the time, but no one has been found who could be connected with them. Perhaps it was not well to go too far in the search. Blood hounds set upon the trail of workers have been known to lead directly to the doors of officers of the law.

The capitalist class have learned that the workers took altogether too seriously the professions of democracy which this nation made during the war. They have learned that democracy has taken on a real meaning to us and that we mean to have some of it here as well as over seas. They realize, too, that we have the power to make democracy a living part of our daily lives, that democracy in the shop and the mill and on the job wherever or whatever it may be has become an aspiration of the workers of this country... Capitalism seeks to destroy the aspirations of the workers, Democracy in industry means the destruction of capitalist control. Capitalism sees the threatened rise of labor to power. It sees its age-long hold upon the world threatened and it cunningly seeks by every means in its power, and they are many and dark, to perpetuate its rule.

We have been told millions of times for months past of the new democracy that was to be a part of our lives when the war was won. It was for this new democracy that all our sacrifices were made. The war is over. Where is this boasted democracy? It does not exist. More laws against the freedom of speech, of the press have been passed by capitalism since the signing of the armistice than during the war. The detestable espionage act is still in operation. The workers' press is muzzled. Workers, if they are known to be Socialists, are not employed. Thousands of members of the working-class are in prison for exercising the privileges which democracy extends to all. This is the kind of democracy that exists in America.

The capitalist class is endeavoring by every possible means to thwart the natural aspirations of the workers. Its continuous cry for weeks past has been for more stringent laws against us. It will go to any extent in its endeavor to hold the workers in bondage. If no reasons exist for the passage of iron laws against the workers it will see that reasons are manufactured. It seeks by its own bloody hands and its vile deeds and conspiracies to make it appear that a reign of terrorism is being inaugurated by the workers against constituted authority. It hopes in this manner to pave the way for drastic laws against the working-class. No methods are too criminal, no means are too vile for this purpose. If bombs judiciously placed can be made to throw approbrium upon the workers, thus creating an apparent excuse for the further suppression of the working-class then it is reasonable to expect that they will be so placed. Capitalism is without morality. The devil himself is a saint compared to the monster.

LET THE AXE FALL.

To one familiar with affairs in the National Office of the Socialist Party at Chicago, familiar with the make up of the National Executive Committee, familiar with the leanings of the members to the "right," with the time honored methods with which it carries on the Party's business, with the history of the activities and the stand upon various questions of party policy and principles of its various members; with these clearly in one's mind, the recent action of seven of this committee which were elected by the rank and file of the Party to do its bidding, in virtually throwing out of our organization nearly 40,000 members, cannot be a surprise except perhaps the scale upon which this seven performed their unjust labors.

That part of the Party which should always be the hub about which Party activities swing has long had the reputation of being the most dead and inactive part of the organization. The Socialist Party has been singularly unfortunate of late years in the selection of the Executive Secretary. This officer has lacked many of the qualities which should be embodied in the character of one filling it. Say what we may, all organization activities are more or less dominated by those in official positions. Their aggressiveness, originality, temperament, the spirit in which their duties are performed are reflected in the work of the Party and are shown in the results accomplished or which fail of accomplishment. Their attitude upon the problems of the Party and the policies which confront it may become a great asset or a great hindrance to the progress of the movement. The rank and file are to blame if the wrong officials have been selected to fill the most important offices in the Party. The rank and file have followed the policy of electing to office those whose names were most familiar, regardless of their ability to fill the position.

World events have hastened a condition which must have inevitably arisen in our Party. The swing to the "Left" or toward revolutionary Socialism and away from the tuirely political socialism must have in time come about. These two elements have long existed within the Party, the Russian revolution as well as that of Germany and Hungary find their reflection in the crisis which has now arisen here and confronts us for solution.

That it could be settled without such an unfortunate and unjust action as these seven National Executive Committeemen have chosen to take, goes without saying. Their action in holding up the referendums of the Party is without parallel in Party history for sheer despotism. It was unnecessary, uncalled for and extremely unjust. Such action by those elected to carry out the will of the membership deserves the severest criticism and condemnation by the membership. That such will be administered goes without saying. The rank and file are in no mood to have Party affairs handled in such a despotic manner.

There is nothing in this situation which should discourage for a moment any red-blooded socialist. In fact, we should all take heart that the crisis has been reached and will the sooner be passed. The Party's swing to the "Left" is proven by the vote upon these national referendums to be so complete that the "right" will be entirely submerged to reappear nevermore.

Every Local of the Party should endorse the resolution of Local Cuyahoga County, which appeared in last week's Ohio Socialist. The welfare of the Party demands that this despotic action of the National Executive Committee be rescinded and the 40,000 members of our Party whose rights have been so arbitrarily overridden, be restored to full and complete membership.

OHIO VOTE ON NATIONAL REFERENDUM "D"

National Referendum "D" to the effect "that the Socialist Party shall participate only in an international congress or conference called by or in which participate the Communist Party of Russia (Bolsheviki) and the Communist Labor Party of Germany (Spartacans), was overwhelmingly carried in Ohio, 1,238 members voting for this motion and 99 voting against it.

Will the national office also hold up this referendum? Will it silence by suppression the voice of the membership upon this question of affiliating only with the real Socialists of Europe. Or will the national office, in true Berger fashion, continue to look longingly at the [illegible] in Germany and [illegible]?

Party News and Views

AKRON CHANGES FORM OF ORGANIZATION.

A letter from Comrade Perry Crites of Akron informs us of the election of the following officers of the Local: Organizer, P. Doyle, 331 Monroe street; recording secretary, J. P. Dieble, 396 S. Main; financial secretary, W. F. Hoffman, 115 Kirkwood; treasurer, A. C. Holloway, Akron Savings and Loan Bldg.; Perry Crites, corresponding secretary, 213 Uhler; literature agent, J. Myers, 366 N. Howard.

Local Akron has discontinued the City Central form of organization. It will hereafter conduct the business of the local in mass meetings to be held the first Sunday afternoon of each month.

LOCAL TOLEDO READY FOR BUSINESS.

An order from Comrade Toohey, organizer for Local Toledo, for 100 initiation stamps would seem to indicate an expected influx of new members. Of course it is reasonable to expect that success would attend the efforts of Local Toledo for this local KEEPS BUSY.

LOCAL YOUNGSTOWN TO PICNIC

The picnic season is open. Therefore Local Youngstown is to be among the first to celebrate it. The local will hold forth in truly picnic style June 15th at a farm near the city. It will be a gala day for all with good speaking for dessert. Either Tom Lewis or C. E. Ruthenberg will be the speaker. All local comrades and others from a distance are invited.

LOCAL KENMORE WILL BUILD HOME.

The comrades of Kenmore have laid plans whereby they expect to soon own their own building. Funds are being subscribed and pledges made to raise the necessary funds. The spirit of the Kenmore comrades is commendable. The Socialist Party should own its own equipment, including buildings. We wish Kenmore Socialists the best of good luck in this venture to sever relations with the enemy.

MORE FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM.

A money order for $10 from the German branch of Dayton for Industrial Freedom Certificates was received this week. As we have said before, it costs money to carry on the fight for the freedom of our political prisoners. And it costs money to get some of the comforts of "outside" life to our comrades "inside." Therefore comrades, buy an Industrial Freedom Certificate from your local secretary, or order one from the state office.

HE KNOWS DEMOCRACY WHEN HE SEES IT.

"Enclosed find a check for the Ohio Socialist to help make the "world safe for democracy." I have recently been discharged from the army and know how to do my bit. I am as 'red' as any blood that flowed in the trenches."—H. L. F.

COMPLIMENTARY.

"I want to say the Ohio Socialist is worth its weight in gold for it is a dandy." Thus writes Comrade Hamilton, mayor of Piqua. He proves he believes it by enclosing $8.50 for subs and papers.

GERMAN SOCIALIST FEDERATION CONVENTION ENDORSES LEFT WING PROGRAM

DEMANDS AFFILIATION WITH COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL OF MOSCOW.

The second convention of the German Socialist Federation was held in Rochester, N. Y., May 30 and 31. Approximately 35 delegates were in attendance, representing a membership of about 8,000.

More significant than any other action of the convention was undoubtedly the endorsement of the left wing program by a vote of 29 to 4. A motion was first made to immediately affiliate with the left wing movement. This motion was defeated by a vote of 24 to 10 for the reason that most delegates present thought it best to continue their affiliation with the Socialist Party for the present in an effort to capture the entire party for the left wing program.

In passing the motion to endorse the left wing movement an amendment was also carried that affiliation with the left wing movement shall take place should the Socialist Party, at the national convention, continue its right wing tactics.

Resolutions were passed demanding that the Socialist Party join the Moscow Communist International.

A storm of protest resulted when the convention was informed by telegram from L. E. Katterfeld and A. Wagenknecht that seven members of the national executive committee had suspended and expelled nearly 40,000 members from the party. Resolutions were passed demanding a trial for the Socialist Party of Michigan and denying the right of a national executive committee to suspend and expel nearly half the party.

It will be interesting to note what the desotic national executive committee will do, now that the German Socialist Federation has endorsed the left wing movement. Seven language federations, namely the Russian, South Slavic, Hungarian, Polish, Ukrainian, Lithuanian and Lettish were suspended at the recent meeting of the national executive committee for having endorsed the left wing movement. Will the party autocrats and misleaders dare to suspend the German federation?

Harwood, Prevey and Ruthenberg Elected National Executive Committee From District 2

The despotic seven of the National Executive Committee attempted to suppress the results of the national referendum for the election of a new National Executive Committee. We secured the total vote for the various candidates from the state secretaries and shall publish, in the Ohio Socialist, the names of all candidates elected upon the new National Executive Committee as a result of the referendum just closed.

Next week we shall publish a table of votes cast by states in one other of the five districts. We shall also publish a table of votes cast by states for International Delegates and International Secretary.

With regard to the vote below we wish to call your especial attention to the insignificant vote cast for Goebel and Krafft, two of the present National Executive Committeemen and members of the despotic seven. There is no stronger condemnation of the acts of the despotic seven nor of the policy of the reactionary right wing leaders, than this just rebuke to Goebel and Krafft in the insignificant number of votes they received for re-election.

VOTE FOR NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEEMEN IN DISTRICT 2.

Only two states with a very small membership are not included in this tabulation, namely, West Virginia and Maryland. The vote of these states will not change the results.

MASSACHUSETTS SLATED FOR EXPULSION

To expel state organizations by mail is a process entirely too slow for the national executive committee. Hurry seems necessary if the coming national convention is to be captured for the right wing reactionaries. Therefore national executive committee motions looking forward to the expulsion of left wing states are now made by telegraph.

A motion by wire was made the other day by Oneal and Shiplacoff which is intended to throw the Socialist Party of Massachusetts out of our organization. The motion reads as follows:

"That the national secretary secure documentary evidence, if such exists, of [illegible] of party policy and principles in Massachusetts. If obtained then the national secretary shall recognize the organization which supports policy and principles as formulated by national convention and by referendum."

To understand this motion a word or two in explanation is necessary. The Socialist Party of Massachusetts held a state convention a few days ago. This convention endorsed the left wing program. As a result of this action on the part of the convention, a few delegates, led by a lawyer by the name of Roewer, bolted the convention. These seceders then sent a telegram to the national secretary charging that the Massachusetts state convention violated the party policy. The national secretary then got busy putting the despotic seven national executive committeemen next to this new opportunity to win the party for the right wing reactionaries and as a result two of the despotic seven wired the above motion to the national office.

Study this motion. Note the power it places into the hands of the national secretary. The despotic seven up to now reserved for itself the right to expel and suspend tens of thousands of members. The despotic seven have now become so ultra-despotic that they willingly delegate their assumed right to expel and suspend tens of thousands of party members to the national secretary.

The motion if passed by the national executive committee means that the national secretary is to try to secure documentary evidence of violation of party policy by the Massachusetts state convention. Should he get this evidence, then he is to recognize the few reactionaries, led by Lawyer Roewer, who bolted the convention. Recognizing this handful of reactionaries means that the Socialist Party of Massachusetts, which contains about 6,000 members, will be read out of the party. In short, the national secretary is to decide whether the evidence which he goes after is the kind wanted, and as he will decide that it is, therefore he, one comrade of the party, without constitutional power so to act, will expell 6,000 members.

Being expelled and suspended without a trial by seven despots as were Michigan and the seven federations was the most shameful act ever committed by officials of the party. Delegating their assumed right to split the party to the national secretary is the last straw.

Local Akron Holds Big Party Meeting

On Decoration Day evening local Akron held a big party membership meeting of all the branches. This meeting was called for the purpose of reorganizing the party machinery for more effective work. As there is only one American branch, while there are nine foreign branches, it was voted at this meeting, after a thorough discussion of the matter, to conduct the routine party business of local Akron through general membership meetings to be held once a month.

An executive committee of seven was elected to carry out the mandates of these meetings and to act for the local between the monthly meetings. The branches are to continue as heretofore, conducting their work in their own language.

The delegates were elected to the state convention, namely, Comrades Prevey, Halloway and Doke. Comrades Margaret Prevey and John C. Chase were elected delegates to the political amnesty convention to be held in Chicago.

A general party membership meeting will be held the third Friday in June for instructions of delegates to the state convention.

State Organizer Chas. Baker was present and made a vigorous plea for support of the Ohio Socialist press fund.

Local Akron feels that it is now lined up right for big work.

Local Warren Shows Growing Activity

To Comrades of Ohio:

While the English speaking end of local Warren is not as big as it should be in membership, it is quite atcive in service—"goes over the top" sometimes in a small way. It has had some good public meetings, and some not so good as desired. We always take up a collection at our local meetings, receiving as much as one or two dollars sometimes, and sometimes $13 to $24, and we have a "pot" now of over $125. We have distributed regularly for two months 400 copies weekly of the O. S. and sometimes 1,000 of them; have sold and given away 400 "Soviet Russia," besides a good lot of other stuff.

Lilith Martin spoke for us June 5th, and there'll be more to follow. We are getting a few new members—two Italians applied for membership last night. Yes! And we endorsed the party ownership of a printing plant, and here is enclosed a $25 check to prove that we mean it. Comrades, we've got to do it. And we are going to have a county meeting of all the locals in Trumbull county at Niles, June 15th, beginning at 9 a. m. with plenty of "good eats" at the proper time.

This is not to be a delegates' meeting, but we expect each local secretary to see to it that all the Bolshevikis in the county will be there. It is to be a big rally and we expect to form a county committee and then get busy in a general campaign of organization. [illegible]

The Rest Were Expelled And There Were Only 7

One hundred thousand Socialists ready for the fray. Michigan was expelled and then there were only 95,000. Nintey-five thousand Socialists anxious to work and win. Thirty-one thousand were suspended and then there were only—

And so we sit and wonder just how long it will take until we can say "and then there were only seven." For the expulsion of the Socialist Party of Michigan and the suspension of seven language federations cannot end the program of suspensions and expulsions if to clear the party of the left wing faction is the aim of the despotic seven national executive committeemen who threw nearly 40,000 members out of our organization.

Cleveland local endorsed the left wing program ten days ago. Why not expel Cleveland? A letter we have just received from C. T. Stoney, state secretary of Utah, reads in part: "The Salt Lake City local has adopted the left wing program heart and soul. There are not many reactionary Socialists in this state." Why not expel Salt Lake City?

Need we also call the attention of the autocratic national executive committee to the fact that locals Buffalo, Rochester, Hamilton, O., San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Seattle, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Reading and dozens of other organizations are all "left"? Why not fire them all out?

Then also, the Socialist Party of Washington is now taking a referendum of its membership upon endorsing the left wing program. There is no doubt but what the endorsement will be practically unanimous. Here's another chance for the seven despots to exercise their "kicking out" proclivities.

And along comes the German Federation convention and without so much as asking the despotic seven national executive committeemen whether it would be just the thing to do or not, it endorses the left wing movement. There are about 8,000 members in the German Socialist Federation. As the tastes of the despotic seven seem to run to chopping off heads in large numbers, why not shove this large batch of German comrades out into the cold?

Just where the national executive committee, the despotic seven who are at present in the majority, gets the power to expel and suspend tens of thousands of members is beyond us. The national constitution does not give them this power. They have assumed the power. No need for discouragement however. The membership will make short work of all self-appointed leaders who desire to "save the party" for their own selfish ends.

In the kind of a Socialist Party the seven despots want there is room for only seven members. Let's place them where they can have a party all their own.

I noticed in the last week's issue that my old friend C. M. Johnson of Sharon Center must have been awful mad or he wouldn't have parted with that $5 for Ohio Socialist subs. Say, "Cy," old scout, that is the way to fix 'em. Get mad some more.

The Ohio Socialist is good dope for the workers and a bitter pill for the plutes.

FEDERATED SHOP CRAFTS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO DEBS

We, the Denver Federated Shop Crafts, recognise in Eugene V. Debs a brother, friend and co-worker. The voice of Debs for a decade has championed the cause of the workers, encouraged its hope and shared its despair. He is the friend of man, a brother to all that is human.

Debs has been sentenced to ten years in prison for daring to plead the cause of the workers. The law courts have decreed it. We may not know it, but it is true—if Gene Debs' liberties are curtailed for the expression of thought, the liberties of every working man and woman are unsafe. An injury to one is an injury to every one of our class. The thing that Debs has consistently advocated for nearly thirty years has been Industrial Democracy, a society wherein the workers will be assured the full social value of their toil. He has urged not violence but the abolition of wage slavery, the doing away of poverty in all its ghastly hideousness. We deplore the impending imprisonment of Eugene V. Debs, and believe that such punishment meted out to him will fail of its ultimate object—the continued enslavement and exploitation of labor.

In meeting assembled the Denver Federated Shop Crafts register our united protest against the imprisonment of Debs and others of our class. We consider the sentence barbaric in the extreme. We firmly believe that for every day Debs spends in prison, a thousand converts to the cause will be made. We solemnly pledge our loyalty and purse in [illegible] the United States and throughout the world.

A WARNING TO THE DESPOTIC SEVEN

A face-to-face warning was given the despotic seven of the national executive committee by the secretaries of the Finnish, Scandinavian and Italian federations, just before these autocrats suspended seven language federations at the recent meeting of the N. E. C.

Looking the unprincipled seven directly in the eyes, N. Juel Christensen, secretary of the Scandinavian Socialist Federation, protested against the suspension of the Russian, Lettish, Ukranian, Lithuanian, Polish, Hungarian and South Slavic federations. He minced no words when he warned the seven autocrats that his federation would not stand for such unwarranted procedure; that his federation would take a stand with the charged federations now that the national executive committee was suspending and expelling comrades for being left wing.

Secretary Askeli of the Finnish Socialist Federation, comprising 16,000 party members, spoke in the same vein. He cautioned the despotic seven to go slow, reminding them that the entire party is turning to the left and that this phenomena needed study rather than the drastic action they were about to take.

John LaDuca of the Italian Socialist Federation then asked for the floor. He threw the third bomb into the camp of the right wing N. E. C. He admitted that his federation was solidly left wing and that the despotic seven might as well expel his federation also, if adherence to the left wing movement was cause for expulsion or suspension. He pleaded that the seven federations be not suspended until the national convention considered the matter.

These warnings were of no avail. That the entire Socialist Party was now left wing did not seem to impress the despotic seven in the least. The members of the party were not behaving as these self-appointed leaders thought they should—therefore, out with them.

A large body like the Socialist Party membership moves slowly but surely. [illegible]

--Red Cross Worker Tells Truth About Russia--

(A lecture by Wilfred Humphries, at Duluth Minn.)

"I saw more opera in Petrograd during the months it was supposed to be running knee-deep in blood, than I ever did in all the rest of my life," said Wilfred R. Humphries, worker for the American Y. M. C. A. and later for the American Red Cross in Russia during its reddest months. Humphries, young, unaffected, eager-eyed, of the college organization type, gave his lecture on Russia, and in the course of it showing slides of Bolshevik scenes that he brought with him when he left Russia four months ago. "Besides the opera there were Ibsen, Shaw, Tolstoy, Shakespeare's plays and vaudeville. In two months that Maeterlinck's 'Bluebird" ran I never succeeded in getting in line early enough to get a ticket. In Moscow, I went to night school three evenings a week to learn Russian, and other evenings attended political meetings at Smolny Institute and other places. And every evening I saw women coming out of theaters in twos and threes, unattended by men, starting out across the city, streetcarless and dark with no fear whatever. At this time schools were being organized all over Russia. I remember in Petrograd seeing a poster announcing the opening of a kindergarten that said the children would be served with a hot lunch. This was the chaos and anarchy you read about.

I heard stories of chaos and anarchy in Russia too. From the time I landed in Vladivostok—where the red flag was flying—through the seven thousand miles of the journey to Moscow we were met by the fleeing bourgeoisie and regaled with stories of terror and atrocity, hunger, typhus and murder. Typhus was killing a thousand a day said the fugitives. Three-fourths of Moscow was burned to the ground. The Kremlin was destroyed. First, we heard that Kerensky had thoroughly defeated the Bolsheviki. As we came nearer it was said that the issue of the battle was still in doubt. Nearer—the Bolsheviks seemed to have the advantage, temporarily. When we got there the six days of fighting was over and Kerensky was fleeing.

"I saw 'destroyed' Kremlin—with a piece of statuary at the gate broken and holes through two of the churches—otherwise intact. I found the origin of the 'three-fourths of Moscow burned.' Five buildings had really been destroyed.

"Outrages—of a sort—I did see. On one of my departures from Petrograd at the Nicolif station, I saw three Russian officers, epaulettes off, of course, carrying passengers' baggage to the train. For the standard fee, since no tips were allowed they duly carried my luggage for me. I saw a portly Russian gentleman in an expensive fur coat selling a bourgeois newspaper. After a particularly heavy snowfall, the Petrograd Soviet ordered everybody out to shovel snow, with the order that no one physically able to shovel might hire anyone else to do it for him. And house committees enforced the ruling.

"One more outrage I saw. Soon after the Soviets came into power, the bank clerks and civil servants, encouraged and supported by the bourgeoisie, went on strike. Lenine countered them suddenly and cruelly by seizing all the banks and ruling that no matter if a man had millions deposited, he could withdraw no more than one hundred and fifty rubles (fifteen dollars) a month for each member of his family. This meant that the bourgeoisie could get no money to support the strikers and the result was that the strike was broken. But the touch that added insult to injury was the order that each depositor must stand in line to draw his monthly allowance. He couldn't send anyone for it. I saw in that line a plump, deeply-furrowed bediamonded woman, with genuine tears coursing down her cheeks at the indignity she was suffering.

"What impressed most impartial observers in Russia I think, was the tolerance, the considerateness, I had almost said the gentleness of the Soviets and their policies. You have heard much about the suppression of bourgeois newspapers. The only ones suppressed were those that were printing absolute and outrageous lies about the Bolsheviks. If a Russian newspaper said in glaring headlines that the Bolsheviki had massacred all the prisoners and cut them in small pieces it would be closed. But newspapers might print all the arguments against the Soviet system that they pleased. I have shown you a slide of the procession of priests, marching through the streets in protest against the division of church and state.

"The Social Revolutionists had planned a great demonstration in protest against the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly, to be held January 5. The Soviets did all in their power to persuade the Bolsheviks to keep away from the streets where the procession was to pass, so as to avoid any possible disturbances. There was fear of an uprising, so the Soviets arranged that all public buildings be well guarded. The manner of this was to ask all the people in the building, including the janitor, to aid in protecting it. The Soviets guarded the city by placing emergency armored cars with Red Guard groups at intervals all over the city.

"Another evidence of this large tolerance is the fact that nothing was done about the dastardly attempt to assassinate Lenine, who was shot at by a member of the Social Revolutionary Party. At one time when the Social Revolutionists seemed bent on starting a reign of terror, the warning was sent out to them: 'For every Bolshevik leader killed, we shall kill one hundred of the Social Revolutionists.' That was enough. There was no more trouble except one attempt by an anarchist girl.

"Trouble between the Anarchists and Bolshevists never came to any more than a battle in a few cities just at first. In the early days of Soviet rule, many Monarchists who wanted to oppose the new government and also wanted to make a living without working, announced themselves as Anarchists and seized houses and goods. But, of course, the real Anarchists denounced them.

"Now there are about ninety per cent of the population particiapting in the government—and I don't believe that percentage of people votes in America. All those that do useful work with hand or brain—and that means now about ninety per cent of the population—have representation in the Soviets. The teachers send delegates as do the medical associations composed of doctors and nurses. What was in the beginning a dictatorship of the proletariat—with action begun as it always must be begun, by a militant minority—is now a true democracy. Those sabotaging against the Bolsheviki in the early days when they thought that the government would not last six weeks, are giving up their opposition as they realize that this is a government that has come to stay. I was in Samara when the teachers' association met, split into a left and right wing, the majority reorganizing the association and electing delegates to the Soviets, the minority going out of the association altogether. A considerable section of the intelligentsia were with the Bolsheviks from the first. A glance at the Bolsheviki cabinet will prove that. I think one might say that it is the most cultured cabinet in Europe. Many of the rest have been honestly converted since then.

A minority objects to the centralization of industry—say there is not democracy enough and that the industries should be immediately and completely handed over to the workers.

"But remember, that the Bolsheviki do not claim that Russia is socialistic. They say that the co-operative commonwealth is not immediately possible, especially in a country as industrially backward as Russia. They say that Russia will have to develop the stage known as State Capitalism, with concentration of industries and formation of trusts. Mme. Kollantay said: 'We can't fully socialize Russia all at once. You other nations have a much better chance to socialize your industries, as industry is already party socialized with you. You can begin where we leave off.'

"But centralization of industry under bourgeois rule. Russia has not nationalized all her industries. Some are still under private ownership, modified by Workers' Control. Committees of workers audit the books of the industry, seeing that there is no water stock, limit the profits to five or six per cent, require the owner to reinvest in the industry a good proportion of his receipts and regulate hours and wages.

"Lenine says the policy of the Bolsheviki is to take over those industries that have reached the monopolistic stage, and then the others as fast as the new government can chew and swallow them. It may be said that the industries not now owned by the workers are controlled by the workers.

"Under Workers' Control the number of stores and shops has largely decreased, naturally enough with the vanishing of competition.

"Another result of control by the workers, combined with the peasants' ownership of the land has been the 'back to the land' movement. Petrograd and Moscow have materially decreased in population, chiefly as a result of the agitation to go out and take up land, agitation that arose because Petrograd and Moscow were the two places where it was hardest to get food on account of the crippled railroads. But even in those cities during the worst of the railroad demoraliaztion, it cost no more to live than in San Francisco. In Moscow I got dinners of soup, meat, vegetables, coffee and sometimes dessert for from five to ten rubles that is fifty cents to a dollar—and, of course, conditions have much improved since then. Through the darkest days, from the time the Bolsheviki got control, I am sure there was not one hungry person in Moscow.

"They had begun to organize the distribution of food in a most fair and thorough manner from the time I arrived in Russia, when the great army of twelve million was still demobilizing itself. Even while happy groups of soldiers with their gas masks and tea kettles hung on their backs were trooping home, I saw armed guards handing out leaflets that announced a moratorium on house rents. 'Rentals under one hundred and fifty rubles a month are not payable for three months,' the leaflets said. 'Rentals above this amount are payable as usual.' This and the rationing of food was a godsend to the poorer people. Of course, this was in the early days of Bolsheviki rule. Later it could not be said that the working people were poor people. Their wages were more than adequate—that is, they could live well and save, too. When the White Guard overthrew the Bolsheviki in Siberia and re-established capitalism there, the guard complained during the first few weeks that they could not force workingmen to work because they had too much money saved up.

Whenever there was a shortage of anything, sugar, bread, whatever it was, the Bolsheviki government monopolized it and rationed it out, issuing food cards to make sure that no one could buy more than his share. Sugar was scarce all over Europe. The Soviets set the price at fifteen cents a pound and allowed each person a monthly allowance of from a half pound to a pound, depending on the locality. At first for a short time there was a little sugar for sale in isolated markets and the rich people were buying it at the rate of $1.50 a pound.

"I had a capital opportunity to see the efficient working of Soviet food control, for in taking twelve hundred Serbian refugees across Siberia, for the American Red Cross, I entered into relationship with more than one hundred soviets over three thousand miles of territory. These were refugees who had fled to Roumania, then to South Germany, then to Siberia in Russia. Raymond Robins got an appropriation of a quarter of a million dollars with which to take them out and colonize them until there should be a chance to take them back to Serbia, and I was loaned to the Red Cross to take care of the job.

"I found how ready the soviets everywhere were to help the refugees. They sold us food at the same rate as it was sold to the Russian people, prices that might interest you, particularly as they were little more than half what would be charged in this country. Butter was from two to four rubles a pound, that is twenty to forty cents; eggs were two to two and a half cents apiece; bread three cents a pound; and at one place we got whole roasted chickens for thirty to sixty cents apiece.

"We were as generously treated in other respects. At Omsk we asked for a monastery for the housing of the refugees, and would have received it except that it was already full of other refugees, as was the whole city. But the Omsk soviets sent celebrated men of the city, a doctor, along with us to help us get settled in the next city. He accompanied us and helped us for ten days, and when I offered him reimbursement for his work and time, he refused it. Afterward when the White Guard had overthrown the Bolsheviki at Omsk, I saw him under quite different circumstances, a pitiable figure being taken to prison to be hanged, and I was glad to be able to effect his release by telling his captors how he had aided the American Red Cross.

"Another proof of the remarkable efficiency of the soviets was the tremendous campaign of propaganda carried on up to the German revolution. Boris Reinstein, the Socialist Labor Party delegate from America to the proposed Stockholm conference, was and still is the head of the English-speaking department of foreign propaganda. Petroff, one of the two men released from English jails on the demand of the Soviet government which ruled that no English merchant could go into or out of Russia until they were freed, is the right-hand man of the chief of all the propoganda. Two dailies in German with a half million circulation were printed and shipped to the German front, some by airplane, some by hand, through Russians who had become acquainted with Germans during the fraternization period. An illustrated paper for the benefit of the uneducated Germans was also got out. One of these showed the photograph I am showing you here of the German embassy building, with an inscription something like this beneath it. 'See the building of the German embassy, with a banner above it bearing the words of a great German. It is Bismarck? No. It is the Kaiser? No. It is the immortal Karl Marx, and his words are 'Workers of the World, Unite!' We now throw back to you the words of your great countryman and ask you to unite. We Russians have taken the words seriously and all power is now in the hands of the workers. How long will it be before a German Socialist will come as Germany's ambassador?" Besides these, pamphlets were got out in English, French, Swedish, Turkish and Chinese. I came in close contact with these propaganda workers while I was working for the American Y. M. C. A., getting out and distributing copies of President Wilson's Fourteen Point speech. The Russians liked that speech and agreed with most of its fourteen points, but they were a little skeptical as to whether the allies would stand by it.

"I got up to Petrograd in time to spend six weeks seeing big things happen there, with John Reed, Louis Bryant and Albert Rhys Williams. I was at the meeing of the Central Executive Committee when it was decided to let the Constituent Assembly meet for one day as a demonstration of class line-up. And I saw the Assembly dissolved early one morning by a sailor who did it by simply telling them that the Red Guard was tired and wanted to go home.

"I saw one whole Sunday of bourgeois protest meetings in Moscow. These were carried on in a very sensible way. Two hundred or more groups of two or three bourgeois men and women formed about the city, each group engaging a few soldiers in an argument. There was no disorder, the Russians are so amazingly reasonable. But they didn't convince the soldiers that they had done anything wrong in taking the power from the 'natural rulers,' as they put it. 'Why don't you first trust the educated people to lead you, instead of putting faith in this Lenine, this man in the service of the German government?' some bourgeois men asked one soldier. 'We are dark and ignorant, I know,' the soldier replied, 'but there is one thing we do know, and that is that the educated people have always deceived us.'

"Here are some of the 'dark and ignorant' Russian people at their new work of governing," Humphries continued, showing a slide of half a dozen stolid-faced earnest workingmen. "This is a village soviet holding a meeting to discuss the ways and means of forming a frame on the chair. That is used to help them in their adding and subtracting.

"This is one of the ten thousand schools the soviets have opened," he said, indicating a slide of a school room with rows of earnest children at one side, three teachers, all eager and competent looking.

"The Bolsheviki have, as you have heard, turned many of their munition factories into factories for the manufactures of agricultural machines, but not all of them. They knew that they must aid the first nation that had a revolution, so they kept a necessary number of the munition plants going."

"The story of the alleged nationalization of women was shown by Humphries to be a deliberate lie. It was originally told by representatives of the Century Magazine, who together with Humphries, was in Samara when the notorious proclamation was issued.

This proclamation was secretly posted by the supporters of the Royalist Party, for political reasons. The people, who were strongly in favor of the Soviets, recognized it at once as the work of the "agent provocateur." The local Soviet officials removed the proclamation and started an investigation. They found out that the supporters of the Czar's party were responsible, though these people tried to blame it on the anarchist group.

The anarchist group issued a scathing denunciation of the monarchists, which was read in full by the speaker.

The most interesting part of the story lies in this: The representative of the Century Magazine saw the original proclamation. He knew what action the local Soviet took in the matter. He read the statement of the anarchists and he knew how public opinion was aroused over it. Yet, when sent to the outside world he sent only the original monarchist-inspired proclamation and not the denial, remarking, when Humphries inquired, 'Why, this is the biggest story ever written. To tell the finish would be to kill the story.'

By such methods is our alleged "news" manufactured by the hirelings of capitalism.

"The stories of chaos and starvation of which we hear so much are greatly exaggerated. Evidence in the shapes of menus in the dining cars, with prices 'cheaper and better than on the American train,' was submitted. This particular short line of railroad is operated by the Cooks and Waiters' Union."

Life in U. S. Federal Prison

Several times I heard Popoff, who was in the next cell, cry out and would hear the blows as they fell upon his back. One Thursday as we were being shaved I happened to see his head bandaged up, and one of his teeth knocked out.

I reviewed my geography and history; trying to recall the names of towns and to bound the different states. I recalled several poems and songs to mind. I was not allowed to whistle, but would hum the Internationale and the Red Flag. Sometimes I could hear the refrain of revolutionary songs from other cells in which rebels were confined.

I read the Bible through five times and have much greater respect for Jesus, James and Stephen; but absolutely no respect for the organized Christianity of today as embodied in the churches.

A few weeks later a man came to my door saying in a gruff voice:

"Well, when are you going to quit your thieving, lying and stealing?"

I replied that I was not in the habit of doing those things; it was Cirardeau, the new deputy, who was formerly a chain gang boss in Georgia.

Several times each week he opened the door quickly and wanted to know if I was now ready to renounce Socialism. I told him that I would do so if he gave me a good argument; but that punishment was a very poor argument.

At last when I had been in the hole about three months, the deputy said that he would turn me out if I would go through the usual formula of signing a request for him to do so and promising to do no plotting in the future. Of course I consented.

Soon afterwards the warden came to my cell and asked me if I would promise to do no more plotting. I told him that as I had not done so heretofore that I would not commence it now. So he promised to put me in second grade the following day. This meant that I was to receive a yellow card; that I would do my regular work in the prison, but would not be allowed to go out in the yard or to the movies. I was also to write only every two weeks on paper with my convict number on it.

Five minutes after his first visit Zerbat opened my door suddenly and said quickly:

"Have you been sending any contraband letters out of here? You need not answer this question unless you want to, for it will have nothing to do with your getting out of here tomorrow."

Now I had written to Socialist papers about certain unjust conditions in the penitentiary. One letter that I had written as a test, early in the spring to see if the person who got it out for me was trustworthy, had not been received by the party to whom it was sent, so I knew that something was wrong.

"Yes, sir," I answered to the warden's question.

"How did it get out?" he asked. I told him that a friend of mine had passed it out for me.

"Who is your friend?" said Zerbat.

"I would not tell on a person who did me a favor," I replied.

"Well, you will stay in this hole until you tell me," he said, angrily.

"Guess, I'll have to stay in here ten months longer then, for I would not betray my friend," I replied.

The warden now changed his tone and commenced to talk kindly, saying that he was a Christian; expected to go to heaven when he died, and that he had never knowingly done any one any harm; that as I was a Socialist who believed in the Golden Rule I should be square with him and tell on this fellow, and he would leave me outdoors right away. I replied that I was not a Christian, but that the Golden Rule was a good rule to follow, as much as a person could under this capitalist system; and that I should have to be true to my friend first and apply the Golden Rule to him before I applied it to the warden.

The warden told me that I was quite shrewd in being able to pass out letters right under his nose. It seems that my letters had been discovered by the U. S. secret service while they were watching the mail of the person to whom I had addressed my letter.

The officers at U. S. penitentiaries are first class politicians; of second class intelligence; and are third class detectives. The only way they ever find out anything, except through the use of "stool pigeons" is to stumble right onto it. This is well illustrated by the fact that a negro convict dug a deep hole in the middle of a flower bed, being under the watch of the guards at the time; later hiding in this hole for awhile. The guards and "stool pigeons" searched and searched, and only by accidentally stepping upon the soft earth above the hole were they able to discover the negro.

In April, 1918, I gave a friend of mine, who worked in the printing office, a motto to insert in "Good Words," the monthly prison paper. I saw the O. K. of Zerbat signed on the proof sheet. This was the March first issue. The motto read as follows:

"A prison is the only house in a slave state where a free man can abide with honor."—Thoreau.

It was the warden's stupidity, and not his broadmindedness which permitted this revolutionary motto to be published in a prison paper which was approved by the department of justice.

When I came to the U. S. penitentiary I brought a scrap book with me which contained the circulars that I had written up against the war and the draft. It contained other radical clippings too. This book lay in the deputy warden's office for six weeks. I never expected to be allowed to receive it; one day the deputy told me to take it to my cell, as it could not make me any worse than I was. I asked the warden if I was allowed to circulate it around the prison, and he told me that anything which passed inspection was allowed to be circulated. I brought the book home with me.

There are many instances that I know of where federal laws have been broken by officials and the matter winked at by by the warden, but I could not prove anything now as the men who know most about it are scattered over the country.

This was about September 7th. On the 13th they asked me to register; when I refused the guard said:

"You had better register, don't you know that you can't get anything around here this way?"

I replied that I was not asking for anything around here. Two weks later the warden asked me if it was true that I had refused to register, intimating that I could register now if I wished. I replied that I had refused and would so refuse in the future.

The warden said that he did not pity me, but that he did pity my poor mother; that his son was at war, and when his wife did not hear from her boy she worried herself sick about it. Realizing this fact he had out of the kindness of his heart written to my folks explaining that I was in good health. I thanked him for this favor and commenced to think that after all he might have a heart. (I found out when I came home that he had only written to my folks after they had repeatedly bothered him by writing about my welfare.)

It might be interesting to note that the warden and his son Alfred are both very patriotic; the latter having joined the naval training station in South Carolina a few months before the close of the war.

I caused the guards as little amount of bother as possible. I refused to become angry at their insults, so they could have an excuse for beating me up; but firmly insisted that I would not compromise any ideal to get out of the hole. I told them no lies. It hurt them because I appeared happy and would not whine around and ask them for favors.

Then came months of questioning and nagging by guards who tried to find out the information which the warden wanted. One guard would be kind, telling me that I was better than common prisoners and that I should not agitate for better conditions in prison, for the bums did not appreciate what I was trying to do for them. I replied that I was doing what I thought was right and was not asking for anybody's approval. Another guard would appear interested in Socialism; another would be harsh and try to scare me into telling; still another would say that I was looking bad and that I had better get out in the sunshine—and all of them would try and "pump" me.

The deputy found that his "chain-gang" manners would gain nothing with me so he brought me some Salvation Army religious tracts and commenced to talk religion to me in order to weaken my courage. I could quote scripture, too, and after a few conversations he did not bring the religious question up again.

He would often come to my cell, open the door wide, leaving the sunshine in and say:

"It's a nice day outside; I just left two other long-timers out of the hole. Wouldn't you like to go out too? Come Hennacy, and do the right thing and tell."

I would reply that I was satisfied to stay in the hole rather than do what was wrong to gain my freedom.

They saw that they could obtain no information from me in this manner so they decided to be a little lenient with me. Without a word they moved me upstairs in isolation where the window was lower, and I could see outdoors and breathe the fresh air. This was on November 8th. The door had no peep-hole, although there were several large cracks in it. I could see some of my friends across the way in the tailor shop; we could not hear each other unless we yelled very loud because of the noise that the power machines made. I was not allowed to talk to anyone.

Some of the official force called upstairs in isolation. They would come to my door sometimes and whisper through the cracks, sympathizing me me and trying to "pump" me for the warden. A few of them were O. K. though.

At this time De Moss was guard in the tailor shop. Not having seen me around for some time, and knowing that I had refused to register in September, he supposed that I had been released, and had now come back to do a bit for refusing to register. Seeing me one day, he yelled, with a sneering smile:

"Ah ha! you will register next time wont' you? What did they give you this time, a year and a day?"

I explained to him that I was a stronger Socialist than ever and that events were proving that we were right in our opposition to the war. Also that I had been in the hole for six months.

Several times each night the guard opened the door and slammed it shut while making his rounds so that I did not have one good night's sleep.

While eating beans I had broken one of my teeth on a pebble which was in the beans, and so was bothered with the toothache again. I had asked several times to have my tooth fixed but they would not allow it. On Thanksgiving day I was permitted to write a letter home, and in this letter I asked for money in order to get my teeth fixed. The authorities promised to fix my teeth at once and told me that my name was on the dentist's list. I waited and waited, but they kept putting it off and I never was called. I guess they thought that if I had the toothache bad enough I would give in to them. (Since I left Atlanta I saw a copy of the letter which the warden wrote to my brother-in-law promising that he would see that my teeth were attended to. This was in response to a request made by my brother-in-law.)

The Christmas edition of "Good Words" said that "all privileges were restored on Christmas day, etc." Of course no privileges were restored to we fellows in the hole. That statement had the regular mark of the administration camouflage, being intended to cause the prison reformers to think what a good Christian warden ruled over the fifteen hundred inmates of Atlanta penitentiary. No packages that came for me were delivered. I was not even notified that they came. Berkman, however, through the chaplain, succeeded in sending me a box of "eats" from his store of Christmas stuff, which I was very glad to receive.

All this time Dean would come around pretending to be my friend in order to "pump" me; but he never received any worthwhile information.

On January 6th they shoved me downstairs again in the old hole. Next day the deputy called me into his office, saying:

"How pale you look, Hennacy; this solitary is telling on you. You are injuring your health. I hate to keep you in this hole—why not tell me right now and get out in the fresh air?"

At this time about thirty prisoners had just died of the "flu." I replied that I could stay in the hole until July 13th, when my full time was up, and that I was not afraid of dying. He asked me about Socialism meaning dividing-up and free love. I explained to him that we Socialists were tired of this dividing up process already, and that under Socialism there would be no prostitution for money, and that woman as well as man would cease to be a slave.

One night Dean came to my cell, and in the course of his conversation politely offered me $100 to divulge the name of my friend. When I indignantly refused he said that he respected me for refusing to tell. I just laughed at him for I knew that his assumption of the role of an honorable man was ridiculous.

Later he said that I must get lonesome for I had had no one to talk to for seven months, and that he would put me in a place for a few hours where I could talk to other prisoners. He then placed me in "the dark hole." On either side of me in cells was a prisoner. The rules do not allow you to talk but Dean left our doors open and told us we could talk. I soon found out that my neighbors were John Randolph, formerly secretary of Local Toledo I. W. W., doing ten years against the war, and Walter L. Hirshberg, a Carnegie Tech student, who was an I. W. W. and a Socialist, doing twenty years for refusing to put on a uniform. On account of the "flu" the department of Justice had refused to permit moving pictures to be shown in the chapel, but had compelled every one—except of course certain politicians—to attend church. Randolph and Hirshberg had only been in the penitentiary a short time, and while they stood with the rest in the proposed strike against going to church under these conditions, they had not done any agitating, for they knew hardly any one. It seems that Hirshberg celled with a certain sexual degenerate, and would not respond to the advances of this pervert. So the latter reported him to the deputy as the ring-leader of the proposed strike. Randolph and Hirshberg were now in the hole for that reason.

We knew that we had not been granted this unusual privilege of communication out of the kindness of heart of the guard, so we were very careful in our conversation. In fact, when Dean put me in the "dark hole" and shut the door with a queer smile I did not know just what game he was going to try and play on me this time.

Dean wanted me to promise to write back and tell them the name of my friend, hinting that if I would do so they would allow me to go home on February 18th, and not lose any of my "good time." I told him that I would not promise him any such thing, and that the promise of a fellow who would betray his friend would be no good anyhow.

About the middle of January the warden, Supt. of Prisons Duehay of Washington and his clerk came into my cell for half an hour trying to get me to "squeal." In the course [illegible] pealed and that I could now criticise the war and the government all I pleased. Of course I knew that this was a lie to try and trap me into saying something that would give me twenty years. Duehay called me a coward, but I just laughed and told him that the shoe did not fit so he could not make me mad that way. Then both he and Zerbat commenced to denounce the Socialists, Bolsheviki, Mooney and Berkman. I did not break the espionage law.

I told them that there were enough Kaisers in America to fight without bothering about the German Kaiser; that I wanted to be alive when the war was over to do my part towards fighting these patriots who were the same old enemies of democracy and the laboring class.

The warden evidently believed that might was right, for he said:

"Oh, you Socialists would be all right if you only were in the majority."

I replied by telling him that we would never get in the majority by deserting our International principles [illegible]

March issue accepted for mailing after being held up several weeks; April issue now under consideration by the postal censor.

Under these conditions, which would make it impossible to get out a weekly publication, it has been decided temporarily at least to continue as a monthly until the atmosphere clears and the increasing working class power establishes the rights of free press, free speech, and free assemblage upon a firm and lasting foundation.

In the meantime we are changing our address to the new headquarters of the Socialist Party. Send all communications hereafter to The Eye Opener, 220 South Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Party Members and Locals ATTENTION

An organization, the same as a human being or a plant, GROWS. This growth is sometimes impeded by ill health and unfavorable surroundings.

The Socialist Party has been in ill health for some time now. It has suffered from a failure to adjust itself to the changed environment caused by the war and its aftermath.

However, fresh, new blood is beginning to surge through the veins of the party. Enthusiastic, inspired, courageous, determined comrades are demanding a change in party policy, are desirous of having the party adapt itself to the new tactics necessary to victory. These comrades are the Socialists of the Left Wing.

In their effort to make of our party a true workers' organization, a tussle naturally ensues between them and those who want everything to remain as it is and has been, the Right Wingers. This tussle is now on.

The Ohio Socialist wants all its readers who are party members to follow this controversy very closely. It is an education in itself. This controversy should not, however, discourage you or keep you from doing your usual party duties. Keep up the gait for the New Day at the same pace as heretofore, yes, rush at a faster pace if you can. At the same time, keep an eye upon page three of every issue of the Ohio Socialist and post yourself upon this attempt that is being made to make our party a virile, dependable and truly revolutionary organization.

PROBLEM OF THE CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS

As a result of the examination of over eight hundred conscientious objectors in twenty camps Major Guest Kellog gives his opinion of them in this manner: "They are as a rule, sincere; cowards and shirkers, in the commonly accepted sense, they are not." Major Kellog finds that the records show that the C. O.'s are, contrary to general belief, Americans by an overwhelming majority.

In his search for a solution for the problem which the conscientious objector imposes he goes far back in history. The conscientious objector did not spring into being with the coming of the great war. On the contrary, there have been many instances which history records. Memsen in his "Provinces of the Roman Empire," speaks of the Jews as having been exempted from war on account of their religious principles, and the Jewish Encyclopedia informs us that "Marc Anthony, at the request of Hyrcanus exempted the Jews from service in the armies because they were not allowed to carry arms or to travel on the Sabbath."

Gibbon in the sixteenth chapter of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," records the fate of two conscientious objectors in the third century. Maximillianus, an African youth, produced by his own father before the magistrate as a sufficient and legal recruit was executed because he persisted in declaring that his conscience would not permit him to bear arms. Another was Marcellus, the centurian, who, on the day of a public festival, threw away his belt, his arms and the ensigns of his office, and exclaimed in a loud voice that he would obey none but Jesus Christ and that he renounced forever the use of carnal weapons. He was condemned and beheaded for the crime of desertion. Napoleon, following these precedents and those of the Mennonites, who were exempted from military service in Holland, employed them in hospital service. During the Civil war in the United States, certain religious sects were exempted from military service. The United States did not solve the problem, says Major Kellog. Expedients used during the war to handle the situation leave it still as full of knots and tangles as ever should another war come upon us.

In our opinion there is but one solution to the problem of the conscientious objector. That is for the number to grow to such an extent that the majority of workers become objectors to war between capitalist nations and refuse to fight their battles. When this point is reached, the "problem" disappears. It no longer exists. The problem then will be—what to do with capitalist interests and individuals who insist upon the shedding of workers' blood for their enrichment. But this problem would be easily solved. The workers would simply allow the capitalists to go right ahead and fight each other just as long as they pleased. When they got through the world would be rid of a part of its encumbrances, which would be a very good thing.

Debs Removed To Atlanta

According to press reports of date of June 14, Comrade Debs has been transferred from Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary to federal prison at Atlanta, Ga. No reason is given for the transference and Comrade Debs had no intimation of the change until he was told to get ready.

Why In Hell Were They There?

London, June 14.—"We didn't know what we were fighting for," complain doughboys recently arrived from the Archangel front, who are now in London hospitals. Most of them are 85th (Michigan and Wisconsin National Army) division men.

"We lived in barracks located in swamps, which resulted in an epidemic, consisting of a rash breaking out all over our bodies," said Corporal Charles Meyer, Terre Haute, Ind.

"We didn't have any real cigarettes. We had to make them out of tissue paper and dried moss or tea leaves. But we wouldn't have minded any of this if we had known why in hell we were there."

RAID U. S. OFFICE OF SOVIET RUSSIA

New York Investigation Committee Seizes Papers; Subpoena Representative.

New York—Representatives of the joint legislative committee appointed to investigate the activities of radicals in this state, guarded by several members of the state constabulary, raided the offices of the Russian soviet government in this city and took possession of books and papers found there.

L. C. A. K. Martens, representative here of the soviet government was subpoenaed and taken before the committee for a brief examination.

A. A. Heller, commercial representative of the soviet bureau, also was summoned before the committee.

After the executive session had adjourned Senator Clayton R. Lusk, chairman of the committee, stated that Heller and Martens, as well as some of their assistants, would be examined at length next Wednesday.

"Information has been laid before this committee," he said, "that these people were circulating propaganda advocating the soviet form of government as established by the Bolshevtki.

"Mr. Martens and Mr. Heller admitted that their organization is circulating propaganda by means of a publication and a mailing list advocating and justifying the soviet as it exists in Russia. We have not gone far enough to determine the exact nature of this propaganda nor the full extent of its circulation."

Martens announced tonight he had forwarded to the state department a protest against "the unwarranted and brutal raid," which he termed "an uncalled for insult to the people of Russia."

Martens contended the raid was conducted by "one Mr. A. E. Stevenson of Overman committee and Union league fame, whose prejudice against the Russian workers' government is only too well known," and added that "on behalf of my government I hereby reserve the right to proper reparation."

He named as his attorneys Dudley Field Malone, Charles Recht and Gilbert Roe.

The raiders found a large red banner of the soviet republic, which will be shown by investigating committee.

The seized mailing lists and card indexes are expected to reveal the identity of the men who are supplying the money to carry on the Bolshevik propaganda. These lists have been turned over to experts.

The seized documents included a large amount of propaganda articles intended for the press of Central and South America. Hundreds of newspapers from these places were on the mailing lists of the Bolshevik organization, and copies of the newspapers containing articles on the Russian situation were found in the place.

FREE SPEECH THE ISSUE

Bellaire Socialists to Carry Anti-Free Speech Ordinance to Voters on Referendum.

The rights of free speech and assemblage in Ohio shall be maintained by the Socialists. We do not intend to allow the reactionary capitalist politicians to rule us off the streets and from the parks of Ohio cities and towns. It always falls to the lot of the oppressed to fight for the maintenance of human liberties. It has been our historic contribution to human progress to keep for the human race the fruits of dear bought liberties. We do not intend to allow them to be snatched from us by the foul hands of the tools of capitalism.

Since the signing of the armistice, the efforts of reactionism to retain its seat in the saddle has led to the enactment of prohibitions against socialist street and park meetings in dozens of Ohio towns and cities without permission of whatever ignorant and brutal police or mayor happened to sit in authority. That the intention is to completely deny socialists the rights guaranteed by the constitution is not even denied by framers of these vicious ordinances.

Socialists in some cities are taking advantage of the right of initiative and referendum to throw these insane ordinances in the waste basket by the vote of the people. Notably among these is Bellaire, where the socialists have through their committee just filed their petitions for referendum with the city clerk. Socialists there are making a strong campaign against the ordinance agaist free speech and assemblage which was a short while passed by the city council with the approval of the mayor. A weekly leaflet is distributed broadcast over the city which attacks the right of the local politicians to censor what the people shall hear upon the streets and parks of the city. J. J. Hoge, socialist organizer, and Fred Walchil, county secretary, are authors of the leaflets. They hit the nail on the head in every paragraph and if the workers and voters of Bellaire fail to realize the iniquity of this ordinance and do not vote it out of existence it will not be the fault of the comrades who are carrying the fight to the last resort.

We wish to announce in connection that any socialist local which desires to carry to the voters of any Ohio city the validity of anti-free speech ordinances or any other city ordinance, should write to the state office at once for information as to how to proceed and for copies of forms which are necessary in making the fight. Attorney Sharts has placed in our hands for this purpose such information as is necessary. If you wish to test the ordinances made against you write to the State Office.

Reds Organize To Rule Austria

WILL PROCLAIM COMMUNIST GOVERNMENT SUNDAY.

London, June 12.—A communist government will be proclaimed in Austria on Sunday with promise of immediate success, according to information in government circles here.

The best information indicates that about 40 per cent of the Austrian army is Bolshevik. The communists are expected quickly to align themselves with the Hungarian communists.

READ THIS NOW!

Your local, the members of it, are interested in the recent actions of seven members of the national executive committee because these actions virtually mean a disruption of the Socialist Party.

We ask you to take this copy of the Ohio Socialist to your next local meeting and inform the membership present of the shameful acts of a minority of the national executive committee.

The members of your local will be particularly interested in the vote upon the recent referendums for the election of new national officers, which the seven despotic national executive committee suppressed. Beginning with this issue the tabulation of this vote will be published in the Ohio Socialist. We will inform you whom was elected as national executive committeemen and as international delegates. You have a right to know this. No party officials have a right to suppress the vote of the rank and file.

Again we say—take this issue of the Ohio Socialist to your local meeting and inform the membership as to these criminal acts of a few party officials.

KATE O'HARE WRITES FROM PRISON CELL

"I think it is quite possible that, if I were compelled to work in an overall factory for a year, I might fall so low in intelligence as to vote the Democratic ticket."

Kate Richards O'Hare, working in the overall factory of the Missouri state prison at Jefferson City, made this deduction from her experience between the day she entered prison, April 14, and May Day, a matter of two weeks.

She writes to her family that she now understands why the workers have scrambled brains.

"The roar of the machinery dulls the brain," she writes, "and the constant eye-strain of following the endless miles of flying seams makes the possibility of study seem a dream."

The details of the prison life which led to these conclusions are given in a letter. The pressure of confinement and the weight of nine hours a day at the machine tells in every line of these letters.

She says:

WEEKS DRAG BY.

"Once again the time has slowly prifted past and I can write my weekly letter.

"It was a strange May Day for me. Emma Goldman was ill, but little Emma, the Italian girl and myself wore our colors. It was all that we could do. Emma gave us a bit of red ribbon, and we wore it above our hearts while we bent to the task at the roaring machines. It was a strange sight—yet how typical of our capitalist system. The dirty grim shop, whose windows are so high that no sunbeams can ever fall upon its inmates.

13 SOCIALISTS ON TRIAL AT CINCINNATI

The trial of thirteen members of the Socialist Party of Cincinnati, O., began in Judge Hollister's court at Cincinnati June 3rd. The case grows out of a conspiracy charge of the government alleging interference with its war activities. Those under indictment, Lotta Burke, Socialist organizer and speaker; Thos. Hammerschmidt, active in party work, and others were arrested and charged in 1917 with anti-war activities. They have since their arrest been out on bail.

Jos. Sharts, Socialist attorney of Dayton, has the case in charge. He is assisted by Nicholas Klein and Attorney Alexander. The jury which was impanelled June 3rd consists of small farmers and business men and two barbers. They are: John Rentz, James M. Wilson, Jacob Kuhn, Daniel L. Bishop, William Hope, Jefferson Armstrong, W. E. Reel, Charles Madden, Smith E. Hughes, Edward F. O'Connor, Sam'l Hunt. The second day, Wednesday, 4th, was taken up by the government with their witnesses, as was also the third day, Thirsday, 5th, fifty-three witnesses having been subpoenaed for the prosecution. These consisted mostly of arresting officers and secret service men who had attended our meetings. A few were from the neighborhoods in which the boys were arrested. One, Mr. Kuyper, testified that he had seen two of the comrades about five hundred feet away in the dark. This confused one of the jurors who thought he had made a mistake, or had not heard corectly, and caused quite a bit of amusement when the juror questioned the witness as to the pos-

MAY FIRST IN SOVIET HUNGRY

In striking contrast to the manner in which peaceful meetings and parades of workers in America were broken up by order of city governments and workers murdered outright and in cold blood by police, is that of the celebration of the international holiday in soviet Hungary where Socialists have taken absolute control of the government.

Herewith is an account of the workers' celebration in Budapest which reached this country by mail.

Budapest was today the theater of festivities unparalleled in the history of moderate or radical socialism. May Day, which has been declared a national holiday by the Soviet government, was celebrated in the Hungarian capital.

Huge masses of workmen marched through the streets; mass meetings took place; the commissaries of the "Revolutionary governing council" made speeches; military bands of the Red army played the "Marseillaise" and the "Internationale," the new Bolshevik hymn.

The whole town seemed dipped in red color. By order of the government, every house in the town hoisted a red flag, the more important street crossings and the main thoroughfares were adorned with red triumphal arches, bearing huge portraits and busts of Marx, Engels, Lassalls, Lenine and Trotsky.

KING'S STATUES REMOVED.

The statues of the former kings of Hungary, which formed part of the Millionary monument, were removed.

The town was full of excitement, but perfect order prevailed everywhere.

Berger Hearing Is Adjourned

HOUSE COMMITTEE TO MEET AGAIN JULY 7.

Washington, June 12.—After Milwaukee Leader editorials which led to the indictment of Victor Berger for violation of the spionage act had been put into the record today, the house special elections committee, investigating Berger's right to a seat in the house, adjourned hearings until July 7.

The adjournment was taken at Mr. Berger's request in order to give him opportunity to prepare evidence to meet charges of ineligibility.

Henry F. Cochems, counsel for Berger, asked the committee to put immediately before the house his challenge to its jurisdiction. There was no intimation, however, that this would be done now.

SAILORS FLY RED FLAG

As Result 200 Sailors Will Be Moved to Atlantic Seaboard.

Great Lakes, Ill.—The red flag was raised at the Great Lakes naval training station here, it is now told.

As a result about 200 seamen, all of whom had overseas service, will be transported to Atlantic seaboard points.

It happened while a crowd of some 1,200 sailors were assembled in a drill hall awaiting the beginning of an entertainment. The entertainment was delayed by a late train. The singing instructor mounted the stage and tried to lead in a song, but there was no response.

"Come on," he urged, and suggested that "Micky, Pretty Micky," be sung.

Some sailor provided a parody, running "Micky, Bolsheviki."

The director waved for silence, but could not obtain it.

"How many of you are Bolsheviki?" he asked.

A chorus of "Me" rose up.

Just at this point some sailor in the rear of the hall produced a large red flag. A cheer arose throughout the hall. A tumult of applause went up.

But the performers arrived and the demonstration was ended.

SOCIALISTS DID NOT START RIOTS

New York Churchman States Church's Position Must Be in Regard to Future of Labor—Denies Cleveland Socialists Caused Riots May 1.

"I witnessed the Cleveland riots of May 1st," stated Rev. Worth M. Tippy, of New York, member of the Federated Council of Churches, before the conference of the Interchurch World Movement of North America at Hotel Cleveland at Cleveland, O., last week, "and afterward went among Socialist and labor leaders and found they did not cause the riots." According to Rev. Worth the church has no fight with the Reds. "The American church does not want to fight anybody he stated.

Rev. Worth outlined in his talk to the conference what he claims should be the attitude of the church toward the pressing problems of labor in this country. The program includes a living wage for industrial workers, abolition of child labor, short working day, equal pay for equal work. These he states must form the basis of all attempts to solve labor's problems.

SHOW PROGRESS AT CONVENTION OF THE I. W. W.

(By L. S. Chumley.)

In many respects the 11th annual convention of the Industrial Workers of the World was the most remarkable in the history of the organization. Emerging from two years of the most systematic and brutal persecution ever waged against any group of human beings, the I. W. W. has held its most successful convention, with more delegates present, with a greater spirit of solidarity; and has formulated a more thorough and concrete plan of organization than was possible in previous conventions.

The delegates were typical "wobblies," men and women who have weathered the storm of the last two years. As the period through which we have just passed was no pink tea affair the organization has been purged of what few timid souls ventured to carry a card. The predominant characteristic of the delegates was their determined fighting spirit.

The convention was called to order by Acting General Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Whitehead. Fifty-four delegates answered the roll call. Industrial workers, miners and railway men, longshoremen and sailors, hardy lumber-jacks and agricultural workers, sons of toil from all corners of the states answered "here" - here in the interest in the working class, here representing the workers of their industries.

A touch of the "New Democracy" was given to the convention on the first day by the unanimous vote of the delegates to seat a victim of the said "democracy," Pietro Nigra, recently released from Leavenworth to represent the class war prisoners.

"We, the delegates of the 11th annual convention of the Industrial Workers of the World, send greetings of good cheer to all of the class war prisoners, with assurances of all possible support."

Greetings were also sent to the Soviet governments of Russia and Hungary.

During the first three or four days the Chicago newspapers did everything possible to incite the populace to mass action to mob the convention. The papers said that if the police would not stop the convention the citizens should. They said that the delegates were all criminals and had met to overthrow the government. However, the citizens wouldn't be incited, and the convention was not interrupted in any way. A more peaceable assemblage is not conceivable. The only apparent sign of watchfulness by the authorities was a court stenographer, an old man, who came on the second day and stayed until the end.

Much important and constructive work was accomplished. However, it was not found necessary to deviate in the slightest from the fundamental principles of the organization. Some of the more important things are as follows:

The official adoption of the universal delegates system already in operation. This is a system of organizing that originated with the I. W. W. and is typical of its democratic spirit. This system does away with orators and brass bands for organizing purposes and makes it possible to organize the workers in the most hostile territory or industry. This delegate system is feared more by the masters than our threat of a general strike.

A resolution was passed that would bar any member from holding office in the organization if he is addicted to intoxicating liquors.

LIMIT OFFICE SERVICE.

The delegates voted that no officer should hold office for two consecutive years. This means that if a

This week is everybody's week

Everybody's because everybody has a chance.

A chance to help raise $10,000 for our party-owned press and printing plant.

Yes, we haven't intentionally deprived any one, any party member or any reader of the Ohio Socialist of the best chance in the world to help raise this fund.

Before this issue reaches its readers every one of the 12,000 readers of the Ohio Socialist will have received a letter from the management of the Ohio Socialist. Also an Ohio Socialist Press Fund Pledge Envelope. We hope that every reader did reader read the letter. We hope that there was rader read the letter. We hope that there was something in that letter that made each and every reader realize the problem that confronts the Ohio Socialist. For we know that once the gravity of the situation is realized by the twelve thousand readers of this proletarian newspaper, each and every one of those thousands will do every bit of which he is capable to make it possible to at once free the Ohio Socialist from the possibility of ever missing a single issue through the machinations of any capitalist printer, by enabling us to install at once our own party owned press and printing plant.

It was because we believed this that we mailed YOU that letter and pledge envelope. And now may we ask, you who have not already sent in your pledge envelope with a remittance or a pledge may we ask: What are you going to do with it, comrade? We ask because so many things depend upon the answer you make to that letter. In fact, it may be said that upon YOUR answer depends much future party work and great socialist successes. Because, comrades, we have come to the parting of the ways. The Socialist Party has reached the point in its work and progress when we must part for all time with the petty, slip-shod, ineffective methods of carrying on our work of educating and organizing the working class for the Social Revolution that is this moment upon us. Let no comrade doubt that the most vital necessity of this hour is that the Socialist Party shall control the means of publishing its own propaganda. That is a supreme need of today. It will grow in ever increasing importance as the weeks and months of the near future pass by. We tell you this because we absolutely know it to be true.

The most significant, the most healthy sign of the change which is coming about in our methods of propaganda and organization is that of securing to the party a more complete control over its means of pushing its work. Especially does this necessity become apparent when is considered the problem of publication of our literature. The very source of all activities, the basis for all expected successes is that which we have the least power over—that is, the means of printing our propaganda. It is because we know that the rank and file of our party does not approve of this way of carrying on our party work that we undertook by their help to establish at once in this state at least a party-owned printing plant upon which Socialists could depend in any emergency to carry on without interruption our work for the emancipation of the working class.

But a printing press and equipment cannot be purchased with one's knowledge of its necessity, however clearly that necessity may be seen. Cash is required. And because of this fact we had printed 12,000 pledge envelopes and the entire office force with assistance from other comrades worked day and night getting them ready to be mailed to YOU. And now you have your pledge envelope and the letter. And again we want to urge you to use that pledge envelope. Use it in as generous a manner as you can. Of course we know that the workers generally have a hard row to hoe and the demands upon their purse are heavy enough for even the gaining of a scant livelihood. However, the class war is on and you and we must fight the workers' battles however hard the fighting may be.

We believe we made no mistake when we mailed to you this letter and envelope. We believe that our faith in the workers will be more than justified by the response which they will give. It is true, no state organization ever asked of its membership and the readers of its party press such a large sum as an outright donation. We might have organized a stock company and sold shares of stock, or offered some other plan to you, but we are absolutely against any plan of ownership of the party's machinery of propaganda other than by the party itself. We are against it on principle and from the standpoint of utility as well. No individual nor group of individuals except the rank and file, the membership of the party, is good enough to control the party's means of work. That's why we say: put as generous a donation in your pledge envelope as you can possibly afford, if you can pledge a dollar or five dollars a week or a month for a while for this fund, do so at once and mail the envelope to us. Help with your dollars and your pledges the establishment of a party-owned printing press. Let us know at once that YOU are among the fore-sighted ones in our party. Fill the pledge envelope and mail.

Below are the names of comrades who have contributed the sums at the head of the column in which their name appears since last issue. Readers will please note in the summary in the last column how the fund is gathering momentum. Each week shows greater receipts than the previous one. A good sign we say. Can we keep up the pace we are going, can we show each week an increase in donations over the previous week? We believe so. YOUR pledge envelope well filled will help. Do it.

Gee, this is a lonesome column. Wonder how long we have to wait for some local or comrade to say: Here's your hundred. We are told unofficially this week that a local down state was talking mighty strongly of making a high jump for this column. We will soon know the truth of the rumor.

Some More "Victory" Letters

From live Socialists which carry conviction of the necessity of our party-owned printing plant.

WISHES IT WAS A THOUSAND.

That's the way Comrade A. Ortner of Wakeman, O., looks at the Press fund. Not being able to give a thousand he gives what he can. His contribution is two dollars. However, the spirit is what counts as well as the amount given. And so far as the size of the contribution is concerned, if every reader of the Ohio Socialist would give as generously as Comrade Ortner, we could not only buy a press for the Ohio Socialist and equip a printing plant in first class shape, but build a suitable building for it and house state headquarters in it besides. Yes, we could do a lot if every comrade would give this much.

FROM WAY OUT IN KANSAS.

From Eminence, Kan., comes two dollars from Comrade Wm. Crumpacker, "to help buy a printing plant." It seems that no matter how far the Ohio Socialist goes the comrades like it and show by their support that it is appreciated.

A COUPLE OF LINES, A COUPLE OF DOLLARS.

Comrades don't say much when they send their remittances for the Press fund. But we know that their interest in the Socialist movement is not to be judged by the length of letters to the State Office. Usually their letters say little, but their remittances prove their loyalty. We are led to say this by reading the two-line note from Comrade Geo. L. Artz, M. A. L., of Wayland, O., whose letter contained two dollars for the Press fund.

NOT A PARTY MEMBER, BUT A RED JUST THE SAME.

We hope every party member will read the following letter from Comrade Mathew McMillan of New Lexington, O. Aside from the truth which he so emphatically points out, he sets an example to our party members that should wake many of them from their apparent sleepy state. Here is a Red, who reads, supports and believes in the party; though not upon the membership rolls, nevertheless he contributes a neat sum to the upbiulding of the party and the party press. His letter and generous contribution should jar some negligent comrades into a better fighting spirit. Read his letter: "Please find enclosed five dollars for printing press fund. Although not a party member, I say, let the damn fools keep their press. It is only a matter of time until they won't need it, as nobody will want to read their damn lies." And he signs himself, yours for the dictatorship of the proletariat.

FROM OUTLAWED MICHIGAN.

Well, the N. E. C. didn't kill the spirit of working class solidarity of Michigan, comrades, by throwing them bodily out of the party. Comrade C. Goodheart proves it when he remits two dollars for the party-owned printing plant. And he adds, "more to follow from the children." Of course it is to be expected that there are some young rebels in Michigan.

FROM THE WIFE OF A CLASS WAR PRISONER.

Look here, you Socialists who are out of jail. Did you ever stop and think of the trouble you never had? Very likely not. Nevertheless it might be a very good thing if you did so occasionally. It seems that the truly revolutionary spirit is always awakened in Socialists by a commitment to jail. Socialists in jail, or Socialists who have members of their families in jail appear to be able to overlook the troubles which attend them in their endeavor to make the Socialist movement a better and truer movement for the workers. Their loyalty is doubled, their faith becomes boundless. Their troubles, financial and otherwise, are buried beneath a desire to see the party grow. But, we who have passed through the experience, know the mental and physical anguish which is inseparable from every jail experience. That many comrades do not allow themselves to be turned aside from their Socialist duties by these experiences proves the unconquerable determination of Socialist ideals. Read this letter from Comrade Calkins you Socialists who are out of jail and ask yourself if you cannot at least equal her contribution and loyalty? "As Mr. W. P. Calkins got a jail sentence of six months, I will take it upon myself to send a dollar bill to help pay for the press. I need the money, but not as bad as a press is needed to spread the great Socialist news. Now is the time to strike and to strike hard for humanity's sake."

FOURTEEN READERS, FOURTEEN DOLLARS.

To Comrade H. Heckler of Ellit, O., we are indebted for a remittance of fourteen dollars. Comrade Heckler writes: "I went around to my fellow workers, readers of the Ohio Socialist," and all gave willingly. In this way I think we could get many donations that we would not get otherwise." The names of the donors are in the dollar column of this issue. As to the circulation of lists for the purpose of collecting donations for this fund, we will state that lists have been sent to locals in Ohio and will be sent to comrades in other states upon application to this office. If you wish to circulate a list among your friends or shop mates and believe that an official list is better than one of your own, write to us at once and one will be forwarded. Party members in Ohio should request a list from the local secretary for this work.

A PROMISE OF "MORE."

With remittance of six dollars, which he has solicited among comrades, Comrade Edwin Blank of Lima, O., promises more in the near future. Comrade Blank has long been one of the staunchest supporters of the Ohio Socialist, We are glad to note that his interest has not waned.

ANOTHER COMRADE PLEDGED.

Although his remittance was sent before the pledge envelopes were sent out, Comrade H. V. Hein of Youngstown, Ohio, saw the possibilities of the pledge system. He has sent one dollar and promises that he will send four more in installments.

TWO FIVE SPOTS.

Sometimes good things as well as troubles come in quantities. That is what we thought when we read the note from Comrade Bengez of Akron. Five dollars from himself and five from Anton Giurekovs boosts the fund considerable.

ANOTHER LOCAL IN THE RIGHT COLUMN.

Another fifty dollars for the press fund. Another local has seen the logic of events. This time it is Local Youngstown, O. Here is what Comrade Secretary Frow writes concerning this most generous donation. "At our meeting this evening we carried the motion to contribute the sum of fifty dollars to the fund to promote the progress of our grand paper, the Ohio Socialist." Let us tell you comrades, it looks mighty encouraging when locals contribute outright to this fund from their treasuries.

GOING TO TRY AGAIN LATER.

Not only a contribution now, but promises of more later from many comrades proves how greatly the comrades desire that the Ohio Socialist secure at once the equipment necessary to make it independent of capitalist printers. From Zeeland, Mich., comes a letter which reads: "Please find two dollars for our printing plant. I will try to do more this fall if need be. Hoping that we get control of the national office, I will then do my best for that." Adrian Luyencyk.

LOCAL AKRON CONTRIBUTES.

Ten dollars is the sum the English branch of Local Akron contributes to the press fund. Secretary Holloway remits for the local. One by one the locals are remitting.

WANTS A PHOTOGRAPH.

Another Michigan comrade whose generous support is helping to make the Ohio Socialist a greater power for the workers in the class-war is Comrade Fred Wilde of Dundee. A generous donation of five dollars with a request of a photo of the press in the Ohio Socialist is contained in his letter. Soon we shall have a photo to show of the new press. Not only a photo but the press itself. Let all help a bit and the job's done.

HERE'S WHAT WE'VE EXPECTED

Right along we knew that we would soon hear from Comrade Shultz of Napoleon on the press fund. It is to be expected that an old "war horse" of Comrade Shultze's stripe would be among the first "stand-by" in a case of necessity like the present. Comrade Shultz's donation is a large five spot, which we accept with thanks.

ANOTHER FALLACY DISPROVED.

Months ago when the Ohio Socialist was just starting to grow its pinfeathers, before it was squarely on its feet and was looking about the world and sizing up the prospects of accomplishing the most good for Socialism in the most efficient manner, a comrade nearly cooled our enthusiasm for a whole minute by telling us that we couldn't make a state party owned paper "take" in outside states. We thought we could. We believed that we could publish a real, revolutionary Socialist paper that would secure the suport of the rank and file of our party irrespective of the geographical location of the individual comrades. We have done so. We submit this proof that we have succeded to a great extent—a contribution of five dollars from Lithuanian Local of East Moline, Ill., Mike L. Kalatha, secretary. Money talks and it talks loud too, as a proof of the favor in which the Ohio Socialist is held by comrades outside the state. We thank you, comrades of Moline.

QUICK RETURNS.

On Wednesday we mailed out ten thousand pledge envelopes and a letter with each to our readers. Saturday morning the mail carrier delivered to us the first pledge envelope to be returned. It comes from Nick Rebick of Bellaire, O. Two dollars it contained. Now that was pretty quick work, wasn't it? And we might have known that Bellaire would be the first to make a return. The reputation of this live local has made for itself creates a confidence in the ability of the comrades there to take first place in most party plans.

BOHEMIAN BRANCH REMITS.

A two dollar donation from Bohemian branch, Cuyahoga Co. was received this week.

FROM ONLY READER IN TOWN.

A remittance of five dollars has been received from Comrade Mrs. G. L. Shurick of Sharpsburg, O. This comrade is the only subscriber we have in this town. Success to the printing plant, she adds.

TWO GOOD BOOSTS.

Two weeks ago Comrade Bonsal of Salem promised five dollars for the press fund. This week he kept the promise. Not only that, he also enclosed eight dollars as a contribution from Columbiana County committee. All locals, branches and members are catching the spirit of progress and lining up for entrance to one column or the other.

MORE FROM KANSAS.

"I am sending you a little to help toward our own press for the Ohio Socialist. Am sorry that I cannot do more, but work is very bad out here, in fact there is none at all, but I will try to do a little more." Thus writes Comrade Joe Skubitz of Ringo, Kansas. Comrade Skubitz sends five dollars for himself, and seven from three friends.

BAKER IS DOING HIS BIT.

Sure, Chas. Baker, state organizer, is on the job. He always is when there is a job to be done and when there isn't he goes and locates one. Baker can't be kept from working for Socialism—even in jail. Through Comrade Baker we have received some more press fund donations from Akron comrades. Comrades Mr. and Mrs. Deible, $25; Comrade Emma Edwards, $2; Comrades G. H. Grakey and T. C. Hayes, $1 each. Sometimes we grow a bit anxious about the twenty-five, fifty and hundred dollar columns, but some comrade comes along most every week and takes a seat in one or the other of them, thus proving that no mistake was made in the belief that they would be used.

OVER 80, CONTRIBUTES.

"If I wasn't over eighty and had no job, would send five at least," writes [illegible] fellows who have jobs will do as well we'll have that press in short order.

TWO FIVES FROM KENT, O.

Comrades E. N. and J. N. Barber of Kent, O., come to bat with a five-spot each to make the press fund grow.

BOHEMIAN BRANCH CONTRIBUTES.

We desire to express our thanks for the generous remittance of five dollars from the Bohemian branch of Local Bellaire.

AN ARGUMENT DRIVEN HOME.

Here's a letter so full of punch and truth that we just can't keep it to ourselves. We appreciate a good thing and we are going to be generous and pass it on to our readers just as we got it.

"Enclosed you will find check for $5 towards the fund for the best and greatest socialist paper in the state. Let's all get together, comrades, and pull for its success. Now you Socialist comrades who cannot express their ideas in speech, here is your chance to do where you don't have to talk. It's up to us all to fight harder than ever so that the Ohio Socialist don't die. We are facing the greatest struggle in the life of Socialism right now. Don't weaken, just dig down and give as much as you can and the outcome can only be one thing: the greatest Socialist paper in Ohio will have its own printing press. Louis J. Love, Youngstown, O.

FROM SUNNY ALABAMA.

"It is high time we had our own printing press for the Ohio Socialist." These are the sentiments of Comrade Harry Grote of Reform, Ala. He sends a dollar.

AND TEXAS, TOO.

"Please accept this mite with my wish and prayer that the venture may prove the start that should have been made years ago for a nationally owned press and state owned press as well," writes Comrade Laurette M. Malone of Tankersley, Texas. Comrade Malone encloses postage to the amount of seventy-two cents for this fund.

MUST NOT FAIL.

COMPARISONS.

April's report—36 locals.

March report—33 locals.

April—Good standing 4987 of reported roll of 6152, percentage 0.812. While last month's report from 33 locals showed 3847 in good standing of a roll of 4953 members, an efficiency percentage of 0.777.

As there are still 60 locals that do not report monthly, we are confident judging from their reports now and then, that they, too, "are on the job."

INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP.

Thirty-six locals report 999 new members. The task set last month was to excel the March increase, which was 527 new ones, by at least 75 more. The pace has now been set. Can we still beat it? The sentiment created by the "riot-inciting plutocracy" on our International Labor Day will tell; so do not forget to look for this column next month.

Other locals not attaining the standard test of 5 per cent are as follows, arranged alphabetically: Clarke Co., 1 new member; Dayton, 5; Massillon, 1; Niles, 3; Robbins, 2; Sandusky, 1; total increase 999 new members, a percentage of 20 per cent.

The increase over last month is 6 per cent, an excellent showing.

A word to the secretaries and the most active members of our Ohio locals: No doubt you are fully acquainted with the significance of the figures given here. This one fact should be known though, and should serve as a guide for all organizers and officials. For instance the average good standing efficiency for this month is .819. All locals over this mark are in fairly good condition, those attaining the 1.000 mark are in themselves efficient, but when the membership figures show it at a standstill, then again the "cogs of your machinery" must be gone over carefully. All locals below .812 should investigate the cause of the indifference on the part of their dues-paying members and if necessary inaugurate new methods that will hold all newly initiated members.

Strengthen your organization by incessant activity and above all to fulfill our revolutionary mission and purpose. "Stand uncompromisingly for a party-owned printing press and a party-owned daily."

Yours for the Better Society.
FELIX J. CATLIN.

Note—*Ashtabula (as near as figures reveal) has performed the difficult feat of multiplying itself 7 times in one month. This can be verified by February figures also.

If this is not the case, then we may fairly well hit the truth if we suppose that this local has reorganized.

The facts will be known by next month.

GLASGOW'S "BOLSHEVISM"

(From The Labor News, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.)

Instead of giving us the real underlying causes of labor troubles, the capitalist press in the past ascribed them to the "paid agitator." Then it was the "alien agitator." Now it is the "Bolshevists" who upset the harmonious relations of the masters and their employes.

In the cabled accounts of the recent Glasgow strike for the forty-hour week we were told that it was largely inspired by Russian agitators. This is what the Rt. Hon. C. F. G. Masterman, writing in the London Daily News, has to say about it: "It is not inspired," he says, "by men who want another few hours' less work per week or another few shillings more wages. Nor is it inspired by foreigners of any type, Russian or enemy. The moving force in it is a body of young men, Scotsmen all, able and intelligent, the product of the new Scottish education, with the keen Scottish intellect. They are mostly skilled men, with power of earning high wages, and they are talking—on the Clyde—to the most intelligent working class audience in the world.

They are talking day and night in a seven-day week, in meetings held outside all the works' gates before breakfast, in the dinner hour, or in surrounding halls in the evening. They are preaching with enormous energy, something in the nature of a crusade. Their gospel is simple enough. Today it is the profiteers, with plenty of outrageous and telling examples, the monstrous inequality of fortune as exhibited by the contrast between the life of the millionaire and the life of the children in the Glasgow slums, the contrast between the life of the possessors and the possessed.

Accompanying this destructive criticism of the present social order there is also a vision of better things. It is scarcely [illegible]. Not one in a thousand [illegible] use the term has any idea what Bolshevism means; they [illegible] merely with [illegible] for instance [illegible] and [illegible]—that by the reduction or elimination of profits, and the interests of capital, and a direct attack on the great landlords and millionaires, the working people may found a new society and get rid of their present disabilities. It is at present a revolutionary demand, and Glasgow is the [illegible] of Britain. One can judge by their bulletins, their vigorous combined action, their replacement of leaders when arrested by other leaders, how completely their creed has mastered the upper guiding group of the strikes organization."

We might observe here that much of the credit for the plentitude of well-informed and aggressive Labor leaders on the Clydeside must be given to the redoubtable Maclean. On Sunday mornings he conducted a class of over 1,000 working men students in the principles of Marxian Economics.

"—— the weary-eyed women in ugly, shapeless convict garb, each bending like a galley slave to the task, dumb, silent and hopeless.

WORE RED RIBBON.

"Yet, in two hearts at least there burned the fires of revolt, and over two hearts there glowed the tiny knots of red ribbon, the world-wide insignia of human brotherhood. There is enough of the ribbon for two tiny bows. One I want you to keep for me. Some day I shall stand with the comrades of all nations in the new international, and I shall want to wear it in memory of this May Day. The other I want you to send to dear old Gene, and tell him to keep it until he steps forth a freeman, with it upon the heart that has always been loyal to all that it symbolizes.

"I want all the comrades to know that I appreciate and enjoy the things they send. In the deadly monotony of prison I think we will revert back to childhood, the result, I suppose, of the complete crushing of individual initiative. Meal time and box time are the bright spots in our day.

DULL ENOUGH FOR A DEMOCRAT.

"I think it will be useless for you to send me any scientific or technical books for a time, at least. I find that the roar of the machinery dulls my brains, and the constant eye strain of following the endless miles of flying seams makes study difficult, if not impossible. I understand quite fully now why the workers for the most part have scrambled brains. I think it quite possible that, if I were compelled to work in an overall factory for a year, I might fall so low in intelligence as to vote the Democratic ticket. The pastime that eases nerve most quickly and causes time we are locked in our cells pass most comfortably, is knitting. So I have reverted back to the habits of my pioneer ancestors, and find comfort and soothing calm in the touch of the yarn, and weave dreams with the flying needles.

ABOUT EMMA GOLDMAN.

"Tell Zeuch that Emma laughed when she read his letter, and said that a philosophical anarchist is one who is too cowardly to admit his belief, and that she is no coward. I can't enlighten him much, for down here in the dregs of life, the only philosophy that endures is the philosophy of human brotherhood. I suppose that Emma Goldman and I are far apart in our creeds. But we do not discuss creeds here. They seem so far outside our world. The Emma Goldman that I know is not the propagandist. It is Emma Goldman, the tender, cosmic mother; the wise, understanding woman; the faithful sister, the loyal comrade. My memories of Emma Goldman will not be of the firery agitator, but Emma, the healer of sick souls, the valiant supporter of wavering spirits and the comforter of broken hearts. Emma don't believe in Jesus, yet she is one who makes such belief possible for me to grasp the spiritof Jesus, whether it ever was embodied in human form or not.

SEES DREGS OF LIFE.

"There is so much to do here, so many sick souls and broken lives, and I can, and do help. The management here is so afraid that Emma and I will teach our isms. We do not need to do that. We only need to serve these poor souls.

"And the time will not be wasted for me. I am learning so much. I know now the difference between Hillel and Jesus, Gorky and Wells, Jack London and Galsworthy. Jesus, Gorky and London lived. The others only read of life. I shall have lived also, lived down in the very dregs of life, and when I come back, I will reach men and women because of it.

MESSAGE TO COMRADES.

"This reminds me of such a good joke on Governor Painter. We worked together on the senate committee investigating the minimum wage question some years ago. He always insisted that if only women would be housemaids in other people's kitchens, the social problem would be solved for working women. made a list of inmates this morning, and found that two-thirds of his guests were housemaids. Several girls are here for killing their babies, every one of whom was a housemaid, and in most cases claim that the employer was the father of the baby. I shall have the most interesting mass of facts ever gathered when I come back to life.

"I must close now. Send a message of cheer to the comrades. Remember me to all our friends. Love and kisses to all my darlings, and be brave and cheerful. Lovingly, KATE."

STATE PICNIC

Socialist Party of Ohio

Will Be Held at

CONEY ISLAND

CINCINNATI

JUNE 29, 1919

All Socialists of Ohio and neighboring states, especially, the border states of West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana, are hereby notified of the State picnic of the Socialist Party of Ohio to be held on the above date. Each and every one of you are cordially invited to be present on this grand occasion with all the members of your family.

The Ohio State picnics have always been great affairs in the past, the one this year promises to outclass all previous ones in every way. What with one of the most choice locations in the state, added attractions of many kinds, including a charming steam boat ride, Socialists should feel encouraged to be on hand with a good sized crowd.

ATTRACTIONS.

Coney Island—A first class pleasure resort, situated up the Ohio river from Cincinnati. Many amusements, including Ferris wheel, figure eight, boating, bathing and many other pleasant recreations. In fact, there will be pleasures for each and every Socialist whether he or she is seven weeks old or seventy years.

SPEAKING.

Good speakers will be on hand to instruct, entertain, and enthuse you with the message of socialism. Speakers with national reputations will be present at the Ohio State picnic. You will want to hear them. Don't miss the opportunity which this occasion affords you to do so.

ADMISSION 25c.

You can't beat the State picnic's admission price. At 25c each with a ten-mile boat ride each way thrown in, we say you can't beat it. And by the way, admission tickets have been sent to all Party Locals in Ohio for sale to members. Buy them from your secretaries. At the gates they will cost ten cents more than if bought from him.

HERE'S OUR WARNING TO YOU.

Here's our warning to you, comrades. Thousands are planning to be present at the State picnic. And our warning to you is: Plan to be there too. Meet your comrades at the State picnic.

VISIT THE COUNTRY STORE AT LOCAL HEADQUARTERS.

Comrades are asked to send to Comrade Lotta Burke, 1314 Vine street, Cincinnati, articles to be sold at this time over the counter at the Country Store. Please mark the articles sent with name of sender and the value of article. Attend [illegible]

Present Party Officialdom Overwhelmingly Repudiated by National Referendum

The Socialist Party National referendum for the election of international delegates and international secretary has overwhelmingly repudiated the present bureaucratic officialdom of the party. Study the table of votes by states which appears below. This is a history making tabulation for it shows that the Socialist party of this country has faced forward and refuses longer to give ear to the siren songs of our stand-patters.

The members of the party want a new deal. They demand a party that is up to the minute in proletarian Socialist thought and deeds. While the world has witnessed tremendous changes, both capitalist-ward and Socialist-ward, as a result of the war, the Socialist party in this country has been slipping backwards, or at best, has been only marking time.

The party membership must have action which will place it in alignment with the kind of Socialism which the lessons of the war have taught us to be the only kind that ensures victory. The party membership has enough of resolutions which straddle the question of affiliation as between the Berne-Scheidemann International and the Moscow-Lenin International. That the party membership does demand a clearing of the decks and an honest expression endorsing the Communist-International is proven by the vote below, which elects comrades as international delegates who are Left Wing Socialists.

In the vote the only states with a large vote that are missing are Illinois and New York. The state secretaries of these states refused to send the Ohio Socialist their returns. For Illinois we can say that we are almost certain that the Left Wing candidates won out by large majorities. We challenge New York to publish its vote. We prophesy that despite the fact that the reactionaries in New York city expelled nearly half the membership, constituting the Left Wing faction, in order to be able to throw out the Left Wing vote upon this referendum, that Right Wing stand-pat candidates in New York received only slight majorities, if they received majorities at all.

The votes from the states not included in the tabulation below will not change results. The Left Wing candidates elected have too great a lead over the defeated candidates. Victor Berger, [illegible], the largest vote among the candidates of moderate Socialism and he got less than half as many as the lowest winning Left Wing candidate.

A thorough study of the tabulation constitutes a revelation to the party membership. John M. Work, Seymour Stedman, A. I. Shiplacoff, James Oneal, who together with National Secretary Germer attempted to suppress this vote, to keep it secret, to hold it up—in fact, the charge is made that their real purpose was to steal the election—these five candidates, the first four of whom are also members of the national executive committee which voted to suppress this referendum—these five candidates were so thoroughly beaten, so overwhelmingly repudiated by the party membership that their standing as party officials, yea, and as party members, is now nil.

Germer, the national secretary of the party, who ought to have the respect and confidence of the entire membership, is so little thought of that he can only poll 3846 votes. James Oneal, whom the national executive committee honored by sending him to Europe to study Socialist progress, only mustered 1726 votes. Shiplacoff, who has thrown his lot with the right wing reactionaries, got 2042 votes. Seymour Stedman, who has been the party's attorney in all large court cases growing out of the espionage law, and who might have made a name for himself in the party, only has the confidence of the membership to the extent of 3754 votes. John M. Work, an editorial writer upon Berger's paper, received 2316 votes.

The Left Wing candidates, because the membership knew them to be in accord with Lenin and Liebknecht Socialism, received what can be considered an ovation from the rank and file. John Reed, a strong supporter of the Russian Socialist Federated Republic, received 16,074 votes. Louis C. Fraina, editor of the Revolutionary Age, which paper leads in the advocacy of Left Wing Socialism in this country, received 13,447 votes. Alfred Wagenknecht, whom those defeated by this referendum discharged from the national office because he was a Left Wing Socialist, received 10,325 votes and C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of Local Cuyahoga County (Cleveland), which local adopted the Left Wing program at a recent mass meeting, received 10,067 votes.

The real character of the action of the seven members of the national executive committee (four of whom are candidates upon the ballot below) becomes apparent when this vote is examined. The results of this referendum stamp the expulsion of the Socialist Party of Michigan, the suspension of seven foreign federations, the refusal to tabulate the vote and the attempt to place the party property beyond reach of the party membership, as the last desperate acts of a pitiful minority overwhelmingly and definitely repudiated by the party membership.

AN ANSWER AND A CHALLENGE.

Is the New York Call badly informed, insufficiently informed—or has it learned the art of newspaper lying?

In an editorial in its issue of June 8th it claims that the Left Wing movement within the Socialist Party in this country has all the characteristics of the doctrine of the "militant minority" as advocated and practiced by the French Syndicalists some ten years ago. At that time small bands of "revolutionists" entered the unions in France in the hope of captuuring them to lead them, through a dictatorship, into the Syndicalist camp.

That the Left Wing movement in this country is a similar manifestation we absolutely deny. The New York Call utters an untruth when it so claims, and we believe it knows it.

The facts are that the Left Wing movement in this country is a RANK AND FILE movement. When Local Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) meets in mass convention and adopts Left Wing program, is this the work of a militant minority or is it a true expression of the mass of the local's membership? When Local Cook County (Chicago) holds a delegate convention with a representation of one delegate for every ten members in the local, and adopts the Left Wing program by a vote of 380 to 83, is this the work of a "militant minority," or is it the true expression of the Chicago membership? Local Buffalo met in mass convention and adopted the Left Wing program, as did Locals Philadelphia, Salt Lake City, Portland, Seattle, Hamilton, Minneapolis, Detroit—in fact all large locals in industrial centers and many smaller locals in smaller industrial cities have adopted the Left Wing program. St. Louis and Milwaukee are probably the only exception, and even Milwaukee is now one-third Left Wing.

The swings towards the Left is a rank and file manifestation. No one knows this better than the officialdom of the party, those who are about to lose their official heads because of their moderate stand. This bureaucratic officialdom suspended and expelled nearly 40,000 party members for being Left Wing Socialists and there is no better proof than this that they know the Left Wing movement to be a rank and file movement.

It is the right wingers, the reactionaries, the desperate officialdom of the party, who, because they feel themselves insulted at this mass movement by the rank and file against the control of the party by moderate Socialists, are using dictatorial methods to keep themselves in office by refusing to allow the rank and file to express itself through referendum. They are expelling the rank and file because the rank and file is asserting itself and refuses longer to look up to leaders who mislead.

We hereby issue a challenge to any representative of the New York Call, any of the seven despotic national executive committee who are guilty of throwing 40,000 members out of the party, to debate this question before any large local or any state convention. And to the New York Call we desire to say that upon its fairness in this controversy will to a great extent depend its ability to secure support and subscriptions in the many Left Wing states which surround New York.

WORDS VERSUS ACTION.

That elegant phaser of English, Woodrow Wilson, who has been so busy these last few months mishandling the nation's affairs at Paris, and leagueing the nations with ropes of sand, ventured upon an oratorical flight before the French Society of Political Science which is one of the most glaring misstatements of fact which it has been our lot to have thrust upon our notice.

Woodrow, the Wonderful, is quoted as saying:

> My view of the State is that it must stop and listen to what I have to say, no matter how humble I am and that every man has the right to have his voice heard and his council heeded, in so far as it is worthy. I have always been among those who believed that the greatest freedom was the greatest safety, because if a man is a fool the best thing to do is to encourage him to advertise the fact by speaking.

Beautiful sentences. Just as beautiful as they are meaningless when judged by facts. Can any man in possession of his senses make a statement like that in face of the facts concerning freedom of speech in the United States? Can any one, unless grossly ignorant of actualities, or viciously attempting to betray the truth make such a statement? Freedom of speech in America? It does not exist. The press of the country still muzzled six months after the war is over. Free speech utterly abolished. The most atrocious laws ever placed upon the statute books of a civilized nation still in effect. The jails of the country full to the doors with men and women who have committed no crimes, but only have expressed themselves at variance with Mr. Wilson and the policies he has [illegible]

Do not be misled. No one knows better than Woodrow Wilson that it was with his approval that free speech was stricken to earth in this country. It was at his bidding that an intellectual reign of terror was allowed to be inaugurated over the country, that honest men and honest convictions were driven to cover at his behest and that the most unspeakable offenses were daily committed against freedom of speech in this country—all with the approval of Wilson.

The longer Woodrow Wilson talks the plainer he is revealed as one of the most noted mongerers that was ever belied by his actions. Free speech, free press, freedom of utterance for every one no matter how humble his station in life. All, all are empty phrases. Not even during the war has capitalism in America been allowed to go to such extremes in its desperate attempts to destroy freedom of speech as since the signing of the armistice. The liberties of the American people, their right to speak their opinions in public are absolutely in the hands of ignorant politicians and brutal police. Reactionary political shysters at the heads of city and town governments have vied with each other in the extent to which they could go in strangling free speech.

To speak, to write, to think, except in favor of capitalism is to be immediately subjected to the most vicious assaults by agencies of the city, state or federal governments. Wilson knows this. His statements to the contrary are merest moonshine.

That Bundle Brigade

How many Ohio Socialists is your local distributing each week? None? Well, comrade, you are the one we want to talk to. But first let us ask if you can think of a real, sensible reason why you are not. Think hard, now for it requires downright hard thinking to scare up a good, sound reason for such neglect. And while you are thinking in the back of your head for this reason, read a reason or two why your Local should join the Distribution Squad at once.

The Ohio Socialist is the best propaganda paper you can possibly place in the hands of the uninformed. Compared to leaflets, it is a thousand per cent better, for it containg such a variety of articles, some of which MUST strike home. A paper always arouses curiosity and invites investigation. A leaflet does not always do so.

Some cities in Ohio have ordinances against the distribution of leaflets. But none have ordinances against distribution of papers, nor are likely to have. To comrades in such cities, we say, join the Ohio Socialist Distribution Squad. Get on the job of educating your fellow workers.

Many Ohio cities and towns are passing laws against open air meetings without permits from the police. That their ordinances are aimed at Socialists is not disputed. Nevertheless, even this unjust usurpation of the rights of the workers should not prove a detriment to our movement. We can still carry the message of Socialism to the workers every week in every city of this state and other states, too, through the distribution of the Ohio Socialist. There is absolutely no reason why the propaganda of Socialism should be slackened for a moment. Just think for a moment. If our meetings were uninterrupted, thousands of workers would attend them with eagerness to hear the message of Socialism. Now, the question arises, what are the comrades of your local doing to keep up the interest of these awakened workers. What are you doing to retain their interest in Socialism? What are you doing to further educate them in Socialism so that they may shortly take their places beside you instead of behind you in the march of the workers toward Industrial Democracy? Ask yourself these questions seriously for they are important, so important that no evasion of them is possible.

Many locals and individual comrades, not only in Ohio, but throughout the nation, see clearly the necessity of better distribution of socialist papers and literature. They are organizing for it. They refuse to be pushed aside by the reactionary politicians who would wreck the Socialist Movement if they could.

We want every comrade to realize the necessity of getting into the harness and distributing the Ohio Socialist regularly, every week. It is the best method possible for propaganda. And it is cheap enough, too. Every local of our party can afford to order a generous bundle for distribution. At the low price of one-half cent per copy many thousands of Ohio Socialists should be placed in the hands of the workers each week. We want your local to join the Distribution Squad. Join today for there is [illegible] cited Piqua, which takes 400 a week; Local Sandusky takes the same; Local Lorain, 500; Springfield gets 500 per week; Local Warren also is on the list for 400. Locals Canton, Massillon, Cambridge, Toledo, and L. P. Benedict of Findlay each use a hundred copies for distribution. Many locals and comrades out of state also are busy satisfying the growing appetites of the workers for sound socialism by a conscientious distribution of the Ohio Socialist. In fact, our bundle order list is constantly growing as comrades realize more and more the value of literature distribution. And so, comrades, those of you who have neglected the opportunities of forwarding the cause of socialism by the distribution method, we invite you to join the growing list of comrades who are doing this invaluable work. Join now. Order a bundle. One-half cent per copy in any quantity.

NEW JERSEY CONVENTION ADOPTS LEFT WING PROGRAM

The 19th annual convention of the Socialist Party of New Jersey, which closed Friday, May 30, adopted the Left Wing program in its entirety.

At the same time, the convention declared against a separatist organization or any tactics which would make it impossible to work for the left wing program from within the party.

Approval of the action and adherance to the ideals of the Lenin group, the Spartacans, and other similar revolutionary Socialist factions, was voiced by the convention, and the manifesto of the Left Wing faction of the New Jersey movement was indorsed. Fred Harwood, state secretary, declared it a decided Left Wing convention.

A resolution to condemn the action of the national executive committee for suspending seven foreign federation and the Socialist Party of Michigan was deferred because, at the time the convention was in session, no positive information of these shameful acts was at hand, only capitalist press reports being available to act upon. That the New Jersey Socialist Party will severely condemn the acts of the seven national executive committeemen in throwing nearly 40,000 members out of the party and in holding up the national referendum to elect new national officers, is a foregone conclusion.

Another state gone "left." What are you going to do about it, you seven of the national executive committee who have already driven 40,000 members out of the party for being "left"? How much of a party will you have left, if you follow your "throw them out" program to its logical conclusion? You've expelled Michigan. You've suspended seven foreign federations. You are about to expel Massachusetts for adopting the left wing program. The German Socialist Federation turned to the left, and you'll probably suspend it. The Socialist Party of Washington is now taking a referendum upon the question of adopting the left wing program. This referendum will [illegible]

30,000 MEMBERS UNJUSTLY SUSPENDED

Statement of Seven Language Federations of the Socialist Party Protesting Their Suspension by Seven Members of Nat'l Ex. Com.

To the Members of the Socialist Party.

Comrades:—There is hardly a party member who does not know that the trend within the party for the last several months has been toward revolutionary and uncompromising Socialism. We have all been taught a great lesson by the Scheidemanns and Kautskys of Germany, the Hendersons of England, and social patriots the world over. We know that that brand of "Socialism," the kind that always trades and compromises with the capitalist classes and the supporters of which in times of war and revolution do not hesitate to go hand by hand with their imperialistic governments and revenge itself upon comrades of such sterling character as Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg, and others, we know that "socialists" believing in this kind of "Socialism" are not to be trusted with our party management.

And so for many months a struggle has been going on in our party in this country between the revolutionary element and the opportunists who control the party machinery. The members of the party, having learned that Scheidemann "Socialism" means defeat instead of victory of the working class, have taken a radical and revolutionary attitude in line with the new International. This radical stand on the part of party members has been named the "left wing movement" within our party. The socialists in most large industrial centers have joined the left wing. Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Philadelphia, Detroit, Seattle, and scores of other locals and even state organizations of our party have officially adopted the left wing program.

The Russian, Lithuanian, Ukrainian, Polish, Hungarian, South Slavic, and Lettish language federations of the Socialist Party, containing over 30,000 members, also uphold this left wing position. These federations and the comrades in them, knowing the situation in Europe, have for a long time requested the Socialist Party in this country to take a definite stand upon the side of the Lenin and Liebknecht Socialists of Europe.

It was because these seven language federations of the party criticized the national executive committee for its straddling of this important question, that seven members of this committee suspended these federations at its meeting, May 24 to 30.

If this matter were not so serious; it would, indeed, be laughable. We submit to you, comrade, that it is rather funny for a little group of SEVEN desperate men to suspend over THIRTY THOUSAND members from the Socialist Party. Such an act has never been perpetrated upon the Socialist Party before. Never in the history of the party has a set of officials acted in so high-handed and autocratic manner. Let it be indelibly impressed upon your brain, comrade—SEVEN men suspended over THIRTY THOUSAND members from the party—and seven is only a minority of the national executive committee.

This is not the worst of it! Read carefully and your indignation will known no bounds. Here is what this autocratic group of seven national committee men did:

1. They suspended seven language federations from the Socialist Party containing over 30,000 members.
2. They refused these federations a trial.
3. The autocratic seven committeemen refused to give the seven federations they suspended a chance to prepare their case.
4. They refused to postpone the suspension until the executive committees of the federations could act in the matter.
5. The autocratic national executive committeemen even went so far as to fail to give either of the federations a copy of the charges while the debate upon motion to suspend was being acted upon.
6. The [illegible]
7. This group of seven suspended the entire election of the officials of the Socialist Party under the clumsy excuse that the votes cannot be tabulated because some branches and locals have voted as a unit and for the candidates not of the choice of the reactionary group of seven.

In short, this group of seven national committeemen, drunk with power they assumed, feeling agrieved because these federations dared to criticise the national executive committee, made themselves guilty of an act which will discredit them forever in the International Socialist Movement.

We say that even if we were guilty of acts not in conformity with the constitution, and THIS WE DENY—but even if we were guilty of such acts, WE HAD A RIGHT TO A FAIR TRIAL WITH NOTICE THAT CHARGES WERE TO BE PLACED AGAINST US. No party member will say that we have not the right to a fair trial and the right to time to prepare our case. Every capitalist court gives this right, but it was denied us in the Socialist Party.

The charges which were placed against us, and which we have, since we have been convicted and suspended, allowed to see, contain numerous counts so misleading and far fetched that it is useless to reply to them. In the main we are charged with being left wing Socialists and with making propaganda in the party for left wing Socialism. We are further charged with trying to capture the Socialist Party. To this we answer that we did do all we could do legitimately to place the administration of our party into the hands of real comrades who are in full harmony with revolutionary Socialism. And we only wish we had succeeded in this long before now, for the acts of the SEVEN autocrats on the national executive committee must prove to every comrade that a change in party administration, its program and tactics, is very much needed. The counts in the charges claiming we violated the party constitution do not apply at all and the autocratic seven stretched the constitution in an effort to make it apply to a case they wanted to trump up against us.

We claim that the TRUE REASON FOR OUR SUSPENSION IS THAT THE AUTOCRATIC SEVEN OF THE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE KNOW THAT WE, THE REVOLUTIONARY SOCIALISTS, WERE PERMITTED TO REMAIN IN THE PARTY, THE OPPORTUNISTIC CLIQUE WOULD NOT CONTROL THE COMING NATIONAL CONVENTION, AND THAT OUR SUSPENSION WAS VOTED SO THAT MODERATE, REFORM, TRAITOR "SOCIALISM" WOULD PREVAIL IN THAT CONVENTION. In fact, several of the autocratic seven openly stated that we were suspended so that we would not be able to control the coming national convention.

And NOW—WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS, COMRADE? We were suspended by this autocratic seven; but they were not satisfied with that—they fired us out of the national headquarters, AND MADE US hurry around to look for other quarters. We had an idea that suspension was only a temporary state and that we might some day be reinstated either by the membership or the national convention. In such case we might have been allowed to remain in the national headquarters building to carry on our work until membership or the national convention give its decision upon the acts of the reactionary seven. But no, we were fired out of the building by a motion passed by this group of seven and a motion to give us to July 1st to find other quarters was lost.

Russian Cossacks Proclaim Support of Soviet Republi

The Cossack Section of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee that has been elected by the Cossack masses and who represent the real Cossack people and not the rich and conservative upper elements has addressed to the workers of other countries the following manifesto:

Comrades, Workers and Peasants of France, England and America, Germany, Austria, Turkey, Japan, Italy and other countries:

We Cossack communists, members of the Cossack Section of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee of the Soviets of the Workers', Peasants', Cossack and Red Army Deputies, members of all Cossack Armies and regions, in appealing to you to fight International Capital hereby declare: We, the Cossacks of Don, Torek, Astrachan, Ural, Orenburg, Siberia, Kuban, Transbaikalia, Ussuria, Semirochia, and Amur are not fighting under the banner of the counter-revolutionary generals of Krasnoff, Doutoff, and Donikin, but stand shoulder to shoulder with the Red Army of Soviet Russia. We are fighting the enemies of the International Socialist Revolution.

Are you aware, comrade workers of foreign lands, that the invincible Red Army of the Soviet government of Workers and Soldiers of Russia has defeated the White Guard legions of the czarist ataman Krasnoff.

Large numbers of regiments of Don Cossacks have come and are coming over to our side.

We defeated the forces of General Doutoff and we are now breaking up the forces of Donikin and other leaders of the black hundred monarchists and their white guard armies.

You are surely told differently about us Cossacks by the governments of your bankers and multi-millionaires, by the Wilsons, Lloyd-Georges, Clemenceaus, by the compromisers, Scheidemann, Ebert and others.

They are assuring you that the Cossacks defend the capitalist system, the generals, the merchants, the landlords and the clergy.

They are brazenly lying to you.

Do not believe your bankers and capitalists.

A part of our brother Cossacks, duped by the generals, were in the ranks of the white guards, but at the present time the mass of the Cossacks have had their eyes opened, and together with the sturdy, victorious Red Army, the powerful buttress of the World Social Revolution is wiping off the earth all enemies of the laboring masses.

Arise quickly, foreign fellow-workers. Take the power of government into your toil-hardened hands.

Stop feeding by your toil the idlers and bankers while you are drowning in the blood of your brothers.

Establish Soviet governments in your own lands.

Organize your Red Army.

Long Live the International Red Army, the terror of the capitalists of all countries. No more bankers and capitalists. No more slaves, one family of toilers of the world.

Hold higher than ever the invincible red banner of communism and the International Proletariat.

Long Live the International Communist Party (of Bolsheviks.)

Long Live the International Social Revolution, and its great leaders, Lenin, Trotzky, Maclean, Debs.

Long Live the Third International.

While in my cell they noticed the following verse, which with other propaganda, I had scratched into the wall in large letters.

The Merchant calls it profit
And he winks the other eye;
The Banker calls it interest
And he heaves a cheerful sigh;

The Landlord calls it rent
As he tucks it in his bag;
But the honest old burglar
He simply called it swag.

We then had a discussion in economics.

Seeing that they could not trap me in any other way they tried flattery. They said that I ought never to have been sent to jail in the first place; that a smart young fellow like myself should not suffer in solitary for others, and that they were sorry to keep me there; that the government needed honest men like myself in its service. But still I would not be good natured enough to tell them the information that they were after.

Two days after the warden's visit I was very much surprised to be called out in the hall and measured up for a suit, being told that I was to go home on February 18th and not lose any "good time." I sure was a happy fellow during the next month.

About the last of January the deputy sent me a very small box of stale candy, nuts and figs. I could tell from the marks on the box that it had been sent by my sweetheart for me at Christmas time. I had to sign a slip saying that I had received it. (Later I discovered that I had received only one-sixth of what she had sent me; the remainder having gone to the "prison politicians" with the approval of the authorities.)

The deputy and the guards would now come around and talk about how nice it was for me to be allowed to go home; then try to "pump" me for a hint while I was in an extra good humor. I would lay awake nights planning about the good times I would have with my loved ones when I left the U. S. penitentiary. The time went very fast.

The guard told me that all of my papers, letters, clothes, books, etc., would be given to me when I left the hole. I sent a note to the chaplain offering the prison library Sinclair's "Cry for Justice," Mill's "Struggle for Existence," and Liebknecht's "Militarism." The guard told me that these books had been sent to the library.

At noon on February 17 I was called into the deputy's office. While he was walking up and down the room, looking out the window, he said:

"Hennacy, I suppose that you would like to go home tomorrow?"

"I sure would," I said, smiling.

"Well, there's only one way that you can go home, and that is to tell me the name of that fellow," he said, looking out the window.

"Why, I would never do that," I said in a surprised tone. "I thought it was understood long ago that I would never tell."

"Go back to your cell and stay there the rest of your time then; that is the price if you are willing to pay it," he growled.

"I'm willing," I said, as I walked towards my cell.

How shall I describe my disappointment? I saw now that all of their seeming kindness had been but a snare to try to persuade me to do something which they themselves admitted was wrong. Now I knew them for the damn, smiling Christian hypocrites that they were.

I had been a little lax with my physical culture exercises for the past week, but this night I determined to take more exercise than ever. That night I commenced to read the New Testament through again, planning to read and study three chapters each day. I knew that I could do the four months and twenty-two days until July 13th.

The next morning the guard told me that he had all my stuff packed up in a wooden box and sent to the front office. He said "good-bye" to me. I told him that he should not kid me that way, for he knew very well that I could not leave the prison until "I squealed."

After breakfast, as I was reading in Matthew, Dean came in and said "pack up, Hennacy, you are going to leave right away." I made no move for I did not believe him. He told me to go over to the East cell house and get a shave, and I thought I might as well go that far and see what game they were trying to work on me this time.

I made up my mind that if I had a chance to see the warden, deputy or the chaplain I would tell them what I thought of their unscrupulous tactics, even if I had to go back to the hole for the rest of my time. It is customary for these officials to bid you good-bye and wish you good luck; but not one of them came near me.

Up until the last minute, when a deputy marshall took me in custody for refusing to register in September, I expected to be told that I could not leave unless I gave in to them; but nothing occurred for I guess they were glad to get rid of me, and knew that I would be locked up for some time in another jail.

It was only by much discussion that I was allowed to take my black leather grip; they said that I did not have any at the prison, and [illegible] mand it, but I said that I would not leave without it.

When I opened the wooden box at Atlanta county jail I found to my dismay that all of my old letters, papers, notes, and some of my books and clothes were missing. Also all of the newspapers that had been sent to me while I was in the hole. I did receive some of the letters that came, though. I also discovered that they had refused to accept the three books that I had sent to the library. When my lawyer presented a list of the articles which had been stolen from me, to the warden, and demanded their return, he said that he knew nothing about them. By this time I have learned not to take his word for anything.

Since leaving U. S. P. O have heard that Berkman is in the hole because he answered some questions about the Bolsheviki that were asked to him by his fellow workers in the tailor shop, and also because he told the deputy warden to his face that he was a scoundrel and a hypocrite.

It seems that Hirshberg took his red handkerchief out of his pocket to wipe his face with, and at the same time said the word "might," while in conversation with some one. Some "stool pigeon" with a very energetic imagination reported that he was waving a red flag and was going to "dynamite the prison." So Hirshberg is now in the hole. I understand that Randolph, Morrison, Sage and other radicals are also in the hole.

It is reported that a young negro would not move along fast enough to suit Dean and that he shot him through the breast. Tthe negro died soon afterward.

I have also heard that an ignorant guard by the name of Ellis fractured the skull of a little Italian by the name of Didato on the plea that Didato was going to strike him. It seems that Didato had his hands in his pockets and Ellis told him to take his hands out of his pockets; when he did so Ellis said that Didato was going to strike him—hence the fractured skull. Ellis weighs about 225 pounds. I know Didato well, for he was in the paint gang while I was there.

Mr. Bazemore, deputy sheriff of the county jail in Atlanta, told me that the warden at U. S. P. had asked him to open my mail to see if he could find out the name of the person who delivered that letter for me. Bazemore opened my mail for a few weeks and then told me that there was no use trying to find out, so my mail was not bothered any more.

The worst feature about the federal penitentiary is that certain unprincipled convicts are encouraged to spy upon and betray their fellow prisoners. These "rats" or "stool pigeons," as they are called, receive special favors, easy jobs, and even paroles. These traitors may be divided into four classes:

1. Those who are weak-minded or of a servile disposition.

2. Some sexual degenerates who thus seek to "stand in good" with the officials in order to throw suspicion from themselves.

3. Some ex-professional or ex-business men who seem to think that their education gives them the right to betray a "common" prisoner.

4. Some religious persons who have been persuaded that spying is a Christian virtue.

Through the above mentioned many innocent men are punished.

If the government would pay the guards a decent salary, perhaps they would have honest and humane guards; and the services of these self-appointed private detectives could be dispensed with.

Men who are crippled or who have some physical defect or disease attend to peeling potatoes, handling food, etc.; in this way spoiled or defective food is often served to prisoners.

When a visitor sees an excellent bill of fare and tastes excellent food—perhaps fed only to officers—he thinks that the prisoners are well fed. When the food reaches the prisoner it is often different in quality from that which has been posted upon the bill of fare sent to the government.

A few of the officials are naturally mean, overbearing and unscrupulous. A few are naturally good natured fellows; some seem to have the hook worm, their only ambition being to draw their $77 a month with the expenditure of the least possible energy; while the remainder seem to know only two words: punishment and hatred.

No matter how much a "benevolent despot" might improve prison surroundings, as long as the officials put a premium on treachery and lying; using every effort to rob a man of his self respect; refusing to allow the men individual expression; refusing to leave them have some part in framing the rules towards bettering their own condition, no real and lasting benefit will accrue to the prisoner.

I suppose it is needless to tell you that I am ten times stronger in my Internationalism and my non-compromising attitude than before I went to prison. I will be out now in a little over six months and anxious to do all that I can for the working class movement.

With love, your brother,
AMMON A. HENNACY

sibility of the truth of the statement. Late Thursday, when the witnesses for the prosecution were about all heard, a dispute arose between Comrade Sharts and Bolan, prosecuting attorney. Sharts had all through the proceedings of the trial raised an objection to any testimony being accepted after the arrest had been made, claiming that the arrest of any of the comrades terminated the conspiracy. This objection had been made from the very beginning, but it was always overruled by the judge and an exception taken by Sharts. The last time this objection was made Bolan seemed to realize all at once that he had overlooked something and started out on a tandrum asserting that the conspiracy had not terminated after arrest because the whole state of Ohio was back of the conspiracy, that is, the whole Socialist party of Ohio was back of it, having through the resolution contained in the indictment in the circular said to have been circulated by the defense which stated that the Socialist Party of Ohio would give any one who evaded the draft its financial and moral support. This statement on the part of Bolan changed completely his whole line of arraignment. For in the opening argument he had persistently and continuously said that these defendants were not being tried as Socialists but as individuals. The court also had repeatedly held that we were individuals and not Socialists. Sharts immediately challenged the statement of Bolan and it was such a ticklish question, court had to adjourn to hear both sides in executive session, without the jury being present. It took until 10:30 Friday for the lawyers to thrash it out with the judge and for the judge to bring in a ruling. The ruling was in our favor, the judge holding that unless we were present at the meeting at which that resolution was passed we could not be a party to it. He ruled that the jury had been prejudiced by the introduction of this statement not intentionally, of course, but nevertheless it had happened. The jury was dismissed until June 16th, our cases were continued until some time before the fall term of court. Now we are informed through the papers that we are to have a retrial on July 7th, with a new jury. Fifty are to be drawn in the next venire. The witnesses we are told have already been subpoenaed.

Army of Unemployed Is Still Growing

Washington, D. C.—Reports to the United States employment service for the week ending May 10 show an increase of 7,450 unemployed in 41 cities over the previous week. Reports furnished by 4,621 representative firms in 83 cities show that 42 cities, or 50.5 per cent of the cities reporting, have a labor surplus aggregating 135,380, as compared with 127,850 unemployed the previous week in the same cities. Twelve cities, or 14.4 per cent of those reporting, show a shortage of 8,650, leaving 29 cities, or 35.1 per cent of those reporting, an equality of labor supply and demand.

Reports on unemployment by states show that of the 36 states reporting 18 have surpluses, five shortages, and 13 an equality of labor supply and demand.

Interstate clearances of labor by the employment service during the week show that 30,572 workers were cleared between the several states, while 71,572 applications for employment were cleared during the same period.

Cleveland, with 30,000 unemployed, and Pittsburg, with 20,000, are the chief centers of unemployment, in the absence of specific figures from New York city, where the largest surplus exists.

SHOW PROGRESS AT CONVENTION

member holds office for a year he must then work for wages in some industry before he is eligible to office again. No paid official can be a delegate to the general convention. This is meant to keep the power in the hands of the rank and file.

The policy of all papers published by any part of the organization is to be controlled by the general executive board, and no I. W. W. paper can accept commercial advertising.

A universal initiation fee of $2 was adopted. Plans for building up the publishing bureau were made. Many new pamphlets and books are to be published soon.

The convention went on record as opposed to any member or group of members taking part in or helping in any way to build up any organization outside of the I. W. W. This does not prevent any member holding a card in any other labor body.

It was decided that, if the proposed conference is called by the Russian Soviet government, the I. W. W. have representation there.

HAYWOOD TOUR PLANNED.

The convention voted to send William D. Haywood on a lecture tour for the One Big Union Monthly as soon as he is released from prison.

On the last day of the convention the following declaration was declared adopted:

"We, the delegates of the Industrial Workers of the World, in convention assembled, hereby reaffirm our adherence to the cause of the International Proletariat, and reassert our profound conviction that the program of Industrial Unionism not only furnishes a method of successful resistance against the aggression of a rabid master class, but provides a basis for the reconstruction of society when capitalism shall have collapsed. We regard the great European war as a convincing evidence of the ripening of the capitalist system and its approaching disintegration; and we hail the rising workers' republics in Russia and other countries as evidence that only the proletariat, through its economic force and by reason of its stragetic position in industry, can save the world from chaos and guarantee the fundamental rights of life.

"We publish again the preamble to our constitution and call upon the working class of the world to unite with us upon the basis of the principles there declared, in order that we may by our combined economic power, displace the wage system with its horde of parasite exploiters, and substitute for it the communal system of industrial democracy, thereby liberating humanity from its age-long degradation and freeing it to go forward, not only to universal prosperity and happiness, but also to high and noble culture.

"Workers of the world, unite! You have only your chains to lose. You have the world and life to gain."

The convention adjourned after 11 days in true "wobbly" fashion. The 54 delegates rose to their feet and began to sing. The 200 spectators present rose and joined in the song. Even the old court stenographer from the federal office scrambled to his feet, and as the voices of the workers swelled into concert I wondered if the sinister smile of Frank K. Nebeker, copper trust man, would not have vanished had he been there and heard

"Hold the fort, for we are coming—
Union men, be strong.
Side by side we battle onward;
Victory will come."

MR. WILSON AND DEMOCRACY

While Mr. Wilson is in foreign countries demanding democracy (free press and free speech) hundreds of American citizens are being held in jail for expressing their opinions. Is it consistent for Mr. Wilson to ask of others that which he will not grant at home? When England and France went into this war they said it was democracy the world wanted, when America went into the war the whole cry was democracy (free speech, free press and the right of free assemblage). But what have we got? Democracy or plutocracy? In every country that was in this war men protested against war, they were sent to jail, every man that had guts enough to express his opinion openly against the war was sent to jail. When peace was declared in all the countries the opposers of murder were released except in this democratic America, yet Mr. Wilson is demanding a world-wide democracy. The writer was held in jail twelve days without warrant or charges and released without a trial; Debs is serving ten years for telling the people that they should realize that they were fit for something else except slavery and cannon fodder, others are serving time in jails for telling the people that war was for the rich and not the poor. What part have the rich taken in this war except profit grabbing. What have the common people gained? What are their Liberty bonds worth? Can they exchange a hundred dollar Liberty bond for a hundred dollar Victory bond? Why is it that there is a discount on these bonds that the people were told were worth their face value? Have not the working class been exploited on every side?

Is that the kind of democracy that Mr. Wilson is demanding of the world? Is it democracy when Mr. Wilson could bring home thousands of dollars worth of presents yet the boys that faced the cannon were deprived generally of the right to bring home little trinkets picked up from the battlefields? Is it democracy for Mr. Wilson and the plutocrats of other nations to dictate just what kind of a government other nations may establish? Is it any wonder the Bolshevik movement is growing? Can the common people of Germany and Russia see the kind of democracy Mr. Wilson has at home? Do they want it? No! No! They want a working class democracy not a capitalist plutocracy, and they realize that only by a revolution can this kind of a democracy be possible. A revolution is coming, the world is on fire, the master must be unthroned, kings and kaisers days have come to a finish, they see the handwriting on the wall, they see that the scriptures must be fulfilled that a revolution will follow this world-wide war. Four thousand years ago the people found themselves slaves, they were freed; two thousand years ago the people found they were [illegible] to the master class, they were [illegible] now they have began to wake up to the fact that they have been led back into slavery, and they are going to rebel.

Yes, the people are not only going to ask that the comrades that are in jail shall be freed, but that the world shall be freed from the chains that hold them in the most damnable form of slavery yet ever formed in the whole world, yet, these people must be liberated, while they are in the jails none of us are free, and we must not ask for mercy but demand it, demand justice, not only demand it but by the living Gods we must have it. Comrades when we demand it and demand it in the right way, we will get it; you will see every jail door open. For the name of God will we act? Every day that we prolong our action these dear comrades are being held in the capitalist hell holes. Comrades, if Mr. Wilson wants what he says he wants let him have it. But we will only get it when we all stand together in one solid phalanx. Comrades wake up, we have nothing to lose but our chaines, but we have the world to gain.

LOCAL KANSAS CITY PROTESTS

Local Kansas City at a recent meeting passed the following resolution upon being informed that the national executive committee had voted to suspend seven foreign language federations, containing more than 30,000 members.

Resolved: That the Kansas City Local in regular meeting protests against the action of the National Executive Committee in suspending the foreign language federations and denounces the members of the committee who voted for such suspension as traitors to the International Socialist movement.

30,000 MEMBERS UNJUSTSY SUSPENDED

We call upon all party members to give this protest of ours the attention it deserves. We call upon you to rebuke these seven national executive committee members for their traitorous actions against the Socialist movement. We have given our unstinted financial support to the Socialist Party in all matters, even though we thought that in many instances the funds were squandered or misapplied. We have not helped as much as we should in purchasing the national headquarters building because we wanted first to make sure where the ownership rested. That we were right in being slow to support the headquarters fund is now proven by the fact that this same autocratic seven placed the entire property in the hands of a board of directors which can in no way be controlled either by the party membership or the national executive committee.

We feel assured that no member of the party will contend that seven members of the party have a right to suspend over thirty thousand and expel nearly six thousand, even if those seven are national executive committee men.

Think of this, comrade! Do we elect our officials to serve us, to build up the party, or do we elect [illegible]

Hang Them In America But O. K. in Russia

Many readers of the Ohio Socialist will undoubtedly be interested to be informed occasionally as to what our "biggest and best capitalist dailies are thinking and saying about the interference by this government in Russian affairs as well as the interference in this country by the workers in governmental affairs.

The following editorial is from the Chicago Daily News, one of the very best bulwarks of capitalism in this country. It makes very interesting reading.

HOW BEST TO GUARD AMERICANISM.

Observers lately back from Siberia report explicitly that in Siberian cities they found 50 to 75 per cent of the population Bolshevik outright. Siberia is one of the least radical parts of the former Russian empire. Also, it is dominated physically by the armies of Kolchak, munitioned by the allies. Yet even in Siberia Bolshevism vigorously survives.

In Russia proper the Bolshevik government lives; and the bulk of Russian opinion, even when not anti-Bolshevik, is utterly socialist and revolutionary. The Russian constituent assembly, which was elected by the votes of 36,000,000 Russians and which was anti-Bolshevik, passed a law—its very first law—saying: "The right, privately to own land within the boundaries of the Russian republic is hereby abolished forever."

In Germany, out of the new peace treaty with the allies, there will come multitudes of new Bolsheviks and new experiments with Russian theories. Germans who resent the treaty will remember that the only great country in the which which is not taking part in imposing it on them is Russia. Their minds, rightly or wrongly, will, in fact, turn toward Russia. They will turn toward Russia for diplomatic support, perhaps. They will turn toward Russia for special intercourse in trade means a special interchange of ideas. Russian ideas—that is, socialist ideas—will get a special inlet into Germany and a special currency there.

So we must seriously face the possibility that from the Rhine eastward through Germany and Russia and Siberia to the Pacific ocean we may soon see a prodigious territory filled with social institutions which we Americans regard as deplorable. Germany for years has been deeply infected with the socialism of Karl Marx and Philip Scheidemann. It will perhaps take the next step to the socialism of Karl Liebknecht and of Lenin.

In these circumstances we may well begin to see a new reason for not committing the United States to military expeditions against Bolshevism in foreign parts. If the expedition now in Siberia and those now at Archangel and at Murmansk are right, then expeditions in Bavaria and at Coblentz and at Leipzig for the same purpose would be right, too. Possibly we shall be sending American soldiers to do battle and to walk patrol from Coblentz to Vladivostok till 70,000,000 Germans and 180,000,000 Russians promise to restore private ownership in land and in industry and to keep it restored.

It is a ridiculous policy, and it is impossible. We have every right to repel Bolshevism from our own shores. We have every right to hang anybody in America who tries to overthrow the government at Washington by force or who advocates trying. We ought to exercise that right. For the rest, we ought to go back to the policy of Washington.

Washington destroyed kingship in America. He did not get on ships to go abroad to try to destroy kingship in Britain and on the European continent and in Asia. He conducted no holy wars against foreign institutions on foreign soil. He repelled foreignism from America by building Americanism. In his shadow we can continue his success if we continue his spirit.

Let foreigners choose their own tenure of land and their own method of managing industry. In the long run they will do so anyway. Ourselves, let us choose Americanism, a Washingtonian Americanism, perfected to its full physical strength against aggression by any foe, domestic or foreign, and perfected equally to its full moral strength within its borders. Then it is not an adventure. Then it is a sure shield.

We will gladly give further information, should you desire to get clear upon the points involved in this controversy. But the main question will remain this: SHALL SEVEN PARTY DESPERATE OFFICIALS BE PERMITTED TO SUSPEND OVER THIRTY THOUSAND AND EXPEL SIX THOUSAND MEMBERS WITHOUT GIVING THEM A TRIAL OR A CHANCE TO PREPARE THEIR SIDE OF THE CASE SO THAT THE PARTY MEMBERSHIP MAY BE FULLY INFORMED.

The autocratic seven upon the national executive committee acted in a more tyrannical manner than any officials of our party have lared to act up to now.

PROTEST AGAINST THIS ACTION, REBUKE THE AUTOCRATIC SEVEN. LET US MAKE OUR PARTY A PARTY OF REVOLUTIONARY SOCIALISM.

Fraternally submitted,

Joseph V. Stilson, for the Lithuanian Federation;

Alexander Stoklitsky, for the Russian Federation;

Leo Frankl for the Hungarian Federation;

Paul H. Ladan, for the Ukrainian Federation;

Geo. Selakovich, for the So. Slavic Federation;

Otto Purin, for the Lettish Federation;

Jos. Kowalski, for the Polish Federation.

Harwood, Prevey and Ruthenberg Elected National Executive Commiltee From District 2

The despotic seven of the National Executive Committee attempted to suppress the results of the national referendum for the election of a new National Executive committee. We secured the total vote for the various candidates from the state secretaries and shall publish, in the Ohio Socialist, the names of all candidates elected upon the new National Executive Committee as a result of the referendum just closed.

Next week we shall publish a table of votes cast by states in one other of the five districts. We shall also publish a table of votes cast by states for International Delegates and International Secretary.

With regard to the vote below we wish to call your especial attention to the insignificant vote cast for Goebel and Krafft, two of the present National Executive Committeemen and members of the despotic seven. There is no stronger condemnation of the acts of the despotic seven nor of the policy of the reactionary right wing leaders, than this just rebuke to Goebel and Krafft in the insignificant number of votes they received for re-election.

VOTE FOR NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEEMEN IN DISTRICT 2.

Only two states with a very small membership are not included in this tabulation, namely, West virginia and Maryland. The vote of these states will not change the results.

BOMBS USED TO SCARE HELL OUT OF RADICALS

Two principal emotions characterize Washington as the week comes to an end. They are the passionate hope of reactionaries that a brutal and violent class war against all labor champions may be launched behind the bomb-plot smoke screen and the mounting conviction of all discerning officials that the Communist governments of Russia and Hungary have come to remain and capture the approval of plain men and women everywhere.

Genuine or staged, the bomb explosions have strengthened the hands of all those who dreaded the return of a formal peace that would restore the intellectual and religious freedom which was America's finest attribute before the war, and who have prayed for some occurrence that would seem to justify the muzzle and knout as permanent American institutions.

The psychology of the conservative when hard pressed by criticism was fully illustrated during recent hearings before a senate investigating committee. A spectator remarked to the bureau head of a big New York daily that he thought the committee's work would be more effective if the "defendant" witnesses were pinned down to the actual facts of their alleged improper conduct, instead of being led into by-alleys of irrelevant gossip and innuendo. Turing impatiently to the spectator, the "news" gatherer exclaimed:

SCARE HELL OUT 'O 'EM.

"You miss the whole point of this investigation. The idea is not to follow the facts, but to scare hell out of 'em, so they won't dare peep in future."

In exactly the same fashion, the object of the reactionary press treatment of the bomb explosions seems not to be the capture of the wretches who set them off, but to terrorize every defender of freedom by saying every critic of the government—from Haywood to Vanderlip—helps "distill the poison" which makes lunatics throw bombs.—Paul Wallace Hanna in New York Call.

NOW IT'S AMERICAN GOLD

And now it's U. S. gold that is condemned. First it was German gold, then Russian gold, and now it's our own that is raising hell. At least so reads the news from Canada. It has been discovered that money in great quantities from this side the border is responsible for the "bolshevik" uprising in Canada. Ho, hum!

Pays Tribute To Gene Debs

(From The Nation.)

Eugene Victor Debs has gone to jail in a cause as old as time and as noble as human nature—the cause of the fundamental rights of man. The hearts of true and independent men everywhere follow him with thankfulness as he goes to his high office; and not the least in loyalty among them are those who in varying measure have often opposed his special doctrine. A great man always is generous. And when a great man is wronged, the innate generosity of people flows out to him in no uncertain measure. Debs in his cell is well aware how broad this feeling is, and what it means. He needs no encouragement. He is freer there than those he has left behind. He is more at peace, for he has fulfilled his task. He has

SECRECY SURROUNDS DEBS' REMOVAL FROM MOUNDSVILLE

Federal Officials Cautiously Remove Debs to Atlanta—Debs Given No Intimation of Coming Change.

Exactly two months to the day that Eugene Victor Debs was made a prisoner at Moundsville state prison, to begin his sentence of ten years, he was transferred without a moment's warning to the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga.

The greatest secrecy was maintained before his removal and also during the journey to the more southern prison. Debs had no previous knowledge of his contemplated removal nor even intimation that a change might be made. The only word of explanation which Debs or his many friends, or the general public is able to get on the question of the aged labor champion's removal from Moundsville is merely the short statement of F. H. Duehay, superintendent of federal prisons at Washington. According to Mr. Duehay's statement, Debs' removal from Moundsville was requested by the authorities of the Moundsville prison. No reason is revealed why prison authorities desired the change.

DEBS, POPULAR PRISONER.

Comrade Debs' duties since his incarceration at Moundsville prison have been very light and consisted chiefly of keeping records in the hospital. His health has not suffered

WALL STREET BANKERS WEEP

The fifty million dollars with interest at 6½ per cent due from the government of the czar which were loaned by a Wall street banking group, fell due on the 18th. And now the question is how to get the money. The czar is no more. No more is his autocratic government. The bolsheviki have not come across with the cash to redeem the debts of their hated rulers, so Wall street bankers weep and seek government intervention to collect their bad investments. The following statement from Acting Secretary of State Frank L. Polk gives as much enlightenment as the public is likely to get concerning this loan at the present time.

Acting Secretary of State Frank L. Polk in response to a request as to what action, if any, the United States government would take in reference to the default in the payment of the principal and interest of the $50,000,000 6½ per cent.

Strike For Mooney and Class War Prisoners

The American workers are up against a great decision. Upon their action depends much that may happen in the days to come. This decision is whether they shall respond to the proposed general strike on July 5, to free Tom Mooney.

Response means action. It means power. It means power not only for the release of Mooney, but developing power for the release of the workers from the tyranny and exploitation of capital.

The decision no longer concerns Mooney alone. It concerns the whole working class, its action and its immediate destiny. Just as the conscious workers have used the Mooney case as a means of attack upon the whole system of capitalism, just so the conscious capitalists have used Mooney as a means of attack upon the whole working class, and particularly the militant and class conscious elements among the workers.

The Mooney issue is a class issue. It is not an issue of "justice:" the justice of capitalism is class justice. It is not an issue of "fair play" or of "legal rights." The issue is now an issue of power, and power alone will decide. It is an issue in the proletarian class struggle against capitalism, and in the capitalist class struggle against the proletariat; and the issues of the class struggle are decided by power alone.

The capitalists control the government. They control the courts and the judiciary. They control the press. And all three are united against Mooney, against the workers, against Socialism. They have the power. The workers must break the power of the capitalists.

The answer of the workers to the tyranny of capital must be the mass power of the proletariat in action—the general mass strike, the political strike against the state, to impose the workers' will upon the state.

The political strike is the most efficient weapon of the proletariat, equally in the immediate struggle against capitalism and in the final struggle to introduce the dictatorship of the proletariat in order to realize Socialism.

A general strike for Tom Mooney would be a political strike—a new departure in American labor history. It would be a potentially revolutionary mass movement, since it would break the old tradition of passive acceptance of the decisions of the state and introduce the new militant era of aggressive mass action to impose the will the proletariat upon the state and society. Break the old tradition, awaken the consciousness of power in the proletariat, and great events would come.

A revolutionary act of real importance—this is the fact comprised in a successful Mooney general strike. This general strike would threaten vested interests in two directions: the vested interests of the bureaucracy in the American Federation of Labor, and the vested interests of capitalism, the supremacy of which depends upon the passivity of the workers.

These vested interests, accordingly, equally of "labor" and of capital, are united against a general strike for Tom Mooney. As usual, the labor misleaders of the A. F. of L. are coming to the rescue of capitalism, betraying labor, crushing the development of a militant spirit among the workers.

It has been apparent all along that the vested interests of the bureaucrats in the A. F. of L. were sabotaging the Mooney case. They hesitated; they intrigued; they accepted in order to sabotage. These bureaucrats did all in their power to prevent a militant answer of labor to Mooney's appeal. The Mooney case became identified with the mass movement in the A. F. of L. to transform the organization and impose upon it a more militant policy; and in order to preserve the old order and their power, the bureaucrats and misleaders sabotaged Mooney in order to sabotage the up-surging militant spirit in the unions.

The A. F. of L. officials have made it clear again and again that they were against a general strike. Now comes the convention of the A. F. of L. with its decision not to support this strike—in other words, to abandon Mooney and all class war prisoners to the mercy of the bourgeois courts, bourgeois justice and the bourgeois government.

This is sabotage. This is a betrayal, not simply of Mooney, who relatively is unimportant, but of the whole cause of militant labor. The decision of the A. F. of L. is an act of treason to the workers and a surrender to capitalism.

But the tyrants of capital do not depend upon their labor lieutenants in the A. F. of L. alone.

Capital has been consciously mobilizing public opinion in order to make the Mooney strike a fizzle. The discovery of alleged plots to "seize" the government, the dynamite "plots" and explosions—all are part and parcel of the campaign to mobilize "public opinion" against militant labor and to terrorize labor into abandoning its plans for a general strike.

Capitalism is in dread of the proposed Mooney general strike. It realizes the potential revolutionary significance of the movement, and is organizing to crush it.

There are no arrests being made of the "bomb plotters." Apparently, that is unimportant—to capital. But the explosions are being used as a pretext to deport radicals, as a means of mobilizing sentiment against militant labor, as a means of breaking the Mooney strike. The newspapers report that another explosion is scheduled for July 4; how do they know, and is it not a move to terrorize people and break the strike?

Capitalism visions dark days ahead. It visions social storms of great fury, and is preparing itself.

This preparation is sinister. It consists of plans for using terror against the working class, for using armed force in strikes, for a more ruthless use of the courts against labor, together with the cowing of labor into accepting a passive policy of dependence upon the benevolence of the state.

The sinister conspiracy of capital against militant labor must be broken. It must be broken by a more intense revolutionary agitation, by

Give Them a Chance

The Western world sat by calmly enough and let the Romanoffs go on shooting or sending into exile those who resisted their authority, and now that the shoe is on the other foot, the reasons for the former policy holds good. If a Socialist state is what Russia wants, it is hard to see why the American republic should say her nay.—Christian Advocate.

Here's Why Capitalists Hate Bolsheviks

The Russian constitution, Section 18, provides that "The Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic considers work the duty of every citizen of the Republic, and proclaims as its motto: 'He shall not eat who does not work.'"

In Section 3 there is the following provision: "Universal obligation to work is introduced for the purpose of eliminating the parasitic strata of society and organizing the economic life of the country."

Independents Win In Germany

The growing power of the Independent Socialists of Germany over the majority, or Scheideman-Ebert group is revealed in a press dispatch of June 17, relative to the municipal elections just held at Munich. The Independents made large gains, capturing sixteen seats in the city council against ten for the majority Socialists. The combined Socialists will have a majority in the council, as the bourgeoise parties won only twenty-three seats, it was announced today.

ONE BIG UNION BALLOTING

To Take Ballot of Union Members.

In order to thwart all assertions made by the kept press that the One-Big-Union movement in Australia is not favored by the unions, the One-Big-Union executive has decided to commence taking ballots of unions (first in New South Wales—then in other states) on July 1 next. Meantime, an extensive propaganda campaign will be carried out by the One-Big-Union committee.

"Money Talks." Question Is: Do You Want Yours To Talk For You or Against You?

"Money talks."

A mighty trite saying.

And also a truthful one.

When money talks there is no argument.

There is no talking back for there is no answer.

There is a world of meaning implied in that trite saying. But we wonder how many comrades ever thought of another meaning to which we might apply the term. Money talks. It makes a lot of things possible. Being in constant use as a medium of exchange, it is the means by which our relations with most external things are conditioned.

Admitting that money talks, we should be particularly interested in what it talks about, whether it talks in our favor or against us. We, as workers, as Socialists, should be very greatly interested in that question. Especially should we be interested in what our OWN money is talking about, we should emphatically insist that our own few dollars talk to the best possible advantage FOR us and not AGAINST us.

As Socialists, we ARE interested in who and what does the talking in this world, and rightly so. For every one, you, I and all the rest are vitally affected by what we hear talked about. Public opinion is little else than that curious, ever-changing result of what has been heard talked about. And public opinion is after all, the real power in this nation as it is in all nations.

Did you ever hear money talk on a large scale? We will give you an instance or two. When a capitalist nation desires to subdue another, or to take away her colonies, or her commerce, the ruling class of that country immediately starts its money to talking. That's for the purpose of creating a favorable public opinion, so that men for the army, munitions for the proposed war may be secured at once. Capitalism knows how to make money talk to the best advantage. That is the method that is used by capitalism the world over to make money talk for the benefit of CAPITALISM. That it is a mighty effective way is beyoind dispute. No one who watched the war spirit developed in a peace loving nation, or has witnessed the building up of a favorable pubic opinion toward the candidates of one of the old political parties would dare assert that money was not talking and in mighty persuasive tones when capitalism sets the machine a-grinding.

Those are instances of money being made to talk for and in the interests of capitalism. Capitalism knows the methods that will win. It takes no chances. To win, it will bury the truth beneath a mountain of lies and as long as there is nothing talking in opposition it is bound to have its way and its winnings.

But the worker's money can be made to talk, and mighty effective, too. It should be made to talk it MUST be made to talk in the most effective manner possible. The worker's money must be made to talk in words as hard as cannon balls. How? There is but one answer. The worker must talk through the printing press. The printing press is just as useful to the workers as against them. It all depends upon whose money is feeding the press. The printing press is the mainstay of capitalism. Without its support capitalism would not survive another tomorrow. Only because capital talks both loud and long and always in its own interests that it lives from day to day.

Capitalism has no delusions concerning the value of the printing press as a life saver. It admits by its constant pouring in of funds, the advantage of the printing press as a means of retaining a strangle hold upon the workers and the world.

And now it's time the workers awoke to a realization of its value. Capitalism has shown us the implements to use. We can have no doubt of their efficiency. We cannot question the power they give. We, too, should make our money talk through the printing press. For every capitalist lie we should print a truth. The truth alone can make us free. But unless we prepare to send broadcast the truth we shall always be in slavery. "It is with ideas, not with armies we shall conquer the world," said Lenine, and then he and his advisers proceeded to scatter broadcast over the entire world millions upon millions of printed truths. Lenine made Russian kopeks talk for the workers of Russia, yes, and for the workers of the world. Lenine learned the lesson we must learn. He learned how best to make the worker's money talk for the worker.

And now, have we demonstrated that money does talk—that it can be made to talk for the worker just the same as for capital? The truth of that is so plain to us that we cannot see how any worker can possibly miss it. Money talks. And since it must and will talk, since that is its nature, we should make our money talk where it will bring us, the workers, the greatest possible returns.

Can greater good be accomplished for the workers than that the truth be told? And told millions of times to millions of people, other workers looking for the light? That's the greatest good the workers can possibly do themselves right now. That's the greatest story their dollars can tell at this time. That's why we have asked every reader of the Ohio Socialist and every party member in this state of Ohio to back up the call for $10,000 to purchase a party-owned printing plant.

If you can spare a dollar or five dollars, or ten or twenty or more, you will never hear a sweeter story than they will tell to the workers of this country if you will help us get that press for the Ohio Socialist and a printing plant. If you want to hear your money talk day in and day out the year around for the workers, join the press fund boosters by making a donation for this purpose.

Money talks. We can't get away from that. So, we say, let's make our dollars talk FOR US by getting a printing plant of our own. Here below are the names of comrades who have boosted the press fund this week. Quite an imposing array of names is it not? Every week shows an increase, too. Their money is going to talk for the workers. Is YOURS?

Pledge Column

Now we are getting down to business. These comrades have not only sent in remittances of a dollar or more, but have pledged themselves to send in regularly an additional contribution. These comrades realize that not only is it necessary to give a dollar or more at the beginning of the ten thousand dollar campaign, but to give generously and often until the fund is raised and the printing plant installed. The pledge column should contain a total of hundreds of names within a very short while.

J. H. Nathan, Cincinnati, O., $1.00 monthly for 12 months.

J. M. Hilton, Akron, O., $1.00 monthly for 6 months.

How We Grow

Gaining is the word. Each week since the beginning of the drive it has shown an increase in remittances over the week before. The press fund is gathering momentum as comrades take hold and push it along. Next week we hope to show in this column that we have passed way and beyond the first thousand. Let every true blue Socialist do his or her part. "Build the Press Fund" should be the slogan of every Socialist and especially of every party member.

Here's what our press fund boosters have accomplished:

Contributed first week	$129.00
Contributed second week	171.00
Contributed third wek	222.72
Contributed fourth week	240.39
Total to June 20	$763.11
Balance need to make $10,000	$9,236.89

Let's get it!

"It is with ideas, not with armies, we shall conquer the world"—Lenin

Scott Nearing's Lecturettes

Those who work have always constituted a majority of the people in any organized society. Today nine-tenths of the adult population is employed at some productive or useful occupation.

The latest figures published by the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue show that in the year 1916, when the total population of the United States was about 102,000,000, less than half a million single individuals paid income taxes. The minimum in that year was $3,000 for single individuals and $4,000 for persons with dependants. The total number who declared incomes in excess of these amounts was 429,401. There were, doubtless, individuals who dodged the income tax. The figures, however, give some idea what a tiny minority of the American people receive incomes that could put them in a "middle class."

Th "Statistics of Occupation," publishd in the United States Census, show that in an ordinary industrial city the druggists, undertakers, grocers, butchers, manufacturers, corporation officials, superintendents, managers, lawyers, doctors, school teachers, dentists, and all other members of the professional and business classes do not make up over one-sixth of the total number of gainfully occupied persons. In many cases they constitute less than one-eighth of the total.

The vast majority of people who do not make income tax returns; the wage earners and clerks who are not included in the business and professional class; and many of the small business and professional men, judged from a standpoint of income, make up the body of what is sometimes called the "plain people." Most of these plain people work for their living as wage earners.

The relation which has grown up in modern industry between officials and workers is startling. The latest report of the United States Census dealing with the manufacturing industries (1914, page 427), states that the total number of persons engaged in manufacturing is 8,263,153; of this number only 61 in 1,000 are proprietors and officials; the clerks and other subordinate salaried employes make up 88 in each 1,000; the wage earners, 851. Thus 17/20 of those engaged in the manufacturing industries in the United States are wage earners, and 19/20 are wage-earners and clerks. The latest figures for the railroad industry are as follows: general officers, 5,750; other officers, 11,153; office clerks, 87,106; total employes, 1,710,296. Here general officers are about 3 in 1,000, and general and minor officers, 10 in 1,000, or 1 per cent. The census figures show 12,659,000 persons occupied in agricultural pursuits. Of this number over half are hired laborers. Of the remainder the vast majority work actively on their own farms.

The United States is made up of people who work as wage earners or farmers. The overwhelming majority of the population falls into this class. The plain people of the United States are the working people.

Some Massachusetts Women

The industries of Massachusetts employ 212,464 adult women (Statistics of Manufacturers, 1917). One-tenth of these women were working for $8 per week or less. 18,127 were being paid $8, but under $10 per week; 22,429 were receiving $9 but under $10 per week; 24,604 were receiving $10 but under $11 per week; and 24,133 were receiving $11 but under $12 per week. In short, 51.8 per cent of the total number of women working in the Massachusetts industries at the time when these figures were collected were working for $12 per week or less. Only four women in each hundred employed were paid as much as $20 per week.

These wages are for the weeks when women actually work. They take no account of periods of unemployment. At the time these figures were collected a living wage for a woman in Massachusetts was approximately $12 per week. The industries of Massachusetts value their women so lightly that they are willing to pay more than 100,000 of them a wage on which living decency cannot be maintained.

Figures covering the general industries of Massachusetts were collected in the early stages of the war. The Massachusetts Minimum Wage Commission has just issued a Bulletin dealing with the wages paid to women employed in the manufacture of candy. These latter figures were compiled after the signing of the armistice when the cost of living was considerably higher than it was in 1917. There were 1,071 women at work in the establishments investigated. Of these 17.6 per cent were being paid less than $6 per week; 45.1 per cent were working for less than $8 per week; 76.7 per cent were receiving less than $10 per week; and only 8.7 per cent had a weekly wage in excess of $12. Assuming that the minimum living wage in 1918 was still $12 per week (in reality it was more than that) nine-tenths of all the women in an important industry were being paid less than this amount.

The ruling class in Massachusetts may lament over the fate of women in Belgium and Serbia. It may subscribe largely to relief funds for the women sufferers in the near East. Charity and intelligent statesmanship begin at home, however, and in both of these directions the master class of Massachusetts seems to be strangely lacking.

Thirty-four million times in each twenty-four hours, a daily paper is published in the United States. Beside the dailies, there are semi-weeklies, monthlies, and so on; but the dailies alone provide three newspapers for every two families in the entire country.

Thirty-four million times each day!

Thirty-four million times these papers may tell the truth. They may tell the truth about Lawrence, Massachusetts, or Toledo, Ohio; they may tell the truth about the I. W. W. or about the efforts of the American bankers to secure control of Mexican resources. They may tell the truth about the domination of the educational machinery by big business, or about the way in which the workers in the country suffer and slave for a bare subsistence wage. They may tell the truth about any one of the thousand important questions that [illegible] papers may tell lies. They may tell lies about the "Japanese peril," or the brigandage in Mexico. They may lie about Socialist Russia or about the efforts of the people of Hungary to take control of their own lives. They may lie about the progress of negotiations at Paris. They may lie about the masters of American economic life and about the way in which they are exercising their tyranny over the lives and thoughts of the American people. They may lie about any one of the thousand important problems that confront the American people at the present time.

When you are inclined to belittle the powers of the owners of the United States—those who possess the mintes, forests, railroads, banks, factories, office-buildings, and the newspapers—remember the torrent of print paper rushed every twenty-four hours by the speeding presses.

Thirty-four million times each day!

The trials, therefore, will bring forth as witnesses many Cleveland Socialists, who will testify to what extent Ruthenberg, Fried and Clifford urged radical and revolutionary doctrines, Judge Stevens said. Attorney Stedman said that he expected to summon more than fifty witnesses for the defense. Probably an equal number will testify for the state, Prosecutor Doerfler stated.

COLUMBUS WILL PICNIC IN OLD FASHIONED STYLE

Local Columbus will hold a great old-fashioned basket picnic July 4th at Sweitzer's grove.

Every member of the local or state and other comrades who may be in the city on that day are requested to attend and enjoy the day in a pleasant Socialist way.

The Declaration of Independence will be read at 3:30 p. m. by Comrade J. L. Bachman, Socialist candidate for mayor. A "Gene Debs" balloon will be sent skyward at 5 p. m. Refreshments of various kinds will be on hand.

Columbus comrades are making all arrangements for a big affair. Take Camp Chase car to Ryvan avenue.

Another Victory For Uncompromising Socialism

New National Executive Committee Left Wing Socialists

The tally of the vote from 27 states show that all members of the despotic seven of the national executive committee, with probably one exception, were defeated for re-election to that body. This is another victory for uncompromising Socialism. Last week we printed a table of votes by states for International Delegates and International Secretary. This tabulation showed that the membership elected as International Delegates four party members whose support of the Russian revolution was as thorough as their denunciation of Scheidemann Socialism.

This week we publish tabulations of votes by states and districts for members of the new National Executive Committee. These tabulations show that Fraina, Hourwich and Lindgren were elected upon the new National Executive Committee from the First district; Ruthenberg, Prevey and Harwood from the Second district; Keracher, Batt and Lloyd from the Third district; Nagle, Millis and Hogan from the Fourth district; Katterfeld, Wicks and Herman from the Fifth district.

We ask all party members and all locals to study these tabulations. If your state is not included in them, we advise that you write your state secretary and ask that the vote of your state be sent the Ohio Socialist for publication. We again state that we are firmly convinced that the national executive committee had no authority to interfere with the national referendum for the election of a new national executive committee and that their only motive in holding it up was to attempt to invalidate the election by hook or crook so as to cover up their defeat.

The Left Wing has swept the party. These election returns prove it beyond a doubt. The majority of the party members demand a change in officials—demand officials who neither falter nor straddle. The question every Socialist must answer for himself is—Am I for Scheidemann-Ebert Socialism with its compromising program or am I for Liebknecht-Lenin Socialism with its uncompromising program. If you are for the latter you belong to the Left Wing faction and should do your utmost to capture the party for Left Wing Socialism.

National Executive Committee Election

DISTRICT 1.

The Socialist Party membership, according to the national constitution is divided by states into five districts. Three national executive committeemen are elected from each district, making fifteen committeemen in all.

In the tally of votes in the First distgict the state of New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and New York are missing. The first three states cast a very small vote which would not affect the result. New York casts a large vote which might effect the result. We are reliably informed, however, that despite the wholesale expulsions of Left Wing locals and branches indulged in by the reactionary New York executive committee, the vote for Left Wing candidatef was so overwhelming that stand-patters and reactionary candidates knew themselves defeated. It is probably because of this that New York refuses to divulge its vote.

According to the tabulation below, Fraina, Hourwich and Lindgren are elected upon the new national executive committee from District 1. These are all Left Wing candidates. Note the insignificant vote given Oneal and Shiplacoff. They are members of the present national executive committee who voted to expel and suspend nearly 40,000 members from the party, voted to hold up the national referendum for the election of a new national executive committee and voted to place the party's property out of the reach of the rank and file.

DISTRICT 2.

In the tally of the vote in the Second district only two states are missing, Maryland and West Virginia. The vote in both these states is small and would not at all effect the result. Ruthenberg, Prevey and Harwood are the three new national executive committeemen elected.

Goebel, one of the despotic seven national executive committeemen, was badly beaten. He favored a set of resolutions at the last 1918 meeting of that committee, repudiating the St. Louis position of the party upon the war. Krafft, a member of the present national executive committee and one of the despotic seven, was also overwhelmingly defeated. At the last meeting of the national executive committee he voted against a resolution favoring the withdrawal of troops from Russia, giving as his reason that as the government had the right, under the United States constitution, to declare war, it also had the right to send troops to Russia.

DISTRICT 3.

It was the Third district that the despotic seven national executive committee tried to capture by expelling the Socialist Party of Michigan. They felt assured that Stedman, Work and Berger would be re-elected if the Michigan vote were thrown out. Expelling the state was the method pursued. It must have subsequently dawned upon them that even with the large Michigan vote thrown out, the Left Wing candidates would still win out, because Illinois, the only state missing in this tabulation, was carried by the Left Wing. Keracher, Batt and Lloyd were the three elected upon the new national executive committee from this district. They defeated Berger, Stedman and Work, the present representatives from this district upon the national executive committee, Stedman and Work being two of the despotic seven.

It was Stedman who made the motion to expel the Socialist Party of Michigan. Many Socialists charge him with making the motion for the purpose of re-electing himself to the national executive committee.

DISTRICT 4.

The states of Oklahoma, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, North Carolina and South Carolina are missing from this tabulation. Of these seven states, only two really have state organizations, namely, Arkansas and Oklahoma. It is safe to say that practically no vote will be cast by the other five.

The vote of Oklahoma and Arkansas may change the result in this district. The vote [illegible] pluralities, with Beggs, Miller and Burgess close seconds. Hogan is a member of the present national executive committee and one of the despotic seven who voted to expel and suspend 40,000 members from the party.

DISTRICT 5.

The Left Wing was completely victorious in the Fifth district. No matter whether votes from missing states change the results or not, the three highest candidates next after the victorious three are also Left Wing Socialists.

The states not appearing in the tabluation below are Kansas, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Arizona and Alaska. Of these, only Kansas and Utah have state organizations. The other seven are practically unorganized.

Debs vs. Christianity's Hypocrites

By Rev. John G. Stilli

(Note—With the exception of slight editing, the following is the full report of a sermon delivered by Rev. John G. Stilli of the People's Church, Louisville, Ky., at a theater in that city a few weeks ago. Extracts from the sermon were also printed in the church's weekly paper, "The Common Factor."—From New York Call.

You will find the provocation for what I shall have to say in the following news dispatch:

"Washington, March 10.—The Supreme Court today sustained the conviction of Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, found guilty of violating the Espionage act and sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment. The opinion of the court was unanimous."

And it is because of this thing that I needs must talk to you on this day about Gene Debs.

Now, it may be that by some strange chance some stone age creature has happened in here this morning—some man or woman who feels that my sermon subject stands in need of some sort of justification.

In reply to that sentiment let me say just this—let me say that if this People's Church movement is worth its salt—if it is job conscious—if it really knows what it is about—if its men and women have learned even the a, b, c's, of it—then a sermon on "Gene Debs" needs no more of justification than does a sermon on Moses, Isaiah or Jesus Christ.

Now, I am not saying that Gene Debs and Jesus Christ are absolutely alike. Not at all. Let me frankly admit and grant in an unqualfied fashion that there is a vast and real difference between them. But, mark you, this: That difference lies not in the orthodox distinction that Jesus Christ was the sinless Son of God—conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of a virgin—while Gene Debs is a sinful mortal born of the flesh—not a bit of it—nor is the difference between them one of degree rather than one of kind, as our brethren of the liberal churches like to put it—not a bit of that.

I'll tell you the real difference between Jesus Christ and Gene Debs. It's this: One of them is dead and the other is alive. That's all.

And, listen! If Jesus Christ were alive today the churches wouldn't have any more to do with him than they will have to do with Gene Debs. And, listen again! If Jesus Christ were in Louisville, the established church, liberal as well as orthodox, wouldn't any more let him make a speech within its courts than it would let Gene Debs make a speech from its highly polished pulpits. And, listen again! If Jesus Christ were an American citizen, and if he talked in this twentieth century, as he talked in that first century, the Supreme Court of the United States would have just as mush reason to sentence him to a penitentiary as it had to sentence Eugene V. Debs. The time is coming when the name of Gene Debs will shine with such splendor in the annals of history that our children's children will heap upon those who sentenced him to a criminal institution the same odium which we today heap upon Pontius Pilate and upon those who nailed the Carpenter to the cross.

The other day the Bishop of Kentucky was reported as having said that Christianity is a failure, and that the world is turning to Socialism.

I want to tell the bishop one reason why this is the case.

The world is turning from Christianity to Socialism, not because it prefers the teachings of Karl Marx to those of Jesus Christ—nor yet because it understands the philosophy of economic determination any better than it understands the theology of predestination—not at all.

I'll tell you bishops and you preachers and you priests and you churchmen and you Y. M. C. A. workers and you Billy Sundays the real reason why men and women are turning from you to follow Gene Debs and the Socialists and I. W. W's.

Remember back in 1914—when the world caught fire? And remember how our country kept out the world-war for a long time. Remember how the masses of men and women didn't want any war? Remember how in November, 1916, they sent Woodrow Wilson to Washington on one single campaign issue? And remember that issue "He kept us out of war."

And then you remember, too—how nevertheless, in spite of the verdict of the people—we were being pushed ever closer to the brink of the abyss until at last the country was plunged into the maelstrom of war?

Remember what part you played—you bishops and priests and churchmen? Remember how you stood in your pulpits—and how you raised your voices to cry aloud with prophetic power that the Lord God of Israel hath said "Thou shalt not kill." Remember how you went up and down the land urging, pleading, imploring demanding that there shall be "Peace on Earth and Good Will among men"—remember that?

Of course you don't. For that isn't what you did. This is what you did. You converted the churches of Christ, the Prince of Peace into Temples of the War God. You fanned the fires of hell and hate into the consuming flames of war.

I'm not saying that you should not have done it. I'm not saying that it was wrong—not at all—indeed no doubt it was the correct, the right and the eminently patriotic thing for you to do; but you're wanting to know why men are turning their backs upon your churches in order to turn their faces toward Socialism. Stand here with me, and tell me this, who is this man I see this morning on his way to Calvary—tell me that? And tell me this—tell me what crime did he commit?

Why, you say, he violated the "Espionage Act." You hypocrites! And only yesterday when I stood in one of your pulpits you everlastingly told me that religion has nothing to do with politics! What business have you to talk about Espionage acts? In the name of Almighty God, who ordained you to judge men by Espionage acts! To judge by the tone of the Christian church one might think that Christ said: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant—thou hast obeyed the Espionage Act—enter into the joy of thy Lord!"

No sir. You can't get by with that. We demand that you tell us in the eternal terms of right and wrong—not in the terms of transient politics, what crime it is for which this man goes ten long years behind prison bars.

And there is just one answer, 'tis his own, made before his judge when he said: "I admit it. I am opposed to war. All wars. And this war too. And if I stood alone—I should nevertheless be opposed to the war."

That is his crime in the terms of your Christian religion—he was opposed to war—in the language of your own orthodox theology—he is guilty of the crime of "standing by the cross of Christ—the Prince of Peace"—in time of war.

Who? Why he who goes to serve a ten-year prison sentence—and who is he? why look—don't you recognize him?

Why, sure you do! I declare it's a bishop of Christ—one of us fat priests of religion, a Y. M. C. A. worker, a church deacon—on his way to jail this morning for "standing by the cross of Christ—the Prince of Peace"—in time of war.

No? Why, of course, not! You see we official exponents of the Christian religion are committed to no such irrational interpretation of the Christion religion. True, there is much in the Sermon on the Mount that one cannot harmonise with the sentiment of patriotism and nationalism and war, but let us remember that Jesus was an Oriental, that, like all Oriental minds, he was given a hyperbolic speech; that he said much which must needs be restated before the Orientalism of his speech conveys the real meaning to the Occidental mind.

What is more, we must not forget that Christ plainly said: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," while Saint Paul said: "All authority, is from God—servants obey your masters—honor the King—obey the Espionage act and keep your mouth shut as it is meeting the Lord!"

I don't say that Gene Debs should not go to the penitentiary; not at all. Nor am I saying that the Supreme Court should not have sent him. I am not breathing one breath of suspicion regarding our American holy of holies—even our Supreme Court. But I am saying this: I am saying this: If the bishop wants to know "why" men are turning their back on the churches in order to turn their faces toward Socialism, then let him find out why it is that it happens to be Gene Debs that goes to jail this morning, and not the bishop.

The fact that Gene Debs goes to jail will not kill Socialism. But the fact that no bishop goes to jail may yet kill the Christian church.

I am told that in the days immediately preceding the civil war Henry David Thoreau, the New England essayist, was sent to prison because he refused to pay taxes to a government which returned fugitive slaves to the South. While in prison his friend, Ralph Waldo Emerson, came to see him, and asked this question: "Henry," said he, "what are you doing in jail?" Thoreau's reply was: "Waldo, what are you doing out of jail?"

And what is the question all vital minds are asking. Not why Debs goes to jail, but how it happens that we bishops everlastingly keep out of jail. Christianity used to go to jail regularly. Jesus evidently expected as much. At least, he said to his followers on repeated occasions: "Blessed are ye when ye shall be arrested and found guilty; and rejoice and be exceedingly glad when the Supreme Court renders a unanimous verdict against you, for so perscuted they the prophets that were before you"—which benediction, in our time, at least, seems to be reserved for the Socialists, the I. W. W.'s and the Bolsheviki—while the bishop of Christ presides at the board of trade banquet or at the victory dinner.

But why bother about religion? The rapids for which America is steering, and that under a full head of steam, are not religious, nor political; the struggle ahead is social and industrial, the powers-that-be sit on the safety valve.

When I heard of the action of the Supreme Court in the Debs case, I said: "This thing is a crime." A friend standing near me said: "You better not say that in public." I asked: "Why not?" Quick came the answer: "Youd go to jail." Maybe so! Nevtherless, I am saying to the masters who rule America that they had better go slow. I am saying to them that a few more victories like the one they achieved in the Debs case will lay adequate foundations for a sure enough revolution in America.

Do you want more than one Mooney case on your hands at a time? Who is Tom Mooney? Who "ever" heard of Tom Mooney before the San Francisco explosion? Yet the working class of America and England threaten a general strike by July 1 unless he is given his freedom.

Listen. Can't you see anything? Has your greed for gold and lust for power made you stone blind? Can't you see the drift of things? Don't you remember how labor first asked that government by injunction be abolished? How next, when you refused to listen, labor began to demand a referendum on judicial decisions? How next, when you again refused to listen, labor took another step and began the recall of judges? Can't you see the drift even now, when labor no longer bothers or cares or worries about your injunctions nor about your decisions nor about your judges, but deliberately says, why bother about their courts? Why bother about the capitalistic state at all? Why should we vote? Let them vote! Let them organize at the ballot box; we propose to organize at the point of production, and seize, not the reigns of government—but the wheels of industry, which wheels we will stop dead—until we get justice—or until the world starves for bread.

Can't you see the handwriting on the wall in the Mooney case? If decent, orderly American Federation of Labor people will do that in the Mooney case, what do you suppose the Socialist and I. W. W.s and Bolsheviki will do in the Debs case?

Have you forgotten the Dred Scot decision of the Supreme Court? Haven't you learned that the decisions of a court are binding only in so far as the state has the police power to enforce them? Are you set on accomplishing a division between the government and the people? Can't you see the conviction growing in America that the government at Washington, with its plutocratic Senate, its irresponsible Supreme Court, is not an instrument of democracy in the hands of the people, but rather a tool of autocracy in the hands of the few.

Can't you hear that the working people of America are even now saying that the Supreme Court never sentenced 'Gene Debs for violating the Espionage Act, but that it sentenced him for being a Socialist? Can't you hear thinking men everywhere saying: "What's wrong in America? The Kaiser and his autocratic government had a Liebknecht to deal with. That man stood on the floor of the German Parliament and flayed the government as no government has been flayed since Jesus pronounced his phillipics against the Pharisees—and all that in the very heat of the war—when the land was surrounded by foes on every side! Don't you remember how Karl Liebknecht stood on a platform under the very windows of the kaisers palace, sounding the call for social revolution, how he said that the time had come when soldiers should cease firing on American soldiers, cease firing on English and French and Russian soldiers, that they should instead march home and begin firing on their own government? Remember that, and remember that the Kaiser's government then tried Karl Liebknecht for high treason?

Four years! Here in America, in our democracy, here from whence we sent our sons to give battle to make the world safe for democracy, here, now that the war is over, for a far less crime you send 'Gene Debs to the penitentiary for 10 years.

Karl Liebknecht, in the hand of the Kaiser, gets four years for high treason. Gene Debs, in democratic America, goes to Federal prison for life for violating the Espionage act.

Listen, masters of America, do you think it is safe? Masters of America, remember Tom Mooney? If labor proposed to call a general strike to free Tom Mooney, an unknown quantity in the labor movement, what do you think labor will stop at when 'Gene Debs is involved, the idol—the leader of radical Socialism in America?"

And so our 'Gene goes to prison—for life.

'Gene Debs, of all men! Some of you may not know him, but those of us who do know that James Whitcomb Riley saw the man as he is when he said:

"You may search the world from end to end and where will you find a better friend than Eugene Debs—
"A man 'at stands and jes' holds out in his two hands
"As warm a heart as ever beat
'Twixt here and the Judgment seat—"

WHY NOT AMERICANIZE AMERICANS.

In a strikingly courageous and graphic manner, Herbert J. Seligmann in the current number of the Nation, describes the relationship of the American Negro and the white race. In an article entitled "Protecting Southern Womanhood," the author lays bare the underlying causes of the iniquities practiced upon the millions of Negroes in the "democractic" south. With what shocking brutality the white race have denied the Negro not only his rights as guaranteed by the federal constitution, but even the simplest human rights are shown in all its hideousness in this revealing article.

Summing up the matter, the author says: From a study of authenticated cases it would seem that where there is a white man to be shielded from the consequences of wrong doing, where a Negro is a rival in trade or business of white men, where a Negro attempts to change his status from that of a laborer to property owner and farmer, or where a Negro falls under suspicion of attempting to exercise the functions of a citizen guaranteed him by the constitution, there stares him in the face the danger that he will be done to death in any one of a number of hideous ways by a mob of white men intent upon "protecting southern womanhood."

It is true. The American Negro has since his, unfortunate for him, forcible removal to these shores from his native savage haunts, been but an object of exploitation by the white race. First as a chattel slaves; when later, he was granted citizenship and his bonds were severed, it was but for the purpose of gaining an economic advantage over the rebel south, and his fredom as well as his citizenship quickly proved but shams. He was divested of both. He is now and has been for years in position lower than a peon. More despised by his traducers, more heartlessly proyed upon and exploited, more physically and morally outraged than any pariah ever thrust without the associations of civilizations' refinements.

Our capitalistic press is howling about the "Americanization" of the foreign element in our population. Capitalism is ever seeking means whereby to dodge and evade the results of its own sins. The danger that threatens America is not the importations of foreigners nor in the ideas which they bring here. The danger is in the things that capitalism breeds right here in our own soil. For generations capitalism and the ruling class of the south have been sowing the seeds of hate and bloodshed among the ten million blacks. It has followed an outrageous policy of taking everything from them and giving in return outrage heaped upon outrage. Today, the south holds the possibilities of tremendous racial explosions. It has sown the wind. If it fails to reap the whirlwind within the near future a miracle will have been performed.

Millions of Negroes, American citizens, almost, can neither read nor write. And could they, their position would be even more precarious under the present domineering attitude of the whites. For with education comes ambition. And ambition for Negroes is not to be tolerated by white men. If the Americanization plans of our esteemed capitalistic promoters have the virtues which are boasted, if upon them depends the integrity of the nation and its future safety, we propose that these same plans be tried upon Americans of the Negro race.

Give the American Negro a chance to be a human being.

In 1916, the National Hughes Alliance issued a declaration, in advocating the election of Charles E. Hughes to the presidency, which was signed by two Republican ex-presidents of these United States, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft, and twenty-five leading bankers and captains of industry, in which they stated: "Our business is business. We are producers, manufacturers and traders, without sufficient home demands to absorb the full yield of fields and the output of factories. Year by year it becomes more apparent that the markets of the world must be kept open to American industries. We cannot extend our trade further than we are able to defend it. The rivalries that begin in commerce end on battlefields." Five months after the national election, war was declared under the Democratic administration of President Wilson, thereby proving the stand taken by the leaders of the Republican party, that the present competitive state breeds wars and all its horrors.

One billion, five hundred and seventy million, four hundred and fifty thousand pounds of meat are in cold storage in this country at this time. Packers say they are adding to this enormous quantity hundreds of thousands of pounds monthly. Meanwhile the price of meats soars beyond the reach of the workers.

At last the capitalist press has found the man to save Russia from the Russians. The drive which it is making for the recognition by this country of the Kolchak government, and the fulsome praise it heaps upon him and his "successes" in overthrowing bolshevism reveals the haste of capitalism in re-establishing itself in Russia before it is utterly driven out. Kolchak's losses in prisoners and territory within the last month have been enormous. The Red Army marches on.

"Show the world America offers a square deal to every man, and we will reap a reward in the world's trade," shouts a capitalist promoter. Yes, do so, and reap not only the world's trade but the world's good will. But the square deal, where is it?

"Five men have already been burned at the stake since the first of the year, and more than 20 persons have been lynched in that time. It is a record of barbarism which ought to make us blush before the world."

No, this was not in "Red" Russia. Nor in "monstrous" Germany. It occurred right here at home, but as they were negroes, our democratic Democrats need pay no attention.

Not all the significant news of the day appears on the first pages of the capitalist press.

Occasionally items of far-reaching import are tucked away in remote and inconspicuous corners. Read this from the Cleveland, O., market reports. "A weekend review of the general market situation is not very encouraging to the wage-earner. Most food prices are almost at war time prices." Revolutions have hinged upon just such conditions.

"In a large sense," says the Plain Dealer editorially, in speaking of the bolsheviki in Cleveland, "they have no rights that American society is bound to respect." Keep it up, ye hypocrites. After inciting a riot, should the bolsheviks commit any of the crimes of which you accuse them, you would sanctimoniously clothe yourself in the garments of outraged "law and order."

"Ship or shoot" is the new slogan adopted by capitalism to more energetically enthuse the program of deportation of radicals.

Capital's idea of democracy—damn the workers, they are used to it.

WALL STREET BANKERS

three-year Russian credit, due June 18 and July 10, 1919, respectively, said:

"Owing to the present confusion in Russia it is not practicable at this time for the state department to make any presentation of the claims of American citizens [illegible] against Russia. The people of America, however, are now, as they have been in the past, most sympathetic with the great Russian people and eagerly desire to see them work out for themselves a stable form of government, and when that time comes the state department will use its good offices to call such claims to the attention of that government. With reference to the $50,000,000 credit established by certain banks in the United States, it will be remembered that this money was advanced in good faith when Russia was fighting for her life, and that the credit was primarily for buying supplies which were sorely needed by the Russian people for their military and civilian needs at the time.

"Whatever stable government may ultimately assume control of Russia it is to be expected that it will follow the practice which enlightened governments have always followed, of recognizing the legitimate external loans of prior governments."

OPEN LETTER TO ADOLPH GERMER

Detroit, Mich., June 9, 1919.

Adolph Germer,
220 S. Ashland Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.

Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of June 3 in which you inform me that I and some six thousand others have been expelled from the Socialist party.

You state that the action of the National Executive Committee was based upon the fact that the last convention of the Socialist party of Michigan adopted a resolution which violated the National Constitution. By your own words, however, you stand convicted of having grossly violated this same constitution. You admit that the National Executive Committee expelled the membership in this state BEFORE you had sufficient evidence. The minutes of the session at which this action was taken show that the committee voted down a motion to give Michigan a hearing before the charter was revoked. Evidently the action of the committee was based upon the principle, "The public be damned."

Your so-called reason for expelling me and others from the party is not a reason—it is an excuse, and a mighty poor one at that. I am well aware that the real reason for revoking the Michigan charter, and for suspending seven language federations, was to throw out their vote in the National Executive Committee just closed. These votes if counted would remove from office both yourself and the present committee. I base this statement upon reliable information and challenge you to disprove it by tabulating and publishing the complete result of the balloting.

At one stroke, you have tried, convicted, and expelled me. Knowing these things, and having just read your remarks about the constitution, I am tempted to use the "short and ugly word."

Now, about that "pernicious" and distasteful no-reform amendment to the Michigan constitution. I voted at a meeting of my local to instruct the delegates to that convention to advocate and urge the adoption of just such a proposal; when the resolution was unanimously adopted by the convention, I was well pleased. When I received the referendum ballots, I personally urged the members to support and vote for it; and when the vote was tabulated and published in our state bulletin showing that it had carried by an overwhelming majority, I was again pleased.

I am not a new-comer in the socialist movement, and am one of those who hold that the function and purpose of a socialist party is the organization and education of the workers for social revolution and not for social reform. Let those who love capitalism strive to patch it up and make it last a while longer! For my part I shall continue to devote my best energies to the overthrow of the present system of wage-slavery and the establishment of the industrial republic of labor.

This, then, is the issue: reform or revolution. It is an old quarrel, as old as the socialist movement itself. It raged in the First International, when Marx fought Bakounin; it occupied a prominent place in the Second International—the struggle between the right and the left—mensheviks and bolsheviks in Russia, spartacans and majority socialists in Germany. It is the struggle between the socialism of Lenine, Trotsky, Luxemburg, and Leibknecht versus the socialism of Ebert, Schiedemann, et al. Today, in every land, it is the struggle between the Red International and the Yellow International.

It is one of the tragedies of our movement that we have to combat not only capitalism and its hirelings, but also those who would play upon the ignorance of the workers and lead them deeper into the mire of reaction. Much valuable time and effort that might well be devoted to propaganda must be wasted in counteracting the machinations of the enemy within our gates. You may not be conscious of it, but it is nevertheless a fact that you and your associates are aiding and abetting the enemy. Knowingly or unknowingly you are guilty of treason in the class war.

You have thrown down the gauge of battle. So be it! Your action is an attempt to disorganize the workers in this state. Instead of unity and solidarity, you would force upon us chaos and disorder. How our enemies must glory in our discomfiture!

You have ordered the re-organization of the party in Michigan; you have sent me a blank application for charter, and have asked me to assist in this work. This is adding insult to injury. For me there is no need of re-organization and I am returning to you herewith your blanks. The socialists of Michigan are well organized; they constitute a conscious and constructive unit in the ranks of the militant proletariat of the world. If the organization as a whole is unworthy to be a part of the Socialist party of America, then I too am unworthy. If working-class socialism has no place in your organization, so much the worse for it. The socialists of Michigan are neither discouraged nor disheartened by the action of the cowardly reactionaries who have voted to expel them. We will stand together as we have these many years, and continue to work unceasingly for the ultimate victory of the workmen.

Yours in ex-Comradeship,
A. J. McGREGOR.

THE STATE VS. GENE DEBS.

The United States government against Gene Debs.
What an absurd, uneven match!
For hate is death and utter nothingness;
But Gene is made of love and love is infinite [illegible]

TACTICS

When an outsider steps in to settle a "family scrap," you know what happens? Well, let us, as socialists, use [illegible] the same tactics. Difficulties have come up, and problems concerning our future organization and policies; and they require prompt settlement. But let us "fight it out among ourselves," and present a united front to the enemy. Whether conservative, or moderate, or radical, "let not one member quit the party in disgust." The ideals of nearly all party members are practically identical. No permanent compromise can be made. There is absolutely no other organization with which real socialists can ally themselves with any degree of satisfaction.

We deplore some results of the recent stormy session of the N. E. C. We regret the development in our organization of what appears to be a case of pure selfishness.

On the other hand, we just as sincerely regret that a number of the comrades seem recently to have formed a sort of unwritten constitution for themselves, disregarding principles of the actual constitution of the party. Some, it seems, would even do away with that section which provides that "any member of the party who opposes political action or advocates crime, sabotage, or other methods of violence . . . shall be expelled from membership in the party."

Now, extreme tactics of either character gain us nothing. Never before have there been so many people who thoroughly believe in the fundamental principles of socialism. But they hesitate to join us. Why? Most largely because of our tactics. And so, our tactics limit our gain in membership; they likewise occasionally actually cause a decrease in membership; in either case, they weaken our possibilities as a political party. Common sense, foresight, tact, and a continuation of our program of education, will, if we stick to our task, bring us just what we want in just the way we want it. Extremes in nothing!

ELLA REEVE BLOOR PROTESTS

June 8, 1919.

Editor, Ohio Socialist, Columbus, O.

Dear Comrades:

Returning from a long and arduous trip through Colorado, Kansas, Missouri and other western states, finding the rank and file of the workers getting together in great numbers—enthusiastic for the "One Big Union" idea.

Industrial organization in every shop.

Stopping off in Dayton, Ohio, to speak at a rattling good meeting of the Machinists' Union, I was certainly dumbfounded when one of the members of the union handed me a copy of the "Ohio Socialist" containing the news of the most autocratic action ever perpetrated upon the Socialist party membership, or, in fact, upon the membership of any other organization of the working class, viz.: the expulsion of 40,000 by 7. Such action must be highly gratifying to the peanut politicians who do the will of the tremendously organized owning class.

It certainly is now up to all of us who have kept the faith, who have been true to the working class character and principles of socialism, to rout these miserable politicians from any place in our movement. Such men in any class crisis, would line up with the masters to execute "revolutionaries" as history past and present teaches us with examples, many of them in Russia, and the Schiedemans of Germany.

Will you send me the names of the seven voting for expulsion, so that I may not be unjust to the minority and may publish the names of the seven far and wide.

Yours as ever for real solidarity,
ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

Causes of England's Unrest

London.—The trades unions are looking for all possible reasons for the unrest in the labor world and have prepared a memorandum bearing upon the conditions existing in different industrial activities which may be factors in this unrest.

It is very interesting to note that high prices and profiteering are immediate causes of the social unrest, and the memorandum gives a list of breweries, that, notwithstanding the fact that consumption of liquors was greatly reduced, were still able to pay dividends from 14 to 36 per cent. More than that, the 36 per cent dividend was paid to stockholders in a company that were quite content with a mere 16 per cent dividend in 1916 and 1917.

Americans have an added grievance in this situation in the knowledge that the United States cut down her use of grains to send to Europe and to England, which did not curtail the use of beers, etc.

The report further states that large industrial combinations manipulate their large profits in such a way that their size is disguised. One firm issued bonus shares to its stockholders and a dividend of 27½ per cent on the old number of shares became one of 11 per cent on the new.

Reserve funds, also, have become very much swollen by the excess money profit that must not be made public.

And so it goes!

HUNGARY.

Barracks Named After Working Class Leaders.

Budapest.—One of the interesting phenomena in connection with the revolution in Hungary is the fact that the military barracks have been renamed after working class leaders. Thus the Francis-Joseph barrack has been re-christened Marx-Caserne. Other names figuring in this transformation are Lenine, Engels, Liebknecht, Luxembourg, Jaures, Mehring, etc.

Impressive exercises in each case accompanied the re-naming of the military camps, or barrack.—(New York Volkszeitung.)

Party News and Views

There will be a local at Adena, O., soon. Jos. Vegh, Jr., has placed an order for 100 copies of the Ohio Socialist each and every week for thirteen weeks. Watch them do the work.

Remember—delegates to the state convention must report to the credentials committee before 3 p. m. on the first day of the convention, which is June 27th. If they do not report before this time they will not be allowed mileage.

Industrial Freedom Certificates are still selling. Every day's mail contains remittances. The Ohio State executive committee will decide how best to apply the fund accruing from the sale of these certificates. Has your local secretary still unsold certificates on hand? Have you bought yours?

"Crimes of the Bolsheviki"—an illustrated pamphlet of pocket size and just the thing to give to your shop mate and neighbor. Five cents each. Buy ten.

L. H. Neff, ever at it for the cause, is now literature agent for Local Piqua.

BAKER IN PORTSMOUTH.

State Organizer Chas. Baker will be at work for the next several weeks in Portsmouth, O. Local Portsmouth intends to carry on a widespread organization campaign and has notified this office that it is in a position to stand the entire expense. After finishing his work on Portsmouth, Baker will undertake a state-wide tour in behalf of the party-owned printing plant fund.

Local Piqua believes in placing orders early. State Organizer Baker is applied for to help in the municipal campaign. He will give Piqua the week of October 27 to November 4th.

By the way—are you planning your municipal campaign? Many locals in Ohio have already nominated candidates and are making a continuous campaign from now until election day.

Local Cuyahoga county, at its recent mass meeting, passed a motion instructing its delegates to work and vote for a repeal of the clause in the state constitution making it obligatory for members to purchase press stamps. A resolution was also passed instructing its delegates to favor a party-owned printing plant at the convention.

John A. Rehm is again at it in Springfield. He orders a bundle of 300 Ohio Socialists and asks for the Springfield mailing list so that he can secure renewals of expiring subscriptions.

Local Portsmouth, O., protests one hundred percent against the actions taken at the last national executive committee meeting in expelling and suspending nearly half the party membership. So writes Secretary Boring.

Everett Payton of Huntington, W. Va., is a tireless worker for the Ohio Socialist. He has a number of sympathizers and comrades selling subscription cards under his direction.

EAST LIVERPOOL TO PICNIC.

Local East Liverpool, O., will picnic on July 4th at Schepp's grounds, on Camp Ground road, about a mile from the city.

All Socialists and sympathizers reached by the Ohio Socialist and who live in that vicinity should attend.

John C. Chase has been elected corresponding secretary of the English branch of Local Akron.

NEW LOCAL AT DEFIANCE.

A new local has been organized at Defiance, O., under the direction of T. J. Eller. E. D. Williams is the corresponding secretary. Both these comrades have for a long time been affiliated with the party as members at large.

Local Fremont is making an early start in its municipal campaign which will show in results when the votes are counted. An order for more application cards prove this. Four new members were admitted just recently. This we gain from a letter from Chas. F. Kritzell.

Ella Reeve Bloor and Wm. M. Brown were recent visitors at the Delaware county jail to see Ammon A. Hennacy. This is rather a new kind of "social" note.

Local Marion is still "going good." An order for dues stamps sent by Secretary Scheifler attests to this.

Chas. Baker collected $12 for the press fund in Columbus and $29 in Akron. Have you a press fund contribution list? May we send you one? Thousands of workers are anxious to help buy a printing plant for our party and will gladly give you a dollar or more if you will but ask them. Send for a contribution list and then report your contributions to your local.

Local Irondale, so writes Secretary McLain, wants the names of the present state executive committee of Ohio and desires to know how each of them stand upon the Left Wing program. We advised Comrade McLain to address the members of the committee directly.

Be at the state picnic, Coney Island Sunday, June 29th. Take boat for picnic grounds at Cincinnati. Enjoyable ride up the Ohio river. Enjoyable time with your fellow Socialists at the picnic grounds. We want to see your face among those present.

The first and foremost duty of every Socialist is to pay dues regularly. How many months are you behind in payments? Pay up RIGHT NOW!

Nominations For State Sec'y and State Ex. Com. Made

Nominations for state secretary and state executive committee have been made by the locals and branches of the Socialist Party of Ohio. From the number of nominations we gather that the party membership will show a healthy interest in the coming election of state officials.

Eight comrades have been nominated for state secretary and 53 for the state executive committee. Blanks for acceptances and declinations of nominations were sent the nominees last week. We shall publish the names of the comrades accepting the nominations in an early edition of the paper. The party members nominated for state offices are:

IT'S PICNIC TIME

At the very next meeting of your local, arise and say "IT'S PICNIC TIME." Then make a motion that the local hold a picnic and that a committee be elected to secure grounds and make arrangements.

It IS picnic time. And your local MUST hold a picnic. If there are two, three, four, five or six locals in the immediate vicinity of your local, why not hold a joint picnic, secure a good speaker and entertain and celebrate as only Socialists can.

Socialists like to meet to talk things over. There are important things to discuss just now. A day under shady trees will give the opportunity. It will also bring the comrades into closer touch with each other, personally acquaint them one with the other and result in greater comradeship.

Picnic—and do it quick. Then have another and still another before the summer is over. NOTE—Above all, do not fail to have a committee of dues collectors on the ground to collect dues from comrades who desire to pay.

How Are You Rated?

Ever hear of Dunn and Bradstreets? It's a firm that rates the rich—that is, those of the business world who gouge the workers of enough surplus to make them safe for credit.

Ever hear of the Socialist Party? It's an organization which rates the workers. All who are listed by the Socialist Party will some day be given the credit of making the world safe to live and enjoy life in. But among those listed there are two grades, firsts and lasts. The firsts always pay dues in advance, are always in good standing in the party. The lasts are behind in their dues, sometimes off and on and sometimes always.

How are you rated in the Socialist Party? Are you a straggler or a leader? It is to induce you to join the leaders that we write this TO YOU. Look at your dues card RIGHT NOW. How many months do you owe for? Pay today. If you do not know the name or address of your financial secretary, send your dues to state office, Socialist Party, 3207 Clark avenue, Cleveland, O., and we will forward it to your local or branch.

An O. K. rating in the Socialist Party is the most creditable rating on earth.

Before election the Democrats and Republicans hand you the Glad-hand. After election they hand you Injunctions.

Capitalism banquets dogs and starves children.

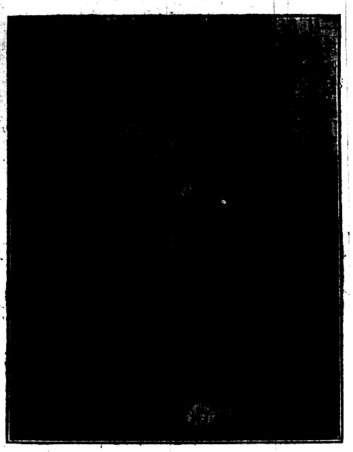
FRAMED UP BY STANDARD OIL

Charles Krieger, in Jail Since December, 1917, Without Trial—Detectives and Lawyers Employed by Oil Co. Take Charge of Government Prosecution.



CHARLES KRIEGER

Victim of Standard Oil Persecution

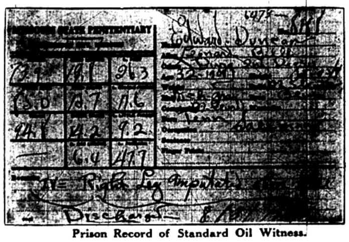
Standard Oil "Justice"

Arrested without a warrant; held without indictment for seven months; kept in prison without trial for a year and a half; framed up by an ex-convict placed in his cell by the oil company as a stool pigeon; re-arraigned immediately on a new warrant when the first was thrown out of court as worthless; prosecuted not by the public officials supposedly elected for that purpose, but by expert criminal lawyers hired by the oil company—such is, in abstract, the experience of Charles Krieger, I. W. W. organizer, at the hands of Standard Oil "justice" in the Mid-Continental oil district of Oklahoma. And the foul story is not complete, as Krieger is still in jail and Standard Oil control is so complete in that district that his attorney holds out little hope of saving him from a long term of imprisonment for a deed with which he had no connection.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER

King of the Standard Oil

George Harper, alias Ed Duncan, Rickefeller Stool Pigeon.



Prison Record of Standard Oil Witness.

The case begins with the usual alleged attempt to blow up the house of a "prominent citizen"—in this case, J. Edgar Pew, vice president and general manager of the Carter Oil Co., of Tulsa, Okla. On October 29, 1917, some dynamite was exploded under his front porch in such a considerate manner as merely to injure the porch and the adjoining walls. Whether the "outrage" was perpetrated by men desiring vengeance on Mr. Pew, or by members of his secret police force anxious to furnish a reason for their existence, or, as has been widely whispered, by the oil company itself, in order to inflame the public mind and give the company an excuse for getting rid of troublesome labor organizers, it must be left to the reader's intelligence to determine.

The fact of the matter is that I. W. W. organizers had been making themselves very obnoxious to the oil companies in this district, the greatest oil field in the United States. They had been meeting with unusual success in organizing the downtrodden victims of Standard Oil oppression.

"Knights of Liberty" Commit Outrage Upon Workingmen.

On Saturday night, November 9, 1917, twelve days after the "explosion" at Mr. Pew's house, forty "prominent citizens" of Tulsa, masked and armed and calling themselves "Knights of Liberty," took sixteen I. W. W.'s from the county jail, made them strip to the waist, lashed their bare backs with a stout hemp rope under the direction of the chief of police, and under the approving eyes of the editor of "The Tulsa World" and his wife, rubbed tar and feathers into the raw flesh and then drove the men into the woods after having saturated their clothing with Standard Oil and burned it up, along with all their money, about $500 they had earned working for the oil company. The names of those who took part in this demonstration of Liberty a la Standard Oil are known to thousands of people, but never a step has been taken to bring them to justice.

On December 28, 1917, Charles Krieger, an I. W. W. organizer, was arrested on the streets of Tulsa, the U. S. Marshal, J. J. Moran, admitting that, "so far as he was concerned, the only reason for the arrest was Krieger's membership in the I. W. W." Bound over under the Espionage act, Krieger lay in jail nearly seven months, until July 12, 1918, when he was indicted on the charge of "conspiracy to obstruct recruiting," the "overt act" alleged against him being the supposed dynamiting of the Pew house. No explanation of the connection between the Pew explosion and recruiting for the European war was offered nor was it necessary within the confines of the kingdom of Standard Oil.

Gets First Hearing After Ten Months in Jail.

In October, 1918, one year after the "explosion" and ten months after he was thrown in jail, Krieger was taken from the Muskogee jail to Tulsa by J. W. Robinson, a private detective in the employ of the Carter Oil Co. After a preliminary hearing, at which Krieger was not informed of his right to have legal counsel, Judge Slack (what's in a name, after all?) assented to Robinson's suggestion that Krieger's bail be set at $5,000, a prohibitive figure which effectually ensured his continued imprisonment without the useless formality of a mock trial.

A significant incident which came out at this preliminary hearing was that, a couple of days previously, a note had been ostensibly smuggled into Krieger's cell from one Vowels, offering to go on the stand as a witness for him. A few hours after the note arrived, Robinson and another detective, likewise in the employ of the Carter Oil Co., came to Krieger's cell and searched him, taking away the note. Vowels was put on the stand at the hearing and testified to a lot of carefully rehearsed hearsay vaguely connecting Krieger with the Pew explosion, although Krieger swore that he had never before in his life either seen or heard of Vowels or his supposed informant.

Judge Declares Hearing a Farce.

A motion was made later by Krieger's lawyer to quash the charge against him. In his opinion on this motion, Judge Cole, who would appear to be a rare and refreshing exception to the usual run of legal officials in Standard Oil territory, said in part:

"I don't think it will be seriously contended in this case that there was any competent evidence to connect this defendant with the crime. No man testified of his own personal knowledge that Krieger ever heard of J. Edgar Pew, that he was in Tulsa (at the time), knew anything about the explosion or had any motive in doing this. The record is absolutely silent as to this man's knowing one single thing about this crime? . . . . Can it be said that the statement of one of those men, in the absence of some little bit of evidence somewhere to connect this man with the crime, could bind Krieger, when it is never shown that they were ever even in Krieger's company . . . . This court could not say that this man had any rights whatever protected in the preliminary examination."

Ordered Released But Immediately Re-arrested.

As the judge ordered Krieger to be released within 24 hours, a new warrant was at once issued and he was "re-arrested" on complaint of the same oily detective Robinson. At this point all judicial camouflage is stripped off and the real source of the prosecution nakedly disclosed. The complaint on which the warrant was based was made by Private Detective Robinson. At the preliminary hearing, the case for the prosecution was conducted by Mr Owen, general counsel for the Carter Oil Co., and Flint (again, what's in a name?) Moss, one of the leading criminal lawyers of the state, who admitted in open court that he was being paid by the oil company. It became then no longer the case of the State of Oklahoma vs. Charles Krieger, but the Standard Oil Co., by the grace of God and the kindness of the authorities of Oklahoma vs. an I. W. W. organizer.

Standard Oil Hires Criminal to Try to Trap Worker.

A new personage in the drama was introduced this time. The voluble Vowels having proved only mediocre as a home-made witness for John D. and his gang, one George Harper was substituted as handy man for odd jobs below the dignity of even a private detective.

Harper, who admitted having been convicted of robbing a post office in Arkansas and having done five years for a bank robbery in Missouri, (after or in consequence of, which exploits he had been considered worthy of employment by both the U. S. post office and the American Bankers' association as an "investigator") told how he entered the employ of the Carter Oil Co. in February, 1918, and had arranged to be locked up for an imaginary crime and put in the same cell with Krieger in order to try to trap him into making dangerous admissions that could be used against him in his "trial." He repeated a lot of vigorous and intelligent remarks Krieger had made about the Ludlow massacre, about John D. "running the U. S. government," about cars of food being "sidetracked to let John D.'s cars through for the destruction of human life," etc., together with alleged statements hazily implicating Krieger in the putative attempt to blow up the excellent Mr. Pew.

Another witness for the (Standard Oil) government was a Mr. Griffin, who proved to be a bird of the same feather as John D.'s associate and assistant Harper, with the exception that he had done time only for post office robbery, but, as far as the available records went, had not yet tried his hand on the banks.

Jailed Indefinitely to Await Pleasure of Standard Oil Co.

On the strength of this "expert testimony," Krieger was sent back to jail until the Standard Oil legal employes could stage the next scene in the farce—the "trial."

There the case rests for the time being. Not one iota of circumstantial evidence to connect Krieger even remotely with the alleged crime. Not one bit of reliable testimony on which to hold him even under suspicion. And yet, there he lies, a clean, straightforward young man, 27 years of age, a skilled workman of the highest caliber, condemned to indefinite imprisonment for the crime of being a member of a labor union that threatens to interfere with John D.'s profits.

Case Based on Perjury—Wide publicity the Only Hope.

His attorneys hold out little hope of saving him. The blackest chapter in this black tale of unscrupulous industrial tyranny is still to come. With every newspaper in the district owned by the Standard Oil Co., body and soul—if it can be said that prostitute purveyors of lies have a soul—there is small chance of the company plans miscarrying, even so far as to allow one man to slip into the handpicked jury panel who will use his judgment and obey his conscience in analyzing the perjured testimony of the oil company's hired crooks.

"The whole d—d case is built up on perjury," declared a prominent Tulsa lawyer the other day. "Krieger is innocent, and yet I don't believe you will find a jury in Tulsa county that will have guts enough to acquit him."

"Meanwhile Charles Krieger lies in jail—waiting," writes Fred H. Moore, his lawyer, attorney for the I. W. W. in many of its most bitter legal contests. "A boy in years, but a man in vision; a giant in courage, he knows no fear. But the great mass of Oklahoma citizens go on their driveling ways, indifferent to the cruel tragedy being enacted in their midst."

An Appeal to the Workers.

Are the workers of the United States going to sit by and let this crime be added to the long list of crimes committed in the name of "justice," but in the service of American capitalism?

All workers are urged to give this case the widest publicity.

Funds for publicity and defense are neded and should be sent to the New York Defense commitee, 27 East Fourth street, New York, or to the General Defense committee of the I. W. W., 1001 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill.

Eugene V. Debs on Violence

"From what you have heard in the address of the counsel for the prosecution, you might naturally infer that I am an advocate of force and violence. It is not true. I have never advocated violence in any form. I always believed in education, intelligence, in enlightenment, and I have always made my appeal to the reason and to the conscience of the people."—From Debs' speech to the jury, September 12, 1918.

remained true to his convictions, and has done all that one man can do.

What was Debs jailed for? To stop the spread of his doctrine? That end, obviously, will not be accomplished. The spread of his doctrine can be stopped only by arguments and ideas. The Supreme Court did not make Debs change his mind, retrace his course, or abandon a single one of his ideas. These ideas will overturn the Supreme Court itself in their own time; and nothing in heaven or earth will stop the process. Least of all will the exercise of the arbitrary law stop it; instead, it will greatly accelerate it; yet the arbitrary law will be called upon more and more as the natural revolution draws near. The rulers of men seem overcome with their own perversity. They have learned no faith from life, no wisdom from the ages, no humility from place and power.

A man who has led a life of great courage and virtue, who has consistently championed the cause of the weak and the oppressed, who has gained the love of multitudes and the universal respect of his opponents, whose simple integrity and sweet nobility have carried his name to far places and to high regard—this man is jailed for ten years on the score of outspoken opposition to war. This is sheer absurdity; and every honest man recognizes it. It is possible only under the technicalities of the arbitrary law.

"These are pregnant and promising days," said Debs, as he entered the prison doors. "We are all on the threshold of tremendous changes. The workers of the world are awakening and bestirring themselves as never before. All the forces that are playing upon the modern world are making for the overthrow of depotism in all its forms and for the emancipation of the masses of mankind. I shall be in prison in the days to come, but my revolutionary spirit will be abroad, and I shall not be inactive. Let us all in the supreme hour measure up to our full stature and work together as one for the cause that means emancipation for us all." These are the words of simple greatness. We may believe or not in the underlying doctrine; we cannot fail to honor and to believe in the man.

SECRECY SURRROUNDS DEBS' REMOVAL

and prison officials have shown many considerations towards him. His relations with the other prisoners has been of the most cordial character. He has been looked upon as the prison's most distinguished inmate and many have been the efforts on the part of prisoners to show their respect for Debs.

Residents of Moundsville, which has a population of about a thousands inhabitants, were sensible of since Comrade Debs' began his prison sentence. Not only Socialists, but many others as well, paid him visits and sent him gifts.

FEARED DEBS WILL SUFFER.

Fear is expressed by many Socialists that Comrade Debs will not fare so well at the Atlanta prison as he has at Moundsville. The fact is recalled that Debs was a sick man when he entered prison. The extreme heat of the summer season in southern Georgia it is thought will have an enervating effect upon his strength and physical welfare. Close friends and relatives of Debs are ascertaining the true conditions of the Atlanta prison with a view to learning just how he is likely to fare in the hands of his new keepers.

MANY POLITICAL PRISONERS AT ATLANTA.

The Atlanta federal prison contains its share of political prisoners. The number at the time Debs was sent was seventeen prisoners, numbering among them Socialists, I. W. W., ministers, philosophical anarchists and Irish rebels.

Here are names of political prisoners now serving long sentences at Atlanta: Walter L. Hirshberg, 20 years, Socialist and I. W. W.; P. Petroski, 20 years, Russian Socialist; Clarence Waldron, 15 years, Baptist minister; John T. Dunn, 15 years, Irish Catholic rebel; Fritz Stepanovitch, 15 years, Russian Socialist; John Randolph, 10 years, I. W. W.; Paul Bosco, 10 years, Russian Socialist; Theodore Hiller, 10 years, Russian Socialist; Adolph Younger, 10 years, German Socialist; A. L. Hitchcock, 10 years, Cleveland, O., Socialist member school board, sentence reduced to two years by executive clemency; Otto K. Brennan, 10 years, religious objector; William McCoy, 5 years, rebel mountaineer of Big Gap, Va.; Mr. Phipps, 5 years, religious mountaineer; Mr. Gilbert, 3 years, Socialist and I. W. W.; Alexander Berkman, 2 years, philosophical anarchist; Louis Kramer, 2 years, philosophical anarchist; Francisco Romero, 2 years, Porto Rico Socialist.

POLITICAL AND DIRECT ACTION

I have thought a great deal in regard to political action, as has been taught by the socialists; also, direct action as the I. W. W. are accused of. I myself believe in political action; but I ask the questions: If a ruffian would enter your house, would you use direct action, or let him go ahead and do the direct action, then take the law to him? If your child was in the yard, and you saw a mad dog approaching, would you stand like a dummy and let the dog bite the child and then take the child to the doctor, or would you use direct action to prevent the dog biting the child? I believe if a person was sane, he would be tempted to use direct action.

I was told by a socialist that he would not sign a petition to put our candidate on the ticket, because the socialist upheld the direct actionist, such as the I. W. W. He said he would vote for a candidate that was sent down to the borders of Mexico with a gun on his shoulder to do direct action.

If we say we would not vote for a direct actionist, we would never cast a vote, for I believe all men are more or less direct actionists in some way.

When a man has lost his job and cannot get credit, and cannot get favors, to support wife and family, cannot beg enough, the next step is direct action—steal, starve, suicide, or murder. They say, if you are living a church life, God will bless you. How? By starvation, suicide, or some other way, for the wife to sell her virtue—direct action after all.

A man watched for a chicken thief to enter his chicken roost, with a double-barreled shot gun, which was direct action.

The exploiters are stealing off of the socialist I. W. W. and all. Direct stealing. Therefore they cannot enter the kingdom of God. We socialists, I. W. W., and all stand a show to enter God's kingdom, for Jesus went among the tent-makers and fishermen to pick his "fishers of men." Jesus used some direct action when he drove the money-changers out of the temple, did he not?

We must size ourselves up from top to bottom to see if we are free from direct actions. I am not cocksure whether I am a political actionist or not. Jesus said, "He that is not guilty, let him cast the first stone." When he knelt down to write in the dust, and when he erased, every damned one was gone but the woman. They took direct action, and where did they go? To h—l. Another direct action, sure.—U. G. Risom, Columbus, Ohio.

a more aggressive policy of Socialism. It must be broken by making a success of the mooney strike, if not on July 5, then after: the struggle to get the masses in action must never cease.

This means, moreover, broadening the scope of the Mooney strike. It must become a strike for the release of all class war prisoners, who are prisoners of the class war against capitalism. Mooney is a symbol of the class war; and the Mooney strike must become a symbol of class power and militancy, to release all the prisoners of the militant working class.

These class war prisoners were captured in the front lines of the war against capitalism. They were at the posts of danger, they struggled valiantly; and they were imprisoned consciously and calculatingly to weaken the power of the workers, to strengthen the power of the capitalists. They must be released.

The moderates, in the A. F. of L. and in the Socialist Party, urge a campaign for "amnesty." The labor lieutenants of the capitalist class in the unions urge faith in the government and in the courts. The moderates imagine that the mobilization of the bourgeois liberal public opinion will compel an "amnesty."

All that will not accomplish anything. The issue is an issue of the class war, and power alone decides in the class war as in ordinary war. You cannot depend upon the courts. You cannot depend upon public opinion. You can depend upon your own mass power alone. You must not ask the government, you must compel the government to release our class war prisoners.

Ask the government that imprisoned our worker-comrades to release them? Depend upon this reactionary government of the capitalists to free the enemies of the capitalists? Charity is not a factor in the social struggle. Justice is a weapon in the struggle of class against class. Mercy is the lying fraud of a ruling class intent upon maintaining its own ascendancy.

All that is paltering with the issue. Paltering is very pleasing to the capitalists, but disastrous to the workers.

Power! That is the requirement of the militant proletariat. Power is the means that will break the power of the capitalists. The power of the proletariat alone will compel concessions and ultimately unconditional surrender.

The mass strike, the political strike, means power. It means the consciousness of class and the power that comes of this consciousness. The political mass strike will weaken the power of the state, make the power of the capitalists totter. There is no other method. The class struggle is not waged with words, but with deeds; it is not a pink-tea affair, but an implacable war to the end. In this war the workers must use force—the force of their control of industry, the force that comes out of mass power, out of mass action.

The class struggle is flaring up implacably. [illegible] oppression of [illegible] are being broken. New fetters are being forged for the proletariat, a new tyranny organizing itself. Capitalism is resorting to the most desperate means to preserve itself. It imprisons, it shoots, it destroys peace, happiness, democracy, that it may reign in plunder and in power. The workers must act against this evil system of things.

The class struggle is flaring up implacably. In the midst of war and death and tyranny, the proletariat is acquiring a new consciousness and new purposes. It stirs, uneasily, unaware of its strength; but it stirs. And capital trembles. Capital realizes that should this stir become conscious, definite action, it would mean the end of the world—for capitalism. But it would mean a new world for the workers.

The issue of the class war prisoners is an issue of the class struggle. On this issue, and all other issues, the militant proletariat must wage war against capitalism. It must wage this war, consciously, unceasingly, implacably.

The proletariat must wage the class war with new means, with more militant tactics than used of old. The strike must broaden, its character; the workers must realize that they need power, class power in order to conquer capitalism. Class power comes out of class action; and the unifying center of class action is the mass political strike.—Socialist mass action to conquer the power of the state and of capitalism.—From Revolutionary Age.

CAPITALIST PRESS CANNOT BE NEUTRAL

He was a wise politician who said, "Government was a condition of mind, and the people got what they asked for." The intelligent workers realize the truth of this. The power of the press to shape opinion is also being realized. They are asking questions about the newspapers' mission and connections. It is just dawning on them that it is visionary to assume that the capitalist press can be even neutral. With all the wealth and power on one side, with millions invested for profits, chained to the system by every link of the chain, the newspapers must not only defend the system, but battle for its perpetuation.—Denroche Daly.

First News of Debs at Atlanta Is Shorn of Many Privileges

Veteran at Work in Atlanta Prison Divested of Many Accustomed Privileges Granted at Moundsville. Iron Rules Prescribe His Liberties.

Debs has been assigned to do clerical work at Atlanta Federal prison.

The secrecy that has enshrouded Comrade Eugene V. Debs since his removal from Moundsville penitentiary to Atlanta Federal prison is at last broken through. The Ohio Socialist is privileged to publish the first information that has been available concerning Debs since his removal to the latter institution June 13th, just exactly two months after his term of imprisonment begain.

Why Debs was removed suddenly and in such great secrecy from the comparatively comfortable quarters at Moundsville to the more stringent conditions of the Atlanta prison have been a subject of much speculation among Socialists and the million admirers of Comrade Debs. Nor is any enlightenment thrown upon the matter by any one in authority, nor is Debs himself aware of the reason for his transference. Other than a statement by an official of the federal prisons at Washington, that Debs had been removed at the request of authorities at Moundsville, nothing is known concerning the reason for his removal.

AT WORK IN CLOTHING DEPARTMENT.

Comrade Debs has now been assigned to clerical work in the clothing department of the Atlanta prison. The clothing department is one of the big departments of the prison, where nearly three thousand prisoners are confined. The clothing of all prisoners is cared for inside the prison. Not only are the thousands of grey suits worn by the prisoners made in the prison, but the repairing and laundering is also done inside the walls. This work requires the labor of many prisoners. Keeping accounts of suits made, repaired, discarded, etc., are demands made upon those prisoners capable, through their educational advantages of doing such work. It is work of this nature that Eugene V. Debs, four times the candidate of the Socialist party for president of the United States, is doing at this moment.

That Debs will fare as well as can be expected is believed by those somewhat conversant with conditions in the prison. Debs' immediate superior is a Mr. Boyle, who is credited with being a "fairly good fellow," by inmates of the prison. Associated with Debs in this department are former bank clerks who have erred and other accountants and clerical workers.

The clothing room is on the second floor of the buildi[illegible] and adjoins the "hole."

IRON RULES NOT MODIFIED.

The cell which Debs occupies is about 10 by 5 by 10 feet high. Two prisoners occupy each cell. At Moundsville, Debs was given a generous sized room instead of a cell. This room was cared for by other prisoners. At Atlanta Debs is placed in a cell without the considerations shown him at Moundsville. The iron rules of the prison will not be modified in Debs' case, is the statement of

SOCIALIST EDITOR JAILED

Alex Swartzenfeldt, member of Toledo, O., Socialist Party, editor of The New Voice, organ of the Worker's, Soldiers' and Sailors' Council, was sentenced to eleven months in the Canton workhouse for offenses committed in violation of the federal court order in the Willis-Overland strike. He was found guilty of contempt of court. Publication o certain articles in the New Voice constituted the basis of the conviction.

Comrade Swartzenfeldt has for a number of months been among the most active members of Local Toledo and has been untiring in his efforts in organizing the local Soldiers' and Sailors' council. He has frequently spoken for the party at public meetings. Comrades visiting Canton should make it a point to visit him on visiting days, which is on Thursday at the workhouse.

LIES, LIES, LIES

When it comes to downright lying the capitalist press has it over anything Annanias ever dreamed of. He was a mere piker compared to it.

After all, one must have some respect for old Ananias. He only lied for himself. True he lied to his God outright and with premeditation, but even so he was an angel with wings full fledged compared to the mental prostitutes who write up the news and editorial columns of the average capitalist daily.

The monumental capacity of these kept ladies of the kept press for outright and persistent lying is being taxed to the limit in these days of capitalist desperation. When the capitalist wielded whip is made to sing over the heads of its hirelings of the press, one can expect that it will bring results in prevarications, but lately the lash has been applied with extra vigor and unusual persistency. The master class has seen a vision of labor rearing itself upon its hind feet and DEMANDING a word to say in the running of its own affairs. Needless to say, this vision has driven it to frenzy. To drive labor to cover and to squelch in the beginning every desire for justice, capital has entered upon a policy intending to "form public opinion," in its own favor and to create an artificial bulwark against labor's natural aspirations for a human life.

Take for instance the capitalist daily press of Cleveland, O. Since the May Day riots, when organized mobs of boys and a few soldiers, aided by the police and instigated by higherups in the local capitalist ring of destructionists, carried out their murderous program against peaceful workers it has, not only in its news columns, but in editorials advocated the annulment of the operation of the civil law in so far as "radicals" are concerned.

It has printed columns of the grossest misrepresentations and falsehoods concerning the activities of Socialists, I. W. W.'s and in fact handed the lie to everything savoring of radicalism that has dared to manifest an existence. Plots have been discovered, but they originated in the fevered imaginations of the prostitutes whose bread and butter is furnished by the master class. The capitalist press, the police department and the city government has openly dedicated itself to the work of destroying every sign of revolt of the workers against the vest-

Socialist in Prison Chosen As Candidate

Amos L. Hitchcock, now serving a term in the Atlanta, Ga., federal prison, has been nominated by Cleveland Socialists as their candidate for the school board in this year's elections.

Hitchcock was the lone Socialist member of the Cleveland school board when he was indicted under the espionage act, because he carried on an aggressive fight in the interest of working class measures, and thus made himself obnoxious to the ruling class of Cleveland.

SENTENCE OUTRAGEOUS.

Some time before he was arrested on account of remarks made in personal conversation with an old friend in Sandusky, Assistant Attorney Breitenstein said about him: "Means can be found to remove him from

PROF. HARRY F. WARD'S TRIBUTE TO DEBS

Prof. Harry F. Ward is one of the most noted church workers in the Methodist church. His recent writings have caused considerable comment among church people on account of their radicalism. The following tribute to Debs was paid at a recent conference of church officials:

Dr. Ward commented on the case of Eugene Debs, Mooney and the trial in Chicago of the I. W. W.

"Debs is one of the big spirits of the country. In Russia a person convicted of a more serious offense against the government was sentenced four years and in Prussia for three years, and yet Debs at a time we are not at war is sentenced for 10 years.

"All the friends of labor demand concerning Mooney is a fair trial. It is not a question as to whether he is guilty or innocent.

"The leaders of the labor forces are most concerned in keeping down violence. They will not call for the machine guns unless they are forced to it by such action as Mayor Hanson employed in Seattle.

"Any cause which is afraid to trust to reason or the sense of justice of the people cannot possibly maintain itself by force of arms."

MOSCOW SAFER THAN NEW YORK

While the prostituted editorial writers of the capitalist press continue to fulminate against Soviet Russia and to spew out such venom against the workers as they are capable, the following extract from a dispatch to the New York Globe and the Chicago Daily News by their correspondent, Isaac Don Levine, in Moscow, may serve to make some of them realize the depths of lying to which they have allowed themselves to be lowered by the interests they serve:

Moscow, Russia, May 19.—There is no anarchy either in Petrograd or Moscow, and there is no chaos in Soviet Russia. Never since its inauguration has the Soviet government been more powerful than it is today. Never in the history of modern Russia has any government had more real authority than the present Soviet system. When one penetrates Soviet Russia one is struck by the fact that whaever Bolshevism may be it is not anarchy. After having passed sometime within the frontiers of the communist republic one is surprised at the situation here, for it is absolutely the opposite of what the American people imagine it to be There is no disorder; there is even too much order. One is safer in the streets of Petrograd and Moscow than in New York or Chicago. Imagine what would happen in Chicago at night if the streets were unlighted, and imagine, further, what would happen if the police disappeared from the city. There are no policemen in Moscow, and because of the coal crisis the streets are unlighted; yet one can traverse the streets after midnight in perfect safety.

Before coming to Russia I was informed that the Soviet government was tottering and would soon fall. The newspapers here publish the wireless dispatches sent from Paris to America. These are absolutely contrary to the facts, and even people most violently opposed to Bolshevism cannot find anything here to support such assertions. On the contrary, numerous signs show that the Soviet government has grown considerably in the last few months.

The Republicans and Democrats ask you to vote—not to think; Socialism asks you to think—if you think right you will vote right.

VOTE FOR SOCIALISM.

An Inquiry About Debs

Dayton, Ohio, June 18, 1919.

Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Sir: As one of the counsel for Eugene V. Debs in his trial at Cleveland, Ohio, which resulted in his conviction of violating the Espionage Act and his sentence to a term of imprisonment at the Moundsville penitentiary, West Virginia, I write to you concerning recent news items in the daily press that Mr. Debs has been transferred from Moundsville to Atlanta.

The law, I take it, governing this transfer is found in U. S. R. S. Sec. 5546, as amended by act of July 12, 1876, 19 Stat. at L. 88. It reads as follows:

> "And the place of imprisonment may be changed in any case, when, in the opinion of the attorney general, it is necessary for the preservation of the health of the prisoner or when in his opinion the place of confinement is not sufficient to secure the custody of the prisoner, or because of cruel or improper treatment; provided, however, that no change shall be made in the case of any prisoner on the ground of unhealthiness of the prisoner, or because of his treatment, after his conviction and during his term of imprisonment, unless such change shall be applied for by such prisoner, or some one in his behalf."

Will you kindly inform me upon which of the above grounds the tyansfer to the Atlanta penitentiary has been made? Respectfully, JOSEPH W. SHARTS.

Trench Testimony

Fellow-worker Bruce has just been freed of the charge of "criminal syndicalism" at Seattle. Following is part of the testimony submitted in his case by a returned soldier.

"Why did you join the I. W. W.?"

"To try to get better living conditions for men and women and children," came the answer. "Few young fellows these days can afford to get married."

"Was it your intention to overthrow the political government of the United States?"

"No, I fought for the United States in France." Then Williams gave a brief picture of his experiences for sixteen months in the trenches.

"I was sent into the line before I had been taught how to load my rifle," he said. "I was ordered over

MILLIONS WILL RETURN TO EUROPE

(By Scott Nearing.)

May first the international labor holiday so generally observed by the workers of Europe saw fresh indignities heaped upon the foreign born men and women in the United States. The police, representing "law and order" vie with mobs of uniformed soldiers and sailors in their efforts to make this country an impossible living place for any self-respecting foreigner. A concert given by a Hungarian singing society was raided by 400 soldiers, who insisted upon "The Star Spangled Banner," and forbade the playing of all Hungarian or German music. Meeting places of foreign-born workers were attacked;

AROUSE, YE WORKERS: TO THE LABOR BEFORE US; BUILD UP THE WORKERS' PRESS

The greatest bulwark that capitalism can muster against the workers is its kept press. Its principal business is to lie about the cause of the workers and to form public opinion in its own interests and against the working-class. That it intends to make it pay dividends while doing so is a side issue. While pretending to give the news of the world to the public, this is mere camouflage, for all news is colored to suit the capitalist class. Its perverted writers, both editorial and news, are hired for their ability to distort the truth and to purposely misconstrue the motives and purposes of the organized workers.

Months of unparalleled journalistic perversion of facts and motives of the Socialist Soviet government of Russia serves as an illuminating example. Realizing the danger to the entire capitalistic system, should this highest workers' government stand, it has left no falsehood untold that could discredit it in the eyes of the workers and the general public of this country.

Not content with viciously and shamelessly lying about the workers of Russia they have also turned their broadsides of slander against the workers of America who have voiced the least sympathy with or shown an inclination to seek an understanding of the Russian workers' government. Socialists, I. W. W.'s, Bolshevists, in fact, all men and women of radical thought have been branded as outlaws by these kept ladies of a morally corrupt press. From end to end of the country they have brazenly incited to riot and murder against the workers.

Against the outrageous system of hypocrisy the workers have but one weapon. Publicity, the power of print, is the weapon and the only one that can turn the points of their lies. The power of the press to form public opinion is greater than any other in all the world. Armies are overpowered by it, navies are helpless before it. It is the real ruler of the world.

The power of the press for promulgating a lie is great but its power for spreading truth is a thousand times greater. Truth in itself is a power. It is invincible in the end. No lie can stand against it for long. The truth given even an unequal chance with lies will win the race.

The business of every Socialist is to spread the truth about the motives and the purposes of the organized workers. To do it as effectively as possible should be a chief consideration. For the more effectively it is done, the quicker will we increase the power of the workers for a workers' democracy.

The most effective manner in which this can be done is to place the workers in control of the means of publicity. With this added power, the power of the workers to carry the truth to their fellows is doubled, trebled, yes, increased an hundred fold. The time has come for the workers to strike back at the lies of capitalist hirelings. And the way to strike back is to tell the truth and to make possible the telling of it to greater and greater numbers.

The Ohio Socialist is making a call to its readers and to the members of the Socialist party for $10,000 with which to buy a printing press and a plant of its own. We are trying to tell the truth to the workers and we want your help in doing it.

If you want to strike back at capitalism that is striking you and your class down, help us raise this fund with as much as you can possibly spare for it. If you will stop a moment to think of the great necessity of the workers controlling this great means of publicity you will give generously and free-heartedly for this great cause. Send your donation, help build the workers' press.

Owing to the fact that copy for this week's issue must be made up earlier than usual on account of the Ohio State convention all of this week's receipts are not included below. The comrades whose names appear below have contributed the sum at the head of the column in which their name appears.

Report of the State Secretary, 1919 Convention, Socialist Party of Ohio

While the following State Secretary's report is being set up at the printers for this issue of the O. S. the state convention of the Socialist Party is in session at Cincinnati. Full report of the convention proceedings will appear in next week's issue.

Comrade Delegates:

The state secretary, together with State Organizer Chas. Baker and C. E. Ruthenberg, were released from the Stark county workhouse on December 2, 1918. The entire work of the state office for the ten months previous had devolved upon the temporary state secretary, Horense Wagenknecht. The state executive committee granted the state secretary a three months' leave of absence beginning about the first of February, for the purpose of taking charge of the department of organization and propaganda at the national office of our party. During these three months Mrs. Wagenknecht also functioned as temporary state secretary. This report, therefore, is in most part her report.

So far as agitation and propaganda are concerned, this state has seen unusual activity in the past year. The literature purchases and sales by the state office have been very large. Locals have made it a point to patronize the state office for literature and although the literature department has not been conducted at a profit, we have been instrumental in the circulation of thousands of pamphlets and this, after all, rather than profits, is the aim of our organization.

Many speakers have been toured by the state since the last convention of the party. Scott Nearing, Ross D. Brown, Kate Richards O'Hare, Tom Lewis, Geo. R. Kirkpatrick, Thurber Lewis, L. E. Katterfeld, Lilith Martin, H. L. A. Holman and Eugene V. Debs have all made more or less extended tours of the state. Speakers residing in the state who gave much of their time to lecture work are Lotta Burke, H. J. Beery, Jos. W. Sharts, C. E. Ruthenberg and State Organizer Baker. Other state speakers filled occasional dates. We want to call especial attention to the several northern Ohio tours made by Eugene V. Debs with the assistance of Marguerite Prevey and Chas. Baker. These meetings were the largest ever held at the points touched, the crowds coming to hear Debs consisted of such numbers that halls were far too small to hold them. These meetings put new life into the organization in Ohio at a time when war and all that followed in its wake was discouraging Socialist activity.

The one disappointment of the year was our failure to place a state ticket in the field last fall. We failed by only several thousand of securing sufficient signatures. This then, would be the best time to call the attention of the delegates to the coming municipal elections. Every delegate in attendance should make it his and her duty to induce the local to nominate candidates for municipal offices at once. Many locals have already nominated candidates and begun campaigns. The example of these live locals should be followed by all other locals in the state.

The only speaker at present being toured is State Organizer Chas. Baker. He is visiting locals in behalf of the party-owned printing plant fund. This tour has just begun and we hope that it will turn out very successful for numerous locals and members seem exceedingly interested and have volunteered their loyal support in behalf of this fund and its purpose.

Due to the riots instigated by the tools of capitalism, both hall and street meetings are, for the time being, impossible in many cities. In a number of cities anti-street speaking ordinances have been passed. In Bellaire and Tiffin the comrades are fighting such ordinances through the initiative and referendum in accordance with a plan proposed by Jos. W. Sharts. We have therefore discontinued the routing of speakers for the present, but only until the locals begin their municipal campaigns, when we shall again give our best assistance in this form of propaganda.

While this lull in lecture propaganda is on we suggest that all locals and branches turn their attention toward strengthening their organization. There are two suggestions to follow toward this end. First, through study classes, we must increase the intellectual quality of the membership. Second, through dues collectors we must seek to keep our membership in constant good standing. Every local should organize a study class. Every local should elect dues collectors. Between the two every local can maintain its membership and make it more efficient in propagating Socialism. Also, every local member, under the direction of the literature agent, should constitute himself a literature agent, selling as many pamphlets as he can every week, as well as Ohio Socialist subscription cards. These are methods of activity which can be easily prosecuted despite the denial of halls or street corners.

The Ohio Socialist is now the largest weekly party-owned Socialist paper in the United States. With a circulation of 20,000 in round numbers, we over-top the next largest paper by 5,000. Credit for this big circulation is due Elmer T. Allison, who as editor and manager has labored painstakingly to make our state paper a success. In fact, the Ohio Socialist is more than a state paper now. It is a national paper, for it enjoys a nation-wide circulation, having subscribers not only in neighboring states, but in remote states as well. The growth in circulation has been steady since the state executive committee, a year ago, decided to issue it weekly. The financial report shows that the paper has contributed a surplus into the treasury during the year.

The general condition of the party in the state is very gratifying. We have lost some of the smaller locals, [illegible] rural locals, but the locals in [illegible] the industrial locals, have grown and prospered. The convention must now earnestly deliberate the reasons for this very condition. This brings us to the party controversy and the formation of the Left Wing section of the Socialist Party.

By vote of the state executive committee the state secretary and Scott Wilkins of the committee were delegated to attend the Left Wing National conference in New York. This conference drafted a Left Wing program and manifesto, declared its relations with economic organizations and decided to organize a new party, to be known as the Communist Party, should the national emergency convention of the Socialist Party refuse to seat delegates from Left Wing states and other party divisions, expelled or suspended for proclaiming themselves Left Wing Socialists, or should the national executive committee again postpone the emergency convention.

The Socialist Party of Michigan intends calling a national convention to organize a new Socialist Party, this convention to meet in Chicago, September 1, 1919. Several of the suspended federations are supporting this call.

You will see by this that the situation in the Socialist Party is critical. Fully half of the party membership is suspended or expelled. Massachusetts is now being expelled. The state executive committee and the city executive committee of New York has expelled half of the New York membership for being Left Wing Socialists. The Pennsylvania state executive committee has refused to abide by the decision of the national executive committee not to sell dues stamps to the suspended language federations and may be suspended as a result. The Socialist Party of Washington, the Socialist Party of New Jersey and the German Socialist Federation have all adopted the Left Wing program and may also be suspended for so doing. The Jewish Socialist Federation is split in half, one-half having organized its own federation for Left Wing Socialism.

Eventually, most of the Socialists will be outside the official party. In order to function state and nationally they will have to form some kind of an organization. The question now arises—in this event, what stand shall the Socialist Party of Ohio take? We can safely say that a vast majority of the membership in this state are Left Wing Socialists. Most of the larger locals have endorsed the Left Wing program and manifesto. As this question will undoubtedly come before the convention in concrete form we hope that the discussion will be deliberate and convincing, so that this state may be a unit in whatever action is taken.

The emergency convention of the Socialist Party will meet in Chicago on August 30, 1919. Ohio is to elect 16 delegates. If these delegates are to accurately represent this state, the convention ought to take under advisement the instructing of delegates as to possible contingencies.

We sincerely hope that the delegates and locals will not permit the party controversy to discourage them in the performance of their duties or to cause them to become inactive. The reshaping of methods and principles in alignment with experiences taught by the war and the Social Revolution is a very great need. The controversy caused by this attempt to reshape our tactics is a sign of party growth, a growth which may result in a temporary decrease in numbers but which will eventually result in an increase in both intellectual and numerical strength.

The financial condition of the party is something to be really elated over. The balance on hand June 1, 1919, was $3,366.31. Together with this we have property assets as follows: One automobile, $400; two typewriters, $60; one multigraph, $250; office furniture, $50; literature in stock, $400; printed matter and supplies, $200. This means that the total assets of the party are more than they have been before, nearly $5,000. Add to this the conservative estimate of the value of the Ohio Socialist and its subscription list, namely, $10,000, and we have a financial condition which we can well feel proud of. Here follows the financial report in totals and a comparison with receipts and expenses for the year previous.

BISBEE DEPORTEES TO GET DAMAGES

Copper Barons Who Kidnaped and Left Twelve Hundred Workers on Arizona Desert to Starve Aim to Settle Suits for Six Millions Out of Court.

Bisbee, Ariz.—Quietly and in a manner calculated to attract the least attention the Bisbee deporters are preparing to pay the deportees a large portion of the $6,000,000 asked for in the deportation damage suits.

This action will be taken in order to avoid going to trial with the suits against the big copper companies, their agents and the wealthy men who were charged with deporting striking miners and their sympathizers July 12, 1917.

All that stands in the way of prompt settlement is the acquiescence of some of the paintiffs to the terms of settlement offered by the defendants.

According to the terms of settlement offered by the defendants in the suits married men with children will receive $1,250, married men $1,000 and single men $500.

The list of defendants included the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, the Phelps Dodge Mercantile Company, the Calumet & Arizona Mining Company, the El Paso Southwestern Railway and a number of other corpoartions, officials and individuals.

In the suit a number of the 1,186 deported men charged that their rights as citizens were violated when they were forcibly taken from their homes. Great interest has been aroused in the action of the attorneys for the defendants in consenting to settle the case out of court. The revival of the case in its settlement has brought out a lot of talk about the quashing of the indictments against the 25 men who were charged with the responsibility for the deportations.

There was little concealment of the names of the men who had conducted the deportations, and no denial of the action was made until after the indictments were returned by a federal grand jury. In November, 1918, Federal Judge William W. Forrow of San Francisco filed a decision quashing the indictments against the 25 men, most of whom were agents of the various big interests of the Warren copper mining district which centers at this place.

Among the men deported was W. B. Cleary, a Los Angeles attorney, who up to that time knew little about the labor troubles of the district and was said to have little sympathy with the strikers. He was caught in the net as were many who were in no wise involved in the strike and who were not in sympathy with it. Since that time Cleary has been devoted in his assistance to the workers and he has taken a prominent part in the civil cases and in the suit thus being settled out of court by mutual agreement.

The suits were brought for $6,150,000 and were filed in the state civil court at Tombstone in behalf of 286 of the deported men.

A strict censorship was held on the press at the time of the deportations and stories of an inflammatory character were sent out from the district.

The United States government took a hand in the affair and rescued the deported men who had been left in the desert in desperate straits for food and water. United States army detachments were sent to the relief of the suffering men who were taken to Columbus, where they were cared for at a military camp for several weeks.

Some of the men who were deported are among those sentenced to long terms in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth on charges of being implicated in I. W. W. activities.

the board. This is no time to dilly dally over the niceties of legal technicalities."

Means were found in the remarks he made in a private conversation in regard to Liberty bonds. Hitchcock was indicted, tried and convicted and removed from the school board. His sentence of ten years to the federal prison at Atlanta was considered so outrageous that upon recommendation of the attorney general of the United States President Wilson reduced the sentence to two years, thus adding insult to injury. Hitchcock will be released next January.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM, LET'S STUDY IT

Being a member of the Socialist Party and a reader of your publication, I would ask kindly for a few inches of space to express my thoughts to the wage workers. Comrades since the Socialist Party has seen the need of the Left Wing department. Let me first say that Socialism was and is to be brought about through the machinery of production and distribution on the industrial field. As we know we are robbed at the source of production and not from politics. Even if the Socialists would control the political end from the president down to a dog catcher, where and what use is it if we have not the economic end at our backing? The masters would simply ignore our laws and run the industries in the same old way.

What must be done? Make yourself a committee of one to read up and study industrial unionism. Why? [illegible] organized in the trade [illegible] agricultural industry [illegible] the globe wherever they have grabbed control. But the wage workers are organized on a trade-union basis, and that form of union ceased to function.

ed rights of capital to exploit them. Day in and day out front pages reek with the most stupendous fakes of alleged plans of the "REDS" to riot at some future date. July 4th is generally the date set for an outbreak of "Bolshevism" that is to outclass anything heretofore pulled off.

An article in the News of recent date, headed "Police to shoot in quelling red riots on July 4th," is illuminating as to the immoral depths to which the writer has sunk. The article reads in a manner calculated to picture in the reader's mind scenes of lawlessness unparalleled, at which time police clubs are thrown away to be supplanted by guns. Special deputies are being sworn in (at very good pay, no doubt). Auto loads of police will scour outlying districts prepared to put down any uprising. All police of the city will be on duty. The idea of the article is to carry the impression that the Socialists are secretly organizing outbreaks of some kind or another. Whether there is any truth in it or not does not matter. So long as the public can be induced to believe that Socialists are cut-throats, the lie is justified. Cleveland Socialists have never at any time even considered having a parade on July 4th. Yet the lie has appeared many times in the local sheets.

Don't think that capitalism lies merely for the pleasure it finds in doing so. It lies with a purpose. It lies always for itself. It lies always against labor, never for it. The recent increase in the amount of its prevarications concerning Socialists is due to the fact that Socialism is growing by leaps and bounds. To prejudice the public mind against it, is its sole and only hope of staying the march of industrial democracy. It will not succeed. In spite of hired and prostituted mentalities whose brain power and talents are for sale to the highest bidder, the truth marches on, no power can stay it. It is conquering Europe for the workers. It will conquer capitalism in America for the workers too.

MILLIONS WILL RETURN

meetings were broken up, and men and women were insulted and assaulted.

The soldier-mob raids were carefully planned and executed; the police were directed from headquarters. The masters of American life evidently desire this thing. If they did not, they would easily stop it.

Be satisfied, masters; these "foreigners" will go. Already they are leaving by the hundreds of thousands, and recent investigations show that, as soon as passports can be secured, between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 of foreign-born men and women expect to go back to Europe. The last census reported 13,345,545 foreign-born individuals in the United States. This body of working people, who have been doing the hard work of the United States for decades, will go back to Europe.

Well, what then?

Then the workers who remain will be able temporarily to demand and secure labor-famine wages. Then the masters will have their excuse for bringing black labor from the south to the north (as they did during the war) and for bringing yellow coolie labor from China to the United States as they did a generation ago.

The driving out of millions of foreigners means ultimately the imposition of more acute forms of slavery upon the American working people. Thus tyranny will grow; despotism will enthrone itself, and capitalism will die by its own hands.

the top. One of the fellows asked me if I didn't know how to put my ammunition in. 'No,' I said. 'I'm sorry for you,' he said. But I noticed I came back all right."

Three times wounded, twice gassed Bayoneted while trying to take a prisoner who "could speak American" and whom he didn't want to kill if he could capture him.

"Do you believe in war?" he was asked.

"I do not," came in clear tones from the soldier who had killed his man.

"Do you believe in it less or more than when you went to France?"

"Much less," he said.

"Do your consider yourself loyal to this country?"

"I do. It's one of the grandest countries there is. I want to see the principles of the declaration of independence put into industry, not just into politics."

READ THESE POINTED PARAGRAPHS

Here are pithy, pointed paragraphs gleaned from letters received [illegible] press fund. Read them. And after you have [illegible] the press fund and write us a letter [illegible] your share of a party controlled press. Be among the boosters.

BEST MOVE EVER MADE.

"Best move the party ever made," is the way Comrade Wm. L. [illegible] the $10,000 press fund. And we are sure that he voiced the approval of the membership of Local Portsmouth when he said that [illegible] for the local a check for twenty dollars. "You can count on Local Portsmouth for from $100 to $200," he adds. Local Portsmouth surely has the right spirit when it comes to getting together for progressive party work.

SHOULD HAVE DONE IT BEFORE

"Enclosed find check for ten dollars donated by Local Girard, (Ohio) for a party-owned press. It's the very thing the party should have done long ago. I am confident the comrades of Ohio would have backed it up with their dollars and their work." That's what Local Secretary Fred Wilson writes. And he says he is going to raise more funds by individual subscriptions. More of the same kind of co-operative spirit that keeps the party on the road to success, say we. It surely is no time for comrades to lay down on the job, now that we have decided to move ahead and make up for the past mistakes. Let's follow the lead of these comrades and help get the press.

ONE RESULT OF PERSECUTION.

The story of the widow's mite was recalled to us this week when we received such a comradely letter from Comrade Anna Jackson of Battle Creek, Mich. Comrade Jackson writes that she did not until lately have any use for Socialism, but that the persecution of Debs and Kate O'Hare has turned her towards us. Their unjust imprisonment has made a Socialist of her and now she wants to do all she can for Socialism.

Although Comrade Jackson is a working woman dependent upon her own labor she donates five dollars for the press fund and does so gladly. It is letters like these that comrades write us that makes us believe that we are on the right road when we attempt to put into the hands of the workers more and better tools with which to build a better world.

ANXIOUS TO DO HIS BIT.

Comrade W. A. Jenkins of Salem, O., is another enthusiast for the press fund. He has pledged a dollar a month until the press is paid for and promises to solicit funds also. He states that he will do all he can for the fund and to advance the movement. May his tribe increase.

"FOR AN UNTRAMPLED PRESS."

That's the way Comrade Fred E. Stevens puts it in his letter to us, containing a press fund donation of five dollars and a pledge of an additional dollar each month for 12 months. To which we add that we'd soon have it if all comrades looked at the question in the same clear light as Comrade Stevens.

ORDERS LIKE THESE PLEASE US

Comrade Louis Habenicht of Barton, O., sent a pleasing letter this week. It ought to please all Socialists to read it. It was all business. It said: here's ten dollars for the press fund, three dollars for books and one dollar for a subscription. That was the mainpart of his letter. It all proves that he's one of those working-at-it Socialists.

AN OLD IDEA PUT TO A NEW USE.

That is what Local Zanesville has done—put an old idea to a new use. Secretary Patterson's letter explains. "I enclose $8.70 for the press fund. There will be no individual donations with us. It is like this: we have a voluntary contribution box on a table at every meeting. At the last meeting we decided to send until further action, all donations to the press fund. We shall try at every meeting to stimulate giving by making an announcement, and I am in hopes that in the end it will result in quite a tidy little sum." Not so bad a plan. Is it?

THE VERY BEST REASON OF ALL

With a remittance of eleven dollars for the press fund from various comrades, Comrade Gj. Vucelich of Bellaire strikes the keynote of militant socialism when he says of the comrades making the contributions "We are in the movement to do all we can." Seeing is believing, even should we have doubted it before. The foreign-born comrades need no brick house to fall on them before they know what is good for future progress.

HE HOPES WE BECOME A DAILY

Comrade D. Weinstein writes, "Here is two dollars which will help to keep the Ohio Socialist a worker for the workers. Hope to see it a daily." And so do we. That's why we are laying the foundation.

SURE WE WILL GET IT.

After all, the best way to make sure you will get a thing is to help a bit to get it. That's what Comrade P. H. Davis of Chesapeake, O., seems to imply in his letter. He sends two dollars. He states that he is sure we will get the necessary amount. To be sure we will. Just think of the thousands of comrades who are reading these lines right now who haven't contributed yet. Of course we are going to get it—just as soon as they send in their bit.

HERE'S GOOD SOUND HORSE SENSE.

For downright horse sense, no one has anything on Comrade John Reichle of Madison Heights, Va. He writes: Enclosed please find a dollar for the printing plant for the Ohio Socialist, to be party owned, not privately owned. We should not have any privately owned Socialist papers, but only large party-owned ones. Not so many little duplicating ones, but fewer and stronger controlled papers." More and more Socialists are coming to his point of view, we observe.

LEAST ANY SOCIALIST SHOULD DO.

"Please find enclosed one dollar," writes Comrade Robert Kerr, of Co-

THE FRENCH AND RUSSIAN REVOLUTIONS PARALLELED

Address of Frederic C. Howe at mass meeting, Madison Square Garden, May 25, 1919.

There are many reasons for this meeting for justice to Russia. Some of them are official, others human. There are two reasons that are official that seem to me to voice the spirit of this call. On January 8, 1918, three months after the establishment of the Soviet government, President Wilson outlined the policy of the United States to Russia as follows:

> "The evacuation of all Russian territory, and such a settlement of all questions affecting Russia as will secure the best and freest co-operation of the other nations of the world in obtaining for her an unhampered and unembarrassed opportunity for the independent determination of her own political development and national policy, and assure her of a sincere welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing, and more than a welcome, assistance also of every kind that she may herself desire. The treatment accorded Russia by her sister nations in the months to come will be the acid test of their good will, of their comprehension of her needs as distinguished from their own interests, and of their intelligent and unselfish sympathy."

This is the only official pronouncement of America's attitude toward Russia.

There is a later one, concurred in by all of the allied powers. Scarce four months ago at Paris, January 22, 1919, in inviting the Soviet government to participate in the Prinkipo conference, President Wilson, with the approval of the allies, said:

> "They (the representatives of the Associated Powers) recognize the absolute right of the Russian people to direct their own affairs without dictation or direction of any kind from outside. They do not wish to exploit or make use of Russia in any way.
> "They recognize the revolution without reservation and will in no way and in no circumstances aid or give countenance to any attempt at a counter-revolution."

These are the official declarations of the allied powers toward a sister nation, which for four years was engaged with them in a common war!

But there are human reasons for this meeting—human reasons that need no official sanction. The last four years I have faced men and women and children from the continent of Europe, and I have learned that people, whether Russian or Polish, Italian or Irish, have the same common, universal, simple, honest wants.

They want a home; they want their children; they want to make a living and be free from oppression of any kind. They are the kind of people—and there is no essential difference—that Lincoln spoke of in his apealing way. And the human justification of this meeting is that in Russia yonder, our ally of a few months ago, hundreds of thousands—yes, I am advised millions of people—are dying of starvation.

They can be fed, and America in the past has asked no question about the political lineage of people who were dying of hunger. She sent relief to India. She did not ask permission to send relief to Ireland. We are sending it now to Armenia.

And in the passion of the press, we should not forget that this Russia gave two million of her people at the front. She was a valued friend up to a few months ago, and if reports are to be believed, regiments went to the front against machine guns with nothing but their bare hands—so betrayed were these Russian people by their rulers and leaders!

Food—famine—sickness—is another call to the American people to voice their good will to Russia. For three generations, people from Russia have ocupied this hall and other halls, and America has sent generously. She has used diplomatic channels to abate and end the tyranny of that country. She has protested against pogroms, against oppressions, against the old order. And why should America today turn her back upon these, the finest, most disinterested traditions of our land!

I know of nothing in international matters that has a stronger appeal to me than the right of every people, be they great or small, be they white or black, to work out their own destiny in their own unimpeded way.

Like all new doctrines in the world, this doctrine is having some difficulty in acceptance. But this world wants the variety, the character, the culture, the refinements, the contributions of every people. And I should like to see the peace council from America establish a department filled with men who want to aid aspiring people, to help them in their own—not our way—in their own way—to realise their own conception of life!

Well, I must not forget that I am merely the holder of the gavel tonight. But before introducing the speakers, I want to call attention to a parallel—a parallel to what is going on in Russia today. Something over a hundred years ago there was another revolution [illegible] for causes almost exactly similar to those that led up to the revolution in Russia. There was corruption in the government, the king was weak, his advisers ignorant and corrupt. The peasants were hungry; they were in poverty and ignorance, kept so by the state and the church. The revolution was the only way out. For all attempts at reform were frustrated just as they have been in Russia. Finally, the revolution broke. It spread. It consumed the old order.

There have been other revolutions since, but the French Revolution was the only revolution of the past century that was economic. In this, too, it was like the Russian revolution. It was not political. It didn't dethrone the king alone; it was economic. The peasants took the land of the old nobility and distributed it among themselves. They confiscated it. They ended feudalism by ending the cause of it. Instead of a few thousand owners, as there were in Russia, Prussia and England, there are now 4,000,000 land owners in France. That is the explanation of France. That has been her strength. That was the real bulwark against Germany. The French Revolution won the late war. For the peasants fought for their homes. Had they been serfs they would not have stood as they did like a stone wall on so many occasions.

But England, Germany and Russia did not understand, or chose not to understand, the revolution.

The feudal classes of these countries made common cause with the feudal classes of France to crush the revolution and prevent its spreading. The liberalizing influences were halted at the British channel, at the River Elbe. They did not secure a footing in Great Britain, Austria, Hungary, Germany or Russia. They left the old feudal nobility that still owns the land in these countries intact in their economic as well as their political power.

This was the greatest calamity that has befallen the world. It enthroned reaction all over Europe. The Holy Alliance was an alliance to save property as well as thrones. Europe was kept chained to the middle ages by the coalition of the old ruling nobility which was willing to destroy France to prevent the French revolution from destroying feudalism.

The world has been paying the price of the suppression of the French revolution ever since. It is paying for it in the war which is drawing to a close. For the militaristic classes of Europe are the old feudal classes which still own the land, which still control diplomacy, which have [illegible] the world in the interest of their [illegible] fering which society and civilization has made to the strangling of the French revolution by the Junkers of Europe a century ago. For central Europe is still feudal as it was two centuries ago.

This organization to overthrow the revolutionary movement in Russia is as portentous to the world as was the coalition against the French revolution. Yes, it is more so. The history of the future will be written in what happens to Russia. This in turn will write the history of the rest of Europe and possibly of America as well. It is conceivable that western civilization may be destroyed by false steps in regard to Russia just as the European world has come close to destruction by reason of the false steps of a hundred odd years ago.

Why? Because Russia is imponderable. She contains nearly 200,000,000 virile people. She contains great wealth and endless resources. A reactionary Russia, an industrial Russia, a Russia in league with the Orient or with Germany might sweep westward to the British channel. That is one danger. It may be remote. But it is no more improbable than the alliances that have been formed in Europe within the past generation.

But revolutionary Russia wants only peace. She alone of the powers is ready to scrap all militarism and end all wars. She wants to devote her attention to other things.

Russia, too, accepts without reservation the Magna Charta of peace with which America entered the war. She has ended secret diplomacy and opened her archives to the world. She freed Persia and declared that she would not accept Constantinople from any one but the Turks themselves. She has declared for an applied self-determination of peoples, and said to her peoples you can govern yourselves as you like, even in your smallest local affairs.

Russia has spoken across the seas and accepted our ideals of peace. She has sent them to the heart of Germany. According to Ludendorff, it was the Russian propaganda back of the German lines that broke the power of Germany. It bred revolution and resulted in the dethronement of the Kaiser and the military caste.

Russia is the problem of problems of the world. She contains one-third of the population of Europe. She is seething with [illegible] that can not be [illegible]. It can only be overthrown by [illegible]. To attempt to [illegible] Russia in the interest of reaction [illegible] liquidation of wars and [illegible] complete destruction [illegible] peace world [illegible]

PEACE TIME SEDITION LAWS.

So, it seems congress, having imposed upon the people of the United States an unconstitutional espionage law in time of war, is now to seek further honors in the fertile field of repression of our once boasted rights by enacting a new sedition law adapted to peace times. The espionage law, commonly referred to as the "spinach act," proved such a winner for reactionism, though its sole purpose at the time of enactment was said to be the curtailing of the activities of pro-German spies, that something permanent along the same line would be just the thing to keep the robber powers in the saddle for decades at least. The war time agitation concerning freedom, liberty, etc., having burned itself into the minds of the people as a real entity, possible of accomplishment, of being grasped and as worthy of such, it is now feared by our capitalistically inspired solons, as a dangerous thing for an enlightened people to become enamoured of. A law of repression is necessary.

Senator King is ready with his "anti-Red" bill. Commenting upon it under the heading of "Why Crazy Laws for Crazy Men," the New York World speaks as follows: "In the severity of its provisions, it goes far, beyond anything ever before thought necessary for the protection of the government. It appears to be based not merely upon facts that may have been discovered but on fears that may have been excited in the minds of the senators in the course of their rambling investigation. For national safety it is not necessary to magnify into crimes all the reckless words, spoken and written, of irresponsible agitators. It groups persons who use scurrilious or abusive language about the form of government with those who advocate assassination of public officials and destruction of public property, and prescribes the same penalties. Even if such laws were to be enacted, they could not be enforced in the courts where reason and justice still prevail."

This is the kind of laws which "our" representatives will seek to hedge about the people as they manifest a desire to attain some measure of the liberties for which the nation spent billions and gave thousands of lives.

ONE RAY OF HOPE.

The convention of the American Federation of Labor, boasting an organization of 4,600,000 members, has passed into history. The proceedings of the convention were marked but by two outstanding features of special import. Much of the same old game of conservatism marked every phase of its various activities. The same old policy of keeping the "ins" in and the "outs" out was apparent. The steam roller of the Gompers' machine performed in the usual and time honored manner against even the least significant display of unaccustomed policy. The convention proceeded along the conventional and usual route toward securing a "fair" deal for labor. What this fair deal consists of was not made apparent. Gompers voiced his usual tiresome and conservative opinions and "belief" that capital would see the fairness of labor's demands and out of its good heart would render justice to the toilers. The accomplishments of the convention were toward conservatism and a policy of "let well enough alone."

The one ray of hope and the only one, emanated from the western delegations. They composed the radical group of the convention and in them rested the spirit of the newer ideals of labor. They were not sufficiently numerous, however, to bind the convention to any of the forward looking movements of labor. The decisions of the convention bear out the statement that the American Federation of Labor is far, far behind the spirit of progress and desire of the labor world. The radicalism in the ranks of American labor exists in that vast majority which is outside the Federation. The Federation is lacking in a sympathetic touch with the recent developments in the labor world. The only ray of hope that it may at some time get in touch is furnished by the Western delegations and their scattered supporters.

The Bolshevist and the profiteer are opposite extremes, and there is small choice between them—so reads a short one in one of the dailies. Admitting they are opposite extremes indications are that the world, having had enough and to spare of the latter will now try the former for a change.

President Wilson, we are told, will stump the country to convince the American people that white is black and that black is white in so far as the league of capitalist nations is concerned.

We trust that the capitalist press has sufficiently gloated over the imperialistic peace imposed upon a starving people at bayonet points to convince the average man and woman that our sole object in entering the war was the attainment of right and justice!

Speaking of Red, it was the Red Sea that engulfed the tyrant Pharoah and his hosts. Other tyrants, other seas.

The opportunity for enlightenment as to what the Allies were fighting for is now available. Just read the peace treaty.

A plan of Germans to export potash is referred to in a capitalist paper as a Hun plot. That's because it would interfere with the profits of the potash trade that is developing in this country.

Who can say that Sammy Gompers has not a sense of the fitness of things—didn't he refuse an increase in pay?

Some near truths are being told these days. A preacher gives it as his opinion that "hogism" is responsible for Bolshevism.

The horse meat industry is flourishing in the U. S. "Well," says our stenographer, "if people have to eat horse meat, perhaps they will get some horse sense."

LET PARTY MEMBERSHIP FUNCTION NOW.

(By L. E. Katterfeld)

In a statement to the locals the members of the old National Executive committee, who are holding up the membership referendum in which they know themselves to be defeated for re-election, make a tear[illegible] plea to the outraged membership to "wait until the convention." They ask locals not to make or second motions to reverse the N. E. C. but leave it all to the convention.

In the meantime this same N. E. C. finds even the mails too slow for its party wrecking activities, and is right now BY TELEGRAPH, [illegible] the Socialist Party of Massachusetts. Why not wait till the convention?

The New York state committee is [illegible] out of the party its revolutionary membership by the thousands. Why not wait till the convention?

[illegible] state Executive committee has voted to expel every local and member that endorses the Left Wing program. Why not wait till the convention?

We can expect every little committee that is still controlled by the reactionary officialdom to follow suit. The convention is called primarily for the specific purpose of affording the party membership the opportunity to pass judgment upon the Left Wing program, to determine the party's position on the question of affiliating with the Third International, organized by the Bolsheviks at Moscow, which today is the ONLY International of Revolutionary Socialism. But these little committees of petty officials that want our party to straddle and compromise are not willing to await the action of the convention. They are now trying to forestall the convention and to expel from the party all those [illegible] that come out openly for revolutionary Socialism.

We know that their frantic efforts will avail them nothing. The membership of our Socialist party today is sound and revolutionary to the core. No matter how many thousands the party officialdom "discipline" with its paper expulsions, of those that remain the Left Wing will still be the majority. The inexorable logic of world events has undermined the opportunist elements within our party and made the revolutionary wing unconquerable.

We have serence confidence in our victory at the coming party convention—when that convention is held.

But we have no confidence whatever in the honesty and good will of the present party officialdom.

As soon as they realize in truth that in spite of all their machinations the convention will decide against them, we can expect them to "postpone" the convention. In fact, they discussed this possibility openly at the recent N. E. C. meeting in Chicago.

So do not let the specious pleading of these defeated and disappointed party officials lull you into inactivity, comrades. Lose no time. Second the referendum NOW. Support Local Cleveland's efforts to force the party officialdom to obey the will of the membership.

The N. E. C. also asks us to "wait for more information."

But they themselves refused to "wait for information" when they expelled the Socialist Party of Michigan, 6,000 members strong, without any trial or even informing the Michigan comrades that they were under charges.

They refused to "wait for information" when they voted down my motion to give the translators time to communicate with the Federation executive committees, and suspended thirty thousand GOOD standing party members without trial, just by a simple resolution made by seven men in an attic in Chicago.

We need no information to know that no little executive committee has the power to throw forty thousand members out of our party without trial and get away with it.

We need no information to know that it is the duty of our party officials to count our membership referendums and announce the results, that no committee consisting almost entirely of defeated candidates has the right to suppress them.

If there is anything wrong with the referendum the remedy is not to suppress and keep secret, but to TURN ON THE LIGHT, publish the results and then if necessary let them be challenged and investigated by DISINTERESTED comrades.

WE WANT the party convention to decide the questions at issue. But the old N. E. C. has forestalled the convention, and in order for these questions to come properly before the convention these unconstitutional and pernicious acts of the N. E. C. must NOW be reversed.

Therefore, comrades of the Socialist Party, we urge you to second Cleveland's motion to annull the N. E. C. expulsion of Michigan, and let THE CONVENTION decide if those 6,000 members should be expelled from the party.

Second Cleveland's motion to annull the N. E. C. suspension of the seven language federations, and let the CONVENTION decide whether those 30,000 comrades are guilty of violating our party principles and should be thrown out.

Second Cleveland's motion to have the results of our referendum elections announced. Then if there are any contests or challenges, let the CONVENTION decide them.

Second Cleveland's motion to halt the N. E. C.'s action turning all the party property over to a little corporation that cannot be controlled by the party membership. If the new headquarters are to be in the hands of a little group of individuals that cannot be recalled within three years by the party, let the CONVENTION consider that.

And remember, as a precaution against the executive secretary's merely throwing your "second" in the waste basket, be sure to send a duplicate thereof to the State Office of the Socialist Party of Ohio, 3207 Clark avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, so that we may know when sufficient seconds have been sent in to demand a referendum of the party.

Comrades, in every one of their actions the N. E. C. have insulted the party membership. They have usurped powers that are not theirs. They have trampled roughshod over all constitutional limitations. They have violated the will of the membership. They may now camouflage their motives with honeyed words and fine phrases, but their every act gives them the lie, and the very circumstances under which they acted mercilessly condemn them.

They have sown the wind. Now let them reap the whirlwind. Let every comrade make it his personal business to prove that such incredible trickery on the part of the party's officialdom will be resented and rebuked in this Socialist Party. LET THE PARTY MEMBERSHIP FUNCTION NOW.

The Communist Program—The Manifesto of the Left Wing

Nearly one hundred delegates met in New York on June 21, 22, 23 and 24 to discuss the Socialist Party crisis. Nine Socialist language federations were represented. Ohio was represented by 9 delegates, Pennsylvania 8, Massachusetts 8, New York 16, Illinois 8, Colorado 1, California 2, New Jersey 3, Connecticut 2, Wisconsin 2, Rhode Island 1, Michigan 5, Kentucky, 1, Minnesota 3, New Mexico 1. These were reported by the credentials committee at the first session. More than a dozen additional delegates were admitted at subsequent sessions.

The discussions were earnest and deliberate. Heated debate marked several sessions, which is, of course, entirely natural at a Socialist conference. A telegram was received at the first day's session, signed by fifteen prisoners incarcerated at Leavenworth, sending greetings to the conference and wishing it success. In view of this it does not seem as if those behind prison bars felt as if the Left Wing Socialists were disrupting the party. Telegrams and letters of greeting were received from all parts of the United States.

We print this week the Communist program as adopted by this Left Wing national conference, which is hoped will form the basis of a program to be adopted by the national emergency convention of the Socialist Party, to be held in Chicago August 30th. Next week we will publish further actions of this conference.

THE COMMUNIST PROGRAM.

The Left Wing program is implied within the terms of the program of the Communist International. We, therefore outline, as the controlling propositions of our own program, the main principles of Communism as follows:

1—The present is the period of dissolution and collapse of the whole capitalist world system, which will mean the complete collapse of world culture, if capitalism, with it unsolvable contradictions is not replaced by Communism.

2—The problem of the proletariat consists in organizing and training itself for the power of the state. This conquest of power means the replacement of the state machinery of the bourgeoisie with a new proletarian machinery of government.

3—This new proletarian state must embody the dictatorship constituting the instrument for the taking over of property used for exploiting the workers and for the re-organization of society on a communist basis.

Not the fraudulent bourgeois democracy—the hypocritical form of the rule of the finance oligarchy, with its purely formal equality—but proletarian democracy based on the possibility of actual realization of freedom for the working masses; not capitalist bureaucracy, but organs of administrations which have been created by the masses themselves, with the real participation of these masses in the government of the country and in the activity of the communistic structure—this should be the type of the proletarian state. The Workers' Councils and similar organizations represent its concrete form.

4—The dictatorship of the proletariat shall carry out the expropriation of private property in the means of production and distribution, by transfer to the proletarian state under Socialist administration of the working class; the abolition of capitalist agricultural production; nationalization of the great business enterprises and financial trusts.

5—The present world situation demands the closest relation between the revolutionary proletariat of all countries.

6—The fundamental means of the struggle for power is the mass action of the proletariat, a gathering together and concentration of all its energies; whereas methods such as the revolutionary use of bourgeois parliamentarism are of only subsidiary significance.

In those countries in which the historical development has furnished the opportunity, the working class has utilized the regime of political democracy for its organization against capitalism. In all countries where the conditions for a workers' revolution are not yet ripe, the same process will go on.

But within this process the workers must never lose sight of the true character of bourgeois democracy. If the finance-oligarchy considers it advantageous to veil its deeds of violence behind parliamentary votes, then the capitalist power has at its command in order to gain its ends, all the traditions and attainments of former centuries of upper-class rule, multiplied by the wonders of capitalist technique: lies, demogogism, persecution, slander, bribery, calumny and terror. To demand of the proletariat that it shall be content to yield itself to the artificial rules devised by its mortal enemy, but not observed by the enemy, is to make a mockery of the proletarian struggle for power—a struggle which depends primarily on the development of separate organs of working-class power.

7—The old Socialist International has broken into three main groups: (a) Those frankly social patriots who since 1914 have supported their bourgeoisie and transformed those elements of the working class which they control into hangmen of the international revolution.

(b) The "Center" at present theoretically led by Kautsky (by Hillquit in the United States), representing elements which are constantly wavering and incapable of following a definite plan of action, and which are at times positively traitorous; and

As regards the social patriots, who everywhere in the critical moment oppose the proletarian revolution with force of arms, a merciless fight is absolutely necessary. As regard the "Center" our tactics must be to separate the revolutionary elements by pitilessly criticizing the leaders.

8—It is necessary to rally the groups and proletarian organizations who, though not as yet in the wake of the revolutionary trend of the Left Wing, nevertheless have manifested and developed a tendency leading in that direction.

Socialist criticism has sufficiently stigmatized the bourgeois world order. The task of the International Communist Party is now to overthrow this order and to erect in its place the structure of the Socialist banner, the emblem under which the world order. Under the Communist first great victories have already been won; in the war against imperialistic barbarity, against the privileged classes, against the bourgeois state and bourgeois property, against all forms of social and national oppression—we call upon the proletarians of all lands to unite!

1—We favor international alliance of the Socialist movement of the United States only with the Communist groups of other countries, such as the Bolsheviki of Russia, Spartacans of Germany, etc., according to the program of Communism as above outlined.

2—We are opposed to association with other groups not committed to the revolutionary class struggle, such as labor parties, non-partisan leagues, People's council, municipal ownership leagues and the like.

3—We maintain that the class struggle is essentially a political struggle, that is, a struggle by the proletariat to conquer the capitalist state, whether its form be monarchic or democratic-republican, and to replace it by a governmental structure adapted to the communist transformation.

4—We favor organized party activity in co-operation with class-conscious industrial unionism, in order to unify industrial and political class-conscious propaganda and action.

(a) The party shall propagandize industrial unionism and industrial union organization, emphasizing their revolutionary implications.

(b) The party shall make the great industrial battles its major campaigns, to develop the understanding of the strike in relation to the general proletarian emancipation.

5—We do not disparage voting nor the value of success in electing our candidates to public office—not if these are in direct line with the class struggle. The trouble comes with the illusion that political or industrial immediate achievements are of themselves steps in the revolution, the progressive merging of capitalism into the co-operative commonwealth.

The basis of our political campaigns should be:

(a) To propagandize the overthrow of capitalism by proletarian conquest of the political power and the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat.

(b) To maintain a political organization as a clearing house for proletarian thought, a center of political education for the development of revolutionary working-class action.

(c) To make, by votes, a show of strength, indicating the measure of our reserve forces, providing, always, that these votes are not bid for by reform programs, but are votes for the social revolution.

(d) To win representatives in public offices on the same basis as we use lawyers in the capitalist courts, viz., to insist upon our technical safeguards, no matter how meager, and to serve as interpreters and publicity agents equipped with special knowl-

A Rebuke From Prison

June 14, 1919.
U. S. Federal Penitentiary, McNiel's Island, U. S. A.

Comrades: Whereas it has come to my knowledge that the National Executive Committee, at their meeting held on May 24th to 28th, inclusive, 1919, did take certain arbitrary and unconstitutional action regarding certain foreign language federations of the Socialist Party, and did, moreover, exceed the authority of their office in "expelling" the state organization of Michigan, contrary to the constitutional requirements provided for suspensions and expulsions, and, further, that the N. E. C. has ordered that National referendum "B" and "C" be NOT TABULATED, but have selected an "investigating committee" to examine the individual ballots which are to be called in from all over the country—this despite the fact that the vote has NOT been challenged—and intend to exclude the votes of Michigan state organization and the "suspended" language federations in making final count;

I hereby wish to express my PROTEST as a Socialist and a member of the National Executive Committee, against each and all of the actions mentioned above. And I wishe to be recorded as voting "NO" upon each of the foregoing propositions.

The N. E. C. have, at all their meetings, seen fit to consider as "present" all its members who are, by action of the government, prevented from personally attending. As an expression of sentiment and comradely sympathy I, as one so detained, appreciate this graceful tribute very sincerely.

But when, as appears from the minutes of the recent N. E. C. meeting, this imaginary "presence" is made use of in an attempt to constitute a quorum when no quorum exists in order to make wholesale expulsions from the party and to deprive the membership of expression through the referendum, I am constrained to PROTEST, and this most vigorously, such an undemocratic, unparliamentary and un-Socialistic procedure.

Surely, as Socialists, we cannot afford to stoop to the use of such petty, political trickery, nor should we wish to do so.

(Signed) EMIL HERMAN,
Member National Executive Committee, Socialist Party of America.

TO PREVENT THE DISRUPTION OF THE PARTY

The following motions to prevent the disruption of the party by an executive committee which is bound to rule or ruin, have been initiated by the joint membership meeting of Local Cuyahoga county.

The arbitrary usurpation of power by the Executive Committee to expel or suspend sections of the party which have adopted the Left Wing position should be promptly rebuked. Every local which desires to preserve the party against the efforts of the Executive Committee to disrupt it, should send their seconds to these motions to the National Office. In sending your endorsement to the National Office, 220 South Ashland Blvd., Chicago, be sure to state how many members in good standing you have in your local or branch.

RESOLUTION.

Resolved, by the Joint meeting of the Members of the Branches of Local Cuyahoga County, representing an average of 1,821 members in good standing for the year 1918, that we initiate the following motions, to be submitted to the party membership of the United States:

Resolved, that the act of the National [illegible]pelling the Socialist Party of Michigan from the Socialist Party of the United States, a state with 6,000 members, without giving the state a trial or even a hearing in its own defense, is hereby rescinded and annulled and the Socialist Party of Michigan restored to all the rights and privileges of membership in the Socialist Party of the United States.

Resolved, that the action of the National Executive Committee of the party in arbitrarily suspending the Russian, Ukrainian, Lithuanian, Lettish, Polish, South Slavic and Hungarian Federations from the party is hereby rescinded and annulled.

Resolved, that the action of the majority of the National Executive Committee, which is largely composed of candidates for re-election in the recent referendum, in holding up and refusing to tabulate the vote on Referendum B and C for the election of the National Executive Committee, International Delegates and International Secretary, and calling a National convention, is hereby rescinded and the national secretary instructed to immediately tabulate the vote and to declare the candidates receiving the highest number of votes elected, in accordance with the National Party Constitution.

Resolved, that the action of the National Executive Committee in preparing to place the property of the Socialist Party in the hands of a board of directors, three to be elected for three years, three for six years and three for nine years, these directors not being subject to recall either by the National Executive Committee or the membership of the party, be reversed and rescinded.

Signed, C. E. Ruthenberg, chairman of meeting.
Signed, Carl Hacker, Recording Sec'y Local Cuyahoga County.

Stinging Resolutions Passed By Local Beebe, Arkansas

Calls For Seconds For National Membership Referendum

The following resolutions were passed by Local Beebe, Arkansas, on June 8th, 1919. Local Beebe calls upon all locals and branches of the Socialist Party to second these resolutions so that they may be sent to a national membership referendum. Send all seconds to the national office, Socialist Party, 220 South Ashland boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and state in communication how many members there are in good standing in your local or branch.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the Socialist party of American has repeatedly declared itself a revolutionary movement, aiming at the abolishment of the bourgeoisie system and the establishment of a working-class government, and

Whereas, recognizing the impossibility of establishing a co-operative commonwealth, as long as any part of an individualistic system is permitted to endure, and

Whereas, legislative reforms of the present system is nothing more than bolstering up capitalism and the retarding and obstructing of the growth of co-operation, thereby continuing in slavery the toiling masses whose freedom is espoused by the principles of socialism, and

Whereas, the party constitutions, platforms, conventions and referendums, in no place advocate legislative reforms as a remedy for present, existing industrial and political evils; but to the contrary do openly declare for the utter destruction of the old order and the institution of a working-class government, and

Whereas, the National Executive Committee has autocratically, and without a semblance of authority saw fit to revoke the charter of the state organization of the Socialist Party of Michigan, assigning as a reason therefor that the "state convention of Michigan has adopted and sent to referendum, a resolution denying any local or member of a local the right to advocate legislative reforms," and

Whereas, the National Executive Committee, takes the liberty to suspend several foreign language Federations, alleging the expenditure of time and funds in an endeavor to capture the national organization, as a reason therefore, and

Whereas, the evidence furnished in the signed statement of the National Executive Committee, is inadequate to base such drastic actions upon, and bears the opinion out that they (the N. E. C.) only feared that their positions were in jeopardy, and

Whereas, the duties of passing upon such grave and important questions as the revocation of state charters and the wholesale suspension of federations should, and does belong solely to the entire membership of the Socialist Party, whose wise discretion have always been, and can always be relied upon to be in behalf of the best interests of the party as a whole, and

Whereas, the National Executive Committee, by its acts have exceeded its authority, criminally neglected its duties, and showed a marked indifference for the interests of the party, by its wholesale slaughter of the party membership, the failing and refusing to call a convention at the time of or at any time after the signing of the armistice, and the offering of motions to indefinitely postpone meetings of the N. E. C., at a time when the world was witnessing the greatest struggle for supremacy by the powers of autocracy in its history, and

Whereas, by these and various other acts of indifference towards party affairs, the N. E. C. has made it plain to the party membership that if the Socialist movement is to be kept abreast of the times, and maintain its equilibrium it will be necessary for the party to take the control of affairs into its own hands, therefore, be it.

Resolved, that those members of the National Executive Committee, who have so flagrantly violated the principles of socialism, by voting in favor of revoking the charter of the Lichigan State organization of the Socialist party, and the suspension of the various Foreign Speaking Federations, also those members of said N. E. C. who offered a motion and voted for same to indefinitely postpone meetings of the N. E. C., be recalled from membership of said committee, and be it further

Resolved, that said charter of the State organization of the State of Michigan be restored and the suspension of said Federations be revoked, and a special convention be called at the earliest possibility by the remaining members of the N. E. C. for the purpose of hearing the case of the above named organizations, and such other business as may come before said convention, and be it further

Resolved, that before any of accused organizations be expelled from membership in the Socialist party, that the evidence be published and furnished to the entire membership of the party through the columns of the National Bulletin, and then a referendum vote be taken, the results of which shall stand as a verdict, and be it further

Resolved, that a referendum be called for the election of members of the National Executive Committee to fill the vacancies created by the recall of above designated members, and that none of those who have been recalled as a result of above charges shall be eligible to membership of the National Executive Committee for a period of two years.

Adopted by Local Beebe, White County, Arkansas, at a regular meeting on the 8th day of June, 1919.

Virginia Bulletin for May, 1919

State Secretary B. M. Dutton, R. F. D. No. 1, Abingdon, Va.
Chairman State Executive Committee, J. W. Cassell, 522 14th Ave., S. W., Roanoke, Va.

Virginia Comrades:

Scientists tell us that our solar system speeds through immense space upon an orbit incalculably great, and that in process of time will complete a cycle and return to the point occupied at present. Certain mystics tell us that at certain points or fields along this mighty orbit there are distinct etherial forces that play subtly upon the minds of men and induce certain abnormal psychological states that react tremendously upon the destiny of the human race.

If this theory be true, we must now be passing through one of these fields of brain-storms. Certain it is that the human animal is "acting quare" the world over. Just now our beloved American Socialist party is in the throes of a virulent brain-storm. Up Soco—SEVEN until recently we have remained quite sane and kept the keel lying level. But now, alas, we have "got it," too.

Well, if the thing is "in the air," I guess we cannot help acting like we had the jim-jams. There is one consolation: maybe that inert and somnolent thing we call "the people" will get a dose and sit up and take notice. If this occurs we can well afford to have a fit or so ourselves.

But as we who have the light are charged with the responsibility of showing the awakening masses the way out, it behooves us to keep cool. Excited folks lose their heads and do fool things. So just keep your shirt on and remember that when a man joins an organization he tacitly agrees to abide the majority will of that organization. The Socialist party has the referendum vote as the means of determining the majority will upon all vital questions relating to the internal economy of the party. So just keep cool and wait until these matters just now threatening to disrupt our party can be threshed out in a party referendum.

And do not think because you have a wing that you are an angel. All the angels I ever met had two wings and could fly. And again, remember that all the energy you consume flapping your pen-feathers out on the Comrades who have developed a wing on the opposite shoulder. is LOST to the external work that is to be done educating the heathen outside our fold. And, OH, LORD! just think how enormously great is the external task awaiting us. Why, Comrades, we have not an ounce of strength to waste in scrapping with each other. Let us quickly agree on some working program, or if we cannot agree, then agree to disagree, and then get busy WITH THE EXTERNAL TASK.

I would rather see half a dozen separate Socialist parties, each united and harmonious within and zealously pursuing its chosen course, than see one big party rent with internal dissensions and wasting all its energy upon internal shenannegan and factional strife.

There, now, just look how much perfectly good ink I have wasted in this little sermon, and just consider that when done it is not worth one quavering, agonized tinker's damn as propaganda. Some Comrade sent me a copy of a new paper calling itself The Socialist. I read it through and not a line in it but what was devoted to the partisan squabble just now on within the party. In the hands of the heathen, this paper would be absolutely meaningless — mere drool, that he would cast aside with disgust. And remember, it is labelled "The Socialist," and the heathen would naturally look to find something of Socialism in it. Say, when we play damphool like this, how can we expect the heathen to look to us for leadership?

The Ohio Socialist has remained singularly fair and free from factional drool. As a propaganda paper it is first class. It is the work of a Socialist paper to make more Socialists, and this cannot be done with factional matter. Get behind the Ohio Socialist. It stands for fair play within the party and abides the majority will as opposed to official autocracy.

May has been a quiet month in party circles in Virginia. Some of our Comrades are developing wings, but they solemnly assure me they have no intention of flying the coop—we are harmonious in Virginia.

"The harmony of death?"—not on your life, bo! We are not dead by a damsite. Just watch us. We are on the verge of eruption. Even now the rumblings of the coming quake may be heard.

Norfolk is already in active eruption. Lava-streams fill the streets and the air is full of volcanic ashes—and the eruption has just begun.

There is a reporter on a Plute paper in Norfolk who gave us a nice decent write-up in his paper recently. This is so unusual these days as to demand especial comment and our profuse thanks.

Richmond, after a period of quiescence, is now rumbling for a coming spell of activity. Pretty soon she will be spouting Socialist lava to beat Vesuvius.

Say, if you want to prove your capitalist editor an unmitigatd liar and a journalistic gutter-wench by evidence he cannot gainsay, just send $1.00 to Miss Grace Scribner, 150 Fifth ave., New York city, for a bunch of bulletins treating upon the Russian question. Do it now.

Reform is the lightning rod that neutralizes the charge in the thundercloud of revolution. If the capitalists will not put them up, why should we worry?

Letters That Foretell Success

FOR A PEACEABLE SOLUTION.

That's why Comrade Ralph Howell of Springfield, O., sends us a ten spot for the Ohio Socialist press fund. He says that the truth will win the world for Socialism and we know its true. Realizing that truth is the only salvation and then providing the means for its telling is what counts.

FIRST OFFICIAL LIST RETURNS.

The first official list issued from the State Office for getting subscriptions for the press fund has just returned. It comes from Barberton and contained four dollars. Comrade George Werner is the circulator. And now that they have begun to come in, we shall expect more and more of them right along. Every local in the state has these lists on hand and any comrade may secure one from his local secretary. Every Socialist sympathizer should be given an opportunity to help the press fund. The subscription lists are the best method to use in securing their help. Therefore, use them for that purpose. Give every one a chance to help.

IS MORE THAN PLEASED.

"Am more than pleased to see the party take the stand it is. The only way is to own our own printing plant and then we can run our paper on time or over time if necessary." That's what Comrade Wm. Greter of Crestline, O., says in his letter. He sends two dollars to prove his belief, too.

A WELCOME VISITOR.

Another five spot for the press fund comes from Comrade Louis B. Kalbfleisch of Urichsville, O. Comrade Kalbfleisch says he looks for the Ohio Socialist every week. He wishes us success in getting the ten thousand for the press and plant.

WILL DO ALL HE CAN.

A contant booster for the Ohio Socialist is Comrade D. B. Dale of Wise, Va. Whether it is subscriptions or press fund, Comrade Dale is always on hand with his help, his cheering words of encouragement and his efforts in getting others to do their bit also. Comrade Dale remits four dollars for himself and a comrade and says he will do everything he can for the O. S. and the cause it represents. We know he will.

TO BURY CAPITALISM.

Down in Corono, N. Mex., there is a comrade who is old as years go, but the spirit of youth abides with him and fires his declining days with a noble purpose. His name is J. C. [illegible]. Eighty-five years old is [illegible] old to work and nearly [illegible] spares a dollar for our [illegible] radely letter that he is willing to have but one meal a day rather than to fail in helping us. This comrade says he is going to do all he can to bury capitalism face downward. We Socialists must stand firmer together and face the enemy, he writes. And there is a world of truth in his statements and a world of inspiration in the words of this old comrade, who refuses to be old in spirit.

HE IS PROUD TO HELP.

That's what Comrade Leon Skovich of Goyanda, N. Y., tells us in his letter enclosing a press fund remittance of a dollar. Such words make us desire more and more to make the Ohio Socialist worthy of the loyalty of our comrades.

TO LOOSEN THE FOUNDATION.

Three dollars to help loosen the foundation of capitalism is the way Comrade H. J. Bronkar puts it in his letter. "Ideas," says Lenine, "will conquer the world." Lenine is right and Comrade Bronkar's three dollars will help toward that coming day.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE.

"I was looking over the contributions for the printing press," writes Comrade L. S. Troupe of Fostoria, O., "and decided to do likewise, so enclosed you will find two dollars." That's the way it struck this comrade. And, by the way, there are a lot of other comrades who are reading over this week's contributions whom we hope will feel similarly inspired.

TO KILL PREJUDICE.

To get the worker to read Socialism in order that he be rid of his capitalist teachings is what is needed most according to Comrade Chas. Mefford of Middletown, O. Comrade Mefford contributes a dollar for the press fund which surely proves that he knows the right method to get best results along this line.

THIS MISSOURIAN SHOWS US.

Comrade L. Katich of St. Louis, Mo., thought it was sure time to get that printing press, so he takes a subscription list and goes among his friends and secures a boost of six-fifty. Comrade Katich shows the way that other comrades should follow. Many a nice boost can be secured by this method. Take a list comrade, from your local secretary and go after them. Don't let your timidity stand in the way of your making the press fund grow.

SURE OF OTHER'S HELP.

Thus writes Comrade W. J. Gilmore of Dola, O. Comrade Gilmore sends a dollar and says the local will be sure to help such a worthy cause. We shall look for more assistance [illegible]

ANOTHER METHOD THAT HELPS TO WIN.

There are as many ways to secure funds for printing press as there are methods by which the proverbial cat may be divested of its outer covering. Comrade Lindauer of Sidney has hit upon a scheme that is certain to prove a big help in boosting the receipts higher and higher. He has formed a club of ten comrades who pledge themselves to give 25c each per month for a period of six months. Nothing wrong with this plan. One of the best things about it is that it will work in any community where there are Socialists or even sympathizers. Try it comrades. For a result getter we recommend it. Thanks Comrade Lindauer for the funds and the idea, too.

FAITH AND WORKS.

At Sunday school we learned that faith without works was useless camouflage when it came to bringing home the bacon. It's as true today as when it was spoken long ago. Comrade Theo. G. Phitzer believes it too as his letter proves. "I enclose a dollar," he writes, "for the press fund. Will give what my limited means afford, doing what is possible each month. Trusting the fund will reach or exceed the goal." When every comrade feels the urge of the spirit of the revolution as does Comrade Phitzer, we will get that press in short order.

READ THIS, DAYTON COMRADES.

"As I have not seen any Dayton names among the contributors so far, I wish to start the ball a-rolling with this small donation toward the press fund. Am only sorry I cannot do more. Yours for the Left Wing. —E. Hager.

Now, Dayton comrades, here is an example worthy of your following: Are you ready?

FORWARD WITH THE GOOD WORK.

Two dollars for self and two for a friend reaches us from Comrade L. Lerner of Newell, W. Va. Comrade Lerner writes, "Forward, comrades, with your good work in propaganda. It will bring the best results." And that makes us feel good.

SHOULD HAVE BEEN DONE BEFORE.

That we are doing the right thing in establishing a party-owned printing plant is the sentiment expressed in a letter from Comrade C. R. Hartleib of Barberton, O. He says both the state and national organizations should have done this before. And he sure is right. And then he says the Ohio Socialist is worth its weight in gold and we hope he is right again.

WORTH WHILE WORK.

Another list returned today. And with twenty dollars on it, too. Comrade Bernard Kehn of Niles did some good work there. We are sure that many comrades can also do as well with their lists in getting subscriptions for the press fund. Don't forget to ask your fellow worker for a lift for the press fund.

WANTS A BUILDING, TOO.

"I don't see why we cannot have a building as well," writes Comrade John B. Vaughn of Girard, O. Well, we don't either, and we are certain we would have in short order if all comrades followed your example. Comrade Vaughn. A two dollar bill and a monthly pledge of the same is a lift that helps.

lumbiana, O., "the least any Socialist should do if he wants to get educated in true style. We must have a plant of our own." And again we say, that's sense.

A COFFIN FOR CAPITALISM.

From out in Colorado comes a letter full of pep as well as a boost for the press fund. The writer is Comrade E. N. Deibler of Englewood. He sends a dollar "as a contribution toward a coffin for capitalism, in the form of a printing press. I would not call myself a Socialist if I did not do my bit toward getting that printing plant." And he has made a notation in the corner of his letter that is full of promise. It reads—first installment.

HE FORGOT.

Comrade Edwin Blank writes in that in sending in eleven dollars the first part of June for the press fund he forgot to state that five dollars was his own personal donation. Just like one of these hard working comrades, isn't it?

Calls for Expulsion of Despotic National Executive Committeemen

The following motion for national membership referendum was made by Local Vincennes, Ind., and gives, in few words, the opinion in which the average local now holds the autocratic national executive committee.

Vincennes, Ind., June 16, 1919
National Office Socialist Party, Chicago Ill.
Natice of National Referendum
To Executive Secretary:

We, Local Vincennes, Socialist Party of Indiana, forty-five members in regular meeting assembled, initiates a motion to recall from office and expel from membership in the Socialist Party, the following National Executive committeemen: James Oneal, George H. Goebel, Fred Holt, A. I. Shiplacoff, Dan Hogan, Seymour Stedman, Fred Krafft and John M. Work.

We deem said members of National Executive Committee to be reactionary and dangerous enemies of militant proletariat in the struggle for economic emancipation.

As said National Executive Committee has proven beyond doubt, their reactionary attitude in their arbitrary action in expelling forty thousand dues-paying members and assuming an attitude of dictatorship over the rank and file of the Socialist Party.

F. K. TRIEMEN, Chairman.
John Trucker, Rec. Sec.

AMONG THE SUB BOOSTERS

Three yearlies is what Comrade Carl F. Queesnows of Silvis, Ill., sends us. He promises more in the near future.

And then comes Comrade Louis Habenicht of Barton, O., with a list of the same size. These comrades seem to have no trouble in securing yearly subs.

Anothe yearly comes from Comrade C. Wasloff of Akron.

From way down in Mississippi a subscription reaches us from Comrade W. A. Mauldin. Yes, there are Socialists down there and more in the making.

County Secretary Comrade Fred Walchli of Belmont Co., sends in a fine list of 24 subs for comrades in Bridgeport and Dilles Bottom. Belmont Co. Socialists are active as ever as this list proves.

The May day cards are still coming in. Comrades who have sent in subscriptions on these cards this week are: Rachel Thompson, Guy N. Mex.; John Brandstetter, Cincinnati, O.; W. D. Conklin, Bergholz, O.; V. Markovich, Youngstown, O.; D. M. Greathouse, Kenmore, O.; Leopold Hoffman, Grafton, O.; F. E. Blake, Cincinnati, O.; W. L. Garver, Springfield, Mo.; John Webber, Sharinville, O.

Our Painesville list is growing steadily. Comrade Henry R. Miller keeps the old subscribers on the list and gets new ones right along.

Because he was lonesome without the O. S. Comrade Richard Haase of Akron renews his sub. Comrade Haase is a worker in the propaganda field of Socialism.

Comrade A. Labash of Kansas City removes to Wichita where, we hope, we will continue to solicit subscriptions for the O. S. His last remittance was for a yearly.

More coming every week, writes Comrade F. J. Catlin of Youngstown. He sends in one subscription.

A growing list of readers at Dayton, O., proves the activity of our sub hustlers there. A list of four were received from Comrade Walker Jones acting local secretary.

Comrade A. McIntyre of Roll, Okla., gets busy and lands three subs for us.

Comrade J. C. Kimmons of Corona, N. Mex., says in his letter that he is not able to do a great deal for socialism on account of ill health, but he feels it his duty to do all possible. So he sends a dollar for four subscriptions. Some of the most loyal and hard working comrades in the Socialist movement are those who are incapacitated in one way or another. If some comrades who have every advantage would do as much as these comrades—what a movement we would have!

Another growing town on our list is Rayland, O. Comrade F. A. Bucey is our booster there. Two yearlies is his contribution today.

As a result of Comrade T. J. Eiler's efforts we have a new local at Defiance with seven members on the charter. These seven comrades subscribe for a half year each. Local officers will be elected at the next regular meeting. Comrade Eiler is to be warmly commended for his good work in organizing the comrades into a local, as this method is the one which gets results. Organization is the keystone of success. Doubtless there are other localities in the state where five or more comrades can organize a local and do more for Socialism than by fighting singly.

Two three months subs are received from Comrade F. D. Lowe of Riverside, Va. Comrade Lowe is a constant booster.

And from Nebraska too. Comrade J. P. Mortenson is our sub getter there. Two half yearlies he sends in.

Comrade Chas. Litz of Sandusky sends in two renewals and a new one this week.

Local Akron sends in 38 names. This list is to apply on the $25 sent in some time since by Comrade F. N. Prevy as a protest against the riots instigated in Cleveland on May day. We hope and believe that this investment of twenty-five dollars will bear good fruit.

Single subscriptions have been received from the following comrades: Avery M. Blount, Searcy, Ark.; U. S. Wilson, Sr., Manor, Pa.; E. C. Glatfelter, New Phila, O.; Rufus Hoppus, Portsmouth, O.; C. J. Taylor, Fort Myers, Fla.; D. Kossoff, Youngstown, O.; L. R. Hamlin, Alliance, O.; Irwin Borden, Edw. Under hill, Vincennes, Ind.; Fred Wilson, Girard, O.; D. M. Greathouse, Akron, O.; Edwin Blank, Lima, O.; L. P. Fabel (2), Canton, O.

PARTY NEWS AND VIEWS

AKRON ACTIVITIES.

At a general party membership meeting held last Friday night, the delegates of Local Akron to the state convention were instructed to work for the endorsement of the Left Wing of the Socialist Party.

Comrades Marguerite Prevey and John C. Chase were nominated as candidates for delegates from this district to the national emergency convention.

The local also endorsed the motion of Local Cuyahoga for a national referendum.

It was also voted to issue a call for a party convention for the 6th of July for the purpose of nominating a city ticket for the coming municipal election.

TACOMA LABOR COUNCIL ENDORSES SOCIALIST PARTY

Tacoma, May 29.—The Central Labar Council has endorsed the resolution of its political committee for organized labor of Tacoma to join forces with the Socialist party on the political field, instead of forming a local Labor party, and the referring of the resolution to the rank and file of the membership for a referendum vote for final endorsement. Delegates from two unions, engineers, and auto mechanics, had gone on record as unanimously favoring the committee's recommendation.

Labor Must Get into Politics

"The labor movement must get into politics," said Sam Sadler. "I have been a member of organized labor 24 years and of the Socialist party 18 years. I never have and never will ask you to join the Socialist party. You must understand its principles before I would ask you to join. If your idea of going into politics is to get a few political jobs, stay out of the Socialist party. If, however, you are for the working class getting control of the powers of government for the benefit of the emancipation of the working class from the wage system, your interests are with the Socialist party. But don't endorse it unless you understand it."

The resolution was indorsed by practically unanimous vote and referred to the membership.

OWNERSHIP OF TOOLS

By Eugene V. Debs

You have made all the marvelous machines, and now your employment, your very lives, depend upon your having access to them. But these used by labor, are not owned by labor large-grown tools, made by labor and bor in the capitalistic system, but belong to a capitalist, or group of capitalists, who live in New York or some other remote point, and when it suits their pleasure they can order their factories closed and you workingmen locked out, without consulting you and without a moment's warning. You have not a word to say.

At such a time it is useless for you to leave here and look for work elsewhere, for when this mill closes down, so do others. You are out of employment and you begin to suffer, and most of you don't know what the trouble is. You only know that you are no longer wanted at the mill; that workers are a drug on the market. With these wonderful tools with which you now work, every few years you have produced so much that all the markets at home and abroad are glutted, and the capitalists cannot sell what you have produced in such abundance, and FOUR—Soco so they stop their machinery, shut up their mills, lock out their "hands" and paralyze industry, and there you are, idle, helpless, hungry, hopeless, desperate.

And these conditions will come upon you and become worse, no matter how well you are organized in your several trade unions; and this will continue as long as you workingmen allow the the idle capitalists to own and control the tools of industry.

Has it ever occurred to you workingmen that, if you could make these tools and use them, you also can own them and produce wealth in plenty for yourselves?

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM, LET'S STUDY IT

tion as a useful body when the machine age arose.

Skilled mechanics are only hands now, in the ranks of the unskilled workers or in the unemployed army. We see wage scales and contracts expire at different dates, causing one set of workers to be on strike and others wroking in the same shop of the industry. How can we win or emancipate ourselves that way? Instead of that form of unionism we must organize along the lines of industrial unionism. Let the trades unions organize in the industry in which they are employed, known as a branch to the central body of industry. Let each trade branch elect a delegate to the central body of the industry they are employed in and present the demands of their branch to the central body of delegates by their delegates. That is everyone is organized and no wage scales or contracts expire at different dates. Instead of one branch quiting and others working, it will be that if one has a grievance all have, and then a complete tie-up.

Then, comrades, organize the other industries, namely, mining, transportation, agriculture and public service industries, then the system of capitalism will be helpless, as we can tie up the entire industrial field by job control. Then first abolish international unions and high salaried labor fakers. Put in as delegates men or women who work. Not sit in easy chairs and dine and wine with Wall street sharks. You can see the results. When you are the controllers of your jobs, then the society of capitalism will not have even an apex to rest on. Get together on the same lines. Read up. Think it over. Make yourself a committee to advocate it in your trade union halls, also talk it over with your sisters and brothers on the job. Get literature. Give it out. Let's try our hand to swing it.

We spend three hours a year to vote and the rest of the hours we slave in hell holes. What account are the laws for the workers today? Make your laws in union industrial halls. Stand and stick for it. Make dues and initiations so low any slave can get in, as we are not capitalists. Line up in the Socialist Party also, and go after the system and use the same tactics our masters use to regulate the political and industrial end of their so-called divine rights, and just control the whole system and institute a world safe for all. Yours for industrial freedom.

CAPITALISM'S IMPERIALISTIC PEACE

Manifesto Published by the British Labor Party.

The national executive committee of the British Labor party considers that the published summary of the peace treaty in some essential particulars is opposed to the declarations of President Wilson, the inter-Allied conferences and the Berne conference; is very defective from the standpoint of world peace, and bears evidence of compromise influenced by capitalist imperialism which still dominates the European states.

In so far as organized labor was not represented in the peace congress which drafted the treaty, and as its general spirit does not conform to the working-class conception of a peace of justice and right, we can accept no responsibility for the violations of principle involved in the settlement.

Therefore, look to the people and to the forces of organized democracy to safeguard and develop the idea of a peaceable community of all nations.

Only under the influence of the working-class movement, organized in the international, can the imperfections of the present treaty be completely eradicated and its provisions adapted by the League of Nations to the requirements of a changing European order.

As the war was in part the product of frustrated colonial ambitions, and the treaty makes no provision for equality of trade conditions for all the nations consenting to the peace, any permanent denial to Germany of the opportunity to become a mandatory under the League of Nations must be a cause of jealousy and unrest, leading to further international strife, whilst the increase of colonial territories under Allied control will involve a corresponding increase of naval, military, and administrative burdens upon the Allied peoples.

That Germany should make reparation and pay compensation for damage done to civilian life and property by land, by sea, and from the air, cannot be questioned, but we are of the opinion that she ought to have representation on the Reparation Commission, and the total compensation she will be required to pay should have regard to her obligation to meet the needs of her own population.

We regret that the treaty, which imposes a drastic measure of disarmament upon Germany, does not include provision for progressive limitation of the armaments of the other signatories of the treaty, with the object of finally arriving at a general total disarmament.

While agreeing that France should have specific rights of pre-emption over the product of the coal mines until her own resources have been reorganized, we protest against any attempt at permanent separation of the Saar territory from the German state, and regard as objectionable the particular form of political and economic control set up by the treaty.

In order that her claims to these provinces may be confirmed, and a long-standing dispute finally removed from the common life of Europe, we hope that France will agree to a consultation of the population of Alsace-Lorraine under the League of Nations.

To prevent the creation of another Alsace-Lorraine a plebiscite under the League of Nations, should be taken in Malmedy and the other contested territory between Belgium and Germany before the renunciation of sovereignty by Germany, rather than that the inhabitants should be left to appeal to the League of Nations against the action of the Allies.

We welcome the application of the plebiscite to the southern and eastern districts of East Prussia, but regret that this principle had not been observed in the delimitation of the Polish-German and Czecho-Slovak frontiers.

In accordance with the principle of self-determination, the people of German Austria should have the free and unrestricted right to decide for themelves whether they will become one of the federal states of Germany or remain independent; any other solution would be an act of injustice and repression of national impulses that may imperil the peace of Europe.

edge of technique. In the largest terms, these intermediaries, under strict party discipline, serve as special propagandists of the social revolution.

(e) To keep in the foreground our consistent appeal for proletarian revolution; and to analyze the counter-proposals and reformist palliatives in their true light of evasions of the issue and, in their impotence, the provocation to violence; recognizing at all times the characteristic developments of the class conflict as applicable to all capitalist nations.

(f) To propagandize the party organization as the organ of contact with the revolutionary proletariat of other lands, the basis for international association being the same political understanding and the common plan of action, tending toward increasing unity in detail as the international crisis develops.

6—Socialist platforms, proceeding on the basis of the class struggle, and recognizing that the socialist movement has come into the historical period of the social revolution, can contain the single demand for the dictatorship of the proletariat.

(a) The basis of this demand should be thoroughly explained in the economic, political and social analysis of the class struggle, as evolving within the system of capitalism.

(b) The implications of this demand should be illustrated by the first steps and general modes of social reconstruction dependent upon and involved within the proletarian domination of the political life of the nation.

(c) A municipal platform of socialism cannot proceed on a separate basis, but must conform to the general platform, simply relating the attainment of local power to the immediate goal of gaining national power. There are no city problems within the terms of the class struggle, only the one problem of capitalist versus proletarian domination.

7—We realize that the coming of social revolution depends on an overwhelming assertion of mass power by the proletariat, taking on political consciousness and the definite direction of revolutionary socialism. The manifestations of this power and consciousness are not subject to precise pre-calculation. But the history of the movement of the proletariat toward emancipation since 1900 shows the close connection between the revolutionary proletarian assertion and the political mass strike.

The mass action conception looks to the general unity of the proletarian forces under revolutionary provocation and stimulus. In the preliminary stages, which alone come within our pre-determination and party initiative, the tactics of mass action includes all mass demonstrations and mass struggles which sharpen the understanding of the proletariat as to the class conflict and which separate the revolutionary proletariat into a group distinct from all others.

Mass action, in time of revolutionary crisis, or in the analogous case of large-scale industrial conflict, naturally accepts the council form of organization for its expression over a continued period of time.

8—Applying our declarations on party principle to the organization of the party itself: and realizing the need, in correspondence with the highly centralized capitalistic power to be combated, of a centralized party organization, we offer the following recommendations:

(a) Delegation by the National Executive committee of a large measure of its administrative power between intervals of meetings to a National Emergency committee, composed of three or more members of the National Executive committee; this emergency committee to maintain the closest possible contact with the work of the national office and to advise with the executive secretary on all matters where consultation is necessary.

(b) [illegible] ed to public office; the Emergency committee and the National, State and County committees to co-operate with the public officers within their respective jurisdictions; immediate expulsion of all public officials who refuse to accept the decisions of the party.

(c) Control by the party membership, through the regular party processes, of all party papers and official publications; not by committees or trustees not responsible to the membership.

(d) Like control of all party property, such as offices, halls, etc.

(e) Like control of officially recognized educational institutions.

(f) Establishment of a Central Lecture bureau, and of a Press and Information bureau.

(g) Standardization of party platforms, propaganda, dues, and methods of organization.

She was refused the privilege of seeing him, being told that one visitor had already visited Comrade Debs.

BERKMAN OUT OF "HOLE."

Alexander Berkman, philosophical anarchist, and associate of Emma Goldman in the publication of Mother Earth, one of the largest of the anarchist publications of this country, is confined at Atlanta, serving a two-year sentence for alleged anti-government activities. Berkman has for some time been confined in the "hole," the dark steel cell reserved for disobedient prisoners. Confined with him in the punishment cell were Hirshberg and Randolph, two I. W. W.'s, who are serving long sentences. These prisoners are now released from punishment and placed in "second grade," which means that they are allowed to write letters but every two weeks instead of weekly, and cannot visit the prison movies nor attend prison ball games. Berkman's sentence will expire in about four months. Berkman, Hirshberger and Randolph are associated with Debs in the clothing department. Berkman's former associate, Emma Goldman, is confined at the state prison at Jefferson City, Mo., where Kate Richards O'Hare is serving a five-year sentence.

Ohio Socialist Convention Makes Party History

Endorses Left Wing Program and Instructs Delegates To the National Convention To Work for Its Adoption by That Body.

No more instructive convention was ever held by the Socialist Party of Ohio than that which convened June 27 at Socialist hall, Cincinnati. The debates gave evidence of great progress in Socialist thought within the year and the average intelligence of the delegates attending is a credit to the Ohio movement. This does not mean that there is no room for improvement. It means that improvement has taken place "since last we met" and that is a sure sign that we are neither of the "stand pat" variety of Socialists nor yet of the "back up" kind.

The Cincinnati comrades had the arrangements well in hand. Lotta Burke, Otto Rucktaeschel, Otto Hoefer and many others whose names we have for the time forgotten, did duty as Jimmy Higgins' during all sessions and no demand made upon them was too small or too large to fulfill. For this the convention and the party expresses its appreciation. The Cincinnati comrades have an ideal headquarters and many delegates voiced the wish that their city were as fortunate in this regard.

The convention was opened by State Secretary Alfred Wagenknecht at 10:05 a. m. on June 27th. C. E. Ruthenberg was elected chairman for the first day. Lawrence A. Zitt was elected chairman for the second day. Carl Hacker and John Fromholtz acted as secretaries. All these comrades were Cleveland delegates.

Committees on Program and Municipal Platform, Constitution, Resolutions, Officers' Reports and Audit and Organization and Propaganda were elected in short order, whereupon the convention adjourned for several hours to give the committees time to do their work.

The greatest dispatch and efficiency marked the actions of the convention. The discussions were to the point and the absence of tactics more or less dilatory, which comrades sometimes have a habit of indulging in saved much time.

Succeeding the report of the state secretary, which was printed in last week's Ohio Socialist, came the report of the Committee on Program and Municipal Platform. This committee reported the Left Wing Program as it appeared in last week's issue of this paper as the program of the party, as a program to govern its actions. It is not meant, nor for that matter is any Left Wing Program so far adopted meant to constitute a Socialist Party platform. The program is a criticism of past party tactics and a statement of changes which are essential if we are ever to function as the party of the working class.

An entire evening was given to debate upon the Left Wing Program with the result that when the vote was taken 47 favored it and only 7 opposed it, three or four of those voting in the negative only because so instructed by their locals. Ohio delegates to the National Emergency Convention are, according to a motion passed, instructed to vote for this program and work for its adoption.

This same committee also submitted a resolution severely condemning the actions of the National Executive Committee in expelling and suspending the Socialist Party of Michigan and seven language federations. Subsequently the committee reported a municipal platform, to be used by all locals in Ohio placing municipal tickets in the field. Both the resolution and the municipal platform will be found in the minutes of the convention printed upon another page.

The Committee on Constitution gave the state constitution of the party a more thorough overhauling than it has had for years. Much useless lumber was removed and several radical changes were made. The provision for a state committee was stricken from the constitution as were the provisions for a legal state committee and a legal state executive committee and the state secre-

INDEPENDENT SOCIALISTS JOIN MOSCOW REDS

Stockholm, June 16.—The Congress of Independent Socialists voted yesterday, 186 to 22, to join the "Third Internationale of Moscow," and adopted resolutions favoring Bolshevist measures, such as the placing of production control in the hands of laborers, and to effect a revolution, that workers must be armed and the bourgeoisie unarmed.

The parliamentary members of the party vainly protested against the resolution and gave warning against any attempt at a proletarian dictatorship.

It is expected that the humanitarian wing of the party, representing all the Independent Socialist members of the Swedish Parliament, will secede from the organization.

Out of the Night

Comrade Theodore Debs, brother of 'Gene, requests the publication of the following poem with the remark, "It cannot be printed too often."

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever Gods there be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not winced or cried aloud;
Under the bludgeinings of chance,
My head is bloody but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears,
Looms but the horror of the shade;
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll,
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul.

—William Ernest Henley.

Out of the night of a prison cell, staunch and true to the noblest cause in the world's tragic history, comes the voice of a genius among men. Punished for speaking for justice, condemned for living the dictates of his beautiful soul, he stands erect under the bitter punishment of the system that robs humanity of its most precious heritage. The terrors of confinement in a man made jail cannot dampen the burning spirit of 'Gene Debs, nor silence the lips that give expression to a noble soul.

It was not alone the tools of capitalism that cast the body of Our 'Gene into the cold, damp cells of a living hell, nor are they alone responsible for the fact that he still remains there. The voice of Labor must and shall be heard as it confesses it weakness and ungrateful spirit, and starts to undo the great wrong that cast their one best friend into a prison cell because he dared to speak of their cause. Awake, ye workers, and sound the call for the freedom of our comrade.

REAL ANARCHISTS STILL AT LARGE

By J'Accuse

God grant that this epistle serve as an instrument to fan to a burning flame once more the fires of true patriotism within the breasts of America's workmen soldiers and farmers, that the idea of government of, by, and for the people shall not perish from the public mind!

Free men and women of America, imagine your sad fate under a terrorist reign of anarchy such as was never before witnessed in the world in which we live! Behold the anarchist strutting about, clothed in the robes of officialdom; ruling the constitution out as being unconstitutional; tearing to shreds the American declaration of Independence; libeling Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and the human element for the sake of whom our forefathers laid down their lives! A contrast indeed that should impel one to action.

At the same time that the American mother offered her all, or her only son, to be sacrificed if need by on the field of battle, American capitalists were taking advantage of abnormal conditions to fill to overflowing the vaults that already budged under the weight of their ill-gotten treasure The capitalist gave nothing, and lent of his treasure only when he was promised the full return of his money with a considerable sum in interest besides. In that supreme hour of trial, the imperialist and the militarist entered into a contemptible con-

WAGE INCREASES STAY BIG STRIKE

On July 1, Chicago faced the biggest proposition ever met with in the way of averting a big strike of the city employes. What with all city employes, from police and firemen down (or up) to laborers on the streets with city hall employes thrown in, the city council was forced to vote hundreds of dollars in increases to yearly salaries in order to keep the city government functioning.

Voting to "resign en masse" on July 4, unless their demands of $500 increase in wages were granted, city firemen threw down the gage of battle. Policemen, too, were among the disgruntled ones. They too demanded sufficient in the way of increased wages to meet the constantly rising

LABOR TO DOMINATE INDIAN RE-ADJUSTMENT

By. Dr. N. S. Hardiker

Whatever British demagogues may have to say and do with regard to the future government of India, the voice of the Indian labor world only will be the decisive factor in the adjustments that have to be made. Mass movements throughout the country that have come into existence, as seen in strikes, demonstrations, and the sacrifices in men and material readily made by the workers indicate the potentiality of the Indian proletariat to dominate in the working out of their future.

Apart from the fact that labor in that country has awakened with a close consciousness, however feeble, the people of India have an inherent aptitude to establish a government of

BOLSHEVIKI CLUB BOOSTS PRESS FUND.

Editor Ohio Socialist.

Dear Comrade: We, the little Bolsheviki club of Ringo, Kan., at our regular meeting have decided that they did right in throwing our paper out of the capitalist press, that is a good lesson for us, that's what we are learning now. When we are men we will control the press of the world and crush the rotten system of today.

We have a club of eight members now and we want our names to appear in that Kiddies Korner. We are sending $1.00 to help buy the new press. We would like to send more but just now we haven't much on hand. To keep up our club and our dues paid, this is what we do to get our nickels and dimes. We pick junk and sell to the rag man, we run errands, do chores or anything to earn a nickel (except sell capitalist papers), so if we can, will send a little more next time. We want to put in as much time as we can until July 4th, then we are going to strike to free Debs. That's one man we can never forget. Wish we could help him.

These are the names of the boys in Bolsheviki club:

Joie Skubitz, Leader.
Thomas Bell.
Armor Boudouk.

NEARLY $1,000 SUBSCRIBED AT OUR STATE PICNIC: ALL RECORDS BROKEN!

You ought to have been there!

It was undoubtedly the most welcome surprise the Socialists attending the State picnic of the Socialist Party of Ohio ever had.

Picture to yourself an audience gathered about a platform in the shade of trees at Coney Island, ten miles up the Ohio river from Cincinnati, listening attentively to speeches by Marguerite Prevey, C. E. Ruthenberg and Chas. Baker. Applause tremendous. Enthusiasm boundless.

Chas. Baker in his speech gives most convincing argument for the need of a Socialist party owned printing plant. He tells how the Ohio Socialist was thrown out upon the streets in Cleveland without so much as an hour's notice to secure a new printer. He continues by telling how a thorough canvass of the city revealed the fact that a conspiracy between capitalist printers existed and how one and all refused to publish the Ohio Socialist.

He goes on to tell that we were compelled to go to Dayton to get our paper printed and that the immediate present need, the greatest need of the party RIGHT NOW is a party owned printing plant.

Then the state secretary, who acted as chairman of the meeting, took off his coat and stepped forward. Fifty dollars had been subscribed toward the printing plant fund by Scott Wilkins and he told about it and showed the fifty. He asked the audience if there were any present who would match the fifty. Lo and behold, in the twinkling of an eye Geo. Bundy of Warren wrote a check for fifty and handed it to the chairman.

The chairman next called for pledges of twenty dollars. No more than announced but Socialists hailing from all parts of the state stepped forward to give their names and addresses, agreeing to pay twenty dollars towards the fund which will free us from depending upon our enemy for service in getting out the largest party owned weekly Socialist paper in the United States of America.

A total of $337 was pledged.

The chairman then made a call for cash contributions of $10 each and right here is where the surprise made its beginning. From all parts of the audience Socialists and sympathizers came forward, holding ten spots in their hands and depositing them with the chairman. These comrades knew the need of the hour. Knowing the need, like all true Socialists, they backed up their knowledge by action, by money—and money means action. Ten dollar bills rained onto the platform from all directions and all were astonished to find so many ten dollar bills in a working class audience.

Next came the call for $5 contributions. If it rained ten spots, it poured five spots. The fives came until everybody was sure that most of the audience had drained their pockets of every bit of money needed for the following week's keep. The chairman had to grab the money with both hands and then he had to call for help. Checks of many odd denominations were contributed.

And the end was not yet. If it rained ten spots and poured five spots, then how can we describe the avalanche of one dollar bils which were showered onto the platform. Chas. Baker and Marguerite Prevey had to be requisitioned to help take the money. Soon the table was actually covered with the greenbacks, piled a foot and a half high, and still the giving continued. The chairman talked himself clean out of voice, thanking the contributors. Baker had to take his place. The stream of dollars continued to flow platformward. Women gave, men gave, even children gave. They gave with a spirit never before apparent. They knew that giving money meant winning the world. They meant to win the world.

When the pile of money was counted it was found that nearly $1,000 in pledges and cash had been contributed. The cash contributions amounted to exactly $501.86.

All this happened Sunday, June 29, at the state picnic of the Socialist Party of Ohio.

And now, how about you?

What are you going to do, you comrades who have not yet helped in raising this ten thousand dollars for a printing press and plant for the Ohio Socialist?

If you had seen the smiles upon the faces of the hundreds of generous hearted comrades when they waved their one, two, five, ten and twenty dollar bills in the air and shouted, "buy the press" at the State picnic, we know what you would do. You, too, would find yourself filled with the spirit of co-operation and comradeship. You, too, would be anxious to part with a dollar or two, or five or ten for the best and greatest cause that ever inspired the workers to a fulfillment of our duty to our class.

That's what you would do, and we believe that is what you are going to do. And we believe you are going to do it right away, too.

Fact is, we know you are, because you are Socialists, because you believe in the working class, because you are looking ahead into the glorious future of labor; that's why you are going to help us get our own press for our own paper. That's why. Let the dollars roll in!

Below are the names of comrades who have contributed to the press fund this week:

RESOLUTION ON PARTY CONTROVERSY.

The National Executive Committee of the party has expelled from the party the Socialist Party of Michigan and suspended the Russian, Lithuanian, Ukranian, Hungarian, South Slavic and Polish Federations and is threatening with expulsion the Socialist Party of Massachusetts, and the Socialist Party of New York has expelled or "reorganized" many of the branches of the locals of greater New York as well as locals Buffalo, Rochester and other locals. All these expulsions or suspensions have taken place because the party units in question have endorsed the Revolutionary Socialism of the Left Wing. They represent a desperate effort on the part of the repudiated national officers of the party and their satellites in similar positions in state and local organizations, to maintain their control of the party in spite of the will of the rank and file, expressed in party referendum.

In order to excuse their expulsion of nearly half the membership of the party and their effort to sabotage the membership by refusing to tabulate the vote in the national party referendums which expressed the will of the rank and file, these discredited and repudiated leaders are carrying on a campaign of villification against the Left Wing, even stooping so low as to act as agent provacateurs for the capitalist class by making insinuations that the Left Wing Socialists might be guilty of individual acts of terrorism, and have trumped up charges which have no basis in fact, about irregularities in the conduct of the national referendums.

We look upon these acts of the national officers of the party as a clear violation of the trust placed in them by the party membership and upon the expulsions and suspensions as acts born of desperation on the part of officials and "leaders" who are unable or unwilling to see that in the present world crisis the party must adapt itself to revolutionary conditions of the struggle of the proletariat, and whose leadership the rank and file of the part will no longer follow.

Be it resolved, that, in view of these events, the Socialist Party of Ohio instruct its delegates to the Emergency National Convention, that should the Emergency National convention refuse to seat the delegates from the expelled and suspended sections of the party and the Right Wing party officials, with the possible help of the agents of the police power of the capitalist state, control the Emergency National convention, that the delegates from Ohio shall withdraw from the convention and affiliate with the convention called for September 1, to organize a new party, and should the Emergency National convention be delayed then the Ohio delegates shall participate in the convention called September 1, for the organization of a new party, and be it further

Resolved, that in the event of the organization of a new party under the circumstances stated above, then the State Office shall function in harmony with the new organization and affiliate with it. Should the Socialist Party of Ohio be expelled from the Socialist Party of the United States, then the State Office shall immediately begin purchasing dues stamps from the National Council of the Left Wing.

Delegate Bundy of the committee requested to be reported as not voting upon the resolution.

Motion that the resolution as submitted by the committee be adopted. Carried.

Committee read its report upon Municipal Platform for the Socialist Party.

Motion carried that program be separated from platform and considered seriatum.

Motion carried F. J. Catlin be seated as an alternate in place of Jos. Coope.

After amendments the following municipal platform was adopted:

MUNICIPAL PLATFORM OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The people of the civilized countries of the world are passing through the darkest period in world history. Following the bloody climax of capitalism in which millions of lives were sacrificed and other millions of human beings crippled and maimed and billions of wealth destroyed, there has come a period of famine and misery in Europe and general disorganization of all the productive powers of mankind.

The world war which has brought so much suffering and misery into the world, was the direct product of the system of production which prevailed in all the capitalist countries.

In each country the workers were exploited by a capitalist class which controlled the machinery of production and distribution. The workers toiled long and hard and the capitalists appropriated as their own the bulk of what the workers produced. This system of exploitation is the basis of the insolulable problems of capitalism. The exploited workers could not purchase the commodities they brought into existence and the capitalists were compelled to enter the world struggle for markets. The huge profits built up great resources of new capital for which they sought investment, thus bringing into existence the struggle of finance capitalism for the control of the undeveloped countries of the world, colonies and spheres of influence.

It was this system of exploitation that was fundamentally the cause of the jealousies and conflicts between the struggling capitalists, which finally precipitated the world war.

The world war has not harmonized the opposing interests of the exploiters and exploited; the world war has not solved any of these problems of capitalism. Out of the war there has emerged a financial imperialism more securely enthroned than ever before. The boasted democracy has not only not been achieved, but instead the blackest reaction rules over the world. In place of democratising society the bourgeoisie rules undisputed in all sections of the capitalist world. Capitalist society at the present time is but a world wide tyranny in which all opposition to the financial oligarchy is ruthlessly suppressed by the power of the state. The bourgeoise state is nothing more than a form to mislead the working class. The legislatures have no significance. They receive their orders from the finance oligarchy, and if they pass laws contrary to these orders the laws are ignored. They serve merely to give the government of the finance oligarchy the appearance of democracy and to vote the budgets which enable this oligarchy to carry out its schemes of financial imperialism.

Financial imperialism is subjugating peoples and governments to its will and is sacrificing the well-being and happiness of mankind to its greed for greater and greater profits. It seeks more and more avenues of investments, more and more spheres of influence and "mandatories." It is endeavoring to harmonize its conflicting national interests through the League of Nations, but this mockery of the spirit of internationalism cannot prevent the bitter conflicts engendered in the struggle for profits between the national groups of capitalists, and irrespective of and even contrary to the wishes of the capitalists themselves the stage is being set for another era of capitalist conflict, which cannot end otherwise than in another dance of death and the general massacre of the peoples of the earth.

It is the exploitation of the workers upon which the capitalist system rests. It is because the workers are wage-slaves who receive for their labor-power only a small part of what their labor produces that financial imperialism exists in the world.

If the world is to be saved from another cataclysm such as that which almost drowned civilization in the blood of its people, it must be done through the abolition of wage-slavery and exploitation.

This system does not only expose all of society to the evils and dangers described above, but within each capitalist nation the exploitation of the workers results in wages which hardly enable the workers to secure the necessities for an existence. The result is poverty, misery, child labor, the exploitation of women, prostitution, great industrial conflicts, all of which are characteristics of the present capitalist society.

The abolition of wage-slavery and the exploitation of the workers can only be accomplished through the workers wresting control of the industries from the capitalists and establishing the social ownership and workers control of industry. This is the mission of the working class.

The first step in the achievement of this goal is the conquest by the working class of control of the power of the state and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

This dictatorship of the proletariat does not mean the domination of the few, but means that in place of the few capitalists controlling the government and using its powers in the interest of the capitalists, the workers will take control of and dominate the state machinery, changing its form so as to best suit their purpose, and will use the state power to take control of the industries from the capitalists and socialize the industries and establish the workers control—the industrial democracy through which alone the workers can win their emancipation.

The Socialist Party looks upon every political campaign as a phase of the working class struggle for power. It recognizes that the problems of capitalism cannot be solved in one community, but must be solved through the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The Socialist Party enters the municipal campaign because this campaign affords the opportunity for the work of organization and propaganda that will eventually win the emancipation of the workers.

Should the Socialist Party candidates be elected to office they will fight for every measure that will strengthen the position of the working class and fight against every measure that threatens the working class.

The Socialists elected to office will use their special position to carry on a propaganda for the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship as the only means through which the emancipation of the workers can be won. They will analyze the laws proposed by the capitalists and their agents and through such analysis and criticism show the impossibility of solving the problems of capitalism short of the abolition of the entire system.

It will be the duty of the Socialists elected to office to agitate for organization of the workers in the industries, particularly those under the control of the municipality, so as to prepare the workers to transform the municipal industries from experiments in municipal capitalism to industrial democracies in which the workers will manage the industries.

The Socialists view the present as the period of the dissolution and collapse of the whole world system of capitalism, which will mean the collapse of world culture if capitalism, with its unsolvable contradictions, is not replaced by Socialism.

It calls upon the workers to unite and through their collective power to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat for the transformation of capitalism to socialism. This is the historic mission of the workers of the world. It is the only road that leads to a better and happier world.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON OFFICERS' REPORT AND AUDIT.

Comrade Delegates.

The undersigned committee has undertaken the audit of the report of our State Secretary and wishes to report on its work as follows:

First scope of the work.

It is understood that the committee did not undertake a detailed audit of the books of the State Secretary, which would be an impossible task to perform during the time the convention is in session and would be also superfluous as it is the duty of the executive committee to check all receipts and checks issued against the book entries. We have, however, checked receipts and expenses for the past three months and have found them correct with the exception of a few clerical errors, which do not affect the final result and can be easily adjusted.

Our main effort was directed toward examining the report of the secretary and analyze same in such manner as to present to you in figures a detailed statement of the result of the last year's work and we present same in our Exhibits A and Exhibit B.

Exhibit A.

This statement gives the detail of the sources of income and the cost of obtaining same, the surplus remaining and the expenses of conducting the work of the state office and conforms in general with the statements made by the secretary in his report. However we wish to call your attention that the surplus of the Ohio Socialist mentioned by the state secretary can only be taken as such if the cost of editing the paper is not charged against same. The item of salary includes payment to Comrade Allison of a weekly salary of $30, whose time is spent largely in work for the Ohio Socialist and if this item is charged against the cost of getting out the paper, as it should be, the result would be a deficit of approximately eight hundred dollars. This does not take into consideration the cost of filling the unexpired subscriptions, which naturally will be considerable, but cannot be estimated in advance.

We also differ with the secretary in refrence to the results of the literature sales. He states that the literature sales were gratifying, but were without profits. We find that the literature sales this year were $772.08 less than last year, but showed an income above cost of $319.16. This shows that there was some profit derived from the sale of literature, providing that the stock on hand has not materially decreased but that the sales have dwindled by nearly 50 per cent. This is of course the opposite result which we want to achieve. The committee recollects that at the last state convention the secretary was instructed to inaugurate a special literature department and it seems from this result that this instruction was not followed. Some action should be taken by the convention to insure the better and more general circulation of literature even if this department should be conducted at a considerable loss. We also wish to call your attention to the large profits shown from sales of supplies, on the sales of only $248.21, which seems that the secretary is guilty of profiteering by the sale of supplies.

Exhibit B.

Report to Organization Committee.

This statement shows the average membership during the past year. You will note that, while we initiated 5,147 members during the year our actual membership has decreased. The sales of due stamps having decreased by $787.99 during the past year. Only the foreign branches have a slight increase of $43.68. All other activities have decreased.

This of course is due mostly to the strenuous times we have gone through during the past year and it seems that the committee can only commend the wonderful work done by the state office, which in spite of prosecution and enormous difficulties has succeeded in keeping the organization intact to this degree.

While the general activities have decreased to some extent the income and the financial condition have greatly improved, which is due to the increased subscription income of the Ohio Socialist (7,520.18) income from sale of industrial certificates and Debs defense fund, which is again proof of the highly efficient work done by the State Office.

In conclusion we wish to point out that we can not agree with Comrade Wagenknecht when he estimates the financial value of the Ohio Socialist at $10,000. The Ohio Socialist is an instrument of propaganda, is not and should not be conducted at a profit and while its value to the movement is immense, it cannot be stated in dollars and cents and any attempt to do so would be simply erroneous.

We also wish to state that we did not receive a report of the activities of Comrade Baker, his expenses and receipts and think a report of this kind should be submitted.

Motion carried that this be laid over until report of Resolutions Committee is heard.

Report of Resolutions Committee was next declared in order. Delegate Prevey reported for this committee as follows:

Resolution No. 1.

Industrial and Political Prisoners.

While the organs of American capitalists are shouting about making the world safe for democracy in America itself, democracy is being assassinated by methods unheard of under the czaristic regime of Russia, or by Prussian militarism in Germany.

The present American laws against free speech, free press and free assemblage are much worse than the Russian laws a century ago.

Debs, Haywood, Kate O'Hare, Mooney and thousands of other members of the working class are languishing in prisons under most barbaric sentences of ten to twenty years, while the government is preparing to imprison thousands of others, who are defending the rights and interests of the working class.

No agent of capitalism is being interfered within his rights of free speech and free press, or assemblage.

This proves that the present government and all the state institutions are the organs of capitalism.

Therefore, be it resolved by the convention of the State of Ohio, that we call upon the workers of America to fight for their economic interests and political rights by means of united proletarian mass action.

Liberate your political and industrial prisoners of your class by political general strikes and demonstrations. Assert your rights of free speech and assemblage by defying the violent forces of the capitalist class through unified class conscious organizations both politically and industrially.

Motion carried that this resolution be adopted.

Resolution No. 2.

Unemployment.

Whereas, unemployment in the United States of America has reached alarming proportions, millions of men and women discharged from munition works, being thrown upon the streets from all industries, face to face with destitution and starvation, awhile the wages of the rest of the workers are lower and endangered.

Whereas, this condition of misery and suffering is a direct result of the capitalist system of production for profit, but not for human needs, the result of "overwork" and underpay.

Therefore, be it resolved by the convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, that the overthrow of capitalism is the only way to abolish unemployment.

That we give our unreserved [illegible]

A WHINE FROM A WHIPPED PUP.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer whines in real puppie fashion in a recent issue because Kolchak, whom the allies have picked to do the work of restoring Russia to capitalism, has not as yet come up to expectations in "putting down Bolshevism."

When the capitalist press of today is read by historians a few years from now, the criminal shortsightedness of its writers will be a source of astonishment. While the capitalist press continues to shout panically for a "putting down of Bolshevism," it refuses to see the effects in Europe of the carrying out of the tactics which it so much desires to see continued wherever the workers raise the standard of industrial democracy. Probably more editorial brains have been prostituted to the purposes of criminal capitalism in this respect than in any other cause of equal magnitude. Failing in their propaganda to keep American forces at war in an undeclared war against the workingmen's government of Russia, it hastens to lend all possible assistance to the projected policies of the allies to furnish provisions and war munitions to the anti-Bolshevik forces under Kolchak.

Because Kolchak has so far failed to make even the slightest success against the Red army, the Plain Dealer whines pitifully at the loss of time and the passing fighting season in Siberia. It is truly heartrending that capitalism must perish from the earth. We feel most sorry for the capitalist editors, for they will surely have to serve an honest cause in the near future. And we know how hard it will go with them after years of boot-licking and pandering and pimping for their masters.

Give the Red army and the Russian workers a favorable harvest and no power on earth can stop the fulfillment of the revolution in Russia.

Attempts to stop it by the furnishing of munitions and supplies to Kolchak not only binds the Russian workers closer together but makes for revolution in other lands. The forces of revolution are at large in the world. Whatever capitalism resorts to to quell them only brings the day nearer when the dictatorship of the proletariat will be established.

SHADOWS.

If there is any truth in the old adage that coming events cast their shadows before, then dark indeed is the future of capitalism as forecast by the week's news from Italy and Germany.

That the question of obtaining food has reached the most critical stage in Italy is assured by the recent riots which occurred in several cities. Plundering and pillaging, the capitalist press calls the wholesale requisitioning of food supplies which the workers resorted to in order to secure the necessary food to keep soul and body together.

However the thoroughness with which the shops were divested of their contents and the fact that the food was not carried away to the workers homes, but instead was taken to the Labor Temples and there sold at prices which the people could pay, looks more like an act of just retribution than outright looting. That the people have resorted to this method proves not only the seriousness of the food crisis, but also that the workers are aware of the means by which they, as organized bodies of men and women can obtain relief. They simply have ventured upon a proletarian dictatorship regarding the food supplies in so far as supplying themselves.

From a dictatorship over food to a dictatorship over factories is but a step and a logical one at that. That such a dictatorship is comparatively near in Italy is a safe bet.

All the news from Germany tells the story of the imminent downfall of the new German government and its overthrow by the Independents. Hugo Haase calls for the dictatorship of the proletariat with an openness that marks the strength of his backers. That some such test of the strength of the present German government is to come about in the very near future is apparent and is forecast by all observers of European events.

Bela Kuhn has not yet fallen. In spite of counter revolutions by the bourgeoise of Hungary, he continues in keeping the soviet government in power. While the food situation in all Europe is terrible, the working class realize that this is so not because the bourgeois have been dethroned but is a result of the war and the mismanagement of the nations and the peoples by the former ruling class. It is to forever put an end to such possibilities again arising that the workers are determined to conquer the political and economic power over all opposition forces. For this reason the dictatorship of the proletariat is the weapon used.

The revolution grows and with the demand for the dictatorship of the workers.

spiracy to take advantage of suffering and bleeding humanity to gain control of the commerce of the world through the channels of trade. Freedom of expression was denied those leaders of the people who criticised these traitors! The high walls of jails and penitentiaries throughout the land are bulging today under the pressure of these martyrs of the people's cause who are crowded and jammed into these places of confinement, even as the treasure vaults of their persecutors bulge under the weight of their contents. Unmindful of the public interest, profiteers have grasped every opportunity to take advantage of existing conditions, to profit from disadvantages of those who remained at their work in America, and also through poisoning the rations of those who fought upon the battlefields, while the world war for democracy was in progress. The misery of their victims will never be known. That misery was in many instances carried by the victim to the grave, where for the most part it willl sleep forever, undisturbed.

In the name of humanity I accuse these anarchistic, capitalistic, imperialistic, militaristic profiteers and brand them with the stamp of traitors to a free government.

It is time the people were taking the reigns of government out of the hands of these anarchists. It is time to restore the republic. It is time to re-establish constitutional government on this side of the Atlantic; time to subscribe anew to the principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence; time to participate in the elections en masse and return a vote of confidence in Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and humanity.

It is time the prison gates of the country were swung open to allow interned martyrs of the people's cause to step out into the open air and freedom, and to permit their return to home and fireside and to the pursuit of their former vocations.

Down with the capitalistic, imperialistic, [illegible] profiteer!

How the English Inquisition Acts

The question is not academic in England just at this moment. The activities of our New Holy Office in the suppression of subversive doctrine are not generally known. Here is a story which illustrates their character. An English girl, on arrival from America at Liverpool, found herself compelled to go before the political inquisitor and answer as to her opinions, political and religious, and her associations in America. She was stripped, her clothes examined, the linings torn out and finally her skin was scrubbed with hot towels in order to reveal invisible ink messages.

And this not during the war, an' it please you, but months after signing of the armistice. The explanation seemed to be that the inquisitors on this side had received information that the girl in question had been associated with the I. W. W. on the other side and was coming to England for the purpose of spreading their nefarious doctrines here.—The Herald (London).

Do you want others to work longer for you than you work for them? Then you want to get something for nothing.

SOCIALISTS PICNIC IN PEACE JULY 4th

Cleveland, Ohio, socialists picnicked in peace and quiet July 4 at Chestnut grove, on State road, just outside city limits. While the capitalist press persisted in stating that socialists and "reds" were to break up the patriotic parade scheduled for the day, socialists were planning a quiet day in the woods with their families and friends.

From early morn until mid afternoon, while families of socialists and groups of comrades were congregating at the State road transfer point to take the busses or street cars to the designated point. Police were on hand here. They searched all persons before boarding either cars or busses, also many private cars, and the occupants were also searched for weapons. Police stated that these precautions were taken for the purpose of nabbing possible bums en route to the picnic grounds to "start something." Whether it was for "bums" or "bombs," socialists allowed themselves to be "frisked" without protest, and went on their way glad of a chance to get away from the terrific heat of the city to the cooler shades of the country. At the city limits they were made to dismount and again subject themselves to a more or less thorough going over for hidden cannon and high-powered centimetres. None were found, however.

As is usual in such cases where no violence is provoked by those who are supposed to aid the keeping of the law, the day passed in quiet and peace. Though many county deputies and the sheriff were on hand and mixed with the crowd, there was absolutely no trouble. The officers of the law evidently understood that the socialists had placed themselves in an incontestable position in so far as any possible outbreak such as occurred on May Day was concerned.

A sweltering day brought fully two thousand comrades and their friends to the picnic. One of the most pleasing features of the picnic was the number of women and children present. Could those who believe that socialists get together only for the purpose of plotting for the overthrow of some government or other, have been present, they might have gotten rid of such humbuggery in viewing the children playing and laughing and talking groups of men and women.

The soft drink stand did a tremendous business, being most liberally patronized by the sheriff's deputies. A number of races and sports were indulged in for which prizes were given.

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, was chairman of the speech-making. Comrade Ella Reeves Bloor, well known in Ohio and, in fact, all over the country, as a foremost socialist speaker, who stopped over in Cleveland for the day, spoke to a very attentive audience. Her speech was generously applauded. Much literature was sold and a large collection was taken.

Thus passed for Cleveland socialists the first big get-together out door meeting since May 1. They all express themselves extremely well satisfied with results.

OHIO SOCIALIST CONVENTION MAKES HISTORY

tary be elected for a term of two years each was voted down by the convention.

Division of funds as provided for in the constitution was abolished. All expenses of the organization will hereafter be met by the general fund. The state executive committee, if the amendment carries, will hereafter designate the state headquarters city. The press stamp feature was abolished and in its place a raise in dues was voted, it being tacitly understood that part of the proceeds from the increase would be used to finance the Ohio Socialist. Locals will, if the amendment carries, hereafter pay 20 cents per stamp or $4 per book of 20 stamps and will accordingly raise their dues to the members to [illegible] cents per month. The initiation fee will be 50 cents, half of which will be retained by the local which admits the applicant.

Other minor changes were made all of which will appear upon the ballot which will in a short time go to the membership. All acts of the state convention must be adopted by membership referendum before they finally become party law.

The Resolutions Committee reported resolutions upon political prisoners, unemployment, mass propaganda, expulsion of language federations, special national convention assessment stamps, intervention in Russia, party owned printing plant, greetings to class war prisoners, greetings to Soviet Russia. All these resolutions will be found in the minutes as printed upon another page in this issue.

The Committee on Officers' Report and Audit challenged part of the state secretary's report, but otherwise found the financial condition of the party and the conduct of the state office a subject for commendation. The Committee on Organization and Propaganda, the last committee to report, made several recommendations which locals are advised to follow and that part of its report which provided that the convention endorse the movement of the Finnish district agitation committee to better organize the Finnish speaking people into the Socialist Party was adopted.

The convention adjourned in the greatest enthusiasm. Cheers were given for the success of the working classes in Europe and for the imprisoned class war victims upon which the Red Flag was sung. And so passed into history what many delegates said was the best state convention ever held in Ohio. New circumstances, new tricks of the capitalist class have made a restatement of Socialist tactics necessary. This has caused a controversy in the party. The convention places the Socialist Party of Ohio uncompromisingly on the side of the Left Wing and although some of the actions taken may appear drastic to many members in the state, they are absolutely necessary in view of the attempt being made by "stand pat" party officials to disrupt the organization.

We recommend that all locals and branches have thorough discussions upon all acts of this convention so that when the state referendum finally reaches the membership, an intelligent vote will be cast.

To one who will read as he runs and will think as he goes along, this threatened strike of Chicago's employes is a large red sign in the heavens. It shows the extent to which discontent is rampant among workers of all classes, whether they be laborers with pick and shovel, "white collared clerical workers, or even policemen. All are moved by the same human impulse—to keep above ground and to maintain the essentials of respectability while doing so and to receive something like a just return for the labor power they invest in the world's work.

Most significant of all is the growing sentiment among clerical workers, police and firemen that they are, after all, just workingmen, with interests in common with other workers. This new viewpoint is being forced upon them by the logic of events and is bringing them around to the point where they can be reached by the proletarian philosophy and socialist teachings. It may be a long road from the seclusion in which these classes of workers have heretofore held themselves, to a general participation in the newer programs and policies of radical labor, but the narrowly averted Chicago strike is a straw in the wind of capitalism that shows which way it is blowing.

INTERESTING FIGURES.

378 comrades and locals have contributed to date, July 6th, $976.37. This is an average of $2.58 and a fraction of a cent each.

This does not include the hundreds who contributed to the collection at the State picnic. The number is unknown but their good work goes on forever. We regret that we cannot publish their names.

village republics—the soviet of Russia differing from the Indian village community system only on account of difference of civilization and modern circumstances. The destruction of this native institution, for more than twenty centuries the bulwark of industrial organization in India, is exclusively due to the blind greed of British bureaucratic exploitation.

When the Indian laborer toils not less than 12-13 hours a day in factory, field, or construction, women not excepted, to go home with a pittance of a wage with which to feed his family and children, it is idle to talk about international labor adjustment as arranged in the Peace Treaty, particularly when dealing with India without the vision to see that foreign capitalist oppression should be first put an end to.

Sending representatives from the government of India and of the foreign British interests controlling the vast amount of the trade of the country, to the proposed International Labor Bureau as constituted by the terms of the Peace Treaty is adding insult to the injury already done to the Indian people. Will the International Labor Bureau see to it that according to its "climate and present state of industry" clause the people should only toil for not more than eight hours and get a minimum wage? No; it cannot do so as long as British Imperialism "represents" Indian labor.

15,000 Live In Filthy Alleys

Washington, the nation's capital, noted for its order and cleanliness, has more than 15,000 alley dwellers, states a news dispatch. These thousands of alley dwellers were forced into their present filthy "homes" by the influx of thousands of war workers in the city. The poorest were forced to vacate by the incoming higher paid workers.

Many of the alley shacks now occupied by families were erected during the civil war to house Union troops. They have never been used since and have as a consequence fallen into decay.

According to legislation recently acted by congress, these alley dwellers must vacate these shacks within a year after the signing of peace with Germany. The city of Washington is now facing the problem of building hundreds of new homes for the population. Congress will be asked to appropriate $6,000,000 to erect 3,000 houses.

THE SOLDIER'S CHOICE.

A straw vote for president, taken among 2700 soldiers on board the steamship Antigone while in mid-ocean, shows Hiram Johnson at the head with 696 votes. Wilson comes next with 636, and all others are less than 300. Generals and military men are somewhat at a discount, as General Leonard Wood gets 242, and Pershing only 78.

Johnson has been before the public lately mainly in connection with the demand that we come out of Russia, or give good reasons for staying in. He has also declaimed reasonably often in the senate, on behalf of free speech and the principles on which our American constitution was founded.

AKRON PROTEST MEETING

A meeting protesting the imprisonment of all political prisoners was held in Akron on June 22. The move was initiated by the Ukrainian branch, which asked all radical groups and organized labor to take part. Tom Lewis was the speaker. He gave one of his usually good heart-to-heart talks and from the applause granted him his points must have been telling.

The hall was far too small for the crowd that came and an overflow meeting had to be held which was addressed by local talent. An officious city detective tried to interfere with the meeting but to no avail. Perry Crites.

Local Robins held a picnic July 4th. The speaker of the day was Wm. Krispenz of Detroit.

As we said, it's picnic time. Arrange for a local picnic, invite all sympathizers and friends. Collect dues on the picnic grounds.

GUERNSEY COUNTY PICNIC

SEVEN—SO-CO—Ohio Socialist

The 12th annual outing of Guernsey County Socialists will take place August 10th, at Ball's Grove, near Byesville. All Socialists and sympathizers who are readers of the Ohio Socialist and who live near enough to Ball's Grove to attend the picnic, are asked to reserve that day and spend it with the comrades of Guernsey county.

J. L. ROBERTSON SAYS

Just read the Ohio Socialist which pictures the jail in which Debs is confined. It makes me shudder to think that a man of his noble standing and ability to do good must be made to suffer such a terrible sentence. We must free Debs. To do this we must be equipped for printng the words that will spell the doom of the class that rules.

I want to do my bit. I suggest that there be erected a suitable building to house a printing plant containing the latest improved machinery for printing, one that will be ample to supply the growing needs and be a tower of strength to our movement. I will send the first five spot for this purpose.

The Socialists of Ashtabula held a picnic July 4th with Tom Lewis as speaker. The picnic was held at Amsden Park.

Ella Reeve Bloor was a visitor at the state office last week. She was on her way to Kansas City where she will engage in organization work for the next month.

MINNESOTA NEWS

By a vote of 1158 to 401 the state membership defeated a motion to recall state secretary Dirba for his left wing activities. The state membership has expelled the 13th ward branch, Minneapolis, for refusing to discipline former Socialist mayor Van Lear for his anti-Socialist activities. Van Lear joined the Spargo-Gompers American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, a pro-war aggregation of misfits and is now employed by the Non-Partisan League.

WORD FROM SELAKOVICH

Translator secretary Geo. Selakovich of the International South Slavic Socialist Federation informs the state office that not one of the branches of the seven federations suspended from the party protested against the action taken by the seven translator secretaries in asking that the party adopt the Left Wing program.

Local Fremont is admitting new members with a regularity surprising. In this respect it is one of our most active Ohio locals.

BAKER WILL SPEAK AT PICNIC

Chas. Baker, state organizer, will speak at the Trumbull County picnic on July 20th. He will also address a meeting at Newton Falls on the 19th for the purpose of organizing a local.

As we said—IT'S PICNIC TIME. Arrange for YOUR picnic at the next meeting of your local.

Time to PAY DUES, too. Don't permit the hot weather to wilt your revolutionary tendencies. He is a BEST Socialist who can show a PAID UP dues card.

A Youngstown comrade writes: "I herewith send you two more dollars to help overthrow King Capital. Use it to establish a printing plant from which we can bombard this autocrat."

AKRON NOMINATES

A meeting of Local Akron was held July 6th for the purpose of nominating a ticket for the municipal election.

HOME OFFERED

R. F. Johns, R. D. 3, Williamsburg, Ohio, writes the state office offering a home on a farm to an elderly comrade who would help in the chores. Address Comrade Johns direct.

A remittance of $3.99 from Local Troy proves this little organization of five members in the ring.

SUPPORT FROM WEST VIRGINIA

Alex Sherbin of the Lithuanian branch at Sun, West Virgnia, sends in ten dollars, six of which are for Industrial Freedom Certificates and four for the press fund. He writes that "as long as the Ohio Socialist fights for working class interests we will not forget it."

ILLINOIS GERMAN BRANCHES PROTEST

The German Socialist branches in southern Illinois held a conference on June 22. Eight branches with a total membership of 400 were represented.

Resolutions were unanimously passed condemning the National Executive Committee for expelling and suspending 40,000 members and the motion of Local Cuyahoga County to recind these acts was endorsed. Wm. Lugge of Belleville, writes that "the time is near when the party autocrats on the N E C will have to get down and out."

Perry H. Shipman still remains our active Rock Island, Ill., booster. If the Ohio Socialist had a Perry Shipman in every city, Socialism would be just around the corner.

ST. LOUIS CALLS

V. Popov of St. Louis sends the state office of Ohio $8.50. Of this, $5.00 is for the press fund, $2.00 to help defend Cleveland Socialists arrested May day and the balance Comrade Popov wants applied to a bundle of Ohio Socialists "to stir up the right wingers at the July 4th picnic."

Why not order five or ten subscriptino cards good for six months or a year's subscription to the Ohio Socialist. Sell these cards to your shopmates, neighbors, relatives. You must EIGHT—SO-CO—Ohio Socialist help make converts. The Ohio Socialist will do its part if you will connect it with the unconverted.

Jas. W. Cassell, of Roanoke, Va., sends in an order for five sub cards saying that subs are more easily secured by selling the cards.

John M. Cahalane, literature agent for Local Hamilton has been on the sick list for more than a month. He expects to again take up his duties in the near future. Under the direction of Comrade Cahalane the literature sales by Local Hamilton have greatly increased.

Carl Guillod and wife visited the state office some days ago. Comrade Guillod reports Local Canton better organized now than ever before.

Local Girard is contemplating organizing a city committee. An order for 100 dues stamps and 26 initiation stamps from this local proves that it is anything but in retreat.

HOW A SOCIALIST LOCAL GAINED 100 PER CENT

This is my first attempt as correspondent for Local Ashtabula, but will do the best I can.

At the first of the year Local Ashtabula decided to do or die in the year 1919. We started out with 14 members in good standing, $8.59 in the treasury, a complete line up of officers and with the determination to do something.

It took about two months of wandering to get our feet on the earth and perfect a united co-operative system to work with. At last, in March, we decided to have a contest for obtaining new members and subscriptions to the Ohio Socialist.

We dug up the hatchet, chose up sides, had a captain for each side and started on the warpath. We decided to not speak friendly with each other until after May 1st, when the hatchet would be buried and a banquet furnished by the losing side.

A new member counted so many points and a sub to the O. S. so many points and the side having the least number of points had to furnish the "eats."

Captains Ellison and Grewit, being old friends, you could hardly believe that two pals could be so hard with each other; they would get subs and new members right from under each other's nose, until both sides were "doing it."

May 1st showed that we had gotten a total of 85 new members and over 30 subscriptions to the O. S. in the contest.

Captain Hewit's side lost by 790 points.

As had been agreed upon the losing side made arrangements with the Finnish Branch, who operate a co-operative boarding house, and the banquet was served May 26 at 7:00 p. m.

Take it from me it was some banquet. Our local humorist, Comrade Engels, entertained us with some stories, and our literature agent, Comrade Ellison, expressed the wishes of a larger and better Local Ashtabula.

I think it will be well to let you know that we of Local Ashtabula have bright hopes for the future. We plan on establishing another branch in town and already are arranging with the Swedish, Italians and Hungarians to get a branch for each one of them, and in the near future enlarge from a city central committee to a county organization.

Yours for the cause.

OUR "HIGH PAID" INDUSTRY.

The boot and shoe manufacturing industry is one of the "high paid" industries of the United States. Considerable skill is required in many of its departments. The workers in some districts are well organized. The industry is highly specialized and thoroughly standardized. It presents the best that can be expected under the present industrial system.

The United States department of Labor (April, 1919) tells the story of a detailed study, made in 1918, of the wages in the boot and shoe industry. These wage figures make interesting reading if they are compared with a recently published statement of the same department that $1500 a year will provide the bare necessities of life for a family of five (man, wife and three young children), while $2500 a year ($50 a week) will furnish the simple comforts of life for such a family.

The highest wages were paid in the bottoming department. The average amount actually earned during one week was as follows—455 Goodyear, welters, (male) earned $28.84; 275 rough rounders, (male) earned $28.39! 981 edge trimmers, (male) earned $26.32; 892 edge setters (male) earned $25.75. The lowest average weekly earnings in this department were those of 314 heel brushers (male) earning $21, average per week. The earnings in the cutting department were—for 2,263 cutters, vamp and whole shoe, hand, (male) $22.46; for 1,169 cutters, vamp and whole shoe, machine, (male) $21.12. Earnings in the sole leather department, the lasting department, and the finishing department ranged from $20 to $24 per week for males. In "all other" departments there were 22,394 men employed whose average weekly earnings were $16.24.

There is the story—in brief and in full. A minimum wage is set at $1500; a living wage at $2500. A great, standardized, rich, prosperous industry, manufacturing and selling a necessary commodity reports earnings of $29 per week ($1500 per full time year) for its highest paid wage-earners. The less favored receive from $20 to $25 ($1040 to $1300 per full time year) while the great body of low unskilled male workers receive $16 weekly ($832 per full time year) of a little more than half of a minimum family wage.

The same report gives details regarding the earnings of women employes. These range from $14.38 for 1408 female vampers down to $10.81 for 1587 female employes in "all other" departments.

Comment is superfluous.

These figures tell the story of brutal exploitation by a great, staple industry, and of the harrow, hopeless, tragic struggle of tens of thousands of workers to make a part of a subsistence wage cover the barest necessaries of life.

RECONSTRUCTION.

Some men favor one kind of reconstruction—some favor another. Those who believe in a reconstruction that will preserve the present economic system with its exploitation, its poverty for the workers and senseless luxury for the idle owning class are "patriots." Those who believe in a system of reconstruction aimed to put the workers in control of the industries upon which they depend for a living are "Bolshevists." The reconstruction of the decrepit, discredited capitalist machine is popular with those who benefit most from its injustice. The reconstruction of a new world-order, promising greater life opportunities for the masses, must of necessity be unpopular with these same capitalists.

The Canadian government is busy making the world safe for a reconstructed capitalism. Under a confidential order from the postmaster general a long list of publications is barred from the mail. Included in this list is the "Bolshevist Declaration of Rights." The "Bolshevist Declaration of Rights" is one section of the Russian Soviet constitution in which the right of the workers to the products of their labor is asserted and defined. The orders in council promulgated by the governor general on recommendation of the minister of justice declared 14 different organization unlawful. Among these organizations are the Social Democratic Party; the Workers International Industrial Union; the Socialist Labor Party and the Industrial Workers of the World. These organizations of workingmen differ in many respects. One thing, however, they have in common. All of them are interested in establishing a society that will protect the masses of the people and promote their welfare.

Reconstruction means only one thing to the forward looking student of affairs. The new world which is now being erected upon the ruins of the old will safeguard the interests of the plain people as thoroughly as the old world safeguarded the interests of the owning class. To the owning class this kind of reconstruction is a menace. To the working-class it is a promise.

MUTUAL AID.

Recent newspaper stories from Argentina give the impression that the workers, in that far away country, know how to stand together in defense of their rights. One of the explanations of this solidarity is given in the latest monthly Labor Review of the United States department of labor under the title "Mutual and Co-operative Associations in Argentina.". The co-operative movement of Argentina dates back to 1825. It has been growing rapidly since 1852. At the present time there are over six hundred thousand members of the various co-operative associations. The city co-operative associations include banks, building and loan societies, producers' co-operatives, consumers' co-operatives and distributors' co-operatives. The country co-operatives include hail, fire and crop insurance; co-operative banks and co-operative banks and co-operative purchasing and selling associations.

Year by year the workers of Argentina are learning the truth of the good old adage—"If you would have a thing done well, do it yourself." Year by year, through their co-operative undertakings they are helping to bind together the people upon whose labor depends the organization and progress of the world.

DO THEY SEE?

Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, made a speech in February, 1912, in which he was reported by the newspapers as saying that the conditions in the United States at that time were similar to those preceding the French revolution. Replying to a question as to his exact language on this occasion Judge Gary wrote (February 17, 1912):

"What I said, in brief substance, was that there is a feeling of unrest throughout the world; that it must be admitted there is at times and places cause for the feeling; that it behooves those in charge of large interests and in the possession of wealth and influence, to personally become actively interested in improving conditions; that this is good morals and good policy; that all of us must admit we had committed errors and had been negligent and therefore, the wise and fair thing was to recognize our faults and improve our methods."

Most people in 1912 thought that Judge Gary was going too far in making such statements. The situation in the world seemed too stable and too secure to justify any such gloomy predictions. The events of the past six years have demonstrated that Judge Gary was a wise prophet. Like many of the other leaders of American industrial life the Judge sees the forces that are at work in the world. He realises that changes are coming in social organization, and as a wise man, he is prepared to make the best of these changes.

Prophecy is dangerous. Theorising often produces wierd and improbable results. But there is a type of vision represented by men like Judge Gary that is imperatively needed in the United States at the present moment. If the master class in America could realise, as the workers are beginning to realise, that the United States must go through the same process of industrial and social development that is taking place in Europe, the inevitable changes could be made with less disturbance and with far greater constructive advantages than will result from the present short-sighted, dog-in-the-manger policy so generally adopted and applauded by the American ruling class.

THE WORKER'S BUSINESS

(By Eugene Debs.)

"We propose that the working class shall be organized economically and politically to retire the capitalist class from business.

"Our business is to put the exploiters of labor out of business.

"You, Mr. Workingman, don't need a capitalist; and if you think you do, it is because you are ignorant. It is because you don't understand your own interest. You don't need him. You imagine that he gives you a job; but he does nothing of the kind. You give him a job. You employ him to take from you what you produce; and he faithfully sticks to his job. Why, the capitalist could not exist a second without you. Can you imagine a capitalist without workingmen?

"Capitalism is based upon the exploitation of the working class; and when the working class ceases to be exploited, there will no longer be any capitalists.

"Now, while the capitalist could not exist without you, you would just begin to live without him. He is on your back; he rides you, and he rides you even when he rides in the automobile that you make. You make it. You never knew of a capitalist that ever made an automobile. The capitalist doesn't make it, but rides in it; the workingman does make it, but does not ride in it.

"If it were not for you the capitalist would have to walk, and if it were not for him you would ride."

Who Made the Law?

Who made the law that men should die in meadows,
Who spoke the word that blood
should splash in lanes,
Who gave it forth that gardens should be boneyards,
Who spread the hills with flesh and blood and brains—
Who made the law?

Who made the law that death should stalk in valleys,
Who spoke the word to kill among the sheaves—
Who gave it forth that death should lurk on hedgerow,
Who flung the dead amid the falling leaves,
Who made the law?

ITALIANS REFUSE WAR ON SOVIET.

Paris, June 3.—Press dispatches from Genoa today said the Italian crew of the steamer Martinovich, flying the Inter-Allied flag, had declared they were ready to be imprisoned or drowned, rather than cooperate on any movement to defeat the Russian revolution.

AMONG THE SUB-GETTERS

Here are t[illegible] writes Comrade D. D. H[illegible] of Huntington, W. Va. Comrade [illegible] is a true blue RED. Every one is a yearly. Such lists are about the most acceptable things we can think of.

We note that Comrade Secretary Steckel of Tiffin is still busy getting renewals and new ones.

Glad to renew the acquantance of Comrade Laura Reynolds once more. Six subs from her convinces us of her continued interest in the O. S.

Three subscriptions from Comrade Geo. A. Louthan of Troy helps to keep the fires burning there.

The Oklahoma movement needs a paper like the Ohio Socialist, says Comrade J. S. Faubus. He sends a subscription for a comrade there who is a veteran in the movement.

Four yearlies from Comrade Alice Burkett of Judsonia, Ark., makes us glad. These are not the first of Comrade Burkett's good work for the Ohio Socialist.

A new comrade discovered. He hails from Sycamore, O., and subscribes for a year. We wonder if there are not more comrades there whom we could get acquainted with.

Five yearlies and two half yearlies come in from Comrade Vincent Petraitis of Kewanee, Ill.

Comrade John Beery of Marion, O., sends in two half yearlies. Not to be outdone, Comrade Elmer Stevens of Vicksburg, Mich., does likewise.

One a Socialist, always a Socialist, is the rule followed by Comrade C. J. Taylor of Ft. Myers, Fla. An old veteran in the movement, he found himself lonesome without Socialist papers. He now reads the O. S.

Keep boosting is the method that wins according to Comrade B. F. Hardman of E. Liverpool, O. He sends in two this time.

Quite a number of subs are coming in from New Mexico these days. Comrade Mrs. W. P. Calkins is one of our constant boosters. She sends in two this week.

Enter the Municipal Campaign

State Convention Strongly Urges Locals To Nominate Candidates.

After a thorough discussion and taking into account the difficulties confronting some of the locals of the Socialist Party of Ohio, the state convention, recently held in Cincinnati, voted to urge all locals to place municipal tickets in the field.

Persecution and villification of Socialists and the Socialist Party has been the program of loud-mouthed sham-patriots for many months. Their bluff and bluster has been a bitter pill to thousands of citizens who are not even Socialists. Comment against these self-appointed tyrants and law-breakers can be heard on every side and the day is not far distant when a rightly indignant citizenship will turn the tables and place these snoopers and four-flushers where they belong.

The persecution some locals and Socialists have been subject to for some months past can best be answered and efficiently combated in the coming municipal elections. Place a ticket in the field and during the campaign expose all acts which tend to make of this country a replica of Russia under the czar.

To all locals we say—THERE IS NOT ONE REASON FOR DISCOURAGEMENT. The tide is bound to turn. The more pernicious the acts of psuedo-patriots today, the more complete and definite our victory tomorrow.

Thousands upon thousands of workers believe with us. They must be given a chance to register their opposition to capitalism and all its lickspittles in your city on election day. Nominate candidates AT ONCE. Enter the campaign with a will and enthusiasm. There is enough material at hand with which to make the hottest campaign we have ever made and with which to make it hotter for the opposition than ever before.

Don't hesitate. No matter how small your local, take courage in the fact that we are winning the world and do your part in your city.

Nominate candidates at once. Rules to follow to have your candidates appear upon the ballot will be found below.

HOW TO NOMINATE MUNICIPAL CANDIDATES.

1. Nominations of candidates in municipalities of LESS than 2,000 population should be made by petition, signed in the aggregate by not less than 25 electors for EACH candidate. The same number of signatures are required for candidates for the school board.
2. Nominations of candidates in municipalities with a population of MORE than 2,000 must be made by petition, signed by at least 1 per cent of the electors who voted at the last preceding election.
3. Nominations for candidates for school boards in municipalities with a population of MORE than 2,000 must be made by petition, and signatures of not less than 2 per cent of the electors voting at the next preceding SCHOOL ELECTION must be secured.
4. Petitions must be filed with the deputy board of state supervisors of elections NOT LESS than 60 days previous to the day of election.
5. A committee of five to fill vacancies shall be named in the petitions.
6. Petitions must contain a provision that the signer will support and vote for the candidates thereon.
7. Signatures must be written upon petition in ink or indelible pencil.
8. One of the signers of a petition must make oath before a notary public that statements contained therein are true.
9. Petitions can be secured from the election board in your city.
10. Petitions should ALWAYS be filed ahead of time, that is, more than 60 days before the date of election, in order to avoid delay in case objections are made to signatures and so that you have enough time to secure additional signatures.
11. Petitions should always contain MORE NAMES than required in order that you may be sure that you have enough genuine signatures.
12. For further information of any kind about nomination of candidates by petition, see your board of elections.

CUT OUT THE LIBRARIES.

The president of Manhattan borough, a subdivision of New York city, has come out with a denunciation of libraries.

"We spend hundreds of thousands and millions for them," he says, "and what do they amount to in the long run. Men go into the libraries, read themselves to death, and then they come out and try to upset the government."

When a government gets so rotten that the reading of books becomes dangerous to its stability, it's time to cut out the government, not the books.

Official Proceedings— State Convention

hour day and dollar an hour movement which is being carried on by workers in different trades and industries as to a measure that can bring certain relief to the terrible conditions of unemployment—although not abolishing it—and which can serve as a school for the workers to plunge themselves into the class war for the final destruction of capitalism.

By motion adopted.

Resolution No. 3.

Proletarian Mass Propaganda.

Whereas, the capitalist class is trying to suppress the spread of the message for the emancipation of the working class by interfering with organized bands of hoodlums at our street meetings and are terrorizing the owners of halls by their economic influence upon them, and.

Whereas, we recognize that the workers can be approached with our propaganda and be more impressed when we are dealing with them on the issue of their daily job.

Therefore, be it resolved, that in addition to the usual methods of propaganda we urge to give more attention to their work places, shops, mills, factories, yards, and mines, where you can reach all and everyone of your brother workers.

All Socialists in a shop or mill should organize, study the conditions of exploitation of the workers and explain the Socialist remedy.

Meetings of workers at the factory gates, distribution of Socialist papers, books and leaflets.

During strikes, Socialists should teach the value of mass political and industrial action, rather than the securing of contracts by union officials with a view to securing complete control of industry by socially useful workers.

By motion adopted.

Resolution No. 4.

Branches of Suspended Federations.

Resolved, that whereas Section 5-B of Article 13 of the national constitution specifies that language branches shall remain integral parts of the county and state organizations until such time as exclusion shall have been approved by the county or state organizations, and

Whereas, the national office has ruled that the suspended language federations have been entirely cut off from the party, this in direct violation of the national constitution and the clause above referred to, and

Whereas, we firmly believe that neither national executive committee nor the national office has the power to suspend language branches, therefore we

Resolve, that the state office shall recognize all language branches in the state as integral parts of the state party and shall show them all privileges [illegible]

Resolution No. 5.

Convention Assessment Stamps.

Be it resolved, that the proceeds from the sale of the special assessment stamp for the national emergency convention be, for the time, retained in the state treasury, and that part of same be disbursed for the expenses of the Ohio delegates to the national emergency convention.

Adopted by motion.

Resolution No. 6.

Intervention in Russia.

Whereas, the assaults upon the workers and peasants Republic of Russia continues with increasing bestiality, the capitalist governments instead of withdrawing troops from Russia are recruiting and sending new armies, warships and battleplanes and are supplying the monarchist Generals Koltchak, Denikin and Krasnov with money, munitions and food.

Whereas, the capitalist press is deliberately and intentionally spreading false propaganda with the purpose to mold the public opinion in opposition to the Russian workers and peasants republic to get the moral backing of the working class and so to prepare the grounds for the recognition and organization of counter revolutionary plots in order to restore monarchism and capitalism in this country of free working class, and

Whereas, thousands upon thousands of Russian, American and other soldiers are cold-bloodedly murdered in this war of international capitalism against the working class, and

Whereas, only the resolute action of the workers of the invading countries can end the murderous adventure of those capitalists by means of revolutionary pressure,

Be it resolved by the convention, that the wage workers of America join in the protest with the class-conscious workers of Canada, Great Britain, France and Italy and demand the immediate withdrawal of all troops from Russia to end the blockade and to permit them to work out their own forms of self-government.

Adopted by motion.

Resolution No. 7.

Party-Owned Printing Plant.

Resolved, that this convention endorses, and that we call upon all state locals and branches to endorse the campaign for a party-owned printing plant and that every member in the state do everything possible to secure the $10,000 fund for this purpose.

Adopted by motion.

Resolution No. 8.

Greeting to Class War Prisoners.

Resolved, that we send our fraternal greetings to all political and industrial prisoners in America and pledge our moral support to them by working for revolutionary Socialism to expedite the arrival of the day when we will be in power to force our enemy to release them.

Adopted by motion.

Resolution No. 9.

Greetings to Russia.

Resolved, that this convention transmit through the representative of the Soviet government of Russia in the United States, L. Martens, our greetings [illegible] the Manifesto of the Third "Communist International."

Adopted by motion.

Resolution No. 10.

Workers, Soldiers and Sailors Councils.

We recommend that this convention goes on record to assist in every way possible the Workers, Soldiers and Sailors Councils that are now being organized, providing they adopt the declaration of principles of the Toledo, Seattle and Portland councils, which are as follows:

(A) Political.

The Purposes of Politics.

The declaration of principles of the Councils of Portland, Seattle, Toledo, state the necessity of political action in these terms: "That as the machinery of government including the armed forces of the nation exist only to conserve the monopoly of the capitalist class of the wealth taken from the workers, the working class must organize consciously and politically for the conquest of the powers of government, national and local, in order that this machinery, including these forces, may be converted from an instrument of oppression into an agent of emancipation and the overthrow of privilege, aristocratic and plutocratic.

(B) Industrial.

That our interests are in common with the workers at all times and opposed to the exploiters, since we, being workers before we donned the uniform, must necessarily find our place in labor's ranks when we have doffed the uniform.

That, while the present social order continues, we shall be compelled to enter the labor market, selling ourselves at wages, in order to live.

That since the cessation of hostilities, vast war manufactories have closed down, throwing many men and women out of work; this condition, great enough at present, will be accentuated and intensified, by the demobilization of our comrades.

That during the entire war period, while many of our members were engaged in fighting, the rest of the workers not only produced our munitions, equipment, food, etc., maintained themselves and dependents, but supported in idleness and luxury a master class, and created many additional millionaires and profiteers.

That the greatest and most immediate problem confronting us as workers, is the refitting into industries of men returned from military service.

That, as a temporary solution, we demand the establishment of a six-hour work day and a five day week.

That the elimination of the present social ills and economic distress, is impossible until the system for profit has been replaced by a system for use.

That we co-operate with organized labor in an educational campaign to this end.

And we demand full and sufficient remuneration for the maimed, widows, orphans and all other dependents.

Report of Committee on Organization and Propaganda.

Delegate Miller reported as follows for the committee:

1. We recommend that the State [illegible] Committee be instructed to provide a [illegible] course to outline a[illegible]paign on socia lproduction and distribution. (Rejected by motion.)

2. We recommend the State Office be authorized to give financial aid to weak locals to assist them in defraying expenses of perfecting their organization. (Adopted.)

3. We recommend that all local secretaries submit to the state office all members who are three months in arrears. We believe the most essential duty of the secretary is to see that the locals are kept active, even to the extent of propapaign on social production and distribution. (Rejected by motion.)

4. We recommend that the propaganda of the Ohio Socialist party be confined to Revolutionary Socialism, as stated in the Communist Manifesto. (Adopted.)

5. We suggest weekly distribution of leaflets by locals.

COMMENT.

Owing to the free speech fight carried on by the master class at present, we deem it necessary to adopt this procedure. (Adopted.)

6. We recommend that the State Office furnish the locals with a list of subscribers to the Ohio Socialist upon application. (Adopted.)

Resolution Finnish Socialist Federation.

7. We recommend, that the following resolution be adopted: "Resolved that the Ohio State convention adopt the Finnish Agitation District Committee as an official organ of the State Organization to carry on Socialist propaganda among the Finnish population in the state of Ohio, provided this Finnish Agitation District Committee will work in conjunction with the state secretary and obeys the decisions of the constitution of the State Organization.

COMMENT.

The state of Ohio has a large unorganized Finnish population. Being unable to speak the English language it is impossible to organize them into the Socialist party by means of the English propaganda. Experience has taught us the fact that the only effective way to spread Socialist propaganda among them is through the language they understand best.

In order to successfully carry on this propaganda there must be an official organ to conduct this work. This organ must act as a medium between the State Organization and the Finnish branches.

Since eleven (11) Finnish Socialist branches, with a membership of about 300, have already organized such an organ, the Finnish Agitation District Committee—we ask that the convention officially recognize it. (Adopted.)

8. We recommend that the Socialist Party of Ohio, in convention assembled, denounces the convention of the American Federation of Labor, recently held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, as a body composed in large part of reactionary labor fakirs, whose personal contact with actual work is so remote as to [illegible] all its actions. [illegible] received the commendation of the entire capitalist press.

We call attention to the fact that the same master class which is feeding and dining Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has sent William D. Haywood, General Secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, and Eugene V. Debs, besides thousands of others, to jail for no other crime than their outspoken loyalty to the working class. One the one hand you have the host of labor fakirs, headed by Samuel Gompers, who seek to chloroform the workers with meaningless phrases so that they may remain submissive and obedient objects of exploitation, and on the other hand, the class conscious educators of the workers, who are hated and feared by the masters, and sentenced by them to long terms of imprisonment.

The time has come when the workers must chose between international labor fakirs and their fossilized craft-union organizations, and the ONE BIG UNION which leads straight to the goal of working class emancipation.

This convention therefore calls upon all the workers in all craft unions of the A. F. of L. to immediately start a program of agitation along the lines of THE ONE BIG UNION, which is in accord with the revolutionary proletariat. (Adopted.)

9. We recommend this convention goes on record and authorize the state secretary to notify locals to conduct public meetings in which demands will be made on the government to release all political and industrial prisoners, and that conscientious objectors be freed. That all troops are to be withdrawn from Russia and that the embargo against Soviet Russia and Hungary be lifted. And that the Soviet government of these countries be recognized. These meetings to be continued until the demands are complied with. (Rejected because covered by resolutions committee.)

Motion carried that the committee's report as amended be accepted.

Motion that before we adjourn we embody a concrete definition of mass action in the proceedings of the convention.

Motion to table, carried.

Motion carried that the extra expenses of delegates to the National Left Wing conference elected by the state executive committee be paid.

Motion that every local place a municipal ticket in the field.

Amendment that this matter be left to the discretion of the local. Amendment carried.

Roll call demanded. Chairman ruled roll call out of order, a delegate having the floor. Ruling appealed. Chair not sustained. Upon roll call the amendment was defeated by a vote of 14 to 37.

Original motion was amended to read that "we urge all locals to place municipal tickets in the field." Carried.

Motion that all convention committees be discharged. Carried.

Remarks were ruled in order under the heading of good and welfare. [illegible]

Horrors! Terrible Terrors of Red Hosts Depicted

(By Robert Page Lincoln.)

The perils coming through Bolshevism are many and varied and it is in knowing the nature of these disturbing predicaments that the people elsewhere than in Russia should be warned. We must combat Bolshevism by carefully and intelligently diagnosing the perils that come through Bolshevism. In knowing just what the Bolsheviks have done and are doing is enlightenment and a powerful means of acquainting the workers with the inner mysteries of the Red Terror. In the first place the most horrible example of this system of government is the fact that everybody is allowed to vote who works. In other words the soviet slogan is: "A vote for everyone who does useful labor." This is against all true government as it leaves social parasites no voice in the affairs of the world. We must condemn that move. Remember that the Bible says: "And the poor will ever be with ye," and remember that only 95 per cent of the people of Russia can vote against 65 per cent of the people in America. That proves that 95 per cent of the people of Russia are working people. Working people are incapable of self-government, which is proven by the fact that the Bolsheviks have only been in power somewhat over two years and the opposition has been mild to say the very least. For further proof of the decline of Bolshevism we can quote from the recent speech given by Lloyd George before the house of commons, in which he stated that, "while the Bolshevik force is apparently growing, Bolshevism itself is gradually waning," which is equal to saying that the sun is rising but it is setting.

It must be further understood that the Bolsheviks are unfair in getting into power. They have elections where the people can emphatically state what party they desire. In one election there were 17 tickets represented and the Bolsheviks won by 12,000 votes. In other words the Bolsheviks got more votes than all the other 16 parties put together. There you can see the unfairness of the Bolsheviks. They believe in elections; that people shall have a chance to state what form of government they desire. We can see Bolshevism uncovered at last the whole crude, bloody business dawns upon us.

The utter unscruplousness of the Bolsheviks may be seen in the fact that the largest salary any official of the Soviet government may receive is sixty dollars a month. Lenin, in Russia, the head of the Soviet Republic, receives sixty dollars a month, and President Wilson of the United States receives a beggarly portion of $75,000 a year. There you can see the Bolsheviks unmasked. We always knew that the Socialists would make the mistake of giving their leaders a lump of gold that would choke a silo in exchange for their brain power.

Then, too, the Bolsheviks have given over all the land to the peasants; each family is given all the land that it can till and make productive. That is an act against God. God gave the land to the barons to be used as hunting grounds and for the perpetuation of Russian thistles. Tilling of that ground will make the peasants happy, and when the working people are happy this will be a devil of a world to live in. Then I suppose we'll get into some kind of a millenium that that class-conscious rebel, Jesus, got crucified for propagandizing for!

But the height of all iniquity in Russia under the Soviet rule is that children are not allowed to work under eighteen years of age. Every American knows that government is impossible without three million child slaves in mills, factories and sweat-shops. I am sure that God would not allow child slavery unless it were just, therefore the disgracefulness of the Soviet system of allowing the children to romp and play and enjoy themselves till they are eighteen years of age is obvious. From such red terrorism turn us away. . . . And then, on top of all that, when boys and girls become eighteen years of age in Russia they are entitled to vote if they can prove that they are useful members of society.

NATIONAL OFFICE DEFIES WILL OF TEN THOUSAND PARTY MEMBERS DEMANDING NATIONAL REFERENDUM

Motion to Rescind Acts of Despotic 7 of National Executive Committee to Be Held Up.

From all signs there is to be no limit to the despicable acts of the national office and the despotic national executive committee. National Secretary Germer has just addressed a letter to the national executive committee asking them to vote whether the referendum, initiated by Local Cuyahoga County (Cleveland), rescinding the acts of the national executive committee in expelling and suspending half of the party membership, shall go to membership referendum. In this letter the national secretary argues that it ought not because the motion contains comment and is therefore unconstitutional.

More than 10,000 party members have already seconded this call for a national referendum to rescind the acts of the despotic seven national executive committeemen to disrupt the Socialist party. This is about three times as many seconds as are constitutionally necessary. And now, that the referendum has been generally supported, and in view of the further fact that the motion is bound to carry if ever given to a vote of the membership, the will of the rank and file of the party is again to be curbed by autocratic procedure such as socialists have never experienced.

If the motion made by Local Cuyahoga County was not in constitutional form, why did not the national secretary inform this local of that fact immediately the motion was received by him? Why did national secretary Germer wait until more than 10,000 members, through vote by their locals and branches, had supported this call for a national referendum before discovering it unconstitutional? Why this tricky method of interfering with the due processes of the referendum? We know why. The despotic seven on the national executive committee and the national secretary are afraid to permit the rank and file to voice its sentiments upon the acts of the national executive committee in expelling and suspending half of the party membership. The referendum, if placed before the membership, will carry so overwhelmingly, despite the fact that half the membership is out of the party, that the national office

A Message From Hungary To American Workingmen

(By Cable to The Liberator.)

We send heartiest greetings to the working proletariat of America. Although it has been possible for capitalism to pit one part of you against the others, especially the well-paid workers against those not so well paid, we firmly believe that you will within a short time see clearly that you all belong to an oppressed class, that the bourgeoisie has become unnecessary in your country as it has shown itself to be unnecessary in ours.

For European capitalism the twilight of the gods has arrived. Everybody sees this now. But capitalists console themselves with the hope that the American orkingmen will save capitalism for them. We trust that the American workingmen will frustrate this hope.

We patricularly greet the Hungarian workmen of America. They had to emigrate from Hungary because it did not offer them a home. We now have made it a home for them.

SOVIET REGIME TO RULE BRITAIN, ASSERTS WHITE

LABOR WILL WIN BLOODLESS REVOLUTION TRANSFORMING ENGLAND, HE BELIEVES.

"England is undergoing a bloodless revolution," declared William Allen White, the novelist and journalist of Emporia, Kan., on his return from England on the White Star liner Baltic. He attended the peace conference as a correspondent for a national syndicate and in a semi-official capacity. From France he went to England to study conditions. He returns firmly convinced that labor is the strongest single power in that country.

"That revolution," he continued, "will result in creating the first firmly established Soviet government in the world."

He said that labor is being organized on a Soviet plan.

"There is the local union," he said, "then the district association and then the national group. Complete power is lodged in the trade unions which control the docks, railways and mines of England. Labor rules.

"LABOR WILL WIN."

"Labor is in the saddle and is demanding nationalization of the railroads, docks and coal mines. And labor will win."

As an indication of the strength of labor, he quoted the fact that the English king was making an effort

Bishop Brown Answers Editor's Slander

Peoples Right To Political Revolution Defended by Socialist High in Church Circles.

(Bishop Wm. M. Brown, Socialist, formerly of Little Rock, Ark., now living at Galion, Ohio, a bishop in the Episcopal church, is accused in a Little Rock paper of aligning himself with the "addle-pated parlor bolshevists" and incidentally injuring his reputation thereby. We are glad to print below Bishop Brown's answer to these accusations — Editor.)

In a Little Rock paper the editor says:

"Bishop Brown has hurt his reputation grievously by allowing himself to become associated and entangled with the addle-pated parlor bolshevists in this country."

After a severe criticism of Russian bolshevism he adds:

"The parlow bolsheviki, from one viewpoint, is worse than the rabid bolsheviki who operates with torch, bomb and dagger, because there is no excuse for him."

BISHOP BROWN'S ANSWER.

"Our national declaration of independence justifies political revolution on the part of a people whose government fails in securing and safeguarding the inalienable rights of all mankind—"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness"—and especially does it justify the proletarian revolutions which are at this time developing and raging in many nations, because they are the result of 'a long train of abuses and usurpations, pusuing invariably the same object' which train of abuses 'evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism.' When it is evident that a governmental train has started for this goal and will reach it unless derailed, it is the right of the oppressed 'to throw off such government and to provide new guards for their future security.'

"If blood is shed as the result of the derailment of such a train the responsibility is with the crew, not the derailers.

"President Wilson is right where in the New Freedom he says of the development in our own country:

"We stand in the presence of a revolution, not a bloody revolution; America is not given to the spilling of blood, but a silent revolution, whereby America will insist upon recovering in practice those ideals she has always porfessed, upon securing a government devoted to the general interests and not to special interests.

"We have forgotten the very principles of our origin if we have forgotten how to object, how to resist, how to agitate, how to pull down and build up, even to the extent of revolutionary practices."

"Is the president an addle-pated, parlow bolshevist? If not, why am I designated as such by the editor?

MONSTER DEMONSTRATION OF INTERNATIONAL LABOR

Jean Longuet declared in the Chamber of Deputies, Paris, that the proletarian triple alliance had now come into existence and that the Kolstchaks of Paris, Rome and London would not gain their ends.

Paris.—The chairman of the General Confederation of Labor of France has announced that after a conference with Italian and British comrades, plans for a general strike on July 21 are to be worked out and that on that date industries in Italy and France will be completely shut down.

"The demonstration," so it is said, "will have as its aim the demand that intervention in Russia cease at once; the immediate demobolization of the army; the restoration of constitutional guarantees; the immediate release of all political and war prisoners and for reduction in the price of foods."

The triple alliance between the workers of England, Italy and France is now a fact, declared Jean Longuet, French Socialist. This declaration followed close after the opening o the proletarian congress and after a resolution had been passed against the continuance of the war on Soviet Russia.

"If the strike as a political weapon is justified at all, then it is justified as a weapon for the ending of the capitalist war against Russia," said Longuet. "The Kolstchaks of Paris, Rome and London have not yet gained their ends."

BISHOP BROWN MAKES OFFER OF $1,000 FOR THE OHIO SOCIALIST PRESS FUND

Will "wonders never cease?" That's the thought that crossed our minds when we read the above offer in a letter from Comrade Bishop Wm. M. Brown, secretary of Local Galion, O. For all the surprises which the comrades have "sprung" upon us since the press fund campaign was opened, this offer of Comrade Brown's is the greatest one of all. Just think of it, a thousand dollars from one comrade! But we know that you are dead anxious to hear the straight story. So, read Comrade Brown's letter below.

Galion, Ohio, July 3, 1919.

The Socialist Party of Ohio, Care Mr. Alfred
Wagenknecht, Sec., 3207 Clarke Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio.

My Dear Comrade:

Mrs. Brown and I have carefully considered the representations of the appeal which you and Comrade Allison have since May Day been making from week to week in the excellent editions of the Ohio Socialists for a printing plant to be owned and operated by the Socialist Party of Ohio, and they have persuaded us to a conviction which is deepening into an enthusiasm that this is an exceptionally important undertaking on behalf of the movement of international socialism—the only great movement which has ever been set on foot for the good of mankind as a whole; a movement towards making of the world safe for a classless democracy by turning it up-side-down with the slaves above and the masters below, having the privilege to come up to work and eat or to remain down to loaf and starve, but not to rob and enslave.

The success of your undertaking would mean more to the part of this movement for which our state comradeship is responsible than anything else whatsoever which can be accomplished at present; and, therefore, we have concluded that it is our privilege and duty to respond to this appeal by offering to GIVE ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000) PROVIDING YOU CAN SECURE THE BALANCE OF THE AMOUNT NEEDED, $9,000, FROM YOUR OTHER COMRADES ON OR BEFORE ELECTION DAY, 1919.

Hoping that our subscription will soon be called for, I am, with kindest regards from both (meaning Mrs. Brown) for all the workers at headquarters. Very cordially yours,

WM. M. BROWN, Sec. Local Galion.

And there you are, comrades, a thousand dollars for the press fund, provided the rest of the comrades in Ohio and those thousands of comrades outside the state, will raise the other nine thousand.

Isn't that a fair offer? We think it is a mighty fair one and a mighty generous one. In fact it is so fair that we are sure there is not a comrade who reads this letter that will not feel like immediately forwarding his dollar or a five-spot or more to help make up the amount in the shortest possible time. And it is so generous that every comrade will feel a surge of generosity through him, a tingleing along the veins that will surely make them part with what they can afford for this fund in the most generous and free giving spirit.

And it ought to do just that. This great offer of Comrade Brown's ought to arouse every comrade to a wide-awake realization of what this campaign for a press for the Ohio Socialist means to the Socialist Party of this state and nation. His letter should send a thrill of pride along the spine of every socialist who reads it. It should make them proud to belong to a political party of the workers that has among its membership a comrade so earnest, so sincere and so generous as to make such a wonderful offer to us.

For the offer is to us, comrades, to you and to me and to every comrade in the country. But most of all, is it an offer and a CHALLENGE to every party member in the state of Ohio. We have nearly nine thousand members in this state alone. If every member would give so much as one dollar each the sum would be raised. We would have our own printing plant and a fine big press to turn out the thousands of copies of the Ohio Socialist we are printing each week.

And now, comrades, there is not a moment to lose, Comrade Brown says in his letter: "I will give one thousand dollars, providing you can secure the balance of the amount needed, $9,000, from your other comrades on or before election day, 1919." Are we going to let that thousand dollars get away from us? WE ARE NOT! Election day is less than four months away, but we know that we can raise that amount in that time if we just say we can. And we do say it. We say it now and we are going to keep on saying it until we accomplish it and reach our goal on November 4.

That's our answer to Comrade Brown. We know it is your answer too. So let's prove we mean what we say, that we mean to get that nine thousand dollars to match the thousand from Comrade Brown. At this moment we need to raise but a little over $7,000 to make up our share of the $10,000 needed. Let's get that $7,000 right away.

Now to do it. Every reader of the Ohio Socialist has received a pledge envelope from us. Hundreds of them have returned to us with generous contributions. But hundreds have not—as yet. Hunt up that envelope, comrade, put a dollar of two dollars or five or more in it and forward it at once. Just drop us a line saying "here is my part toward compelling Comrade Brown to come across with that thousand." Every local in Ohio has been sent a number of press fund subscription lists. Get those lists in the hands of comrades whose socialism means "work for socialism." Let them circulate among the workers and sympathizers. Get busy with the lists. Many comrades are working with them, more comrades must. Locals can hold a picnic, or a social or arrange various means by which to raise this amount in a pleasant and enjoyable manner.

Every comrade can do a little, most of us can do a great deal in this matter. And by so doing we will in a very short while have our own press for the Ohio Socialist and a printing plant to print our leaflets, pamphlets, books, etc.

Be ready to greet election day with a smile. Help get the party-owned printing plant.

Below are the names of comrades who have this week contributed the amount at the head of the column in which their names appear.

Let Party Membership Function Now

Do Not Be Fooled by Plea "Wait Until the Conventon."

By L. E. Katterfeld

In a statement to the locals, the members of the old National Executive Committee, who are holding up the membership referendum in which they know themselves to be defeated for re-election, make a tearful plea to the outraged membership to "wait until the national convention.' They ask locals not to make seconds or motions to reverse the acts of the National Executive Committee, but to leave it all rest until the convention meets.

In the meantime this same N. E. C, finds even the mails too slow for its party wrecking activities. It voted by telegraph to expel the Socialist Party of Massachusetts. While you are being asked to "wait until the convention," the N E C continues to wreck the party. Why dont they wait until the convention.

The reactionary New York City and State Executive committees are throwing out of the party most of the New York state membership. Half of the membership in New York ciyt has already been expelled. Locals Buffalo, Rochester, and other large locals in the state have been expelled. The national office and the New York reactionaries are working hand in glove, expelling thousands of members. Why don't they take their own advice—why dont they wait until the convention?

We can expect these actions to continue, these party wrecking actions. While on the one hand the party despots ask you to "wait until the convention,' they, without your knowledge, are slating various states for expulsion. They want you to "wait" while they continue their nefarious work in making the party safe and the national convention safe for reactionary Scheideman Socialism.

The convention is called primarily for the specific purpose of affording the party membership the opportunity to pass judgment upon the Left Wing program, to determine the party's position on the question of affiliating with the Third International, organized by the Bolshevists at Moscow, which today is the only International of Revolutionary Socialism. But these little committees of petty officials that want our party to straddle the fence and compromise are not willing to await the action of the convention. They are now trying to forestall the convention by expelling from the party all elements that openly acknowledge themselves to be revolutionary.

We know that their frantic efforts will avail them nothing. The membership of our Socialist Party today is sound and revolutionary to the core. No matter how many thousands the party officialdom "disciplines" with its paper expulsions, of those that remain the Left Wing will still be in the majority. The inexorable logic of world events has undermined the opportunist elements within our party and made the revolutionary wing unconquerable.

We have serene confidence in our victory at the coming party convention—if that convention is held.

But we have no confidence in the honesty and good will of the present party officialdom. For as soon as they realize that despite all their machinations, the convention will decide against them, we may expect them to postpone the convention. In fact, they discussed this possibility openly at the recent N E C meeting in Chicago. So do not let these specious pleadings to "wait until the convention" to lull you to sleep. The defeated, disappointed party officials want you to remain inactive while they clean out the party of all revolutionary elements and turn it into a Scheideman party.

The N E C also asks us to "wait for more information."

But did they wait for information when they expelled the Socialist Party of Michigan, 5,000 members strong, without a trial or even informing the Michigan comrades that they were under charges?

They refused to wait for information when they voted down my motion to give the translators time to communicate with their Federation Executive Committees, and suspended over 30,000 GOOD standing party members without trial and just by a simple resoluion made by seven men in an attic in Chicago.

We need no 'information" to know that no little executive committee has the power to throw forty thousand members out of our party without trial and get away with it.

We need no "information" to know that it is the duty of our party officias to count our membership referendum and announce the results.

We need no "information" to know that no committee has the right to hold up a party referendum upon which they were defeated for reelection, and because of that fact.

If there is anything wrong with any referendum the remedy is not to suppress it and keep the result of the vote secret, but to turn on the light, publish the results and then if necessary, let it be challenged and investigated by disinterested comrades.

We want the party convention to decide the question at issue. However, the old N E C is not minded that way. They will continue to expel and suspend BEFORE the convention takes place. Most of us will have been expelled before convention time. How can we, in such case, decide anything at the convention.

Just to prove that the despotic seven and the national secretary can MAKE US WAIT until the convention, they are now considering holding up the call for a national membership referendum initiated by Local Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) which has already been seconded by more than 10,000 members represented at local and branch meetings.

And just to prove that they do not intend "to wait until the convention," the despotic national executive committee, having just expelled the Socialist Party of Massachusetts, now has called the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania upon the carpet. It may next be expelled. Undoubtedly the Socialist Party of Ohio is slated for the same treatment. There won't be anything of the party left if this wrecking continues. Are these acts then in fact an attempt to disrupt the Socialist Party to favor a reform party, the Labor Party or to satisfy the wiles of seven despots on the N E C who failed to re-election in the referendum? Are they revenging themselves?

Comrades—in every one of their actions the N E C have insulted the membership. They have usurped powers that are not theirs. They have trampled roughshod over all constitutional limitations. They have violated the will of the membership. They may now attempt to camouflage their motives with honeyed words and fine phrases, but their acts are what count against them and the very circumstances under which they acted condemns them.

They have sown the wind. Now let them reap the whirlwind. Let every comrade make it his business to prove that such incredible trickery on the part of party officials will be resented and rebuked. Let the party membership FUNCTION NOW.

NATIONAL OFFICE DEFIES WILL OF TEN THOUSAND

does not dare to print the ballots and have a vote. The party autocrats, if they are to retain their firm autocratic hold upon the party, dare not allow the membership to express itself. This is why this referendum is being interfered with, and this is the only reason.

The call for the referendum upon the disruptive acts of the national executive committee has been endorsed by locals and branches in all parts of the United States. Finnish, German, Jewish, and Scandinavian Language Federation branches have, in great numbers, seconded the motion. The largest English-speaking branch in Milwaukee endorsed the motion. Endorsements have been so universal that it is a foregone conclusion that the party membership has fully made up its mind to repudiate the reactionary officialdom of the party.

Not counting the hundreds of endorsements which were made by those locals and branches suspended and expelled from the party, the following locals and branches demand that the referendum to rescind the acts of the national executive committee go to a referendum of the membership of the Socialist party.

ILLITERACY IN AMERICA.

"Of the 600,000 teachers in America 100,000 are less than 20 years old; 150,000 have served two years or less; 30,000 have had no education beyond the eighth grade; 200,000 have less than a high school education." Such is the statement of the official N. E. A. bulletin for this year. Since there are more than 22,000,000 school children in the United States, one-third of these (more than 7,000,000) are being taught by teachers without even the addition of the high school course to their three "Rs". And these children are the children of the workers in the grade schools.

The bulletin goes on to say that we have in this country among native-born whites illiterates numbering 1,534,000; among the colored, 2,227,000, and among the foreign-born, 1,650,000. The comparison between the native and the foreign born is even more striking when one reflects that the colored illiterates are also native-born.

These Letters Make Us Smile

Occasionally we receive letters like the following. They make us smile. And we pass them on to our readers for we believe thy, too, will smile at them—and smiles are badly needed in this old world—so read and smile. We print them just as written:

To All Socialists: Please don't send your papers to my home any more, I am tired of having the mail man bringing such truck to my house I am no Socialist, I don't believe in Socialism, I am strictly Catholic; did you get me, no Socialist whatever, don't send no more truck around.—Mrs. E. Crawford, Norwood, O.

FROM A "100% AMERICAN."

Sirs: You are still sending me your paper, yet I have refused it and it is still coming, an now sirs I do not want you to send it no more, I do not take no stock on your wind we do not want no Bolshevic in America; no man need not try and preach socialist in me. I am 100% American, I am going to stand by are government till the last man is beat off the face of the earth that trying to tare our government to pieces. I have no money for such a cause.—P. T. Rausch, Wadsworth, Ohio.

HORRORS! TERRIBLE TERRORS

Since writing the above I find that I have made a mistake. The rapist terrorism contained in the above paragraph (and which is to the undying degradation of the Soviets) is mild in comparison to the bloodletting that really is the case. Here is my later information:

"Education is compulsory until the age of twenty-one is reached. No child is exempt from school attendance for any reason whatsoever until the age of sixteen is reached, and between sixteen and twenty-one only extreme conditions justify absence from school."

For stark corruption try to equal that. Take that line: "No child is exempt from school attendance for any reason whatsoever"—it is quite apparent that the children are not so free to leave school at an early date to help "the old man" in supporting the family. They have no liberty, no freedom, it can easily be seen, under Soviet rule. Little do the ignorant Russian people realize what they are missing by not having a supreme court to declare child labor constitutional. Anyone knows that without a supreme court people can not govern themselves. No government "of the people and by the people" is possible without a group of supreme judges.

The fact that the women are allowed to vote in Russia proves that the Soviets are recognizing the gentle sex; and this is disturbing all the profound laws of nature. It was not so many years ago that a certain church at a holy convention decided to vote on whether the female of the species had a soul and by a majority of five votes it was decided. "Yes, the woman has a soul." But this didn't happen in Russia even under the szar. We will tell you where it did happen. It happened in Italy.

But in Russia. O my Lord. Listen to what they have there with which to besmirch the fair flower of womanhood. Here it is.

"The Soviets provide for the free care of women for sixteen weeks before, during and after confinement. Palaces of motherhood have been established for this purpose, which are really modern maternity hospitals. Under no condition does the mother return to work until she is strong and well, and her full salary is paid by the state throughout this period. The law applies to all women, whether married or single, for the Soviet government does not believe that the sins of the father should be visited upon the children."

"That the sins of the father should not be visited upon the children"—I don't believe the Soviets are right there. I find upon careful study of some of the free governments of the world that the easiest way to have orphan asylums, insane asylums, houses of good shepnerds and a host of other things is to let capitalism and disease take its course.

You can see easily enough that in Russia when a woman begets a child she is given no freedom. In other countries she has freedom. She can choose what porch she desires on which to discard her newly-born and is then free to go back to washing floors in office buildings and scrubbing out the spittoons of successful men.

But on top of all this maddening injustice and red terrorism, what do you think that the Russian people have the brazen nerve to ask of the other peoples of the earth? Here it is: "Leave us alone; let us work out our own destiny."

Think of it! Here we have a people actually wishing to work out their own destiny without being interfered with by other nations or kingdoms. Ridiculous! Scandalous! Preposterous!

We will admit if need be that in the war against the curse of kaiserism Russia was bled white. We will admit that. We will admit further, if you so desire, that in the war against the kaiser 3,500,000 Russians were killed, that 4,000,000 were wounded, that there were 350,000 war orphans and that on account of the war the result was 200,000 deaf, dumb and blind. We will admit that; we will admit that the Russians lost more men than Belgium, France, Italy and America all combined, but after that war sacrifice is that any reason why Russia should be allowed to choose what government it desires; is that any reason why they, themselves, should be allowed to whole-heartedly determine the course they are going to take!

Certainly not! Freedom and democracy are not established in vain. You might just as well try to change the Status of Liberty in its course as to try to self-determine without outside co-operative self-determination.

[illegible] NEWLY ELECTED N. E. C.

The state convention of the Socialist party of California which met recently in San Francisco adopted a motion "demanding that the newly elected national executive committee be seated and that the question of their standing be left to the coming national emergency convention, to meet in Chicago, August 30." This means that the Socialist party of California deems it wise that the present despotic national executive committee retire and give way to the new officials, which are Left Wing socialists.

A motion was also passed to recommend that all locals in California endorse the motion made by Local Cuyahoga County to rescind the acts of the national executive committee in suspending and expelling half of the party membership.

THE CALIFORNIA CONVENTION

By Alanson Sessions

The California State Convention of the Socialist party, held on May 30, 31, and June 1 at San Francisco, resulted in a more or less definite decision to affiliate with the Left Wing movement of the American Socialist party. The greater part of Sunday, June 1, was spent in a discussion of the practicability of the Left Wing program. It is unfortunate that a clear-cut decision was not taken before the adjournment of the convention. While Left Wing sentiment seemed to be dominant, a vote on the subject was either adroitly avoided by the machinations of the Right or overlooked by the Left.

The first two days of the convention were occupied in the discussion of methods of organization and propaganda, and of the nature and future of the Socialist press. But from the outset it was clear to all that such discussion was futile until the momentous question of basic party policy was determined. The subject of organization and propaganda must be confused and incoherent if the party does not know precisely where it stands with relation to the Left Wing. It was to be expected, therefore, that the first two days of the convention would be wasted in tiresome verbosity.

The third day proved that the majority of the membership is Left Wing by sentiment, if not by intellectual conviction. Most of the delegates felt that there is a dire need for a radical alteration in tactics, but few of them had done any serious and consecutive thinking on the subject. Taylor, state secretary, and Dolsen, one of the most prominent of the party organizers, are both Left Wing. Others like Lillian B. Symes and Cameron King, recognized as big figures in the California movement, were emphatically Right Wing in their attitude. King especially bitterly attacked the Left Wing program and denounced "frenzied Fraina" as a phrase-monger and a vulgar disrupter.

King based his argument principally on the fact that a revolution in the United States is not likely for many years to come. This being the case, he contended, it was idle to agitate for a dictatorship of the proletariat and an application of Russian tactics to American conditions. The leader of the Left Wing, Comrade Coleman, in answer to King, argued that the possibility of an immediate overturn in this country was something quite beside the point—that the Left Wing wished only to make the party strictly revolutionary in its aims and tactics and to prepare thoroughly for the revolution when it comes.

There is little doubt that the referendum vote on the Left Wing and Right Wing issue will result in favor of the former. The leaders of the Left, however, recognize the fact that many of their supporters are not well grounded, and they are carrying on a strenuous campaign of education among their ranks.

It is interesting to note although the Left Wingers have been denounced by the Right Wingers as hysterical, etc., at the California convention the exponents of the Left Wing were far more scholarly and unhysterical than their opponents. Cameron King, for instance, did not hesitate to resort to epithets and personal denunciation in his speeches, while Coleman's talk was a dispassionate, impersonal analysis of the situation.

This convention is a preliminary convention to a larger and more representative one which will be called in the near future.

DAN HOGAN AND DEMOCRACY

Sometimes when I have a few moments to spare, I rummage through my old correspondence and laugh heartily over all the foolish things I have said. But funnier still is to pick up one of the many letters I received from American social-patriots at the time we entered the war. All of them, in the light of recent happenings, are crammed with inconsistencies and saturated with bad socialism.

Consider, for instance, the following from Dan Hogan. He is defending his pro-war attitude in reply to a criticism I sent him:

"The goal of the socialist movement is industrial democracy. To achieve this there must first be established political democracy, and this political democracy must be international. The collapse of the Russian socialist government proves this and has shown our comrades there that there can be no security for them unless they join the Allies to destroy utterly German military autocracy."

In view of the fact that the Soviet government has not collapsed; that the principal enemy of Russian democracy has continually been, not Germany, but the Allies, Comrade Hogan's talk is exceedingly humorous.

"When the people of a nation, and finally when the people of ALL nations enjoy the right to determine their manner and mode of government, they will [illegible] tion of that system [illegible]

[illegible] We will overlook the fact that after this murderous war to rescue the fair damsel of democracy from the ravishing hands of the kaiser, we still have dozens of small nations denied the most elementary privilege of a democratic commonwealth—the right to be heard in the councils of government. We will also not stop to discuss the fact that four nations have arrogated to themselves the right of dictating the kind of a world all the remainder shall live in. The essential point which Comrade Hogan missed is this: that political democracy is a sham affair in this stage of the world's history. We have had it in America since the birth of the nation, and industrial autocracy constantly tightens its grip on the lives of the people. And political agitation, by itself, is insuficient because the press is under the rigid control of the moneyed interests and the masses cannot be educated for the overthrow of industrial autocracy under our impotent form of bourgeois democracy. This fact was proved very graphically by the experience of Russia.

"The Allies are too completely committed to the principles of democracy to back down. After the war is over, if we all do our duty, there will not be left a vestige of autocracy on the earth."

Well, the war is over, and what is the result? The result is that autocracy, in the form of international imperialism, has simply retrenched itself, uselessly slaughtering ten million young men in the process. In our own United States, we do not have as much democracy as we had before we entered the war.

Socialists who were well grounded, who had studied the imperialistic phases of modern capitalism, who refused to be moved by surface motion and current jingoism, knew what the result inevitably would be. They refused to be stampeded into the slaughter. They preferred the penitentiary to the course of either overtly or covertly supporting an imperialistic war. Comrade Hogan and others were chloroformed by the seductive phraseology and ideology of the capitalist class and persuaded to encourage a purely anti-working class butchery.

The world war has left no legacy of good to the world. True, it has brought about conditions that are making for world revolution. But these conditions make necessary a bitter and bloody revolution which could very largely have been averted if the world war had not occurred. The gains of the war are purely incidental, and would have come more satisfactorily, although more slowly, had the fratricide not taken place.

There is a great need of all socialists clearing their minds of cant and muddy thinking. Imperialism—called by Lenine the final stage of capitalism—has entered a period characterized by terrible international wars. These wars represent the struggle of capitalist privilege to retain its hold on the world. It is in reality a death struggle. It is to be expected that groups of imperialists will shove their respective countries into war by clothing their sinister purposes with ideological garb. But in none of these wars can the workers participate without contributing to the aggrandizement of bucanneering imperialism.

We must have an educated party of socialists whose revolutionary purposes will not be swayed by bourgeois sentimentality. The Socialist party must continue its magnificent stand on war and militarism; but it must do more—it must see that its membership is thoroughly acquainted with the nature and tendencies of capitalism, so that they will be ready for all crises and emergencies.

Dan Hogan happened to have a soul a trifle too sensitive to the purling slogans of imperialism.

NEXT WEEK

Next week we shall publish an article by Jos. Stilson, translator secretary of the Lithuanian Socialist Federation, and one of the best posted Socialists upon party affairs. The article will be entitled "The Split in the Socialist Party of America," and will give a history of party mismanagement since 1916, which led up to the present controversy.

To those who have not followed the present controversy as they should, this article will be a revelation and an education. It is written for party members, members who are and should take full part in party management. Your usefulness to the party will be increased manyfold after you have read Stilson's history of the split in the Socialist Party.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE DEFIES AUTOCRATIC SOCIALIST PARTY OFFICIALDOM

The State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania met in session recently and passed the following resolutions. At this time we want to say that the only news which seems to find its way into the national office press service is that which can be interpreted as favorable to the despotic seven of the national executive committee. A resolution like that below, is not given publicity by the national office.

WHEREAS—The State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania is in receipt of an official communication from Adolph Germer, Executive Secretary of the Socialist Party, informing said committee of the suspension by the National Executive Committee of the Russian, Ukrainian, Lithuanian, So. Slavic, Hungarian, Lettish and Polish language federations, and

WHEREAS—Article 12, Section 5, sub-divisions (a) and (b) provide respectively, that Branches of language federations shall be integral parts of the county and state organizations and that the power to suspend or expel members from the party shall be vested exclusively in the county and state organizations, be it

RESOLVED—By the State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania, that we recognize as integral parts of the state and county organizations all [illegible] the state and county organizations, and that they hereby are entitled to purchase dues stamps and enjoy all the rights and privileges accorded branches under the state constitution.

This means that the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania frankly refuses to obey the arbitrary rules of the national office which demanded that state secretaries refuse to sell dues stamps to branches suspended by the national executive committee. The resolution does not recognize the right of the national executive committee to suspend or expel any subdivision of the party not chartered by the national executive committee. Language branches in states are chartered by either the state or local organizations and only those have power to suspend or revoke such charters. We are anxious to learn what the despotic national executive committee will do now that the Socialists of Pennsylvania have defied it. Will Pennsylvania also be expelled?

Political or purely parliamentary action can never destroy the capitalist system. This will have to be accomplished by the workers on the job, in field, mine, factory, and distribution, by mass action of industrial unionism. I will give two instances of efforts of people to gain industrial freedom, as illustrations:

In Mexico there was a revolution to recover the land, return it to its rightful owners—those who even then were farming it. For a time there were two leaders in the north, Francisco Villa and Carranza. In the south there was another leader, Zapata. All claimed to be working for the same end—the return of the land to the farmer.

After a time there arose a difference between the two leaders of the north, not a fundamental difference of principal, but a difference as to methods of proceedure, of tactics. The difference was as to how and when the land was to be returned. Carranza wished to wait until the revolution (political) was won; until the old political regime was destroyed. He would then call an election, political, in which all the supporters of the old order could vote and hold office, after which a congress duly elected would be convened to decide how and when the land would be returned to the people (if at all). Pancho Villa wished to confiscate and divide the great landed estates as the revolution progressed from time to time and place to place. Villa said, "We know what we want, why not get it while we have the means at hand?" In this case the military forces were composed of workers who wanted land. Why wait for political decrees that may never issue, says Villa. "At best it will take a year or two after the success of the revolution to convene a congress. This congress may or may not be committed to land division. The best we can expect of this congress is to debate the issue for two or three years more (as is the custom of congresses) and in the meantime the people are without land and consequently without bread." Then, too, says Villa, "The division of the land is the strongest arm of the revolution. The greatest assurance of its success. It weakens the forces of the enemy and gives prestige to the revolution." Says Villa: If we must have political sanction of our acts, let the congress convened after the revolution sanction what has been done; place their "rubber stamp" of approval upon it after the manner of capitalistic congresses.

Carranza won. Result: After four years of control by Carranza and three years of the new congress, but few of the great landed estates have been touched. The people are still "landless and breadless."

Congress has instituted investigations to determine whether these estates were acquired legally, and if so found, they cannot be touched. Of course, they were not stolen, according to "capitalistic law." Further, due respect must be had for holdings of foreigners, however acquired. Half of the large estates are so held and cannot be touched.

In the south, Zapata went after the robbers—feudal lords—with the means at hand (armed forces). The people there knew nothing of congresses or parliamentary (parlor) action. They had no political rights. They were serfs. They knew only force. It was their only weapon. They used it. They, too, knew what they wanted—the land. They banished the "feudal lord," foreigner and all, as they were; took possession of the land, tilled it and kept the proceeds. Today there is not a landlord in the whole ninety thousand square miles of Zapataland, but thousands of "lords of the land"—happy, contented farmers.

Democracy, too, is practiced in this land of Zapata, though it is said ninety per cent of the people can neither read nor write. How practice democracy, then? By the very simple formula of assembling, discussing the questions to be decided, and then ecunting noses. No stuffing of ballot-boxes there.

Neither Zapata nor Villa could, at that time, read or write. Carranza is highly educated in the general sense of that term, and might be classed as a "capitalistic idealist." Who of these was the most practical from the workers'—landless farmers'—point of view?

The strongest weapon of the workers in capitalistic civilization, for transforming it into an industrial commonwealth, or democracy, is their industrial power exercised through revolutionary industrial unions by means of shop and central committees elected by the workers to expedite business, assume control, and dispose of the product. This, in connection with a similar political party of the workers to capture and render ineffective the capitalistic political state, the sole weapon of capitalism which would prevent the functioning of the workers' committees, could complete the transformation with little or no disorder.

to be on friendly terms with the raidacls and that the Prince of Wales was patronizing the poor.

"The king is playing with the radicals," White continued, "and his associates now are people who could not possibly have been seen within the royal circle before the war. The radical labor groups with which he is playing present a situation just as though President Wilson had taken up with Eugene Victor Debs and his associates.

As an indication of the present situation in England, he said the Baltic, which was to have sailed on June 5, was held up 21 days because of four successive strikes, all of which were won by the men.

"These men," said White, "who fought in the trenches and were told they were fighting for democracy, now intend to see that they get democracy, and they will get it."

It was his opinion that when the bloodless revolution triumphs, the king will continue to keep his place, but will be deprived of any power he may have. He would continue to "reign" as a figurehead, White asserted.

The locals of the Socialist Party have been circularized recently in behalf of "The Socialist," a New York paper and the organ of the reactionary Socialists of that city.

though they produce everything have scraps for food, shoddy for clothing and shacks for shelter, and with those below who, though they do not produce anything have the choice of everything, the best foods, the finest clothes, the luxurious houses. I am indeed a bolshevist, yet not an anarchist.

"The representation that I or Socialists generally would operate against those below with torch, bomb and dagger is slanderously wrong. We would not even make an effort to keep those whom such a revolution should put below from crawling up to work and eat, but they would be prevented from going again into their old business of robbing and enslaving.

"The Russian revolutionists are as fully justified as the American revolutionists were; and, to a great extent, their justification might have ben our declaration of independence; but they formulated their own, which is superior to ours, because it provides that henceforth Russians shall be a classless people, as Americans are not.

CIVILIZATION DEPENDS UPON SUCCESS OF SOVIET RUSSIA.

"If the new Russian government, the first real republic, lives, it means the living of the second, the Hungarian one, also the birth and life of others, and finally a league of industrial nations which will mean the death of the league of capitalistic nations.

"Upon this living and dying depends the progress of civilization, because the unconscious yet supremely important mission of the capitalistic system of production has been accomplished, that of making it possible to provide the necessities for the world without human slavery.

MACHINE, NOT MAN, FUTURE SLAVE.

"Civilization never has and never can exist on any basis except that of slavery; but capitalism has brought it to a point when it is no longer necessary that the slave should be a man, for it may now be a machine and the pending revolution will transfer the burden of slavery from men to machines.

"Under the Socialist regime there would indeed be much work connected with the making and operating of the machines of production and distribution of the necessities of life, also the work of caring for and educating children, with much besides, but every competent person would take his part; and, while on the one hand incompetency would be decreased greatly, on the other efficiency would be increased as greatly, so at most three or four hours of comparatively light employment would suffice, leaving all the balance of the day for recreation, study, conversation and rest.

"Under Socialism there would be governments, but of a geographical rather than national character, and they would be concerned with the promotion of industries rather than the control of people, their object being primarily the production of the necessities of physical life in abundance and secondarily as many luxuries as possible for all with the least expenditure of energy and time, in order that disposition, strength and opportunity might remain for the cultivation of the mind and soul.

"Under Socialism there would be religion, but of a natural rather than supernatural character, and its chief concern would be the promotion of the morality which consists in the desire and effort to learn the laws of nature, for the purpose of [illegible] the terrestrial life of men, women and children as long and happy as possible. Indeed this would be the object of all education, whether through schools, books or periodicals. The church would be [illegible] a post graduate course and the office of the preacher a supplement to that of the teacher, author and [illegible] but not essentially different.

"Socialism is the Christ of the world who is saying to it: 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. [illegible]

MR. WILSON RETURNS.

From the mummery and solemn farce of the peace conference President Wilson has returned to assure us of the unquestioned righteousness of the policies formulated in the peace treaty and the League of Nations and various other matters connected therewith, not the least among them being a reassurance of the holy aim of this nation in entering the war and the full and complete accomplishment of them.

Mr. Wilson has a strange mind. Standing as he does, after these months of diplomatic maneuvering with an empty bag (League of Nations) which he so tightly grasps claiming that all the purposes of the nation have been accomplished he presents a picture worthy of the cartoonist.

The president has formed the habit of "interpreting the American people" to the rest of the world upon all and sundry occasions. Generally his interpretations are laughable. In his speech to the senate upon his return he attempts the same upon the peoples of Europe when he states that they demanded the league and would brook no denial. No evidence that the league is a matter of consuming interest among the peoples of Europe is apparent.

We are "offered the moral leadership of the world," he states. Supply the word "financial" instead of moral, and we come nearer the truth. Mr. Wilson is great on moral leadership.

Mr. Wilson's league of nations presents the spectacle of the great capitalist powers of the world arranging among themselves a means whereby to retain their supremacy in a world wherein capitalism is no longer a necessity, in fact a menace. Recognizing the iniquity of war, it yet dare not reveal the real cause of modern wars, commercial competition between capitalistic nations.

Mr. Wilson presents nothing new in regard to the situation in Europe. In fact, the great forward movements of the peoples toward economic and political emancipation from the rulers of earth have left no mark upon him that he has seen fit to reveal. Nevertheless, these movements are of far more importance and of greater moment to the world of workers than the league of nations can possibly be. The rise of the peoples has begun, they will continue to rise completely submerging the league of nations into complete oblivion.

NEW LABOR PARTY (STILL) BORN.

Proponents of the new Labor Party meeting in Cleveland last week have adopted a platform that would have aroused interest a hundred years ago as a radical document. If those who sponsored the new political venture had planned to kill the calf a-borning, they could not have done so more effectively than they have. It was just such a convention as one would expect from the material from which it was made up. Renegade Socialists, reactionary labor fakirs and others more or less since met together in a visionless, impractical and reformistic body and formulated a platform and adopted resolutions, charcterized by mediocrity, reaction, reform and inanity.

They may be complimented upon one clause in their platform however, which calls for a restoration of the rights of free speech, free press and assemblage. Also for the "liberation of all persons held or indicted under charges due to their championship of the rights of labor or their patriotic insistence upon the rights guaranteed them by the constitution." Presumably the word "patriotic" was filled in for the purpose of getting it by the convention.

A resolution against prohibition is an indication of the backward gaze of this convention and is in striking contrast to the declarations of Seattle labor, where prohibition has been in force for two years, and where the state prohibition measure is credited with adding both reason and dignity to labor and labor's cause.

A platform declaration favoring a 6 per cent profit to industries, all above that being diverted into wages to employes, was amended to read a "fair and reasonable profit," whatever that means. So it appears that this pseudo "labor" party has safely guarded the bosses interests and the principle of the exploitation of labor by the parasites who have sucked labor's blood down through the ages.

By and large it's a great labor party.

The Seven Suspended Federations Speak Again

To the Members of the Socialist Party:

The undersigned, the translator secretaries of the seven suspended federations, issued a statement, dated June 2, setting forth the facts of an effort by the national executive commitee to disrupt the party rather than accept the mandate of the membership for a new party policy.

A referendum has been initiated to set aside these ruthless acts of party destruction; namely, (1) the expulsion from the party of the state of Michigan, (2) the suspension of the seven federations, and (3) the refusal to tabulate the referendum votes, thereby keeping the newly elected officials ou tof control. Seconds are asked for this referendum.

At this time the national office is circularizing all the locals, urging them not to support this referendum. The N. E. C. saw fit to criticize the federations because recommendation was made by some of their executive bodies of candidates in the party elections who were known to be in favor of uniting the party with the Communist International. This was simply open support of a policy of revolutionary socialism, and an attempt to supply information and guidance in regard to a list of candidates unknown to a non-English-speaking membership. Now the N. E. C. itself assumes to advise the members how to vote on a crucial matter and it does this entirely on the basis of private information not yet subjected to any investigation.

Of course, that these federations are committed to the left wing position in the party, is freely and gladly admitted. But there have been certain assertions and insinuations with regard to the party elections and the federation voting which came before the N. E. C. in form of a speech by a man by the name of Gerber, from New York, and that is the whole case so far as the N. E. C. is informed.

As a matter of fact, the only "irregularity" about the party elections [illegible] that the reactionary officials of [illegible] were defeated by tremendous majorities. Of the suspended [illegible], two had taken no official [illegible] in relation to the election. The [illegible] new regular executive bodies—though the charge is brought against the translator-secretaries—recommended the election of candidates committed to the left wing program. Information was given as to the individuals on the ballots, the names being unknown to many of our non-English-speaking comrades. As to the ballots, some of the federation branches received none and many of the federation branches could not obtain nearly enough for their membership, so that recourse was had, in some instances, to voting on slips of paper. Otherwise there was, no doubt some secretarial assistance given to members who could not read or write English, and it seems that something criminal is to be made out of this. But the fact is that the only real difference between the federation votes and those of other branches was that there was a better agreement among the federation members in support of the left wing candidates. That is the sum total of the criminality in the elections.

Since our previous statement, we learned of the first steps in a deliberate effort on the part of the party officialdom to destroy our federations. Firing the federation secretaries out of the party headquarters shows the true character of the "suspensions." Now we learn of various attempts to "re-organize" branches within the federations—attempts to use the ousted "social patriots" as scabs in order to make an appearance of opposition within the federations to our stand for revolutionary socialism.

Traitor elements are being welcomed back into the party. It need not surprise the party membership if the Polish and Czecho-Slovak nationalistic groups, which left the party on account of the St. Louis platform, now come back as the faithful supporters of the reactionary officialdom. Diplomatic "conversations" have begun, and such an alliance would be in perfect accord with the fundamental attitude of the N. E. C. Of the seven who voted to suspend the federations, four were themselves among the "social patriots," and the three Centrists who joined with them have shown their inability to respond to the revolutionary spirit of the over-

"KICKED OUT"

The Socialist Party of Massachusetts has just been "kicked out" of the national organization by the despotic national executive committee. The reason given is, because the Left Wing program was endorsed at its recent state convention. The party autocrats argue that endorsing the Left Wing program is a violation of the national constitution in that it means the adoption of a platform not in conformity with the national platform of the party.

We want to give this assertion the "lie" and finally bury it so effectively so that not another party member can be fooled by it. The Left Wing program is, in the first place, NOT A PARTY PLATFORM. It is NOT AT ALL INTENDED for propaganda purposes among the rank and file of the Socialist Party and is simply a program in which is stated in clear and definite terms the kind of tactics and principles the Socialist Party must adopt if it is to be a true Socialist organization and not a Scheidemann party, a traitor party.

Asserting that the Left Wing program and its endorsement is a violation of the Socialist Party platform IS A LIE. The Left Wing program endeavors only to show the party membership the way to that kind of Socialist action which will mean victory for the workers as in Russia and not defeat for the workers as in Germany.

The real intention, the real purpose of the despotic national executive committe in expelling and suspending these tens of thousands of members is to CONTROL THE COMING NATIONAL CONVENTION. It will work this way. Representation to the national convention is based upon last year's membership in each state. Michigan, one of the expelled states, will have six delegates at the convention. Now that Michigan is expelled, these six delegates will be elected, not by the thousands of members who paid dues last year and should be represented, but probably by about 150 members which the national office will recognize at the state organization in Michigan.

Massachusetts is entitled to 14 delegates. These delegates will now be elected, not by the Massachusetts membership which paid dues last year, but by a few branches representing very few members which agree to the action of the despotic national executive committee. In other words, every time a state is expelled the despotic national executive committee captures its national convention delegates because it reorganizes that state from those Socialists who stand for the acts of the party autocrats.

New York state has been captured in this way. However in this state a reactionary state and city executive committee expelled all Left Wing locals and the despotic national executive committee was spared the job of expelling the state organization. New York has 38 delegates to elect for the national convention. The party members will readily see just what the nefarious plans of the despots are, in the light of this information.

Before the national convention meets Ohio and Washington states will probably also be expelled. Washington endorsed the Left Wing program by a referendum vote. Ohio endorsed the Left Wing program at its recent state convention. The result of it all will be that the despotic national executive committee and its dupes will sit in judgment upon its own acts at the national convention, will O. K. these acts and manipulate the convention so as to make it impossible for the rank and file to voice its sentiments.

It has already planned to deny the rank and file to voice its disapproval of the acts of the national executive committee in throwing out nearly half of the party by holding up the call for a national referendum upon these acts, which call has been seconded by locals and branches representing more than 10,000 members, enough members to carry the referendum. Never in the experience of Socialists in the party since its organization have such shameful and despicable acts been perpetrated upon the rank and file of the party as these of the despotic national executive committee. Shall the Socialist Party be wrecked by these autocrats? It is for you to answer.

PENNSYLVANIA ON THE CARPET

Is Pennsylvania to be the next state organization to be expelled by the autocratic national executive committee? From communications at hand the decks are being cleared for just such action.

The state executive committee of Pennsylvania refused to dance to the music of the party despots, denying that the national executive committee has the right to suspend language federation branches from the party. Also, the Pennsylvania state executive committee seems to have decided in favor of the great majority of Left Wing Socialists in a controversy in Philadelphia, rather than in favor of a few "right wingers" who were trying to circumvent the will of the majority of the Philadelphia membership. In deciding in favor of the Left Wing Socialists in Philadelphia the Pennsylvania state executive committee committed "rank treason" in the eyes of the despots of the party, and now Pennsylvania is on the carpet. It is to be "investigated" and undoubtedly will then be "kicked out." Pennsylvania will elect 17 delegates to the national convention. Undoubtedly the party despots have decided that this delegation must also be captured for their use.

Otto Branstetter was sent into Michigan to reorganize that state for the party despots. He returned to the national office with a very long face. A local of seven members was the only result of his trip, the English locals and branches being a unit in their opposition to the tyrannical acts of the national executive committee.

ATTENTION TO THIS—CAUTION.

The national secretary, knowing that he is carrying on a losing fight and realizing that he lacks argument, is beginning to indulge in personalities. He has several times up to now called Alfred Wagenknecht, employed in the national office, until he was dicharged for being Left Wing, a thief. He has called L. E. Katterfeld almost everything he could lay his tongue to. We caution you not to allow an attack upon comrades, mainly personal in nature, to mislead you. Always keep in mind the principles involved in this party controversy.

A. WAGENKNECHT.

GERMER'S BUM "BOMB"

(By John McSlarrow.)

Under the head "Socialist or Factionalist" Adolph Germer comes to the defense of the national executive committee with a cleverly assembled mass of half truths and sophistical arguments which, so he says, "will be like throwing a bomb shell into the Left Wing camp."

In his opening statement he says he joined the Socialist Party "as a Socialist and not a factionalist, . . . to work for Socialism and not for this or that group or faction." He claims nineteen years membership. His stated reason reason for joining the party is not distinctive; it is the universal reason claimed by all. That the thought of factionalism is "abhorrent" to him indicates that his nineteen years in the Socialist Party has failed to teach him the fundamental law of democratic life. Factionalism is a natural development of the fact that no two persons see all things exactly alike. Each of us creates a mental picture of a better society and labels it Socialism; each of us gets the idea that "I am the only one who really knows what is needful and how to get it." The natural result of this diversity of opinion is factionalism. It is the law of life. That Germer is not immune to the working of this law is amply evidenced when he protests the holding of a party convention with the claim that "the membership do not possess the judicial balance to properly weigh world problems at this time."

It is agreed that to abate the class struggle we must eliminate classes; and the first step in this direction IS TO MAKE ONE CLASS SUPREME. The same is true of factionalism. Whatever we may CONSCIOUSLY believe and preach, the sub-conscious desire of each person is a society wherein all units are automatons and the ONE—whoever that ONE is—is the sole director of all action. Germer is no exception, as his every act proves.

It is Germer's evident purpose to frighten the timid away from the Left Wing movement by picturing it as dominated by anarchists and bomb throwers trying to precipitate another "Haymarket." In his extremity he drags in Harry Orchard—and M. E. White. He calls the memory of old time party members to witness; but, unfortunately for Germer, the old timers who remember the sensational "expose" of White will also remember that it it had all the characteristics of the usual frame up so commonly resorted to by "Pie Card" labor union officials to eliminate troublesome opponents. It will also be remembered that those who gained most by the White "expose" have since been totally discredited as being rank reactionaries.

Continuing his effort at inferential character assassination of the Left Wing he says of Orchard, "He practiced what he preached." That Orchard ever preached anything will be surprising news to the old timers whose memory he invokes. Orchard "confessed" to many crimes: but the acquittal of Haywood, et al, was largely due to the fact that it was proved that Orchard DID NOT COMMIT the crimes to which he confessed. However, Germer admits he has no proof that the Left Wing is dominated by anarchists [illegible] on a reign of terror. but says he has "talked with numerous comrades and they agree that we have them among us." It might prove enlightening if he would give us the names and OCCUPATIONS of those suspicious minded comrades, one's manner of gaining a livelihood is said to influence one's way of thinking.

Germer cites as "Un-Socialistic" and heartless the fact that certain units of the party (he calls them the Left Wing), repudiated the amnesty convention, and asks, "Where were those 'revolutionary mass actionists' during the war?" I admit the repudiation of the amnesty convention was, possibly, a tactical blunder, as it placed the representation at such convention more surely in the hands of reactionaries. But I insist that this repudiation was largely the result of resentment caused by the open attempt of the N. E. C. to prevent a National Party convention universally demanded. The allegation that Left Wing supporters did not suffer through wartime persecutions rebounds to the discredit of the maker when we remember the fate of Fraina, Wagenknecht, Ruthenberg, Stanley Clark, Emil Herman, Sam Sadler, 'Gene Debs, Hulet M. Wells and scores of others who are now doing time in prison, or, having done their bit, are now out and waging an uncompromising fight for working class domination, bitter opponents of middle class reformism. (Emil Herman, from his prison cell, repudiates the autocracy of the N. E. C. He demands to be recorded as voting NO on their every un-constitutional action, and protests their disorderly conduct in counting him as "present" in order to make up a quorum wherewith to jam through their raw deal.) This allegation of disregard for the well being of imprisoned comrades is an unpardonable insult to every member of the working class. That some comrade had sufficient regard for the well being of these immediately dependent upon him to cause him to forego the empty honor of a nomination for alderman on the Socialist ticket and choose to stick by his job is an example of remarkably good judgment—one worthy of being copied.

If congress and the state legislatures are using the terminology of

The platform was printed in the last issue of the Ohio Socialist.

We cannot make a price at this time, but we assure you that it will be low enough so that every local can make a thorough distribution. Let us know how many thousands you can use.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

This serves as official notice to all locals that the last day for filing municipal tickets is September 4th.

Go to the board of elections at once. Get official blanks upon which to gather signatures. Secure as many signatures as you can. Make it many times the number necessary; and file these signatures and the names of your candidates BEFORE September 4th. Only 45 days left to work in. Get busy AT ONCE.

DEBS GOES TO PRISON

Upon the cover a picture of Debs taken while he was asleep upon an interurban car between Steubenville and Wheeling. The long, arduous trip completely exhausted him and he fell sound asleep in his seat and slept for more than an hour. The contents of the book is written by David Karstner, who, together with J. Louis Engdahl and A. Wagenknecht, accompanied Debs to the Moundsville penitentiary.

Karstner, in a very "human interest" way, describes this trip to prison taken by America's foremost socialist. It is the best reading we have recommended for some time. Buy one or more. For one pamphlet, 25c. Twelve or more at 18c each. Order now, before you forget.

RESOLUTIONS CONDEMNING NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE PASSED BY LOCAL DEMING, NEW MEXICO

To the members of the Socialist Party throughout the United States:

Whereas, through the minutes of the national executive committee, carefully read and digested by us, we find that upwards of 40,000 dues paying members of the Socialist Party have been expelled from the party on what appears to us to be flimsy grounds, and

Whereas, these 40,000 comrades were given no trial whatsoever nor either an opportunity to admit nor deny the charges against htme, and

Whereas, on the face of available returns from the refrendum for national executive committeemen it appears that the present members of the N. E. C. who voted for this expulsion were themselves defeated for re-election, and

Whereas, the whole state of Michigan was included in this wholesale expulsion with approximately 6,000 members, and

Whereas, a deliberate attempt is being made by the N. E. C. through their refusal to count the ballots on referendums B and C, to defeat the will of the membership and to prevent the Socialist party from taking its proper place in the Third International called for by the Russian Communist (Bolshevist) party, and in which is included the Hungarian Communist, German Spartacists, Italian Socialist Party and specificalled for the participation of the elements of the Socialist Party represented by Comrade Eugene V. Debs, and therefore be it

Resolved, that we condemn in emphatic terms this plain attempt on the part of those members of the N. E. C. who represented nothing more nor less than the Scheidemann-Ebert-Kerensky petty bourgeouis Socialism to lineup our party with the reactionaries above mentioned and to betray the Russian and Hungarian revolutions, and to endanger the working classes in every other country, and be it further

Resolved, that we demand that the complete vote as cast on referendums B and C be at once tabulated and published and that both the old N. E. C. and the new N. E. C. meet with the delegates to the national convention to settle all claims to their respective offices, and be it further

Resolved, that the action of the present N. E. C. in expelling the state of Michigan be rescinded and the Russian, Lettish, Lithuanian, Ukranian, Hungarian, South Slavic and Polish federations be restored at once to full membership so that they may have full oportunity to vote for delegates to the proposed convention and be it further

Resolved, that owning to the evident bias of the present N. E. C. that the new N. E. C. as shown by the tabulation of referendum C be at once inducted into office, and that all arrangements for the proposed national convention be under control of both old and new N. E. C. so as to avoid any further sabotaging of the membership by either side, and be it further

Resolved, that we endorse the stand of the Scandinavian translator-secretary and if it is the intention of the present N. E. C. to expel every radical in the Socialist Party that we invite them to include New Mexico in their sweep, and be it further

Resolved, that we deny the implication by Stedman on page 16 of the N. E. C. minutes that the Socialist Party is primarily a political organization, but on the contrary hold that we are primarily an organization of CLASS CONSCIOUS workers with our primary object the overthrow of capitalism and the institution of the co-operative commonwealth, with politics only a means to an end—not the end itself, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the national secretary, the state secretary of Michigan and to each of the seven language federation secretaries, to the Ohio Socialist, Oakland World, Proletarian, Revolutionary Age, New York Call, and Milwaukee Leader.

A LETTER FROM KNECHT

Dear Comrade:

The affairs of the comrades of Guernsey county are rounding well into shape for an active campaign prior to the election of November.

The eleventh annual picnic of the county organization will be held Sunday, August 10, and the comrades are looking forwad to the biggest day in the history of the Socialist movement in this locality. Everywhere the people are expressing their contempt for the city official of Cambridge and the police for their attempt to prevent free speech for Socialists in this city.

An effort is being made to organize a company of state militia here, and the manufacturers, petty politicians and business men are very active in organizing a "board of trade" which of course is but a development in the class struggle, and sufficient evidence that the plutes are recognizing our increasing power. Of course the old system is doomed to die, but we may expect the parasite class to cling to the last shred of its existence.

At our county picnic we will have a press fund committee, whose duty it shall be to solicit funds for the printing press.

HERBERT KNECHT.

New Mexico Bulletin

W. B. Dillon, State Secretary, Albuquerque, N. M.

Comrades of New Mexico:

After repeated efforts to induce you to nominate for state officials and receiving only one full nomination and two endorsements for myself as state secretary, I gave it up and notified Local Carrizozo that the ticket they had nominated would go as the state official roster since the remainder of the state seemed not to care enough to nominate at all and Local Carrizozo with its membership of 50 would easily elect their own ticket.

Local Carrizozo nominated S. Parks of Las Cruces as an executive committee member, but as this former comrade's local has not paid dues within the required time, his nomination was void. Besides, he acknoweldged over his own signature to Comrade W. P. Metcalf that he had joined the Social Democratic League, fostered by the New Appeal while still under the narcotics of Wilsonian Socialism, and went even further by attempting to have the S. E. C. nullify the state ticket last fall. Hence, I requested that Local Deming nominate one of their members to fill this vacancy, which they kindly did.

Your new state officials, therefore, are as follows:

State Executive Committee—W. P. Metcalf, Albuquerque; T. E. Pendergrass, Weed; Dan Kelly, Duran; W. P. Calkins, Weed; L. R. Graves, Deming.

State Organizer—Frank J. Ashe, Carrizozo.

Woman's Correspondent—Mrs. S. M. Calkins, Deming.

State Secretary—W. B. Dillon, Box 574, Albuquerque.

If those of you who had no choice in the selection of this official family don't like any of their faces, it is your own fault. However, it is not too late to mend if you care to ask for any of their recall, but that is now your only relief until next January.

Seriously though, comrades, I do not believe that anyone in this state will be disappointed in the selection of these comrades to represent you. Some of these comrades are new to you, but from my correspondence with them I am sure that they represent the Socialist movement and the spirit of the times. Give them your hearty support and let us make 1919 one of the best years in New Mexico Socialist party history.

Comrade Frank J. Ashe, state organizer, will be open for dates very soon and I request that you notify me at once when and how many times you can use him. I do not know just yet exactly how much we will have to charge for him to cover his expenses, btu if you will arrange the dates for him we will guarantee that the charge will be one to fit your pocketbook.

Comrade T. E. Pendergrass will be released from the tender care of Uncle Sam some time in July, likely, and while I had a promise from the National office to put him in the field, the present crisis in the party very likely will cancel those arrangements. Therefore, kindly let me know when and how many times you can use him, also. Tom will need a rest, perhaps, after his release, and maybe not. Attend to these two organization matters at once, comrades. NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT.

Here is a letter I received today from an Indian comrade and his wife. In Oklahoma in 1908 I met Indians of his type but the New Mexico Indians that I have met are generally the fat, lazy breed, well cared for by Uncle Sam, and therefore far better off than their white brethren who imagine themselves freemen.

This letter is refreshing and illuminating emanating from one of our comrades whose ancestors roamed this country long before the white grafters made a capitalist heaven (or hell—take your choice) out of a land teeming with the good things of life, placed there for the bounty of all mankind.

Here is the letter. I leave out the name, town, etc., as we never know what might happen to a comrade who speaks plainly.

"Dear Comrade Dillon: Enclosed find check for $2 for a six months sub to the Ohio Socialist, and the remainder for dues for myself and wife.

"We are old Indian Territory Indians, and will move our children to the forests of Venezuela next winter. The love of our children comes first with my wife and me, and Venezuela is the only place they can be with Indians not controlled by capitalist masters.

"I have been one of the best farmers in this county for 20 years, but last year we received about 57c per hundred for our potatoes and paid $3.80 for a pair of overalls. So I am going where I can grow the things we need and the climate is such that we can do without the things we cannot grow.

"I paid for the first Socialist speaker to come to this county about 16 years ago—Mr. Smith.

"Hoping this will find you in good health, I will say good-bye, from your comrade."

Well, I wish I could go where I could raise my own grub and could tell the tailors to go to—you know. We wish you every kind of happiness and well being, our Indian comrade, and perhaps it may come to pass that the land of the Aztecs may spring into being again the far flung civilization for which it was famed, and which the gold and power mad Spaniards razed to the ground in their hollow mockery of eastern civilization.

Darned if I ain't beginning to be ashamed of my American compatriots. It seems that every country under the sun except the U. S. A. is looking upward and onward, but we free born fools still imagine that the sun rises and sets in the dollar bill, and that without Wall street the country will go to hell. And at that, I believe we are about right. If we didn't have Olly John Rockefeller and Banker Morgan and a few more of these highbinders to watch over and care for us, we never would be able to grow corn or wheat, the sun wouldn't shine at all or the tides ebb and flow, and these damned Bolshevists would come over here and induce us to keep the product of our labor instead of dividing it with the above mentioned gentlemen who need it.

Oh, punk!

This report goes to you during the time of the greatest crisis in our party history. The N. E. C. has thrown out of the party something like 40,000 members without a trial on charges which at best deserve only severe condemnation. The whole state of Michigan and seven language federations were fired bodily. I have submitted the whole question to the S. E. C. and Locals Deming and Carrizozo for their action. The matter is such that I could not submit it to each member at large, but I ask each member at large to go into the matter through the information in the various papers available to them, and let me know what they think about it.

Personally, I condemn without equivocation this act of the N. E. C. as the most arbitrary and despicable act in its history, and I waited patiently until I had every explanation that they had to submit. Perhaps I am wrong, but for the past year I have been coming slowly to the opinion that our national officials were either incapable of expressing the growing revolutionary spirit of the American workers, or worse, were preparing to line up the party with the Scheidemanns, Kerenskys, Thomases, Hendersons and other reformists.

I am no blood and thunder revolutionists who sees no good whatsoever in political reforms, and if Michigan really meant to prevent any and all such reforms they should have been warned that their action would be taken before the coming national convention, but to prevent them from all participation in the selection of delegates to this convention by first expelling them and then reorganizing the state with only the reformers in the state is the grossest of crimes against every Socialist ethic. In fact, it savors so strongly of personal animus and political chicanery that I am compelled to believe that it was and is a deliberate attempt to retain control of the party machinery in spite of the evident intention of the membership to swing to the left.

I am leaving tomorrow for New York to attend the conference of the Left Wing sections of the party. I am not sure that I want to align myself with them, so I am going there to get into personal touch with the leaders of this section of the party. However, I will state frankly that unless there is something underlying the propaganda of the Left Wing sections that does not appear in their programs and their personal letters to me, I will very likely come back strengthened in my resolution to support only such sections of the party as follow the lines of the class struggle, strictly and rigidly.

Class lines are being drawn so tightly nowadays, comrades, that to attempt to blur them only confuses the issue. Let the Gompers element amongst the workers support capital; let you and I and every other real Socialist fight it out along strictly working class lines.

Remember, that compromise spells disaster. Remember Kerensky in Russia and Scheidemann in Germany. Don't lose your head, but don't make the mistake of playing capital's game of crushing everything in opposition to you unless you know that opposition to be capitalistic in nature. Every section of the party should remain inviolate until a convention settles the matter. No seven members have the right to expel nearly half the party.

New Mexico is small in membership, but let us show that we are large in class consciousness.

STAND BY THE LEFT WING! So far they have proven their ability all over Europe.

LENINE, TROTSKY, BELA KUN, LUXEMBOURG, LIEBKNECHT, LONGUET, MacDONALD, DEBS, KATE O'HARE, compare them with SCHEIDEMANN, KERENSKY, THOMAS, HENDERSON, SPARGO, BENSON, et al. and then choose which you want to follow. I do not want to compare Germer, Berger, Stedman, Work, et al, with the Social patriots last mentioned above, but I am sorry to say that they are gradually compelling me to do so.

If you are lucky enough to have the speeches of Germer, Berger, Engdahl, Kruse and Tucker before Landis before being sentenced, compare the fire and scathing contempt of Engdahl, Kruse and Tucker's speeches with the cold, methodical araignments of Berger and Germer. There you have the revolutionary fire of the crusaders against the passionless non-resistant who is content to let matters gradually straighten themselves out. It is a test, comrades, which goes much deeper than you think.

If you had ever seen all of these comrades in action as I have seen them, you would better understand what I mean. Kruse, Engdahl and Tucker are calm and cool when delivering the firiest broadshides—Berger and Germer both get hot. Debs cuts into the very vitals of capital, yet seldom has any one ever seen Debs mad.

Think it over.

W. B. DILLON,
State Secretary.

Local Louisville Kentucky Calls Acts of N. E. C. Traitorous

Whereas, the national executive committee has suspended foreign federations with a membership variously estimated from 25,000 to 36,000, and

Whereas, said national executive committee has failed to give any adequate reason for said suspension, and

Whereas, we believe that the expulsion of the above mentioned language federations was prompted by the national executive committee's desire to interfere with the election of the proper delegates to the coming mergency national convention, and

Whereas, the aforementioned act of the national executive committee is an attempt at party treason inasmuch as said act is an attempt to break the unity of the party and therefore weaken our attacks upon the master class,

Therefore be it resolved, that we, Local Louisville, in regular business session June 7th, 1919, do hereby express our most emphatic protest against this dastardly attempt to disrupt the party and divide our strength before the enemy, and we also hereby serve notice on each and every member of the national executive committe who are guilty of the aforementioned treacherous conduct, that we will not forget your actions and will do all in our power to see that you will never again be intrusted with a position of power or importance in this party, and be it further resolved,

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the national executive committee and to the Ohio Socialist for publication.

F. A. HUBER,
Local Secretary.

A Dough-Boy Ditty

Favorite song of the American Army of Occupation, somewhere in Germany. (Air, "Silver Threads Among the Gold.")

"Darling, I am coming back—
Silver threads among the black—
Now that peace in Europe nears,
I'll be home in seven years.
I'll drop in on you some night,
With my whiskers long and white—
Yes, the war is over, dear,
And we're going home, I hear!
Home again with you once more,
Say—by nineteen-twenty-four.
Once I thought by now I'd be
Sailing back across the sea;
Back to where you sit and pine,
But we're stuck here on the Rhine.
You can hear the gang all curse—
'War is hell, but peace is worse!'
When the next war comes around,
In the front rank I'll be found;
I'll rush in again pell-mell,
Yes I will—I will like hell!"

Ballots for Election of State Officials Now in Hands of Local Secretaries

Ballots for Election of State Oficials Now in Hands of Local Secretaries.

The annual election of a state executive committee and a state secretary for the Socialist party of Ohio, is now in progress. All members of the party are advised to attend their next local and branch meetings and take part in the voting. To assist in party management is the duty of every party member. A "stay at home" is not fulfilling his pledge as a socialist, and too many "stay at homes" throw the party management into the hands of a few active comrades who would much rather divide their activity and responsibility with the several thousand members in this state who never seem to find time to attend a local or branch meeting. Attend the next meeting of your organization and help elect a state secretary and a state executive committee of seven members.

There are four candidates for state secretary upon the ballot: Edmund J. Hewit, secretary of Local Ashtabula; Otto F. Hoefer, secretary of the German branch in Chincinnati; Herbert Knecht, who has been secretary of several locals in this state and who now lives in Cambridge; and A. Wagenknecht, the present state secretary.

More candidates for state executive committee appear upon the ballot this year than for some years past. A total of 31 comrades accepted the nomination and there is no doubt that from among this number an efficient committee can be elected. All of the nominees are known to the state membership, for all of them are active socialists and have been introduced to the membership through the columns of the Ohio Socialist many times during the year.

The candidates for the state executive committee are: John P. Baker, Columbus; M. J. Beery, Mansfield; Edwin [illegible], Lima; Chas. Bonsall, Salem; Geo. Bundy, Warren; Lotta Burke, Cincinnati; J. M. Cahalane, Hamilton; F. J. Catlin, Youngstown; Tom Clifford, Cleveland; Jos. Coope, Youngstown; A. J. Feldhaus, Cincinnati; F. B. Hamilton, Piqua; Clarence Heil, New rBemen; J. J. Hoge, Bellaire; Wm. A. Jenkins, Salem; L. C. Jordan, New Bremen; J. R. Larimore, E. Liverpool; W. W. E. Lewellen, East Liverpool; Jos. McKim, Derwent; Wm. Patterson, Toledo; Marguerite Prevey, Akron; J. A. Rehm, Springfield; Hugo Ruemmele, Norwood; Arthur Sapp, Hamilton; C. E. Schilling, Nashport; Jos. W. Sharts, Dayton; J. E. Steiger, Hamilton; F. B. Strobel, Mt. Vernon; M. A. Toohey, Toledo; Chas. H. Werner, Barberton; Jos. Woodward, Dayton.

Do You Know Him?

By Frederick Raper

He clapped his hands and he laughed in glee,
And he shouted a loud hosanna.
When he heard that a man had been mobbed and killed,
But that was in Butte, Montana;
And he raved and swore till the air grew hot
When he heard that a prince had been tried and shot
In Russia.

He praised the jury and flattered the court,
With never a single "Fie, oh!"
When a brave old hero was sent to jail,
But that was in Cleveland, Ohio—
And his cheeks grew red and his lips grew pale
When he heard that a duke had been sent to jail
In Russia.

When some Russian workers were sent to jail
For asking his nation's pity,
"Such foreign scum should be shot," said he,
But that was in New York City—
And he wiped hot tears with a trembling hand
When he heard the peasants had "stolen" the land
In Russia.

When a labor leader was falsely tried
The news was a sweet nabisco;
He shouted and sang in delirious joy,
But that was in San Francisco—
And you ought to have heard the things he said
When he heard that a count was poorly fed
In Russia.

He heard of some people disfranchised and spurned,
And he was not inclined to be snippy;
He thought very little about it, in fact,
But that was in Mississippi—
And he walked the floor and he beat the air,
And he gnashed his teeth and he tore his hair,
And his burden was greater than he could bear
When he heard of the same thing [illegible]
In Russia.

SNAPPY SAYINGS FROM PRESS FUND CONTRIBUTORS

"I enclose check for $6.20. This is the second installment from our collection box which we are donating to the press fund. Am glad to learn that you are pleased with results so far, and hope they may keep increasing until the $10,000 is raised." W. N. PATTERSON,
Sec'y Local Zanesville, Ohio.

FROM A CONSTANT BOOSTER.

Three dollars from himself and two from friends for the press fund is what Comrade V. Topov of St. Louis sends in. Comrade Topov is one of our very best boosters. He also ordered 300 copies of the O. S. for distribution.

MORE IF NEEDED.

A dollar and fifty cents comes from Comrade Alex Van Gundy of Cheyenne, Wyo. Comrade Van Gundy says he will send more if needed later. Like many other "live wires" throughout the country, he is just bound that we shall have that printing plant.

FROM A MICHIGAN REBEL.

One of our best boosters in Michigan is Comrade E. Vanderoest of Kalamazoo. He not only secures renewals and new subscriptions for the Ohio Socialist, but helps us buy our printing plant too, by contributing a dollar. Comrade Vanderoest is always on the job at every opportunity to work for Socialism.

KEEP POWER WITH RANK AND FILE.

"We must never allow the power to fall from the rank and file," writes Comrade M. A. Mann of Oneonta, N. Y., in a letter received wherein he scores the N. E. C. for expelling thousands from our party. He helps to keep the power in the Socialist Party where it belongs by contributing a dollar to the Ohio Socialist press fund.

NEVER TOO LATE.

Expressing the hope that he is not too late to help, Comrade Chas. Hames of Toledo contributes a dollar to the press fund. "Will do the best I can to support the Ohio Socialist," he writes.

A FEW MORE BOOSTS.

"Enclosed find a few more boosts to help us along the way," is what Comrade Mrs. Fred L. Thompson writes in her letter which enclosed two dollars from herself and a friend, and also one subscription.

HARD AT WORK FOR THE PRESS FUND.

At the state picnic Local Youngstown, O., pledged to raise one hundred dollars for the press fund. Now comes the cheering news from Comrade F. J. Catlin that the seven branches of the local are hard at work on the keeping of the pledge. All activities point to a going over the top of that pledge at a lively pace, sixty dollars having already been collected and great enthusiasm being shown by the comrades.

And there's plenty of cause for enthusiasm in this matter of securing a press and printing plant for the Socialist Party. Nothing can prove so valuable to us in our propaganda work as it will. Everybody hustle a bit and we will soon have it.

BUSY WITH PRESS FUND LISTS.

Local Seneca County is busy circulating the press fund lists. This local's remittance this week was $16. One list circulated by Comrade W. M. Ralston contained four dollars and another by Comrade Henry Geiger contained $12.

More funds from this local will soon be sent in we are assured by Secretary Nellie Lescher, as other comrades have lists out circulating them for the purpose of augmenting our press fund.

ANOTHER LOCAL HELPS.

Local Sandusky, O., is another of our locals that has flung itself into the work of pushing the press fund. A ten dollar donation received from this local shows how promising the press fund grows. Other locals should take a hint from Local Sandusky and lighten their treasury of a few of its superfluous "metal" for this purpose.

MORE FOR THE SAME GOOD CAUSE.

A second donation of three dollars, making eight so far, is what Comrade K. W. Boring of Wellsville, O., sends us. And also he pledges three dollars a month to the press fund for six months. That's what we call being in earnest. When we all feel about our own printing plant as does Comrade Boring, we'll soon have it mightly shortly.

LOCAL SPRINGFIELD HELPS.

Comrade W. B. Crowell, secretary of Local Springfield, O., sends us $15.50 for the press fund. This sum was donated by the local. Just another proof of the strength of the desire of comrades throughout the state and country that we establish our own printing plant to carry on the battle for industrial democracy.

AND NOW WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS?

It seems that there is no end to the many plans which comrades and locals are putting across to raise funds for the party printing press. But it remains for Comrade S. B. Cole of Marietta, O., to outdo any one that has been proposed yet. And what do you suppose that plan is? Guess we will have to tell you about it.

Here is what Comrade Cole has proposed to Local Marietta to do for the press fund. He proposes to put up a dollar for every dollar donated by any member of the local. He writes that he may have taken over a big order but nevertheless he will keep the offer. And now the matter is up to the members of Local Marietta. The members ought to, under these circumstances, see to it that every member does his duty by the press fund. Letters are being sent out to all local members bearing the good news that every dollar contributed to this fund counts "two." Comrades of Marietta are to be congratulated upon having such a member as Comrade Cole among them. We are anticipating some fine results from Local Marietta in the very near future.

A DANDY LIST FROM POMEROY.

The members of Local Pomeroy, O., are strong believers in the Social party owning the means of publicity. Comrade J. A. Brechtel sends us a list of seven names with contributions amounting to nine dollars. Thank you, comrades of Pomeroy.

TOLEDO, TOO.

Toledo, O., local comes to bat with a contribution of $22.90 for the press fund. This amount represents donations from members of the local. We have not their individual names, so until we receive them we trust they will be content to accept our thanks through Comrade M. A. Toohey, secretary.

SLOVAK COMRADES IN ACTION AT BLACK TOP, O.

A letter from Comrade John Moravek of Black Top, O., tells us that the press fund subscription lists have been placed in the hands of the "Sons of Revolutionary Socialism" and results will be forthcoming in very short while. The comrades are more than anxious to see the day when the Socialist party shall own its own printing plant and the O. S. become a daily.

ONE SENTENCE SERMONS

Uncle Lark has a peculiar way of snatching a truth and driving it in with a thunderbolt. We quote a few:

The reign of blood continues to rain on the just the same as on the unjust.

Man's instinct to bow to injustice stinks the most horrible of all other stinks.

At the theater the fool looketh upon the screen; the philosopher, behind it.

Laziness is a revolt of the flesh against exploitation.

"Universal Brotherhood" is the only healing balm that will ever make the world wound heal over.

The appetite of justice seldom craves blood.

Free thought must always precede free speech.

If this is a "war of brains," after this war maybe we can enjoy a "brain" peace.

Instead of "international brotherhood," the world is about to have "international" starvation.

It is a long jump from a "rented shack" upon earth to our "mansions in the skies."

After the world war, fame will command the sea of oblivion to give up her dead.

Autocracy's dying kick was the hardest kick that she ever gave.

The caravan route across the great Sahara desert of militarism is marked with bones.

whelming mass of the party membership.

Unless the party members act quickly and decisively to rebuke these actions of the N. E. C., there will be some degree of confusion within the federation ranks. There will be dissension and rancor. Our work of organization may be set back years, because members may become disgusted with the whole party if a few officials are allowed to proceed in this high-handed way.

We warn our federation members against withdrawal from their present organizations. We are confident that the members of all other locals and federations will vote for our quick re-instatement. Meanwhile our work will go on just the same, and dues-stamps will be sold as before. The only difference will be the location of our offices. When it comes to the voting for delegates to the Emergency convention of August 30th, we will advise our members further as to our method of procedure.

Comrades, the real issue before you is one of "moderate socialism" against revolutionary socialism, the Yellow International against the Communist International. Do not let yourselves be deceived by the many unfounded assertions which are coming out of the national office. The men who did such disgraceful, and destructive things to win control of the Emergency convention will say anything to support their acts.

The only crime of these federations is their firm adherence to revolutionary socialism, their oneness in spirit and understanding with the Bolsheviks of Russia and the Communists of all lands.

To stand by these federations is to stand by real socialism in the United States. Everywhere the new spirit of the party is winning victories. All that is needed is quick action to make an end of the sabotage of a small group of unscrupulous reactionaries who would rather destroy the party than have it give up its opportunistic, anti-revolutionary reformism.

Support the referendum to reinstate our federations. Do not wait for the convention, but let every one know where the membership stands.

Fraternally,

the Left Wing as an excuse for more repressive laws it is merely incidental. The master class is frantic with dread of the growing power of the workers, and repressive laws are the thing to be expected. Like the N. E. C. when it expelled a third of the organization, its very life is at stake and any kind of an excuse will do on which to hang a repressive measure. The implication that "mass action" is synonymous to mob action and violence cannot be made, honestly, except by persons with distorted mentality. Nothing whatever can be done by a people or a class except it be an expression of the collective will, i. e., "mass action." Any violence which may occur is incidental and the result of MINORITY OPPOSITION. To advocate the capture of the powers of government through the ballot box is to preach MASS ACTION—of a sort. To advocate control of industry through industrial organization and the general strike is to preach mass action, or a combination of them, is certainly no more "incendiary" than the statement of Victor Berger who, some years ago, said: "One should not only vote for Socialism, but each voter should provide himself with a high power rifle and the necessary rounds of ammunition to enforce his mandate," but I have never heard it claimed that Berger is a paid hireling of capital "trying to precipitate a new Haymarket." The N. E. C. expelled 40,000 members who wanted Socialism instead of reform. Germer is trying to frighten the remainder into sending delegates to the convention who will acquiesce in this high-handed manifestation of factionalism. He will fail; for no SOCIALIST, however timid, will ever endorse autocracy.

DEBS 65 YEARS OLD AND CAGED LIKE A BEAST 14 HOURS OUT OF EVERY 24.

To The Rescue -- All Of You Who Want Him Freed

Let's lose no more time about it.

We have waited long enough for others to take the leadership in the movement to free Debs and all other political prisoners.

We'll wait no longer. We'll begin right now and do our part, each and every one of us and we will make every lick count.

Debs made the speech, for which he is now suffering in the Atlanta penitentiary, at Canton, Ohio, at the annual state picnic of the Socialist Party of Ohio.

The Socialsts of Ohio owe Debs every ounce of energy and every cent they can spare to help him gain his freedom. The Socialists and all workers of this entire country are heavily indebted to Debs and NOW IS THE TIME to square accounts, to pay back in some measure the 40 years of life which Debs has given SERVING YOU.

Debs is an old man as years ago, tho very young at heart. He has labored diligently in the ranks of labor, given his voice and his pen in labor's defense, given a life-time doing duty on the firing line, never flinching, always with face toward the enemy.

Hundreds of thousands of workers have been inspired by his speeches and writings. He never minced words. He never crawfished. He spoke the truth and nothing but the truth—and how that did hurt the capitalist class and their crumb picking lackeys!

That's the reason, the real reason, why Debs is in prison today. He is dangerous to Wall Street. Wall Street has said so.

And by that very sign it becomes your duty and our duty to RESCUE DEBS AT ONCE.

HELP SAVE HIS LIFE

It happened June 13th, last.

Without so much as an hour's notice Debs was packed out of the Moundsville penitentiary, where he was enjoing some degree of comfort, and dragged to the Atlanta penitentiary where, surrounded by the most stringent prison regulations possible to conceive, he is now attempting to hold body and soul together in the hot and fetid atmosphere prevailing in the south at this time.

We do not overstate when we say that considering his health and his age, HIS LIFE IS NOW IN DANGER.

Debs has not been a well man for several years past. In his tours of northern Ohio, just before he was taken to Moundsville, he broke down several times. He got up out of bed, a sick man, when he was called to Cleveland ot give himself up to the United State marshall. We saw him then. We made the trip to Moundsville with him. We watched him closely. He was completly exhausted before he had traveled one third of the distance. He complained of his back and if was with much difficulty that he mounted and dismounted the various interurban cars upon which the journey to Moundsville was made.

Out of Steubenville he fell sound asleep in his seat. Nothing could awaken him, not even the foreign born wage slave who, when he attempted to sit down beside him sat upon Debs instead, due to the lurching of the car. It was the sleep of a man half dead—and true indeed, he was half dead.

Now he's in the Atlanta penitentiary, compelled to labor eight hours a day in the clothing department and then compelled to spend fourteen hours a day in a steel cage, penned up like a wild beast.

To the rescue—all of you who want Debs freed.

Help save his life!

HE'LL NOT BEG FOR MERCY.

Yes we know what the United States Attorney General wants. He and those whom he serves want Debs to crawl before him on all fours and beg for a pardon. He wants Debs to admit that he did wrong when he spoke as he did at Canton, Ohio.

HE WANTS DEBS TO ADMIT HE DID WRONG! THINK OF IT!

In other words, he wants Debs to admit that Socialism is wrong. And Debs' only answer to this in effect is—"My life is in your hands. Take it. But I will never admit having done wrong when I said that war is an abomination and wholsale slaughter, a crime."

Debs would rather die in prison, he would rather die a death of slow torture in the heat of his prison cell in the hot Southland than beg for even a crust from the masters of today. He BEG for a PARDON? Not if he were to be shot at sunrise!

Debs will NEVER whine for mercy.

He will never ask for a single favor. The Attorney General, it is alleged, innocently, or ignorantly, thought that Debs was not asking for a pardon because he was receiving humane treatment at Moundsville. Send him to a hell-hole and make him get down on his knees—was then the order given. Again they will be fooled. Debs is not the pardon asking kind. He is a real man, bigger, truer and nobler than any of the servants who dance to the music of Wall Street.

However, we are many and they are few.

UNITY OF ACTION IS ALL THAT IS NEEDED.

Up with your right hand and swear that you will not rest until Debs walks forth a free man!

WE ARE READY FOR ACTION.

As we said—we do not intend losing another minute in entering upon the work and sacrifice necessary to win freedom for Debs and all political prisoners.

We BEGIN NOW to do everything we can to awaken and organize the workers to a realization of the peril Debs is in, the peril in which the entire working class is in, for none of us are free so long as one of us is imprisoned.

THE OHIO SOCIALIST, which has the largest circulation of any party owned paper in America, will be a formidable weapon in this fight. We shall use its every issue to agitate and organise for the freedom of our own imprisoned comrades.

The state office of the Socialist Party of Ohio is probably better equipped than any other state office of the party in the country. The entire office force and office machinery will be placed at the disposal of the workers who join with us in this battle for freedom, yes, for the very life of Debs.

We may be in a position to soon install the printing plant, for the purchase of which so many hundreds of workers and organizations are contributing so generously. This will also be put to work to help win Debs' liberty.

With these facilities and weapons we intend to print hundreds of thousands of leaflets to awaken the workers to the need of their immediate co-operation.

We intend to print posters for public display, and postal cards with which to advertise the shameful and merciless system which takes as toll the lives of men and women for speaking their honest convictions.

We intend to circularize labor unions and Socialist Party locals, placing before them resolutions their respective bodies should pass demanding the freedom of Debs and all the rest. We also intend to suggest to them such organized and well directed action as may be necessary to make their protests felt.

We intend to engage and route speakers to visit labor unions and Socialist locals, as well as to hold meetings upon street corners and wherever else possible, to help arouse the workers to action.

We intend to do everything that the law allows to grab Debs and the rest out of the clutches of capitalism and place him and all back into the protecting ranks of labor.

WILL YOU HELP?

HOW YOU CAN HELP.

You can HELP in many ways.

First of all a substantial LIBERATION FUND is needed. Leaflets can not be printed; posters can not be printed; postage can not be bought; circular letters can not be produced; speakers can not be employed; agitation and organization for the liberation of Debs and an other political prisoners CAN NOT be carried on WITHOUT FUNDS.

TO DATE NO DEFINATE ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN, NO DEFINATE WORKERS' MOVEMENT OF ANY KIND HAS BEEN ORGANIZED TO FREE DEBS.

We shall organize such a movement.

We want you to belong to it.

The VERY FIRST THING for ALL OF US TO DO is to go to all workers who want Debs freed and frankly ask them to give financial assistance.

We shall have contribution lists printed. We shall send you one. If it does not reach you, let us know AT ONCE.

After funds are at hand we shall immediately print leaflets which will AROUSE THE WORKERS to the necessity of IMMEDIATELY FREEING DEBS and all the rest. But Debs must be freed at once, or he will leave the Atlanta penitentiary a corpse.

You will then be called upon to assist in distributing these hundreds of thousands of leaflets we shall print; you will be called upon to help post the thousands upon thousands of posters which we will produce.

You will also be called upon to do special agitation work in your union, if you are a union member. If you are not a member of a labor union, then the funds which you will help gather will pay the wages of a speaker who will visit unions to secure their cooperation in freeing Debs.

The A. F. of L. leadership is reactionary. Every intelligent workers knows this. However, the light is beginning to shine among the rank and file. Only the other day the Chicago Federation of Labor, representing 250,000 organised workers, passed resolutions demanding freedom for Debs. We must now reach these workers and induce them to BACK UP their resolutions by demonstrations of their power in industry.

The work ahead is A BIG JOB. But we are EQUAL TO IT. Let us begin it TODAY. Let us do a little every day to awaken the mighty working class to a realization of its power, for the power of the working class is the only weapon that will free Debs.

ARE YOU WITH US?

THERE'S NO TIME TO LOSE.

Thousands of workers will join with us in this call to duty.

These thousands will interest thousands of others, and so our army of liberators will grow until they number hundreds of thousands.

The BEGINNING MUST BE MADE.

We call upon YOU to be one of the first to answer—"I'm ready to do my share."

NOW is the critical moment. There is not a minute to lose. While you and we rejoice on each day of freedom to live our lives outside the shadow of prisons, Debs grows old and gray, shut out from all that makes men manly and keeps men sane; shut away from family, friends and the cherished labors of a lifetime; locked away behind stone walls and iron bars, he and thousands of worthy if less known comrades and fellow workers are awaiting the call that must come from labor's throat—"come forth".

It is for you and every worker to join in that call until the powers that rule shall heed it and return these comrades of ours to us. To this work let every comrade give the best that is in him and dedicate every day to the performance of the propaganda for "FREEDOM FOR DEBS AND ALL POLITICAL PRISONERS."

Try The Big One!

Debs Caged at Atlanta to Satisfy Demands of his Foes the Coal Kings

By David Karsner

Out of the mystery of months have come the facts relating to the transfer of Eugene Victor Debs from the West Virginia state prison at Moundsville to the United States prison at Atlanta, Ga.

The coal kings of West Virginia, who operate through the Consolidated Coal Company, headed by former United States Senator Clarence W. Watson, have, through Governor John J. Cornwell, demanded and accomplished the removal of Debs from Moundsville prison, where he was the recipient of such kindnesses as the warden chose to show him, to Atlanta Federal prison, where no exception is made to Debs of any kind or character.

The United States government through the Department of Justice, has become the agent of the industrial barons of West Virginia in setting in motion the legal and technical machinery that sent Debs, on on one hour's notice, from a prison atmosphere of comperative kindness and consideration, to another prison atmosphere where he is locked in a cell with five other prisoners from 5 o'clock in the afternoon to 7 o'clock the next morning—14 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Department of Justice at the behest of the Board of Control of the Moundsville prison and other state charitable and reform institutions uprooted Debs from his work as hospital clerk at Moundsville, where he rendered uncounted personal services to the sick prisoners, and placed him in Atlanta prison, where he is now assigned to the clothing room, working at a clerical task from 8 in the morning to near 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

FREE DEBS—JOIN THE LIBERATOS.

Warden is Double-Crossed.

That this evil design upon Debs' very life was deliberate is further proved by the fact that for its accomplishment it was necessary for the Board of Control of West Virginia to double-cross the warden of Moundsville state prison, Joseph E. Terrel, who was not informed of the impending removal of Debs until a few hours before its actual occurence.

Contrary to the secrecy which deprived Warden Terrell of all knowledge concerning the plans of the Federal and state authorities about Debs' removal Warden Fred G. Zerbst of Atlanta prison told me a few weeks ago that he knew Debs was coming to Atlanta two weeks before his arrival there, June 14, 1919. Warden Zerbst also told me in Debs' presence that his prisoner would be assigned to clerical work in the prison hospital.

Letter Reveals Board's Act.

The statement that the Department of Justice acted upon the request of the Board of Control of West Virginia is proved beyond all peradventure by the following letter:

Joseph W. Sharts, Esq., Attorney-at-Law, Lowe Building,
Dayton, Ohio:

Sir— The Department of Justice has your letter of the 18th instant, in which you ask to be informed as to the grounds upon which Federal prisoner, Eugene V. Debs, was transferred from the West Virginia penitentiary to the Atlanta Federal prison.

Debs was ordered transferred

British Workers Demand Ending of Russian Blockade And Ending of Undeclared War Against Soviets

Workers of Great Britain, France and Italy have decided to hold a joint demonstration, July 20-21, against allied intervention in Russia and the continnance of the food blockade.

Arthur Henderson outlined the program at the labor conference now in session at Southport, England. He explained that it would be left to each country to decide whether the demonstration would take the form of political or industrial action.

The conference adopted resolutions urging British trade unions to take industrial action to force the government to stop military operations in Russia. Another resolution adopted endorsed the six hour day in all industries.

Without a dissenting vote the conference adopted resolutions condemning conscription and recommending that the British Trade Union Congress and the "triple aliance" (miners, rairoad men and transport workers) of labor take immediate industrial action to abolish it.

A proclamation "To the Workers of England" on the Russian situation is being distributed over the British Isles. It appears in the June 5th issue of the "Labor Leader," official organ of the British Independent Labor Party, and is as fol-

TO THE WORKERS OF ENGLAND!

Do you how England is fighting the Russian peoples? Do you know that she is employing the most cruel and deadly weapon that the mind of man has devised?

In the great castles of the mediaeval barons there were hunger towers—the most awful punishment inflicted in those monstrous times was incarceration in these strongholds of death.

Now, in the 20th century, we Christian English, who for four and a half years have waged a "Holy War" against "the Huns," are fighting with the weapon of hunger a people against whom we dare not declare that we are at war!

And we are using this weapon with an even greater refinement of cruelty than that of the Dark Ages. We are killing children inch by inch with hunger, in their mothers arms; wives before their husband's eyes; mothers before their sons.

We are making men mad with hunger. We are driving little boys to kill their little sisters to get their share of food.

We are doing this not to one poor victim of our spite, but to thousands. In August, 1918, Lord Robert Cecil is reported to have said that:

On the authority of well-informed persons the death roll in Russia from disease, hunger, and malnutrition may reach 20,000,000.

Was the blockade relaxed? No, it was tightened. In November last Mr. Hoover estimated that "40,000,000 people in Russia were on the verge of starvation." Did we try to send them food? No, we sent munitions to Koltchak, and forbade the Scandinavians to send their seed corn, even after it was paid for—our fleet held it up and we forbade the fisherman of Norway to send cod to Petrograd.

Speaking in the House of Commons on Thursday, May 29, Mr. Churchill said: "Petrograd, of course, is a city of the dead." Yes, of course, it ought to be a city of the dead! But unfortunately, it would seem we have not quite finished the job, for a letter in the "Times" of the same day says:

Hundreds of people dying there daily of starvation, and insane persons, apparently driven crazy by hunger, are going about trying to pick up any kind of offal in the streets.

Reports from the interior of Russian say that famine is spreading; the deaths from typhus are increasing—inplaces the inhabitants are trying to exist on dried clover—and still we keep up the starvation blockade—the cordon sanitaire.

But say the supporters of the Government, the women and children cannot blame us if they die or go mad—it is their own fault; they should make their Bolshevik Goverament capitulate to the Allies. No doubt Von Tirpitz said the same of the poor North Sea fishermen and the victims on the Lusitania—but such deeds did not make England submit.

And now, says Mr. Churchill and his friends, we must go on killing babies in Russia, Hungary, Austria, wheresver we please, by this newfound, most effective wholesale method—and we are not to blame!

But the workers of England—what do they think about it?

It is the same weapon that the capitalist class have always used against them in all their struggles to improve their lot. Whether it was a lock-up or a strike—it was always "starvation" to which the masters looked for their victory over the workers.

Now the masters are asking the workers of this country to help them while they use that starvation weapon against whole nations, whose crime—in Russia and Hungary—is that they have attempted to form a Workers' Government. How long will the workers allow this to go on—the organized workers—they who have the power?

In France, America, Greece and Italy, the workers have made their protest and effectively. Their soldiers and sailors are being withdrawn from Russia. But ours are being compelled to march on Petrograd. Are British workers alone in their apathy and indifference? When will they wake?

Gleanings From The Log Of An Agitator

Written for the O. S. by W. R. Reynolds.

Our great-great forefathers had a successful political revolution. We have just celebrated its 143 anniversary. Is it not about time we had a social revolution and a new Independence Day to celebrate?

Aristocracy is conservative, and exists by gifts from the past. Democracy is revolutionary, and looks to the future for its justification. Judging America by its spokesmen, both in the field of politics, labor, industry or education, which is it, an aristocracy or a democracy?

Still Gompers is doing all he can to aid the revolutionary labor forces in America. His privately owned political machine, once again re-elected him to the presidency of the most reactionary labor body in the world.

An aristocracy resists the encroachment of new ideas; it doubts nothing, holds permanently to outworn beliefs and is content with bounds; its virtues belong to feudalism—loyalty to king and obedience to inherited or constituted authority. Its powers and privileges both public and private are derived by inheritance. No wonder the American aristocrats and their paid mouthpieces throw a fit every time they hear that Democratic Russia has abolished private property in lands and mines and factories. and abolished the right of inheritance. Russia has cut the tap-root of aristocracy and made democracy possible.

"It is easy to meet the arguments of the corner soap-box agitator", remarks the capitalistically minded editor of an obscure magazine known as the "Labor Digest," but we notice the said editor did not meet them. He did as they all do, evaded the issue.

* * *

Here is just a sample argument. Any editor anywhere is welcome to "meet" it; we socialists will welcome the meeting, fact is we will go further, we will gladly arrange a meeting. Here is the argument.

Labor is the sole source of value-in-exchange.

Capital creates nothing but trouble. Every dollar which capital gets, labor has to create but does not get. Every dollar which labor gets, labor creates. Whoever gets a dollar he did not earn, gets the evidence that labor earned but did not get that dollar.

JOIN—THE ARMY OF LIBERATORS.

The present order of society is based fundamentally upon the wages-system and private property in land, mines, factories, etc, etc, and as such perpetuates the system of the systematic robbery of the forces of labor. No solution short of a complete social revolution can be found. Hence a social revolution based upon the abolition of the right of private property in all the sources of socially necessary raw materials, the abolition of inheritance laws and the equal liability of all the physically fit to labor, is absolutely necessary before democracy, liberty, industrial freedom, and social peace can be established. There is the argument in a nutshell. Hop to it, you spokesmen for an age that vanished with the spinning wheel. You can wrestle with that as long as you please. Turn it about, twist it as you will; it is what the socialists have to offer and it is a solution, not an excuse.

Marx and Engels theoretically pointed the way in 1848 in the Communist Manifesto. One can not lay claim to being well read these days and still be in ignorance of the contents of that little book. Russia in 1918-19 has given us a practival example of how to do it. Why are the capitalists papers still lying about Russia? Simply for fear that we shall go and do likewise?

The Communist Manifesto written in 1848 on page fifteen says 'The executive of the moedrn state is but a committee for managing the affairs of the whole bourgeoisie,' but it took a peace conference in 1919 to demonstrate this great truth to a waiting world.

Read the article on page 45, in the Communist Manifesto headed "Petty Bourgeoisie Socialism" and you will understand why the willful seven of the National Office expelled the Michigan Socialist Party. And in the expulsion they did but do us honor!

The great demands of the Communists, the Left Wing Socialists, are abolition of property in land, factories, mines and raw material sources; abolition of inheritance rights, equal liability of all to labor, and the full social equivalent of labor's product to each.

* * *

"Not till the sun excludes you do I exclude you," sang Whitman the poet of Democracy. The National Offices of seven are not quite so democratic. Compare Berger's statements about expulsion of the delegates with the above Whitman quotation.

Chicago Labor Urges Freedom for Debs

QUARTER MILLION ORGANIZED WORKERS REPUDIATE ACTION OF A. F. OF L. CONVENTION.

Chicago's quarter of a million organized workers, through the Chicago Federation of Labor, have gone on record as unanimously endorsing a demand for the release of 'Gene Debs from prison.

It is pointed out that his conviction was secured as the result of war time passion, a fact admitted by Thomas Watt Gregory, former attorney general, shortly before he resigned

The action of the Chicago Federation of Labor is a most decided rebuke to the action taken by the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City, refusing to protest against the further prosecution of political and industrial prisoners. The Chicago resolutions, which it is hoped will be brought up for action in every local body of labor throughout the country, are as follows:

"Whereas, Eugene V. Debs has devoted the larger part of his life to the working class in its struggle for better conditions; and

"Whereas, He was convicted and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment as a result of war time passion, the war being now ended, the Chicago Federation of Labor insisting upon restoring pre-war liberties urge the immediate release of Eugene V. Debs and urge that resolutions to this effect be adopted by all labor bodies and upon adoption that a copy be sent to the President of the United States, the Senators of the State where adopted and the Congressmen of the district wherein the resolution is adopted."

Little Letters from Press Fund Boosters.

"I will send one dollar monthly until we get the press. Come along, comrades, let's finish the job." Wm. P. Meighen, Byesville, O.

"This should have been done long age", writes comrade J. F. Robinson, of Flemingsburg, Ky. "Truly hope that the required amount will soon arrive and the press be purchased."

"You can book me a dollar a month on the press proposition until it is secured, and if I can stand the pressure, will do more." That's what we hear from comrade F. Schon of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Sending a dollar for the press fund, comrade Leonard Stages, of Bluffton, O., writes "I am sorry that I cannot do more, expect to later on, hoping we will soon have our own press".

A third remittance from comrade Jno Vehre of Adena, O., shows continued interest in the press fund and a determination to keep his pledge.

Comrade K. W. Boring, of Wellsville, O. sends in his three dollars on his monthly pledge. Comrades are remitting on their pledges with a very pleasing regularity.

"You can rely on Belmont Co. to do its share toward establishing the printing plant". Thus writes comrade Fred Walchli, of Bellaire, O. We are more than sure of complete and generous support of the Belmont Co. comrades.

Read this from comrade Jos. A. Geier, of the 11th ward branch of local Cincinnati, O.

"The 11th ward branch of local Cincinnati, in session assembled, ordered drawn from its treasurey a check for $10.00 as our first payment on a pledge of fifty dollars toward a Party owned press, to be made in five monthly payments.

We hereby set a pace for other ward branches and feel that if all others would follow suit, this press fund will go over the top in a hurry and a step would be made in the right direction towards making the world safe for democracy".

Now comrades of ward branches of Ohio, we want your to digest that. If this branch can do it, WHY CAN'T YOU?

Most every weeks mail brings us a pleasant surprise in the form of a large donation to the press fund from some South Slavic Branch of the Party. We hope you have observed the regularity with which we record these remittances from our foreign branch comrades in the O. S. This week it is Branch 55, E. St. Louis, Ill. which donates five dollars, and with it comes twelve dollars more from individual comrades. No more loyal supporters have we that the South Slavic comrades in all parts of the country.

A list circulated by comrade C. E. Murphy, of Hamilton contains 8 names and totals $16. This shows how effective the Press Fund Lists can be made in this work. Get one from your local secretary and USE IT.

PARTY MEMBER? THEN REMEMBER—DUES ARE DUE.

Italian Seamen and Russia.

The London "Daily Herald" gives in full the story of how the Italian Seamen's Federation have declared a boycott of all ships carrying munitions for the war against Soviet Russia. In their resolution they state:

"All the crews of the Italian steamers are disposed to go to prison or sink to the bottom of the harbor with their steamers rather than to allow themselves to contribute to the defeat of the Russian people's revolution.

"We are convinced that such a defeat would mean the defeat of labor everywhere. We invite all other labor organizations, especially seamen, to boycott all steamers chartered by international capitalism against the Workers' International, which is massing now its Red vanguards on the battlefields of Revolutionary Russia."

A WORD FROM PETERSON

The State Office is in receipt of a post card from comrade Edwin Peterson and wife of Niles, O., who left recently for a visit to their former home in Sweden. Comrade Peterson reports a very enjoyable trip across. They expect to spend some time in Russia studying conditions under soviet rule before they return to America.

Debs Caged to Satisfy Foes, the Coal Barons

upon a demand made by the State Board of Control for his removal. Respectfully, for the Attorney General,

CLAUDER R. PORTER,
Assistent Attorney General.
June 21, 1919.

The State Board of Control of West Virginia comprises three members, each of whom owes his position to Gov. John J. Cornwell. The personnel of the board is as follows: Dr. E. B. Stephenson, president, Kanawha county; Dr. J. M. Williamson, treasurer, Marshall county; James S. Lakin, Preston county. This board has control over the state prison and all other state and charitable, penal and reformatory, institutions, but this is assumed to apply to financial affairs only.

Data on Governor Cornwell.

Governor Cornwell, it is assumed, prompted the Board of Control to initiate the application to the Department of Justice for the removal of Debs. This is assumed on the ground that a special representative of The Call, at Wheeling, a man who for many years has made special study of politics in West Virginia, and who is interested in newspaper work there, states it as his belief that the Board of Control is concerned chiefly with the financial affairs of the penal institutions.

Governor Cornwell appointed Joseph Z. Terrell of Fairmount, W. V., warden of Moundsville prison last October. I was given the impression that Governor Cornwell gave Warden Terrell a free hand in all administrative and executive matters concerning the prison and that the judgement of Warden Terrell was final, in so far as it effected his manner and treatment of prisoners, Federal or state.

Gov. Cornwell's industrial and financial affiliations reach from the Consolidation Coal Company in West Virginia and Maryland to Washington and connect with Rockefeller interests. Gov. Cornwell is chiefly concerned in Senator Watson's Consolidation Coal Company, which, it is said, is hooked up with the Rockefellers.

Cornwell With Riggs Bank.

Gov. Cornwell also promoted and was president of the Hampshire Southern Railway, which was known to be floated by the Baltimore & Ohio, and which was afterwards taken over by that railroad.

Gov. Cornwell's financial affiliations are with the Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C. He acted as a representative of the Riggs National Bank when that institution was involved in financial activities of doubtful character a few years ago. A thorough raking of the Riggs National Bank was instituted by William G. McAdoo, as Secretary of the Treasury.

It may be remembered, in connection with Debs' journey to Atlanta from Moundsville, that he was in the custody of United States Marshal Ned Smith, of Fairmont, West Virginia. It is generally understood that United States Marshal Smith is completely under the domination of the Watson and Cornwell coal interests and owes his position to that source.

Coal Barons Hate Debs.

Debs has made hundreds of speeches in West Virginia during his 40 years of labor in working class movement, and he has toured the state from Harper's Ferry to Wheeling in four different campaigns as candidate for the presidency on the Socialist party ticket. The coal kings and industrial lords of that oligarchy have never forgotten with what bitterness Debs flayed the coal operators and the railroad interests in that state, urging the miners and workers in the railroad shops to join the party that would deliver them from industrial bondage.

While Debs was yet at Moundsville I was told by a state official that the coal operators would view with bitterness any kindness shown Debs by the prison attaches. Debs himself once commend upon this.

The thing which most galls Attorney General Palmer is the pointblank refusal of Eugene Victor Debs to ask for a pardon. It is a matter of rather common opinion now that Debs would have only to crook his knee before the Department of Justice, confess his "guilt" and thus win his instant freedom. It is believed that the government does not relish the continued imprisonment of Eugene Victor Debs, for his name has become synonymous with freedom and democracy the world over, and any punishment of him is felt alike by his millions of friends and co-workers in the cause of social and industrial change.

Aside from the obvious wish and desire of America's plutocracy to finish the career of Debs as speedily and with as little publicity as possible, it has been suggested that the Department of Justice was animated to grant the request of the Board of Control for the removal of Debs to the Federal prison at Atlanta by the idea that rigorous treatment and the abstraction of all privileges would tend to break down the moral and spiritual resistance of Eugene Victor Debs and force him to ask for a pardon for a political crime of which he feels not the slightest tinge of guilt.

Debs Will Never Ask Pardon.

It is worth while to repeat here the words of Debs spoken to me at Atlanta a few weeks ago when I put the suggestion to him that he could win a pardon if he would but ask for it.

> Not in a thousands years! Not if I were to be burned to the stake. To ask for a pardon would be to confess guilt of crime that does not attach itself to me. If it is punishable under American laws by imprisonment for an American citizen to express the opinion of himself and of a large number of persons that was is an abomination, that wholesale slaughter is cruel and could not settle a political question, then I am perfectly willing to spend the remainder of my days here, and I should spend them nowhere else."

Theodore Debs, Gene's brother, at Terre Haute, has made the following statement to The Call in connection with Gene's transfer to Atlanta and the treatment accorded him there. The statement follows:

Death by Slow Torture.

"The sudden and secret removal of Gene to Atlanta is no longer a mystory. No reason was assigned at the time by Attorney-General Palmer for making the change—and none is necessary. The reason is obvious enough, the object clear as the light of day, and the reader can draw his or her own conclusions.

"Gene, as you may know, has been assigned to work in the clothing department of the prison, the exact nature of which I am not advised. He begins work at 8 o'clock in the morning and continues untill noon. One hour is allowed for dinner. At 1 o'clock he returns to his task, where he is engaged until 3:45, after which twenty minutes are allowed for outdoor recreation. Supper is then served and at 5 o'clock he is locked in his cell and confined there until 7 o'clock the next morning, 14 consecutive hours.

"Think of it! Fourteen hours out of every 24, every day in the week, every week in the month in a steel cage.

"In the heat of a prison cell in a hot Southern climate, whatever others may say, I say it is death by slow torture. One must indeed be blind and dumb that cannot discern the real object of such inhumanity.

"Fourteen hours out of every twenty-four in a cell in the dead heat of summer can have but one meaning; it can have no other.

"In a recent conversation with a newspaper man, Attorney General Palmer, when told by him that 'Debs would never ask for a pardon,' coolly replied: 'He may change his mind.'

"This statement was made by Palmer before Gene was removed to Atlanta. In the light of recent developments it is truly significant.

Kaiser Kinde in Similar Cases.

"In monarchial Germany the brute Kaiser inflicted no such barbarity upon Liebknecht, whom he loathed and feared as no other man in all the empire. But in democratic America, where we hypocritically blabber about 'justice' and 'humanity', we use methods of revenge that would make savages blush with shame at their own debasement.

"And those atracious crimes are committed in the name of 'law' by pious, self-respecting Christian gentlemen, followers of the lowly Nazarene—and in the very morning of the twentieh century.

"Caged like a beast fourteen hours out of every twenty-four.

"As I observe these refined methods or torture, 'legally' administrated upon men and women for alleged political offense, men and women who tower, morally and spiritually, as far as above their brutal persecutors as a scintillating star above a slimy snake, I confess to feeling an almost horrid admiration for the lowbrowed brute who silently steps from a dark alley, club in hand, and spatters the talk with the brains of his victim, or even the, more cowardly assasin who secrets himself in a fence corner and shoots his innocent and unsuspecting victim in the back.

Some Criminal more Decent.

"Whatever else may be said of these monsters in human form, they at least do not clothe themselves with religious vestments or the garb of respectability, prattle about 'justice' and 'humanity'—and they are too decent, low as they have sunk into sickening depths of depravity, to slowly torture their innocent victims into eternal silence.

"Caged in the dead heat of summer fourteen hours a day.

"We denounced the Kaiser and his Junker's as 'brutes'.

"Can anything quite as decent and respectable be said of our own plutocracy?"

A. F. of L. Bulwark of Capitalism Says Babson in Wall St. Report.

Claims Gompers opposed to "sober" workingclass as aid to Bolshevism.

Big business and all allied and reactionary forces in America may rejoice in the information conveyed in the report of Roger W. Babson, author of "Babson Reports" which attempts to keep the money lords of this country informed of all radical tendences of labor.

In this report is it stated that Gompers opposes a "sober" workingclass, because that means a "radical" working class, and further charges the "beer special" sent to Washington during the A. F. of L. convention was merely a part of the campaign to keep labor from becoming sober.

This charge is in harmony, with Gompers' patriotic appearence recently before the judiciary committee of the U. S. senate, charging that a dry U. S. is an aid to Bolshevism. Gompers produced a report on conditions in Detroit since Michigan went dry, pointing out that numerous radical publications had been started, a school organized, a home for the workers. "The House of the Masses", bought costing $75,000, and numerous other bolshevik activities for stimulating the workers mentaly carried out successfully.

Read the following complete "Babson Report" as follows:

LABOR'S FEAR OF BOLSHEVISM.
By ROGER BABSON.
(His Report to America's Money Kings.)

As we go to press, the annual convention of American Federation of Labor is still in progress in Atlantic City. A final report on its performances will be given in our next issue. We deal with the temper and spirit of the convention.

Caution, conservatism, prejudice—these are the qualities which stand out. Indeed it might be safe to substitute for these words the one word—FEAR!

We say this guardedly, for the ways of the convention are deep, and one can not be to sure that his diagnosis are correct. If the word should be FEAR, the next question is, what is it that is feared? And after all, maybe it should not be called FEAR at all.

For example, why did the convention adjourn to allow 400 or more of the delegates to journey off to Washington to pray for the abolition of the prohibition rule? Like any other body of four hundred average men in America, probably a majority of these men take a drop at times. But, like others, these men also know the gentle art of brewing at home and so have no fear of desert dryness. We do not believe that labor, as a body, is "wet" when it comes to a question of saloons or no saloons.

It was alleged that the brewing interests financed the trip, furnishing Pullman accomodations to Washington and return. Some delegates objected to thus being made a tool of the big interests. Undoubtedly the trip to Washington has raised prejudice against American labor on the part the great body of temperate people in this country.

Strolling about among the delegates one could freely hear it said that those in control of the gathering welcomed the liquor issue as a safety valve. Besides this, Mr. Gompers' own language gives ground for suspecting that he fears that a sober labor party means a radical labor party. The "mare's nest" in the Pacific Northwest is a "dry" nest. And Russia is dry. Men who do not drink have time to think. Did this trip to Washington and other numerous adjournments charged to lack of business ready present, mean that the leaders dreaded what might occur in the convention if open play were allowed? We do not know. Some delegates thought so.

This much is certain—the convention and the Federation proposes to take no chances from what might result from flirting with Miss Bolshevik. It is determined to keep its own record clear of such entaglements. In the effort it stands so straight that it actually leans over backward.

In the great fight against Bolshevism clients may be sure of the help of the A. F. of L.

Two radical utterances—two only, really got across in the first week of the convention. They were the speech of Mr. Glenn E. Plumb and that of Miss Margaret Bondfield. Mr. Plumb, as attorney for the railroad brotherhoods, presented to the convention a plan for government ownership and employe management of the railroads. It is a radical proposition. It is much like the plan for nationalization presented by the English miners. But both the speech and the plan got across. The speech raised intense enthusiasm, and the plan was endorsed later by vote. The plan has been described in a pamphlet and we are endeavoring to arrange to supply our clients with copies.

Miss Bondfield came over as one of the fraternal delegates sent by the English Trade Union Congress. She was selected to come in 1918, but her passports were objected to by our State Department and she was unable to come Her speech seemed radical to the convention, but it was simply a report on the rank and file movement of labor in Great Britain. She put before the delegates in staight Anglo-Saxon, an authoritative report of the English situation, which was in flat contradiction to the official version current in this country. There is no doubt that Miss Bondfield told the truth. Her address made a most profound impression on the delegates.

In a word then, the convention was safe. It was orthodox trade union in character from start to finish. It bore testimony again to the skill and political resources of Mr. Gompers. Our representative asked a dozen or so delegates what the members thought when they heard such an address as Miss Bondfield's and compared it with what has been circulated in this country on the same topics. The common reply was, "They do not think at all." One radical, who in recent years has often been on the floor in defense of the progressive measures, was asked why he was silent this year and he said, "I am on a mental vacation." So far as wage demands, insistance on the right to organize, and all of the customary union activities go, these will continue in full force Clients may, however, feel entirely safe in believing that the A. F. of L. is linked with them to continue conservatism in American society.

The conditions are favorable for employers, if they are wise enough to bring about a labor-capital alliance for the preservation of the old landmarks in industry. It is true that strong forces threaten this condition but these forces were not in control of the convention Indeed they were not present in any number. The management of union affairs is such that the strongest of the radicals either do not get elected delegats or do not care to be elected. Only the smallest minority voted with the radicals on test votes.

There can be no question that the convention of 1919 has on the whole served to commend organized labor to the employers of this country.

The freedom of Debs and all political prisoners depends upon the amount of publicity which reaches the American working-class. Our capitalist masters are watching this campaign for Debs' release as an indication of working-class thought and purpose.

The greater the publicity which reaches the attention of American workers, so much the sooner will Debs and other comrades be released from prison.

THE FREEDOM OF DEBS IS IN YOUR HANDS. You can help in the work of his release by securing subscriptions to The Ohio Socialist. Every subscriber means another helper for Debs' release. DEBS MUST BE FREED

Debs must be freed. That is the dictum the workers are going to force down the throats of the Democratic politicians who keep him and thousands of other fearless men and women in the American bastiles for no other reason than that they fear them and their influence with the workers.

Debs must be freed. For three months he has been hidden away behind stone walls subject to an environment far and away too good for the human vultures who sent him there. Subjected to the whims and caprices of petty politicians and officials who are not worthy to be mentioned in the same breath.

Debs must be freed. Let Attorney General Mitchell Palmer, speak for the government of the United States in this matter. Palmer is quoted in a Terre Haute paper of July 9th, as saying:

> It is true, as you say, that the war is over; but how can we let Debs go into the world, only to continue his open opposition to the best and freest government in the world."

Now we know why Debs remains in prison. When the last possible reason and excuse for his confinement has disappeared with the coming of peace, he is still to be kept locked up like a beast because of his "opposition to the freest government in the world." "The best and freest government in the world." Who says so? Attorney General Mitchell Palmer says so. The democratic party says so. The democratic party thru Palmer says that because Debs disagrees with it, he therefore, must be kept in jail for ten years.

For disagreeing with the politicians at present occupying the seats of political power in "the freest government in the world" freedom is to be denied Debs. Such an attitude is no doubt in line with a "free" government such as this country possesses. It is the usual attitude of small calibre politicians such as at present feed at the public trough tru the democratic party, and those in the high seats are no different from those in the low ones. The attitude of Mitchell Palmer is the same as that held by countless ward heelers of this party thruout the country and who have made democracy a word of mockery from Maine to California.

Debs must be freed. The workers are learning that the more shouting about democracy the politicians and other henchmen of capitalism do, the less democracy there is for the workingclass. This truth is beginning to be recognized by larger and larger bodies of workers as the days pass. More than one rumbling denotes this fact. And one of the causes of it is the continued senseless and criminal confinement of Debs and other political and class-war prisoners in the jails of this country.

Debs must be freed. His longer confinement is (even tho he were guilty of an offense against the government) unnecessary, uncalled for; is criminal, and an unjustice and an isult to the workers of this ation. By their longer confinement of Debs and other class-war prisoners, the capitalist class thru the democratic politicians, fling into the teeth of the American wage-workers the insufferable insult of keeping their representatives locked up in jail while they continue the unparralled robbery of labor.

To those workers who are alive to the needs of labor and the injustice of the present system of labor exploitation, this situation is impossible. It calls for the most intense publicity and the most aggressive action. The Ohio Socialist is pledged to render every assistance possible to regain Debs' liberty and that of every political prisoner now incarcerated.

Debs must be freed. To that end we intend to do our utmost. To that end YOUR help and that of every justice-desiring worker is requested. To that end let every comrade bend his or her best efforts. Stand ready to join the ARMY of LIBERATORS that will fight for Freedom for Debs. Be ready.

PHANTOM DEMOCRACY

One hears very little these days about making the world safe for democracy. The capitalist press in particular appears to fight shy of its erstwhile flambouyant boasts, promises and wordly word battles for the reign of democratic righteousness. How full of promise were thei rhapsodies about the new world of labor that was to follow on the heels of the downfall of the world destroyer, the hated Hun. How glorious was to be the future of labor, if labor would only consent to join hands with the masters of the new world against those of the old. In the delirium of their fancies, labor was the great object of veneration. Without labor, wars could not be fought nor the world kept upon its rightful course, but was fated to go to the demnition bow-wows otherwise

To-day, what do we find.

We find this: that wherever labor raises its head to ask for a living wage, wherever it manifests the slightest desire to put into practice even the least of those principles for which all its sacrifices were made, it readily finds arrayed against it all the forces of the master class; all the powers of government, all and every resource which its erstwhile "friends" can muster to crush it.

For nearly two years the Russian workers have essayed the perilous task of establishing their own government in their own land, the land which they have tilled under the Cossack's knout for a thousand years. And what has been their lot at the hands of the hypocratical shouters for democracy who function as the nation's leaders and statesmen, and under whose guidance the destiny of the country is placed? For months an undeclared war has been waged against them. For months every attempt of the Russian Soviets to arrive at an understanding with this government and its allies has failed. Failed because this country is determined to aid the downfall of the Russian worker's government, and for the reason that the government is a worker's government and not a capitalist and a robber government.

And now, fearing to go further in bloody aggression against the Russian workers, it proposes to devote its "democratic" energies toward the starvation of as many millions of men, women and children as its blockade can accomplish. Further, and in the same line of activity, it proposes to furnish Koltchack provisions, supplies and munitions for waging his counter revolution. By these roundabout means it seeks to accomplish the same end, the downfall of the first socialist democracy.

Compare the visionary portrayal by the capitalist press of after-war conditions with the facts of to-day. The worker finds that to get enough to keep his family, he must resort to the same weapons as before the war, the strike. His master does not meet him with soft words and a raise without a struggle. The winning of the war has not changed conditions for labor except for the worse. The war between capital and labor has been intensified. The cost of living has constantly risen. The economic condition of the worker has grown more precarious.

His personal liberties are infringed upon until they have reached the vanishing point. Freedom of speech except to mouth the praises of his master are denied him. His peaceful meetings are broken up and resistance is met with bullets and death. His political organizations are outlawed in practice and in fact if not by law. Meeting places for the purpose of carrying political campaigns are denied him upon the public streets and parks. Hall owners are intimidated and warned by police not to rent to socialists.

These are the bitter results for the militant workers of this country nearly nine months after the end of the war. This is the kind of democracy that flourishes and receives encouragement from ruling powers at this moment. It is the greatest hoax ever perpetrated upon a civilized people, by a rapacious and vulturous robber class.

It is a phantom democracy.

VIRGINIA BULLETIN

[illegible], State Secretary.

Virginia Comrades:—

As we are too little and insignificant to amount to much, we had best cut this thing short in this round. Little folks should be seen and not heard. Some of you may have been puzzling to know if we are Right or Left. Well so far as getting a delegate to Chicago to the Coming National Socialist Party Convention, we are LEFT. We get no delegate allowed us because, forsooth, we are not organized in the sense of the dear Constitution. Lawyer Hogan put the boot to us by moving that only "organized" states be allowed representatives at the coming Convention.

Comrade E. J. Beggs, P. O. Box 164, Portsmouth, Va., has been elected to the vacancy on our State Executive Committee. Comrade Beggs sent me a copy of the July issue of "The Messenger, the only radical negro magazine in America"—2305 Seventh Ave., N. Y. City. The editorial genius behind this thing is astonishing—get a copy.

Then too, you want to get the June issue of THE DIAL and read Bertrand Russells article, "Economic Unity and Political Division." There is enough truth in [illegible] for the dumbest [illegible] of [illegible] Americans' [illegible] about that [illegible] going.

King George (or was it Lloyd George) representative democracy easily knocked out a two to three majority popular labor vote by means of a little gerrymandering. Now our American [illegible] have the original patent on the "gerrymander". So you see that the man who sees a future for radical parliamentarianism in this country is indeed a robust optimist.

A PICTURE OF DEBS FOR YOUR HOME

A picture of Debs should be in every worker's home. The latest picture of Debs, taken just before going to Moundsville prison, is the best one ever taken, so critics say.

Enlarged and printed in sepia on special paper, measuring 12½ x 18 inches, it makes a splendid picture for framing for any home. It is autographed in Debs' hand writing which adds to its attractiveness.

You will like this photo of Geno and will cherish it for many years to come. It is the picture of Debs that will become historical, the picture taken just before capitalism sentenced him to ten years for his loyalty to the workers.

Penna. Socialist is sentenced.

Ralph W. Tillotson, of Erie, Pa., twice tried and convicted for violation of the Espionage Act was given a 60 day jail sentence by Judge Thompson of the Federal Court of Western Penna. at Pittsburg.

Comrade Tillotson's case dates back to 1917, when his activities as leader of Socialist agitation in Erie brought down on his head the wrath of the local Democratic politicians and of the Manufacturer's Association of Erie. He was accordingly framed-up, charged with distributing seditious literature and convicted in May 1918; appealed and again convicted in March 1919. A third trial was denied and Comrade Tillotson is now serving time in Allegheny jail.

Comrade Tillotson is the recognized leader of the movement in Northwestern Pennsylvania; a member of the State Executive Committee of the S. P. and will doubtless be chosen by his party as candidate for Mayor in the coming municipal campaign in Erie.

FREE THEM ALL—THE LIBERATORS.

Doings Among The Sub Boosters

Comrade Roy Douglas, of Dunkirk, N. Y. sent in two half yearlies recently. We hope that he keeps up the pace he has started on.

Our ever ready booster, comrade Wm. Catton of Covington, K. adds three more to his record lately.

Another booster for the Ohio Socialist is comrade Mathew McMillan of New Lexington, O. Three yearlies from him makes us believe he is in the fight to stay.

Having declared war on the two old parties, comrade Henry Listerman of Cincinnati, sends a dollar for a years subscription.

A member of the German Branch of Akron, comrade S. Woda, sends in five subscriptions. The comrades of Akron German Branch are always finding some good work to do for socialism.

Chesapeake, O., is a center of socialist sentiment. Comrade P. B. Davis is ever active there selling O. S. sub. cards.

Comrade Bernhard Kehn, of Niles, O., keeps the renewals a coming our way. One of the big duties of every local secretary is to keep the comrades on the right side of their subscriptions.

Comrade Alois Havelka, of Neffs, O., sends in a list of four, all new members of Local Neffs.

"The paper suits us fine, we are—all of the Left Wing", thus writes comrade Mrs. Pearl Summers of Boyds, Wash. She sends three six mouths subs.

From far away Seldovia, Alaska, comes a list of eleven subs. Comrade W. H. Beach is the booster up there. Beats all how we are spreading over the globe, does'nt it!

Three more from comrade M. S. Kalatha, of E. Moline helps to keep our list there in good shape. We have several mighty good boosters in that neck of the woods.

A list of ten half yearlies from comrade Mrs. W. A. Vincent of Shinnston, W. Va., makes us glad. Apparently comrade Vincent has been interesting women in the great Cause, as we note several women's names on the list.

Executive Committee of Federation in Proclamation gives views of Finnish Socialists in present party controversy—National Executive Committee severely condemned.

(EDITORS NOTE: The proclamation of the Finnish Socialist Federation, composed of 10,000 members, which appears below ought to be carefully studied by all Socialist Party members. We note of course, that it contains reservations which many Left Wing Socialists, in the heat of battle where the controversy raged worst, will not agree with. However, it places the Finnish Socialist Federation on the side of the Left Wing movement, demands reinstatement of all expelled subdivisions of the party and their full representation at the national convention, and ends by announcing that should a split occur in the party, this federation will affiliate with that section of the Socialist Party which follows the wake of the uncompromising class struggle. In the light of foregoing criticism made of the N. E. C., which dubs this body as opportunistic and pettit-bourgeois, this can only mean that the Finnish Socialist Federation will join with the Left Wing section, should a rupture in the organization occur. This proclamation has not been edited and is here published just as it was received from Henry Askeli, translator secretary of the federation.)

PROCLAMATION OF THE FINNISH SOCIALIST FEDERATION

I. The International.

1.) We declare as disruptionists of the international socialist movement those leaders and groups of the socialist parties in different countries, who already in 1914, immediately after the first bomb had exploded on the battlefield of the imperialistic world war, abandoned the principle: "The working class and the capitalist class have nothing in common," upon which principle our international movement has been built since 1864. We further declare that the workers have nothing in common with these renegades, who even after that, instead of returning to the revolutionary viewpoint emphasized by the decisions of the Second International at the Stuttgart and Berlin Congress, have joined the rank of the counter-revolution as the appologists of the capitalists, to oppose and murder the workers struggling for power.

2.) We refuse to give any support to the attempts of these traitorous leaders to organize international unity. We condemn the Berne Conference for its bourgeois-chauvinistic spirit, which controlled it, and contend that it was nothing else but an attempt of opportunistic socialists, playing into the hands of capitalists, to organize their powers against the real class struggle of the proletariat. We condemn all international conferences and endeavors toward unity commenced by the so-called war socialists, and refuse all co-operation with these traitors and renegades.

3.) As a natural result of the above, we, with the greatest of pleasure, desire to give our full support to the new communistic Third International, organized at the Moscow Conference, with which among others the Italian and Norwegian Socialist Parties, the Swedish Left Wing Socialists, the German, Hungarian and Finnish Communistic Parties have affiliated themselves. We desire that our party be affiliated with it by inseparable ties of international proletarian brotherhood and solidarity. We contend that this Third International is the only international organization which is founded on revolutionary working class principles as represented by Marx and Engels. It is innocent of the bloodshed of capitalistic imperialism, and it promotes and serves the power of the working class in those countries where it has already won out, and aids the workers on to the road of victory where the workers are still under capitalistic tyranny and dictatorship. That is the reason why we demand that we be affiliated with the New Third International. It is the only international organization of the oppressed, exploited and enslaved proletariat of to-day. To it belongs victory, to it belongs the future.

II. The Programm and Tactics of the American Socialist Party.

We demand the renewal of the program of the American Socialist Party, and demanded that the general principles outlined below be taken into consideration therewith:

I.) The Socialist Party shall reject the viewpoint of petti-bourgeois socialism and shall adopt Marxian revolutionary socialism.

Capitalistic society is in the greatest crisis of history. The bulwarks of the capitalistic system, whose existence is based on the private ownership of the instruments of production and on the exploitation of the working class, take advantage of the most violent methods, terrorize society, and carry out the most cruel dictatorship of the exploiting class against the working class movement. The dictatorship protecting capitalistic exploitation is made possible by the fact that the capitalist class uses political power, and we demand that this power be taken into the hands of the working class by means of the class struggle.

The Socialist Party declares that its final purpose and aim is a social revolution.

A social revolution means nothing more or less than adoption of a system of production, distribution and consumption which is based on social ownership in place of the present inconsistent and anarchistic system of private ownership based on the brutal power of capital, which has passed its historical period. These inconsistencies in the economic system have been followed by the awful suffering and misery through which the world has lived during the past few years.

Democracy, i. e. the equality of rights and duties of citizens in a political significance, can be fully realized only when a social revolution has abolished the inherited privileges of private property and the slavery of the working class.

During the existance of capitalism we demand the extending of the economic as well as the political rights of the working class. But we realize that capitalistic democracy is only capitalistic dictatorship in a covert form and against it we set the absolute dictatorship of the working class, which, as the most important and the largest portion of humanity—the great majority of the people—will only then bring about real democracy.

We cannot define the method by which the social change will occur. The methods of revolution are dependent largely upon the blindness or the clear-sightedness of its opponents in their attitude towards this necessary progress in history.

But even now, during this stage the Socialist Party does not confuse revolution and violence with one another. Violence and bloodshed do not make any movement revolutionary, and essentially they have nothing in common. We are aware of the fact that events are of a revolutionary nature more on the basis of their results than on their forms. Being a party which stands for the brotherhood of humanity, and directing its activities toward the attainment of general happiness and well being, the Socialist Party hopes that its victory will be accomplished by systematic and peaceful organization. But in its attempt to capture political power the working class cannot reject any weapon and the form of its revolution will finally depend upon prevailing conditions, and especially upon the opposition directed against its right of suffrage, other political rights, and against all other activities for gathering the forces of the working class, and against its endeavors for social reform.

Our party, the American Socialist Party, is also aware of the fact that the success of the social revolution in guaranteed only when it occurs at a historic moment, at the moment when the minds of the people and the events have matured for it. The realization of the system which the working class is planing depends on the stage of development of the working class organizations and institutions, organizations which form the first organism of the socialistic system. Therefore, our greatest duty is to educate and organize the working class so that it will become capable of carrying out this historical duty. But just as we cannot define the form of the revolution, neither can we determine its moment. The Socialist Party cannot overlook any opportunities which the failure of the bourgeoisie may present. On the other side the social revolution is the hope of the oppressed people. Those upon whom the working class has set its faith must not betray this hope.

Be the form whatever it may, by which the transfer of power will occur, the rise to power of the organized workers will be followed by an era of proletarian dictatorship. Bourgeois dictatorship has made this necessary. By it the proletariat keeps counter-revolutionists in control, crushes the opposition of the bourgeoisie, upbuilds the new society, and thereby finally makes all class domination and the centralized establishment of the bourgeois system—the state— unnecessary. The first real democracy will then take its place, a system serving the cause of the producers and the common good of all.

The proletarian dictatorship cannot be a condition selected arbitrarily, but it is the result of the progress of the struggle between the classes; and the same is true in regard to bourgeois dictatorship. Such is the doctrine which is continually slandered in the reactionary press. History present sufficient proof that the new society, let it be social or political, when drawing up a new legal system, can never act within the legal limitations of the old system, a system which it will replace. The revolutions of the nineteenth century succeeded and failed in accordance to the extent that they complied with this

MANY LOCALS ENTER MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGNS

Many Ohio locals of the Socialist Party have decided to enter the municipal campaign. Most of these have already nominated candidates and quite a number have made a call upon the state office for speakers.

During the municipal campaign two years ago the state office assisted the locals by touring twelve speakers. Special campaign leaflets were produced by the state office and 200,000 of them were sold thru-out the state. Many locals printed their own leaflets and we are safe in saying that about two million leaflets were distributed during this campaign.

Shall we assist in like manner in this campaign? It is for you to say. Nominate your municipal ticket at once, secure enough signatures to your nominating petitions to make sure your candidates names will appear upon the official ballot, and then begin your campaign in earnest. We will give you a lift, you can depend upon that, for we now have The Ohio Socialist, and we can furnish you a campaign edition of this paper at a very low cost.

Locals that have already made nominations for municipal candidates are requested to send the names of their candidates to the state office at once. Locals intending to enter the municipal campaign should also notify the state office so that we can estimate the number of speakers we may need and begin engaging them at once.

Above all remember that you must secure enough signatures BEFORE September first, or you will fail to get the names of your candidates upon the ballot.

VOTE THE REFERENDUMS

There are three referendums now before the membership. One is for the election of a state secretary and a state executive committee. This is Referendum A, 1919. Referendum C, 1919, pertains to the election of delegates to the national convention. Referendum C, 1919 consists of the largest ballot yet [illegible] by [illegible] state convention.

Attend your next local or branch meeting. Vote these referendums. Every GOOD party member will do this. Incidentally, it's time to pay your dues. Pay up and vote—at your next meeting. Do not forget.

ATTENTION, INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM CERTIFICATE PURCHASERS

The more than 500 comrades who have purchased Industrial Freedom Certificates from the State Office of the Socialist Party of Ohio will be pleased to learn that the dollar that each of them paid for a certificate will now be used in the special campaign we are initiating to free Debs and all political prisoners.

We feel confident that these more than 500 comrades will form the nucleus from which will be built the powerful ARMY OF LIBERATORS, which will soon make the nation ring with the call to Debs and all political prisoners to come forth from their steel cages into the sunshine of working class comradeship.

PRESS FUND BULLETIN.
Good News.

Last week we told in these columns of the offer of $1,000 for the press fund from comrade Wm. M. Brown of Galion, O.

Comrade Brown's offer was that he would give $1,000 to the press fund providing the other readers of the Ohio Socialist, and the comrades thruout the country would give the other $9,000 making the $10,000 called for, for [illegible] and printing plant. But the press [illegible] that the comrade Brown stated [illegible] $9,000 should be raised first, [illegible] $1,000 constituting the last $1,000 making up the total.

This week comrade Brown writes us the cheering news that he will send us one fourth of the $1,000 ($250) as soon as other comrades have sent one fourth of $10,000. (2,500.)

At this writing we have received about $2,250. We lack about $250 of the fourth, which comrade Brown asks you to donate before he sends us his one fourth pledged.

Now, we just want to say: we can't afford to wait a minute to get that $250 donation from comrade Brown, can we? Of course we can't! Therefore comrades, get busy raking that other $250 together for comrade Brown is waiting on YOU.

Don't keep an offer like that hanging in mid air. Pull it down! Remember GET BUSY.

principle. This transition from the old to the new forms the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The socialistic system, which the working class conscious of its mission is planning, will be carried into power by one class, the proletariat but it will be carried into power for the benefit and the well-being of all people. In the same way as the new legal system which it preceeds and for which it is preparing the way, the unpersonified dictatorship of the proletariat is used in the name of all humanity and for its benefit.

We hope that the transition period from capitalism to socialism will be as brief as possible, but the issue is not dependent upon our hopes. Its length will fluctuate with the conditions of economic production, the preparedness and the stage of the organization of the working class, as well as nature and the violence of the opposition.

The Socialist Party works for the revolution when it struggles for the well-being, for the self-respect and for the self-consciousness of labor. It works for increasing the value of their labor power whenever it endeavors to obtain for the working class still larger political liberties for the expression of their opinion, and whenever it endeavors to preserve social wealth from capitalistic exploitation. In all its endeavors, however, it takes into consideration the limited possibilities of the capitalistic system, and secures reforms therein principally for the purpose of strengthening its power for the decisive struggle.

We approve only such reforms which the working class can obtain by its own efforts, adhering strictly to the principle of the class struggle. Such viewpoints which bind the workers to absolute parliamentarism or to one-sided antiquated methods of the strike movement must be condemned. The mass action of the working class is shown by history to be the principal form to which the struggle between the classes will lead. In fighting for reforms it is our duty to measure them with this yardstick of the mass movement, to determine if they hasten its rise and whether or not they benefit it otherwise.

At a time like this when the course of events is so uncertain and so full of surprise no one can foretell when the hour of the working class shall strike. But be it near or far, the same practical work is necessary of educating and organizing the working class continually upholding its faith in the success of its aims. Being the heir of the capitalistic world, a world whose riches are composed of the accumulated wealth of generations of labor, the present duty of socialism is to preserve this inheritance and to prepare to receive it.

The party's decleration of principles in our opinion should be in accord with the above. The practical program should be renewed in accordance with the demands of the present time, and in drawing it up the foregoing declaration should be adhered to. In regard to demands in the program and the more definite practical duties the following viewpoint should be considered among others:

1) The party should put into effect a more stringent and uniform discipline in regard to its representatives in state legislatures, in Congress and in municipal governments, so that they shall at all times consistently comply with the strict principles of revolutionary socialism, and not act inconsistently and in contradiction with another, and not relax from these principles in their practical activities.

2.) Agitation against imperialism must be made more pointed and a still greater pressure should be exerted to push through the demand that American soldiers shall not be sent to fight against the revolutionary comrades of Europe and against the real democracies built up by them.

3.) The struggle for the liberation of political prisoners must be continued to the last vestige of strength and the struggle must be broadened and every party organ and newspaper must be obligated to give it more attention.

4.) We deem unadaptable to the principles of socialism the method by wihch party officials affiliate with and bind themselves for co-operation with various petit-bourgeois and religious associations of their leaders for the promotion of certain issues of a political nature, and thereby always cause the struggle, caried on and aided by the Socialist Party, to come under the auspices of some other organization and not the party itself. Such methods do not aid the bringing together of the masses of dissatisfied workers, but instead the Socialist Party is estranged from them and from the duties of a class nature which are in accord with the interests of the proletariat. We must get rid of the notion that the Socialist Party is some kind of a holiday article. The Socialist Party is the fighting and the active party of the struggling working class.

5.) Our relation to economic organizations.

In our opinion the unionistic movement of America is tsill undergoing its period of upheavel and formation and no model union is in existance. Therefore we must always make our selection in a conditional manner.

The official leadership and the policies of the American Federation of Labor based on craftsman and on elements of the working class possessing petit-bourgeois ideas, are to-day more conservative than they were twenty years ago. While others have made progress these have become more reactionary and have been driven into more and more detestable associations with the greatest opponents of the working class in this country, and are doing their best to aid the mortal enemies and the murderers of our brothers and comrades in foreign lands to retain their power. The recent actions of the A. F. of L. form the greatest stain upon the labor movement of this country and the most humiliating shame in an international way. The criticism of such criminal policies must be emphasized within the Socialist Party, first for the purpose of upholding a more stringent discipline for these opportunistic bargainers who sympathize with the viewpoints controlling A. F. or L., and secondly to aid the dissatisfied elements within the A. F. of L., who now form quite a numerous group therein, to carry on their struggle against the leading policies of the Federation.

We greet with pleasure every sign of revolt within the Federation which represents an independent class-conscious attempt of the membership, and shall aid them to the best of our ability to attain a form of unionism based on the class-struggle, whether this be accomplished by the class-conscious workers at some decisive moment obtaining control of the Federation as a whole, when the old principles, tactics and official machinery are cast aside, or by the more radical groups and national unions withdrawing or being expelled from the Federation and forming an econbmical organization which shall assimilate to itself the masses of organized and unorganized workers, and adopting the principles of industrial unionism and the class struggle. The unprogressive and reetionary hull of the A. F. of L. shall be left adrift, first as a counteractive element, but later as a dead letter in the economic class struggle movement of the country.

Of the independent unions of national significance outside the A. F. of L. we shall mention the Industrial Workers of the World. In comparison with the A. F. of L. it has assumed a more progressive stand in that it has declared in favor of the industrial form of organization and for the principle of the class struggle. But in its practical activities and in its agitation for the principle of the class struggle it is confused by ideas of revolt that are based on a line of thought related to individualism and coming from the decaying petit-bourgeoisie. For that reason its policies, and especially so among certain groups have been controlled by an agitation founded on blind instincts, and connected with the defending of desperate anarcho syndicalistic methods and viewpoints which are foreign to industrial unionism. Their zealous but vain struggle is founded on these foreign viewpoints, in opposition to class-conscious socialistic political action, and for that reason they have not received our full support. While we insist that the political struggle—socialism—and the economical struggle—industrial unionism—are necessary for the working class, and that close and solid relations should be built up between the two to promote the best interests of the workers, we also contend that the I. W. W., in order to succeed, must abandon all its syndicalistic features; i. e., unless it ceases it reckless fight against Marxian socialism it will not receive the support of large masses of workers, and will not be even able to uphold the leading standard of industrial unionism in the development and formation of economic organization in this country.

In reference to the immaturity of the unionistic movement in this country, it is the general duty of socialists to promote industrial unionism with their agitation and to aid the union and federation already based on that principle to free themselves of all tendencies which are injurious to the class struggle of the workers. It is the duty of socialists to do their best to fill the endeavors of economically organized workers with the spirit of socialism.

III. The Left Wing Movement in the American Socialist Party.

1.) When we are beset with the question, "Do we belong to the Right Wing or to the Left Wing?" we declare that we belong to the Left Wing, insofar as the significance of these denominations is understood in accordance with the doctrines of Marx and Engels, the soundness of which have again been proven by recent world events This does not signify that we do not notice among the present Left Wingers certain viewpoints which are erroneus, but they concern only tactics and their ultimate intentions are correct. On the one hand their declaration of principles is clear of all that is injurious, of all compromising opportunism, of too great a faith in the possibilities of the development of bourgeois democracy, of absolute and solitary parliamentarism, and of politics for courting trade unionists, which have formed the shoals upon which the socialist parties of different lands have been wrecked; and on the other hand it is clear of anarcho-syndicalistic doctrines of revolt. The simple fact that they are struggling against endeavors which are foreign and injurious to the socialistic movement obligates us to join them. And insofar as this movement still contains socialistically immatured understandings, it is our duty to trim them away to promote the formation of the movement on a clear Marxian foundation.

2.) As to the Left Wing Manifesto, adopted in New York during February, we wish to state that we do not see anything harmful in its leading principle, although a party program as a whole must be more comprehensive and all the most urgent duties of the present moment must be taken into consideration more definitely. Considering it only as a declaration of principles we realize that it is, [illegible] the [illegible] we [illegible] and [illegible] all action [illegible] reforms is [illegible] be ready and [illegible] of every opportunity to gain relief and reforms for the living conditions of the workers, for in that manner alone the party proves itself as the party of the proletariat; but in the respect that the party must not stop to covet reforms alone, but must use the reforms to its best advantage to develop revolutionary power and ability, we are in accord with the Manifesto. And this important fact must also be publicly expressed in clear words in the program of our party.

3.) We desire also to take advantage of this opportunity to state, that, insofar as anarcho-syndicalistic and elements opposing political action and the political struggle are attempting to drift along with the Left Wing movement, we sternly oppose such elements and tendencies, knowing full well that they are in contradiction with socialistic viewpoints and Marxian foundations, upon which we desire to build. And furthermore, we are of the opinion that the renewal of the party program, and making it more radical, which is the demand of all Left Wingers, is the best antidote for all the doctrines of revolt which estrange themselves from the socialistic movement insofar as such doctrines receive support among the working masses.

IV. Preserving the Unity of the Party.

1.) First of all we desire to state, that the unity of the party is the all important matter in our opinion. We do not look favorably upon acts which destroy this unity. We have noted however, that the collisions of different viewpoints have brought about an unheard of split in the socialist movement of the whole world, and that the undulations reach even here. Marxians and opportunistic barterers within the socialist movement differ from one another in principles and in the determination of the leading principles of organization and agitation work. And the more critical the class struggle has developed the greater this distinction has become. The old oportunists viewpoint, nested in different parties, has become completely bankrupt insofar as Marxian principles are concerned, and has been driven into the ranks of the counter revolutionists. At the same time, those standing on the unalterable viewpoint of the class struggle, have, as a result of the effect of present occurences, rapidly attained a commanding position everywhere among the workers. Co-operation between these two groups can only be possible by the surrender of the former for the benefit of the latter.

2.) From this viewpoint we look upon the present crisis in the Socialist Party.

We do not know to what extent the Left Wingers in New York and elsewhere have violated the party constitution and of what nature these violations are, but we are ready to believe that the organizing of a district organization within the party as such is a crime against the spirit of the party constitution. And we believe that the Left Wingers elsewhere have not always been able to select for themselves the best methods for the promotion of their viewpoints But on the other hand, we do not know how much the official leadership confronting them has opposed and hindered the promotion of reconstructive tendencies within the party, thereby assisting in the creation of a situation where violations of the rules become the order of the day.

3.) Nevertheless it is now clear that petit-bourgeois opportunistic socialism has its representatives in the leadership of the party. It is impossible otherwise to understand the decision of the National Executive Committee by which it expels almost one third of the party membership, not daring to leave the matter to be decided [illegible] of the party convention. The [illegible] which the Committee showed by its decision toward the Left Wingers, a large group of the party membership, is the best proof of the fact that the Committee is of the Right Wing and that its viewpoint is erroneous. We condemn the expulsions absolutely and demand that those expelled shall be granted their full rights until the National Convention is held, and also in the convention. It is contended that the expulsions are based upon technical violations of the constitution, so we contend that the National Executive Committee understands its duty incorrectly, if it, for reasons of this nature and in the greater part for reasons existing as mere contentions, and without any formal investigations and hearings, strikes a blow with a few strokes of the pen which disrupts the party completely. For its autocratic nature and its fundamental purpose the expulsion becomes a crime against the socialist movement. We consider the expulsion the greatest crime of opportunistic socialism against ourselves.

We realize fully the necessity of unity and solidarity within the working class struggle, but on the other hand we realize also that the working class cannot attain its purpose with actions of such nature which are not directed by principles of the socialistic doctrines of the class struggle. If the internal crisis created within the Socialist Party unavoidably leads to a division or forces, we join without hesitation those that follow unalterably in the wake of the uncompromising class struggle. There shall be our place.

Strike Movement Spreads Over United States

100,000 workers are threatened with a lockout if the thousands on strike do not return to work at once. In Boston the populace is walking to work, the street car men being on strike. On the Atlantic coast 30,000 members of the Coast Seaman's Union are out and the strike threatens to spread to the Great Lakes.

The Cleveland street car men won after a two days strike which tied up the city and the telephone workers of this same city are now having their battle with the wire corporations. Cigar Makers in New York, 20,000 of them are engaged in a struggle with their bosses. The strike at Argo, Ill., of the corn products workers has already cost several lives. The employes of the International Harvester Company, Chicago, 10,000 of them, have gone on a sympathic strike with underpaid employes.

In Seattle another 'phone strike is raging. In Denver the street car men have just won their demands after a successful strike.

In Piqua, Ohio, hundreds of stove workers are out.

On top of all this comes the surprising news that the exploited state employes of Ohio are organizing and threaten to strike against the state unless their wages are increased. Only a few weeks ago the entire force of city hall employes of Chicago went on strike, as did also the outside workers employed by the city. The city firemen, policemen and engineers threatened to strike. A wage increase of about $300.00 a year was finally granted to them. The city hall employes in Cleveland are also organizing.

The organization of city and state employes is a new sign of the times. It portends an awakening working class and a recognition on the part of "white collared" wage slaves that they must join forces with "dirty" labor if they desire to keep in fair trim to continue at work.

Raiders Take Socialist Literature Barr Socialists from Street

Armed with a search warrant issued under the new criminal syndicalism bill, authorizing a search of Socialist Headquarters for literature violating the law, six city detectives assisted by ten members of the Loyal American League took position of Local Cleveland headquarters last week, and proceeded to take everything that there fancy dictated.

A demand by C. E. Ruthenberg, in charge of the headquarters, that an itemized list be of the literature and other documents be made and a receipt given, in accordance with the law, was refused and the raiders proceeded to dump all the literature in sight into the waste paper bags found at the headquarters. The purpose of the raid seemed not so much a desire to find literature violating the criminal syndicalism bill as to grab all the literature in the party headquarters and thus hamper the party activities. Although C. E. Ruthenberg called attention to the fact that search warrant provided only for the seizure of such literature as violated the law and demanded that the literature on hand be examined and the raiders show what literature was in violating of the law, the raiders ignored this protest and proceeded to help themselves to the Socialist property.

After rummaging through the desks and files it was decided to take filing case and its contents and to place Carl Hacker, Recording Sec. of the party and C. E. Ruthenberg, under arrest.

Bail Fixed At Excessive Figure

Hacker and Ruthenberg, together with bags of literature and the filing case, were bundled into a police emergency and taken to the detective bureau at police headquarters. There the prisoners were charged with "publicly displaying literature" in violating of the criminal syndicalism bill.

A bondsman was on hand ready to furnish bail, but the police clerk refused to set the bail for so heinous a crime, as displaying literature, most of which had been sold for years without question. After several hours of telephoning in an effort to reach a judge of the Municipal Court, Judge Howells was reached and bail was set at $5,000 for each prisoner.

Bond was furnished for the two prisoners at the figure demanded and in court the folowing morning the hearing was set for July 23rd, when the prosecution will be obliged to show what literature it contends violates the law.

Socialists Barred from Streets.

Cleveland socialists were barred from holding street meetings on last Wed. evening by a squad of police, when an attempt made to open the municipal campaign with an open air meeting at the corner of 45th and Bush ave. This corner has been one of the most used open air meeting places for the socialists for years. When Tom Clifford, as chairman, got up to announce C. E. Ruthenberg, candidate for Mayor, as the speaker, he was at once approached by an officer and told that no meetings would be allowed. Five hundred people were present. The meeting had been advertised by handbils previously. Under the circumstances the socialists were allowed to merely make an announcement of a huge protest meeting against aggression upon Russia and Hungary to be held at Acme Hall on Sunday, July 20th.

Thru attorney Morris Wolf, an injunction was filed the following day in common pleas court against Mayor Davis to prevent police authorities from interfering with socialist street meetings.

The case was heard in Judge Martin A. Foran's court on Thursday. The Judge's decision was against the socialists which was no surprise at all, as it is an historic fact that judges are but the tools and interpreters of the laws for the master class.

Foran in his decision said:

"None of us are opposed to pure Socialism as embodied in the Socialist doctrine of a few years ago, but most everyone is opposed to Bolshevism, Anarchism and I. W. W.'ism, now included in the Socialist doctrine.

"Socialists cannot hold meetings on the streets and obstruct traffic," said Foran.

"Meetings in hall will not be interfered with as long as speakers do not challenge the integrity of this country and its institutions If they do so, they shall be prohibited from holding meetings anywhere."

Ruthenberg charged in his petition the only reason police were preventing meetings from being held was that Mayor Davis and representatives of other political parties feared power of the Socialists party.

So, it seems according to Judge Foran, that the socialists can either agree with him in his political and social views or keep their mouths shut. No minority opinions are to be tolerated in this land recently made safe for democracy. No "challenging" of this country and its institutions" will be allowed. In other words, capitalism, which is an institution of this country is not to be questioned as a benefactor of mankind and the working class in particular. The insufferable class justice handed out by the courts of capitalism in this country is not to be challenged. The mental bias of those who support the exploitation of the workers thru their court injunctions and decisions is not to be questioned. It is an "institution" of the country and must not be touched upon.

The robbery of the workers of this country is not a subject for discussion, according to this tool of capitalism. To jail with all who offer opposition to the rape of democracy! Every mouth that speaks for real freedom and a better life for the workers must and will be gagged if such as he have their way. Such is the attitude of those twisted and corrupted minds which do the bidding of capitalism and seek to earn their "thirty pieces of silver" and to curry favor with the commercial and financial pirates whose power is threatened by the organized workers. Just such intolerance and open violation of constitutional rights as these will lead to an end not cherished by those who sit uneasily in the seats of the mighty.

Another High Water Mark is Set in Ohio Socialist Press Fund Receipts.

Another high water mark was established in Press Fund receipts this week. And we hasten to give credit to that fine bunch of comrades at Akron, the German Branch of Local Akron, Socialist Party.

It seems that a number if high marks will be set in the Press Fund Drive before it gets much farther along its way. The week ending June 21, we reported receipts amounting to $240.39 for that one week. That was one very high mark. Two weeks later we were compelled (very willingly, we admit) to report nearly a thousand dollars in cash and pledges secured at our state picnic. Last week we were made happy akain and doubly so in reporting the $1,000 offer of comr. Wm. M. Brown, of Gallion. That's three almos in a row and now comes another dandy report for this week.

We ought to tell you the story tho. So this is how it was. Of course you know that the German Branch of Local Akron is among the livest and most loyal locals in the country. At least we know it, for we have seen this branch in action many times and never yet has it done else but prove its fidelity to revolutionary socialism and all forward looking Party work in ways that command the truest respect of every comrade.

Well, state Organizer, Chas. Baker was requested to visit the branch in regular business meeting and give them a talk on the Ohio Socialist Printing Press Drive and organization matters. Charlie went. Of course he went. Charles never fails to go wherever and whenever there is an opening for a thrust at capitalism. Judging by results, Charlie must have been in tip-top trim and he confesses that he thot the comrades were going to donate him the building when he concluded his little Press Fund monologue.

Any way, the comrades ordered one hundred dollars out of their treasuery for the printing plant and on top of that took up a collection of sixty dollars! And Baker tells us that there was only a handful of members present. Also that the comrades have promised more support to come later. Now what do you think of it? You think it was fine. You think it was a true socialist spirit that was manifested there in that generous and free hearted deed. You think it was an act of real comradeship, a true act of workingclass fidelity to a CAUSE that is worthy of sacrifice. And that is what it was in truth. And we are proud of this German Branch of Local Akron, Ohio.

One hundred and sixty dollars for the Ohio Socialist Press Fund from ONE Branch of one Local! That's going some, as the saying is. And how many Locals and Branches have we in the Party in this state? Well, we have a good many. Many of them have responded most generously and loyally to the call for funds to establish our own Party owned printing plant—and some have not—as yet. And to those who have not borne their share of our common burden in this matter, we just want to say: remember what they did at Akron. We are sure that when you think of what those comrades did for the Party printing plant, you will want to follow the same generous course and boost the fund to the limit of your ability. Yes, we are sure you will.

We wish sometimes that we could publish all the good things comrades tell us about what the locals and members are doing in the way of helping in the press fund drive. There come letters of several pages and letters of but a paragraph and again other letters of no more than a cople of lines. But how full they are of the spirit of co-operation and earnest comradely purpose!

You may rest assured, that the comrades throughout the country are taking a real live interest in the establishing of our own printing plant. Yes, they recognize it for what it is, a dead-in-earnest desire on the part of the Socialist Party of Ohio to serve the working-class revolution that is sweeping the world.

A real desire to place the workers in an impregnable position in their warfare against capitalism and every enemy of the workers by placing under their control and in their possession the means of publicity that alone can fight successfully the battles of the workers.

Capitalism rules the world thru its control of the avenues of publicity. To overturn this rule of the masters over a world enslaved, the workers must develop a workers press absolutely under their own control, and in this effort we need the assistance of every comrade.

The Press Fund is now reaching proportions, as is shown further down in these columns, that is most encourageing. Hundreds and hundreds of comrades are giving every assistance. The coming weeks will bring additional hundreds and thousands of dollars to the fund. The State Office is making many inquiries regarding printing equipment for the plant, which will be purchased soon.

Every dollar counts now. Let all comrades take hold and boost to the limit of their ability and the $10,000 will soon be on hand, and the job is done.

And don't forget, remember what they did at Akron. Remind your Local of what occured there at the next meeting. In the meanwhile, do YOUR part.

Below are the names of the comrades who have this week donated the amounts at the head of the column to the Ohio Socialist Press Fund.

SHALL DEBS' LIFE BE SAVED? – IT'S FOR YOU TO SAY!

The war is over.

Every man and woman who has a heart will continue to hear the sighs and groans and shrieks of the wounded and dying for thousands of days to come.

To civilization, such as it is, the greatest human sacrifice of the ages has been made. Savagery, barbarism, feudalism have come and gone. All have taken their toll of human life. It cost seven million lives, every one every bit as good as yours or mine, to teach us capitalism's ruthlessness.

SALUTE THE GREATEST TEACHER ON EARTH—WAR! But the tuition fee—WHAT A PRICE!

The war is over. But we are paying the price.

AND THAT'S OUR KICK, TODAY.

Why continue to take the lives of more than 2,000 political war prisoners by keeping them behind steel bars, away from home and all that makes life sweet?

WHY IS DEBS STILL BEHIND THE BARS?

Tell us, will you?

And why do the REAL CULPRITS go free?

Tell us, will you?

We're talking to you—YOU WHO HOLD THE KEYS to Atlanta, Leavenworth, McNeil's Island and all other bastiles.

• • • •

It was all right then, was it—for profiteers to sing songs to the flag, to wallow in patriotic gush, to shout loud and long for war, war, war, while behind the scenes they sucked the blood of war's victims?

This was ALL RIGHT—was it?

It was ALL RIGHT for the copper trust, the steel trust, the leather trust, the food trust, to make billions out of the war. It was ALL RIGHT for the powder trust to clean up a profit of 458 per cent. It was ALL RIGHT to cheat right and left, everybody and anybody, including the government.

WAS IT ALL RIGHT?

And if it was not, show us one criminal war profiteer of the hundreds that are guilty who now passes his time behind steel bars making prison clothes and learning the lock step.

SHOW US JUST ONE!

The war produced thousands of new millionairs. There's is BLOOD MONEY every cent of it. And these dollar patriots are now enjoying their pelf—enjoying this blood money—THINK OF IT!

None of them in prison. All of them free! That's ALL RIGHT—IS IT?

• • • •

But when a man, true to his convictions and loyal to the great working class voiced the horrors of war, and exposed the real reasons for war, and proved that those who shouted loudest for war were the same gentry that made millions of dollars out of war—is sent to prison for 10 years, IS THAT ALL RIGHT?

Everybody admits that war is horrible.

Everybody today knows why wars are forced upon the peoples.

Everybody today knows that flag-waving profiteers want war because it lines their pockets with gold.

But to SAY SO while the war was on, to tell the truth about the war while the nation was at war, that did not seem to be all right.

AND SO THEY SENT DEBS TO PRISON FOR 10 YEARS.

Debs, 63 years old, a foe of war because he is a lover of mankind.

Debs, 63 years old, for 40 years a champion of working class interests.

Debs, 63 years old, SENTENCED FOR LIFE—for he'll never live to serve ten years.

HOW ABOUT IT, PRESIDENT WILSON?

You said that the world must be made SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY!

You returned to this country the other day and FOUND DEBS IN PRISON.

Is this country part of the world? And when will democracy take root here? When will free speech, free assemblage and a free press again be permited?

HOW ABOUT IT?

• • • •

Yes—we know you feel a bit uncomfortable about it.

The capitalist press told us only a few days ago that you have the "convictions" of Debs, O'Hare and Stpkes under consideration.

To have Debs run for President while he occupies a cell at Atlanta does not seem to appeal to administration chiefs.

Yet, here's Wall Street. Wall Street has said that "any clemency shown Debs on the part of the government would be regarded as bearish on the situation. Wall Street knows Debs and does not consider him a true labor leader."

No—Debs is not a "true labor leader" for Wall Street. He does not lead in that direction. Wall Street hates Debs. Wall Street wants him where he is and will try to keep him there.

And the Democratic administration? And Wall Street. Are they enemies?

HOW ABOUT IT?

• • • •

And now, how about you—YOU WHO ARE READING THIS?

It is rumored at Washington that a promise to free Debs by fall would allay the present wide-spread unrest in this country.

THEY ADMIT UNREST. They seem to know what causes it.

Then this is YOUR DUTY.

DO NOT REST UNTIL DEBS AND ALL POLITICAL PRISONERS ARE FREED.

Let us make our voices, our pens, our industrial and political power do DOUBLE DUTY from now on.

Let's all join hands by JOINING THE ARMY OF LIBERATORS.

LET US BEGIN AT ONCE TO SECURE A LIBERATION FUND.

Let us increase our restlessness. Let's provide money to finance the activities which will eventually FREE DEBS and all other class war prisoners.

Shall there be a 20th Century Crucifixion?

Shall Debs die in prison?

IT'S FOR YOU TO SAY!

Debs, O'Hare and Stokes Cases taken up for Review

Plans to Have "Gene" Run for President From His Cell in Atlanta Does Not Appeal to Administration Chiefs.

WASHINGTON.— President Wilson and Attorney General Palmer have under consideration the cases of Eugene V. Debs, Rose Pastor Stokes and Kate Richards O'Hare, convicted during the war under the Espinage Act on charges of obstructing enlistments.

There is no indication, however, that a general amnesty for political prisoners, for which a campaign has been under way several months, is yet in prospect.

The cases of the three, the most prominent persons convicted under the Espionage Act, are being considered on their individual merits, the Attorney General said today.

Wilson Helps Study of Cases

"The department already has given separate consideration to 125 cases since the armistice was signed," said Palmer, "and the result has been the reduction of a great many sentences. We are going over the cases of Debs, Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. O'Hare in the same manner."

He said the President was participating in the study of the matter.

Strong pressure was brought on the President by radical and liberal forces to obtain a general amnesty for political prisoners. At the time the armistice was signed the effort was unsuccessful. It was renewed just before the signing of the peace, with the idea that this event offered the opportunity for a measure of generousity on the part of the President. It failed again.

Will Be out by Fall.

Since then the effort has been abandoned by many of these who were supporting it and talk among Socialists of running Debs for President while he remains in his Atlanta prison cell has become general. Talks with administartion officials closely concerned with these cases, however, indicated today that Debs it not likely to be a prisoner when the next presidential campaign begins.

"Debs is peculiar", said one of these. "He is a gentle sort and doubtless means well toward everybody in the world. I doubt if he at all represents some of the elements that are clamoring most loudly for his release."

The pressure on the President is not limited to those who share the views of Debs and the other prisoners. Many of the President's advisors insist that a declaration of amnesty would be a wise move toward combating the unrest being manifest in various sections of the country. Agitators feed on just such incidents as the wartime imprisonments. These advisors urge, and while they do not think an amnesty proclamation would put an end to unrest, they are convinced it would help the present situation to a definite extent.

ARMY OF LIBERATORS TO BE ORGANIZED

State Executive Committee of Socialist Party of Ohio Decides to Make Special Campaign to Free Debs and All Political Prisoners.

Join the "Army Of Liberators"—this will be the call which will go out from the Ohio state office of the Socialist Party in a few days. This army is to be composed of members of the working class and every worker who joins will be pledged to act as special agent and agitator for Debs' release from prison, as well as the release of all other political prisoners.

Members will be sought among labor unionists and members of the Socialist Party. A LIBERATION FUND will be started. The Army Of Liberators will gather this fund which will be used to tour speakers to address union meetings, to print hundreds fo thousands of leaflets, to publish posters, post cards and other publicity matter, all to be used to agitate for Debs' release.

This special campaign will be under the direction of the Socialist Party of Ohio. The OHIO SOCIALIST and all facilities of the state office will be placed at the advantage of this campaign. Every member of the Socialist Party is asked to begin at once to discuss the features of this campaign with his fellow workers in union meetings, in Socialist Party locals.

Watch the mails. Get ready to "sign up" all the workers you know in the ARMY OF LIBERATORS.

Enter the Municipal Elections Is Our Advice to Ohio Locals.

There is still time. Why not obey the motion passed by the Ohio State Convention and place a municipal ticket in the field?

No better opportunity for educational work was ever had than that which we now face. The world is full of talk about Socialism. Every issue of the capitalist papers deals with some phase of it. People are agitated about it. Workers want to know the truth about it.

It becomes YOUR DUTY to act as educators. The municipal election will give you the opportunity. Nominate your ticket AT ONCE. Circulate your nomination petitions. Begin a campaign which for thoroness has never surpassed. Your local will become an "ever at it"; local as a result. Your membership will respond by giving more of their time and money for the cause and all in all, the movement in your city, in the nation, in the world will receive an impetus which will bring us nearer the New Day.

HOW TO NOMINATE MUNICIPAL CANDIDATES.

News! News!

We have recently seen frequent news items stating that Petrograd was in a state of riot and disorder, and about to fall. These reports have in most cases been officially denied, either by Entente Government, or by the Russian Soviet Government But the game is an old one; an interesting example that is now nearly six months old is recalled by a perusal of Arthur Ransome's new book, "Six Weeks in Russia in 1919."

It will interest the reader to note how, on this previous occasion, his newspapers deceived him.

On February 3rd, the New York Times inserted in the first column of its first page the following: RED ARTILLERY SHELLS PETROGRAD. GUNS RUSHED FROM KRONSTADT TO SUPPRESS RISING OF SOLDIERS OF FORMER ARMY. MANY DEAD IN STREETS. Underneath was a dispatch, "by wireless to the N. Y. Times" from Copenhagen, telling of the mutiny in Petrograd: "The Capitol has been bombarded with artillery rushed up from Kronstadt. Cannon and machine-guns were used in the streets, which were strewn with many bodies."

While the "Times" and other papers througout the world were entertaining themselves in this fashion, an English journalist, on his way from Helsingfors to Petrograd, also read the story of the mutiny, with added details of how "the Semenovsky regiment had gone over to the mutineers, who had seized the town," and "the Government had escaped to Kronstadt whence they were bombarding Petrograd with naval guns."

To the traveller to the beleaguered city "this sounded fairly lively", as Arthur Ransome confesses in his "Six Weeks in Russia in 1919." He looked about him as his train pulled into Petrograd. "I walked outside the station to question people about the mutiny and the bombardment of which we had heard in Finland. Nobody knew anything about it." Ransome met Pozern one of the Petrograd Commissars: "I told him that I was surprised to find him here and not at Kronstadt, and asked about the mutiny and the treachery of the Semenovsky regiment. There was a shout of laughter, and Pozern explained that there were no Semenovsky regiment in existence, and that the manufacturers of the story, every word of which was a lie, had no doubt tried to give realism to it by putting down the name of the regiment which had taken a chief part in putting down the Moscow insurrection of fourteen years ago."

Mine Workers Ask Debs' Release

Information has just reached us of the advanced stand taken by the convention of the Indiana United Mine Workers July 11, which demanded the [illegible] release of Eugene V. Debs and the instant removal of Postmaster General Burleson.

The convention was held in Terre Haute, and it is noteworthy that news of its proceeding have only just reched New York by mail. The press associations apparently did not think it worth while to carry the news of the stand of this powerful organization of workers

The convention went on record in favor of the release of all political and religious prisoners, and specifically mentioned the name of Debs. A wire was sent to President Wilson demanding the instant removal of Burleson for his unfair attitude towards labor.

In addition, the convention went on record in favor of the nationalization of the mines a six-hour day and a five-day week, as well as a 40 per cent increase in wages and a minimum wage of $7 a day, with time and a half for overtime and double pay for Sundays and holidays.

JURY CONVICTS 13 SOCIALISTS

CINCINNATI, July 24.—Thomas Hammerschmidt, former Socialist candidate for mayor of Cincinnati, and twelve other Socialists, charged with attempting to obstruct federal military conscription, were late today convicted by a jury in the United States district court.

The verdict was rendered, however, with a recommendation for mercy. The jury was out about three hours. The maximum penalty that may be imposed is two years' imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both.

And appeal has been taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The defendants, who were indicted in 1917, are:

Lotta Burke, Charles Thiemann, Alfred Welker, Walter Gregory, John Jahn, Frank Reis, William Gruber, Fred Schneider, Philip Rothen[illegible], Alex J. Feldhaus, Arthur Tiedtke, Joseph Geier and Tomas Hammerschmidt.

THE HEROE'S REWARD.

NEW YORK.—Down on the Bowery in the junk-filled windows of pawn shops hang bronze crosses with their little bits of ribbon, which were worn just a little while ago by doughboys for heroism in battles.

There you can see numerous D. S. C.'s and croix des guerres which hungry soldiers sold to keep from starving. One boy who was decorated for bravery in Belleau wood parted with his distinguished service cross for $5. He sold it outright, the pawnbroker will tell you.

In pawnshops in any part of the city are to be found many decorations. They mutely testify to the spirit of the soldiers who once fought in France but who are too proud now to beg to keep from starving.

Fine thing to be a hero and then find yourself unable to get a meal in the country for which you offered your life. It is a great country that permits such conditions to [illegible]

THE HALF LIGHT BEFORE DAWN

That the epidemic of strikes that has swept the civilised world since the signing of the armistice, and which rage at this moment more furious and determinedly than ever before, presage the most momentous clash between the workers and the privileged class for world control, is the view held by thoughtful and analytical men and women. How foolish are those who refuse to see the inadequacy of the "settlements" effected in the strikes are well depicted in the following taken from The London Call. While the particular instances of class clashes referred to have passed from view, others of equal importance have since arisen and now compel the attention of every thinking person who has the interests of the workers at heart.

"The war," wrote Trotzky more than two years ago, "is at bottom a conflict between two great national imperialisms superimposed upon the far-more vital conflict between the classes."

History is confirming that analysis in no uncertain fashion. Wherever we look, at home or abroad, the national antagonisms are slowly but surely dissolving and giving place to struggles of varying degree of bitterness between the workers and the master class. In all lands—in the most unlikely circumstances—the really vital forces in society are thrusting aside, ruthlessly and forever, the merely transitory. True it is, of course, that in most cases, if not in all, the immediate causes of dispute are of minor significance. True also that the "settlements" arrived at are pitiful compromises that satisfy nobody and settle nothing. No serious student of history is deceived by those appearences. Shallow politicians may regard the strikes as merely scratches on the surface of time, to be removed by a little judiciously applied polish; but he is wiser, be he friend or foe, who sees in them the visible expressions of huge elemental forces contending at the very roots of capitalist society.

But if the depth of the industrial conflict is not plain to see, no one can miss its range. It circles the globe; it is wider in its incidence than the war itself; yet not, by the very conditions of its existence, one yard wider than the incidence of its true progenitor—capitalism. Strike from the map of the world those areas not yet capitalistically developed, and you have found its limits, but everywhere else it is in action or latently dormant.

Consider the situation as it exists today. In Melbourne and other parts of Australia tens of thousands of men are on strike, and all the elaborate tomfoolery of labor arbitration devised by colonial labor politicians to hide the real nature of the class struggle does not avail to ease the situation.

Canada is convulsed from ocean to ocean by a movement more revolutionary in spirit and motif than it was possible even to dream of but a few short years ago.

The Soviet form of administration has arisen spontaneously in Winnipeg as an inevitable development of the general strike, while, more significent still, the sympathies of the returned soldiers are obviously on the side of the strikers. And, according to the special correspondent of the Daily Mail, the most popular cry in Canada today is, "Production for use; not for profit!"

In South Africa, industrially backward as it is, there has been no widespread movement; but the seizure of power by the workers of Johannesburg a few weeks ago is worthy of notice. The apparent helplessness of the Transvaal government in face of the fact causes one furiously to think. What, after all, if the workers have but to push an unlatched door?

Even in India—poor, tortured India—the slaves of the cotton mills have dared to revolt against their taskmasters, only to be met by the cruel argument of rifle and machine gun.

So much for the outlying posts of Empire.

As for Europe, its condition it a tragedy. Famine and plague, twin sisters of the great god of war, stalk triumphantly through its length and breadth and threaten even the gates of this island. The one great experiment that might have saved the world is being fought savagely with intrigue, and cannon, and blockade, by all the governments in the interests of all the profitmongers. Yet not without protest from some at least of the workers in every country. The little old men of Versailles may understand their own dirty business of diplomacy, but they do not understand everything. If they did they would see in the strikes that are sweeping France from end to end a portent and a warning that might bid their chattering cease. They would ponder on the lesson of Toulouse—well censored Toulouse. They would see in the refusal of the gallant seamen of Genoa to ship munitions of war against their working-class comrades of Russia an example that might prove contagious. They might even perceive, as through a glass darkly, that the numerous strikes and widespread industrial unrest in dear, comfortable, old England betoken something deeper and graver than their shrivelled intellects can yet grisp. And at last, when understanding fully dawned upon them, they would realise that all these things are happening because the time spirit is working through the minds of men; because an old order, doomed and dyeing, is passing away into the limbo of history, and with its passing bringing new desires and strange unrests.. The universal discontent they would then interpret as the moaning and groaning of a world in travail—the tremblings as before an earthquake.

The vital world-wide conflict between the classes, suppressed for a time by the conflict between the two great imperialisms, arises with tenfold fury because of its suppression, and vindicates the teaching of history

It is the collapse of civilization, you say?
The end of all things?
No! By all the gods there be. No!
It is the New Renaissance.

"As a worker, I too, will not stand back. I will do my share, and I hope every reader will do the same. Working at it all the Time.

A donation of ten dollars was received from Local New Bremen this week. Its the rule now for every Local to get in the game of boosting the Press Fund. Comrade Arthur H. Miller, Fin. Sec. writes that the comrades of this live Local are working all the time to increase their membership and stimulate interest in the meetings, also, they will try to do more for the Press Fund.

The freedom of Debs and all political prisoners depends upon the amount of publicity which reaches the American working-class. Our capitalist masters are watching this campaign for Debs' release as an indication of working-class thought and purpose.

The greater the publicity which reaches the attention of American workers, so much the sooner will Debs and other comrades be released from prison.

THE FREEDOM OF DEBS IS IN YOUR HANDS. You can help in the work of his release by securing subscriptions to The Ohio Socialist. Every subscriber means another helper for Debs' release. Affairs of Interest to Party Members

THE WAY TO DO IT.

Organization possibilities are great. It has been proven by comrades of East Liverpool, Bellaire and Warren. Months ago the state office of the Socialist Party of Ohio advised that the more capable comrades in every local visit villages and communities in close proximity to their city and attempt to organize locals or secure members at large.

Three locals have now made definite efforts in this direction. Fred Walchli and Frank Stidd of Bellaire are making Sunday trips into the county, visiting mining camps and other worker's communities. Provident was visited by these two active comrades on Sunday before last. They took several members of the Bellaire South Slavic branch with them to assist. A good meetings was had and arrangements were made to return to organise a local on July 27th. Frank Stidd writes that he feels sure a local of thirty members can beorganized.

With the assistance of Chas. Baker and the Warren comrades, Newton Falls as visited in an attempt to organize a local. We still have to hear of the success of the meeting.

J. T. Pinkerton and E. A. Willison of Local East Liverpool went to Power Point, and adjoining town, some days ago and had a rousing meeting. A chart lecture was given and Mat Tusic, a store keeper of the community cooperated to the extent of permitting the speakers to place the chart over his large store window. When Willison asked the audience how many were willing to join a Socialist local and meeet once a week to study Socialism sixteen hands went up.

Thirteen applications for membership were taken immediately and July 31 set for the next meeting The new organization will consist of at least 20 members, we are told. A collection was taken and $2.15 worth of literature sold.

What is being done by the comrades of these locals YOU CAN ALSO DO. Arrange now with two or more comrades to visit nearby points. Even if you can not organize a local at every point visited, you can put the community on the Socialist map by securing a few members at large.

Literature sales at the Ohio state office have been very brisk lately. Many literature agents have learned that there is a big market for Socialist books and pamphlets and are turning dollars into local treasuries, the profits of the sales they are making.

Local Youngstown will picnic Aug. 3rd. The outing is held especially to secure funds for the party owned printing plant to be bought by the Socialist Party of Ohio.

IN JAIL.

Alex Swartzenfeldt, member of Local Toledo, Ohio, is incarcerated in the Stark County Workhouse. He was sentenced to eleven months by Federal Judge Killits for his strike activities in Toledo. Canton Comrades and others in the vicinity of this prison should visit him. Visiting hours every Thursday from 2 to 5 P. M.

Cincinnati broke the record this week in dues stamp purchases. An order for 600 from Otto Hucktaeschel was received. Has your local bought dues stamps lately? If not, then your membership needs looking after.

The strike in still on in Piqua, Ohio. The W. I. I. U. is gaining membership rapidly.

BAKER IN MINNESOTA.

Chas. Baker will fill a number of speaking dates in Minnesota beginning August 26th. He will return to Ohio about August 12th.

THE GUERNSEY COUNTY PICNIC

"Don't fail to attend the picnic at Ball's Grove" is the heading upon thousands of hand bills gotten out by the Socialists in that county The date of the picnic is August 10th and to reach the picnic gorunds you must take the interurban cars to the Puritan mine and then "follow the crowd."

The speakers are Frank L. Martin of Marietta, Marguerite Prevey of Akron and H. L. A. Holman of Texas—a battery which is sure to enligten the attendance. There will be amusements for children and "good society" for grown folks. If you live within a half day's travel of the picnic grounds, attend, for even a few hours with the Guernsey county comrades will inspire you.

An order for 100 copies of the Ohio Socialists every week for three months from the Finnish local at Fairport Harbor should set many of our English locals to thinking. If a foreign language local interests itself in our state paper sufficiently to support it so loyally, despite the fact that their are half a dozen Finnish party owned papers, then our English locals should come forward with their support in greater measure than here-tofore. There should not be one local in Ohio without its bundle of the state paper for weekly distribution.

WE ARE OUT TO WIN AND WIN WE WILL — That's a sentence from a letter sent Local Youngstown members by F. J. Catlin, secretary of the English branch. The letter especially calls, upon members to pay up their dues and become active in the cause. The leter also calls attention to the fact that the OHIO SOCIALIST as a very strong defense to the attacks of the plutocrats. It is a letter such as every secretary ought send the membership to awaken it to its duty.

We Join in Thanks.

The Ohio Socialist wishes to join the comrades of So. Slavic Br. No. 8 of Youngstown, O. in extending thanks to the comrades and sympathizers who contributed so liberally to the collection taken at their recent picnic which was donated to the Press Fund. The $50 donation just received is a most welcome proof of the liveness and true socialist spirit of this branch of international socialism.

These Letters Show the Spirit of Press Fund Boosters.

No Use for Sympathizers

Enclosing a dollar for the Press Fund, comrade J. D. Reedy of Bickmore W. V. writes: The comrades who pay dues and help finance the Party in its many struggles are real socialists, others are merely sympathizers. Is'nt he right?

Attention, Moline comrades!

"As I have not seen any Moline (Ill.) names among the contributors, I wish to start the ball rolling with this small donation." Thus writes comrade J. Savich.

He adds his mite.

"I want to be one to add my mite to the Press Fund to help get the Ohio Socialist out of the hands of the enemy", writes comrade H. A. Wise of Davenport, Iowa. Continuing he says: I am especially interested in the O. S. because it shows the real spirit of socialism as I understand it.

"Yours for a continued clear-cut working-class paper." That is what comrade Wm. Biember of Sundasky says in his letter containing a dollar for the Press Fund.

Helps to scatter the truth

"Come on brother workers and boost the O S. Press Fund all you can. Let's print and distribute the truth from our own press to counteract the millions of lies that are being sent out over the world." That's the word comrade D. B. Dale of Wise, Va. sends to the readers of the Ohio Socialist. Comrade Dale sets the pace too for with his letter is a list containing nine names of contributors to the Press Fund totaling $9.50 and four subs making in all, $12, to help spread the truth. The Dales of Wise, Va. are among our best boosters and on this list we notice the names of five of them. May their tribe increase.

Makes wishes come true

"Best regards and good luck to the Press Fund", writes comrade Wm. Adler of Lorain. And with the latter is a list of seven names of contributors and $10. If that is'nt making ones wishes come true, we'd like to know how it is done. Comrade Biemler sets a good example that many, many other comrades can easily and profitably follow.

"We must win our victory, so everybody put a shoulder to the wheel and help push the Press Fund over the top", writes comrade J. Rand of Ashtabula, O. His donation is two dollars.

"To keep the old fires burning" writes comrade Jas H. Thomas of Martins Ferry. He sends two dollars.

Two dollars and a half, his own donation, and $5 from the Herwegh Mannerchor of, Cincinnati, O. is to hand from comrade Alfred Eisermann. To our comrades unacquainted with German we explain that the above name signifies a German Mens Chorous.

"Hoping this will help a little in the big work." Thus writes comrade Chas Held secretary of the German Branch of Alliance O. Little helps like this make a big job seem little.

A Press Fund list containing 5 names and remittance for $20 from comrade Pete Stefanich or Warren is among this week's receipts. This is certainly splendid work of comrade Stefanich.

We Hope They Do

"Will come in again if we can manage to raise more funds", writes comrade Fred White of Local Martins Ferry. He enclosed ten dollars as the Local's donation.

Wall Street has a well-defined opinion of Debs and a terrible fear of him

Broadenwall, the New York American's financial expert may rightfully be regarded as one of Wall Street's mouthpieces, and when Debs was sent to prison, Broadenwall delivered himself of this comment in his paper:

"Any clemency to Debs on the part of the government would be regarded by Wall Street as bearish on the situation Wall Street knows Debs and does not consider him a true labor leader.

"Wall Street is willing to deal with labor under other leaders, and believes that his elimination would be a great step toward complete understanding."

To the Comrades of Kansas

—By L. E. KATTERFELD—

In an amazing two column article in the July 10th People's Forum our State Secretary advertises her candidacy for convention delegate. Since most of it was an attack upon me and the Left Wing in general, I feel sure that you will in fairness grant me space for answer.

In this article the State Secretary boasts of having been on the constitution committee for four years. She must therefore be aware of the fact that she has violated the State constitution. Sec. 6 Art. IX distinctly reads: "Any member who announces himself as a candidate for a party official position shall be deemed ineligible." Yet in her article, written before nominations were made, she says: "I am GOING TO accept a nomination to the antional convention."

Even if there was no Party law against it, would you think it fair to the ordinary party members who may also be nominated, for a State Secretary to use the advantage of official position to announce her candidacy and practically campaign for election as convention delegate in this manner? What do you think about it, Comrades of Kansas?

Probably it is natural for the State Secretary to feel peeved because the Russian Branch in Kansas City did not vote for her, but she should not permit this somewhat natural resentment to provoke her to the unjust insinuations and unwarranted inferences with which her article abounds. I'll waste no time on her personal reflections. They will not effect the Comrades that know me, and Comrade Beloof herself will feel ashamed of them in time. I shall merely state that I did not even know how that Russian Branch in K. C. voted until I saw the returns published in the Forum.

Mrs. Beloof expresse holy horror at "caucusing, slating and all that sort of thing". Then she should forever shun our national officialdom and the old N. E. C. majority whom she upholds. They have used these methods at every convention. Germer was elected national secretary through a practically solid foreign federation vote. O'Neal was elected State Secretary of Massachusetts through a "slate". The Wisconsin S. E. C. this very year published a "slate" and officially urged locals to "get out every vote possible". Now if it was O. K. for Locals to follows that advice and vote solid FOR the Milwankee slate, why was it a crime for them to vote AGAINST the slate of the officialdom and for one of their own?

This "holier-than-thou" attitude almost gets my goat. The moderates kept absolutely mum as long as they were the beneficiaries of the natural tendency of foreign language branches to "vote solid", but they raise an awful howl the minute that that vote goes against them. It is contemptible hypocrisy to shut your eyes against slate making by one side and then try to make a great moral issue out of it against the other side.

What does it mean anyway? Every party member certainly has the right to vote in any party election as he pleases, without asking premission of any State Secetary, National Secretary of Executive Committee. Two or three or any number of members have the right to consult each other, to discuss the party's problems as much as they like and to vote together, whether their conclusions please our party officialdom or whether they do not. And that is all there is to the "slate making" and "caucusing" on the part of the membership in the recent referendums, and no party officials have the right to use their official positions to insult the membership because of it.

Mrs. Beloof wastes much space misrepresenting Michigan. Now I hold no brief for Michigan. There are many points on which Michigan does not agree with the general Left Wing position to which I subscribe. But the Michigan program does not have the meaning that lawyer Stedman and Mrs. Beloof twist into it. The Michigan constitution leaves every member free to VOTE for reform legislation. It merely provides that they shall not ADVOCATE them, trying to catch nonsocialist votes with them, but make our campaign issue the abolition of capitalism. This is not a violation of our party constitution, but strictly in harmony with its spirit of "No Compromise". It is not the revolutionist but the compromising opportunist that violates our fundamental party laws.

But be that as it may, the Michigan Comrades were entitled to notice of charges against them and to an opportunity to present their defense in an impartial trial. An Executive Committee whose members had just been defeated for reelection by the Michigan votes could certainly not be called an unbiased jury.

We are making a great "holler" because the capitalist powers keep men in jail here in Kansas without trial. It is an outrage that should not be telorated. Yet this is exactly the wrong that the old N. E. C. did to Michigan and the federations. Mrs. Beloof endorses that wrong. She assures us that she too would have voted to expell Michigan. Without any trial, mind you. Shall Kansas send delegates to the convention where these questions are to be considered, who are determined beforehand, regardless of the evidence, to deny any representation to our accused Comrades or even to give them a voice in their own defense?

She tells us that we should use the referendum we are told that we the referendum we aretold that we should wait until the convention.

Comrades, you will remember tht last winter we asked the N. E. C. to call a convention. Had they done so, all these problems could have been settled month ago. But they ignored us and refused.

We initiated referendum. They threw them out.

Finally we carried a referendum by an overwhelming vote. They refused to count it.

We elected a new Executive Committee. They suppressed the election.

We initiated a referendum to reverse their nefarious acts. We have secured three times as many seconds as are needed. They now refuse to submit this to a vote of the membership.

And now that they have called a convention they are pulling the wires to control it. They expell and "reorganize" states where they know that we are in the majority. In other states they carry on insiduous campaigns to influence the election of delegates, using the national office funds to circularize the membership, as the national secretary did here in Kansas, in an effort to discredit the Left Wing and elect either Right Wingers or compromisers who can be depended upon to whitewash them.

Nothing of which the foreign federations or the Left Wing Locals are accused is as reprehensible as these actions of the old N. E. C., which seem to meet with the complete approval of our State Secretary. She says she too would voted that way. Do the Kansas Comrades really want convention delegates that approve these acts? Or will you sends delegates to the convention that will insist that ALL the accused be granted a fair hearing, that one be convicted and deprived of membership until proven guilty, and that the officials of the party shall be forced to obey the mandates of the party's membership?

Finally, Comrades, let us remember always the great issue that confronts us. It is far more fundamental than any question of mere methods or tacdom. It is not merely a personal quarantocracy on the part of our officialdom. It is ot merely a pesonal quarrel, nor even one of "factions". It is not a "senseless and needless controversy", as Mrs. Beloof calls it. If that is what I thought of it, I would not waste any of my time on it.

It is the inevitable struggle between the forces of revolutionary proletarian Socialism and the forces of bourgeois reformism of the capitalist state. It is essentially the same issue that arose in Russia between Lenine and Kerensky. It is the same issue fundamentally that is agitating our Spartacan comrades in Germany. One group believes that Socialism can be ushered in through reforms under the capitalist political state with its sham "democracy". The other believes to the "dictatorship of the proletariat" is an essential preliminary to the building of the cooperative commonwealth.

I for one am glad that this issue has arisen NOW. I have absolute faith that the coming convention will settle this issue and settle it right, cut our party loose for all time from the reformist elements that have hampered in the past and begin in earnest the great work of organizing the power of our workingclass to emancipate ITSELF. And I sure hope that Kansas will send a delegation that will help to cause the national officialdom of our party to respond to the revolutionary fervor of our membership and make our official Socialist Party worthy of comradeship with the Bolshevik Communists in the Moscow International.

We Say It Again.

American Atrocities

Let's take our eyes off Russia and Hungary for a moment and glance about America.

In view of the recent race riots in the capital city of the United States in would be perfectly in order for the outside world to inaugurate an inquiry into the causes of "frightfulness" in this country. America has been among the foremost to nosey about the world and especially that part of it that has gone Bolsheviki, in search of foundation for rumors of atrocities. However, American attrocities are not fancies of diseased minds nor mere rumors of a capitalist news agency. They are facts. And very interesting facts at that. Also very illuminating of the sort of civilization we have in this boasted land of freedom and equality.

Let's consider a few of them.

Our record for negro lynchings last year was perhaps the best ever. The total was 62. That's an average of more than one a week.

Those who take pride in the accomplishments of our national ambitions and the pronounced superiority of the white race (for mob rule) may congratulate us upon our great success. Five of the victims were women which certainly proves a high standard of respect in which womankind are held, by our considerate males.

In order that lynching may be appreciated to their full value, and our people deprived of nothing that would elevate and raise that latent spirituality that exists in even the lowliest human they are advertised in advance in the daily press. "Three thousand will burn Negro" is a headline in a southern paper.

Two lynchings are reported in today's press dispatches. Aside from the kilings in such race riots as annually occur, our lynchings this year bid fair to surpass the record of the year just past.

Yes, an inquiry into the causes of American atrocities by a committee composed of say, the spirits of Nero, Torquemado, Cesare Borgia, might result in much good to our national soul. for while they could learn little from us in the way of intollerance, they might teach us much in the way of human kindness.

All the cruelties praticed upon by man were not of the Inquisition, they still exist and here in America we have an unparralled example of them at their worst.

The Human Side of Flying

In the pot-pourri of strike news that fills the morning paper, accounts state that mail carriers in the government service in New York threaten to strike "for safer machines and better working conditions". Thus in a single line of print is all the wonder of flying brushed aside and another side, a prosaic one, which the general public has heretofore seen little of is opened to our vision.

Out of the sky blue comes a throbbing. We raise our eyes in quick search for the wigned mystery which it heralds. Sailing upon the highways of heaven it passes in wonder in magesty, a thing of grace, of art and achievement. In our admiration, we forget momentarily that a human hand and brain pilots it thru the invisible lanes.

How swiftly in the distance it becomes a tiny speck; for our ears the throbbing ceases and the winged wonder is lost to vision in the limitless expanse of sky!

And the morning paper says the air pilots threaten to strike unless stabalizers are installed on the machines which will enable them to know in a fog if they are flying on an even keel or upside down. But stabalizers cost $75! So assistant post-master general, Otto Praeger, tells them they should steer by compass as stabalizers are too expensive.

Also, there is the little matter of unsafe machines. The pilots say, (and every time we will take the operator's word as to the safety of the machine, he runs), that they are forced to use machines which have been repaired many times and the risk is too great.

In the recent rainy spell of weather, they assert that fifteen accidents occured and ten machines were demolished and two pilots killed. It seems that the principle of "safety first" has not yet been applied to the air routes. And those who take the risk must be the first to claim equality with workers on and beneath the surface.

Again does the human side of flying reveal itself in the demands of the pilots for the re-instatement of two brother airmen who were discharged for refusing to take the air on an especially bad day. So we have unionism, fraternal feelings, a feeling of common interest prevading the minds of our airmen Just as tho they were street car men or wheel barrow pushers!

Indeed, it is a prosaic world!

When you see a flyer pass over, remember that the hand that pilots it is that of a worker with the same interests as yours and perhaps the same socialist ideas.

But if you are of the "post-office socialist" variety, he will more than likely feel like dropping a brick on your head.

Our hats off to the airmen. We hope they win.

A PICTURE OF DEBS FOR YOUR HOME

A picture of Debs should be in every worker's home. The latest picture of Debs, taken just before going to Moundsville prison, is the best one ever taken, so critics say

Enlarged and printed in sepia an special paper, measuring 12½ x 18 inches, it makes a splendid picture for framing for any home. It is autographed in Debs' hand writing which adds to its attractiveness.

You will like this photo of Gene and will cherish it for many years to come. It is the picture of Debs that will become historical, the picture taken just before capitalism sentenced him to ten years for his loyalty to the workers.

CINCINNATI AGAINST ABOLITION OF PRESS STAMPS.

Local Cincinnati at its meeting on July 17th, went on record as opposed to the change in the state constitution of the Socialist Party of Ohio which would abolish theuse of press stamps to secure the subscriptions of party members. To do away with the press stamp would injure the success of our party owned paper. We ask all party members to think carefully before voting to abolish Article 17, Section 9.—E L. Tribbey, Sec'y.

Portsmouth insists upon being in the lead in Ohio. It has engaged Comrade Dodge to give all of his time for a month to get the local members back into activity and good standing.

The Split in the Socialist Party

— By JOS. B. STILSON. —

The history of the split in the Socialist Party really begins in 1916, when Allan Benson was named as standard-bearer for the party. This man, as candidate for President of the United States, travelling through the country agitating for his election, never in his speeches mentioned by as much as a half word the class struggle. On the contrary, his advocacy had nothing in common with Socialism. I remember the newspaper report of his speech in Cleveland, Ohio, where to the question "why does he not speak about the class struggle instead of talking only about votes of the citizens and the whole lot of 'good' he is going to do when he is elected President", he answered "The present is no time to talk of such things as the class struggle".

The elections, as we know, gave sad results, the number of Socialist votes declining to half the number cast for comrade Debs in 1912. At the same time the party members whose brains were not filled with such 'socialism" as that which was "established" by Berger and his friends in Milwaukee, began to look for means wherby the party could be set on a better foundation, giving it class character cleared of the petty bourgeois hash which was flourished not only in the party's platform, but in all of its literature and at all its meetings. But how was it be done?

Everyone interested in the earlier part of the American labor movement, remembers well the "order" that provailed in the party: in every nook there was a "boss", every 'boss" had his own organ, and every organ advocated new "socialism". The new "education" was spread both among the party members and the working masses in general. The party itself hardly printed any literature at all. It was satisfied with the distribution of "private" literature, which often elucidated questions in such manner that the European socialist (even the "centrist" German!), after coming to this country and learning its language would read a pamphlet on the posibilities of Ford "Socialism", or a pamphlet urging that the capitalist government must become the owner of the trusts. (as if it were not already a tool of the trusts), or a pamphlet proving that the party candidates, when elected to the City Council will "ease the life of the working class" by decreasing the prices of food, clothing, transportation, through city ownership of water works, milk depots, electric plants, streetcar systems, etc., the immigrant Socialist would cry out: "In the country of dollars the Socialists are of the dollar kind also! Their party will never rise if it continues to follow in these old tracks."

Capitalism Breeds Revolutionists

Of course, the capitalistic system itself is breeding the revolutionists. To fence the Socialist Party so that the revolutionists could not enter was the task which the party officers could not quite accomplish. And on account of the party's dilapidated machinery and steadily declining influence among the working class, not only was dissatisfaction growing among the members, but the revolutionary elements in the fall of 1916 became so bold that they openly dared to raise their voices against such persons as Benson, Berger, Goebel and others, who spoke in the name of the Socialist Party to advocate the "Socialism" of Bismarck. But these revolutionary elements of the party confronted a quite delicate question. Something had to be done immedistly if the party was to be saved not only from the clutches of persons who have nothing in common with the political action (in the real sense of the word) of the working class, but from its complete dilapidation as well.

The entire political machinery of the party was in the hands of the opportunists; the entire press was also in their hands. They held not only the party reins, but the means of communication as well. Then what could be done by the members who saw in the activity of the leaders, in the party tactics and even in its principles only peril to the labor movement, only the useless waste of energy and money for the "agitation and propaganda" for offices in government institutions for the benefit of individual persons? The hope still entertained by some that Socialist "representatives" in the government had some importance, disappeared like a dream during the term in which Meyer London sat in the Congress and blew the horn of "democracy". At that time somewhat sharper criticism had appeared also against the German "socialism" —that "socialism" which for years and years had inspired all opportunists.

Knowing that the party would never renounce its opportunistic, pettibourgeois position while the reins remained in the hands of the persons who advertised in their papers (for money) the candidates of the corrupt capitalist parties (as Berger did in the Milwaukee Leader), or such who were showing their "loyalty" to the "working class" by having their photographs taken in soldier's uniform and printing them in the campaign leaflets (as former Socialist Mayor of Minneapolis, Van Lear did),—the revolutionary elements realized that it was possible to fight against such reactionary rule in the party only by organizing the revolutionary forces for the benefit of Revolutionary Socialism. The beginning of this work was made by Boston Comrades who organized the Socialist Propaganda League, out of which the present Left Wing Section of the Socialist Party grew. And through this Propaganda League issued a program, which from the standpoint of the opportunists is "treason of the party" yet the "socialists" of the Berger kind did not suspend the creators of this League, or their members, or those who actepted the program of this League, thinking, probably, that the creators of this League were but a few "fanatics" and "strutters", whose shoutings would not last. But these "modern socialists" have "divined" the sentiment of the rank and file just as Wilhelm II did his fate...

The initiators of the League not only did not lose their "spirit", but on the contrary the revolutionary thought in the party kept growing and growing.

In the meanwhile the war came. The masses became restless. Individual members of the party and entire branches began to demand from the party officers an answer to the question raised by "democracy". Something had to be done, because silence on the part of the opportunitists would take the party machinery out of their hands. In order to save their "authority" from going into bankruptcy the opportunitists convoked the famous convention at St. Louis and there betrayed the members of the Socialist Party by feigning that they had become radical. Their fear was that the party might turn still more radical (read Berger's confession in Judge Landis Court at Chicago), and they secretly hoped to turn the party back again into the old ruts as soon as the "heat" of the "fanatics" was gone. They accomplished this splendidly during the time of greatest reaction by announcing that the party members should read the St. Louis platform "according to their views". But they made a mistake again. It is true, there were many members who acted indeed according to their own personal "views". However the "spirit" of the radicals not only did not evaporate, but on the contrary, it captured still greater numbers of the party members than before.

Then the Russian, German and Hungarian Revolutions placed squarely before the party the clear question: will the party go with the reactionary elements, which during the entire period of the war have so earnestly worked for the bourgeoisie; or will it go with that Socialist movement, which the worst reaction of the four years has failed to destroy? To answer this question a party convention was necessary. But the National Executive Committee did not see any reason for calling the convention, explaining through the mouth of Germer, that the "regular" convention is coming next year (for election of candidates to the governmental offices) and it will be possible to solve there "all such" questions; and if the convention should be called now, it would be a hard thing even to cover the expenses...."

What is the secret of this refusal to call the convention? It is this: The Left Wing in party the might send to the convention the majority of delegates and put the party in a position as fearful to the opportunistic "modernists" as is the hell to the believer. The Left elements would unite the party with the European Communists, so hateful to Victor Berger & Co., and still worse, this convention might arrive at the conclusion that no place could be spared in the party to the brothers of Phillip Scheidemann. In order to fool the party members the National Executive Committe planned the "Amnesty" convention instead of the party convention, and "found" money to pay Mahlon Barnes $50.00 a week and his wife additional $25.00 a week for the "preliminary arrangements" of the convention. They thought everything would be smoothed out this way. In their scheme to call the "amnesty" convention the party officers renounced even its class character, they decided to call the convention not in the name of the party but in the name of some colorless league and they invited for its organizers even such elements as officers of the American Federation of Labor (who never answered the invitation) and of the People's Council (which but recently refused to allow Comrade Debs to make a speech; which adopted the Wilsonian "fourteen points"), etc., —yet the party members, earnestly desiring to free the prisoners, in the absence of the opportunity to discuss the question of an "Amnesty" Convention more fully, at first did not oppose such decision of the N. E. C., at least to any extent.

Protest Sending Delegates to Berne

Entirely different, however, was the sending of delegates to the conference of social-traitors at Berne. The National Executive Committee was vigorously denounced in this instance even while in session in January, at which time this decision was made. I myself participated in this session and strongly protested against such conduct of the N. E. C., pointing out that our party, if not in fact then at least in theory, held a somewhat cleaner position than the traitors of working-class interests—Scheidemann, Ebert, Kautsky, Plechanoff, Henderson, Thomas, Guesde and other "socialists" of this kind. I stated that the Russian and German Communist parties are calling their conference at Moscow for the purpose of creating the Third International. Then National Secretary Germer proudly stated that no one knows about such a conference being called at Moscow and that Stilson is taking his news from the capitalist papers (as if he was "taking" his news about the conference of social-traitors at Berne from any source other than the same capitalist papers!)

As soon as the party members learned that the National Executive Committee decided to join the American Socialist Party to the yellow socialists in Europe,—they began to send from everywhere the strongest protests against this decision of the Committee, —not only against the wasting of money on the pleasure ride of a couple of opportunists but also because it would bring the greatest shame upon the Socialist movement in this country; they demanded not only the recall of this decision of the committee, but at the same time to help the real Socialists of Europe to establish the Third International. But the N. E. C., consisting in the majority of people who understand Socialism not a bit better than does William Jennings Bryan, having in its hands the party machinery and understanding well its power, again decided to ignore the demands of the membership, still hoping that the revolutionary spirit will disappear and all would soon be well.

Officialdom Beaten in Elections.

It is true it took some time for that spirit to assert itself. But it did assert itself. The returns of the elections of the officers of the party have shown that the opportunists were beaten into the dust, that the party management was taken away from them. And, mark you, they are "grown men", as Goebel says, and know that they can dictate the party's position just so long as the party management is in their hands. Therefore they decided to oppose the will of the membership at any cost. And for that purpose there was but one means—force. Immediatly after incidents in New York became known, where the opportunists asked the police to throw the Left Socialists out of meeting—a Socialist meeting, Secretary Germer went to New York on a "visit".. The results of this "visit" was that immediately after his return to Chicago reports came that both English and foreign language branches which had joined the Left Wing were thrown out of the New York state organization.....

On May 24 of this year there was a session of the N. E. C. in Chicago, the secretary of local New York and member of the state executive committee, came to it "without invitation" as he said himself and as Germer confirmed. Now, what did he come for? He came to vindicate the conduct of New York local and the New York state executive committee in eliminating from the party several thousand members. Everybody knows that only the State itself has a constitutional right to expel members, no one has given such right to the N. E. C., and therefore the purpose of Gerber's coming was something else.

For one thing he said that one member of the executive committee of local New York always attended the meetings of various branches where the elections of any party officers were in progress and saw to it that the branches were voting.... "properly"! In other word he put on the branches the usual raectionary paw of the corrupt politicians of Tammany Hall. But, notwithstanding the fact that the "election boss" at the meeting was watching the branch so that it would vote "properly", many branches unanimously voted for the candidates of the Left Wing and the opportunists were defeated even in such a center of social-patriots as New York! Then what could be expected from places where the votes were not "sure"? All this was explained by Gerber in his hour and a half speech... He called the attention of the N. E. C. especially to the fact that the most ballots for the Left Wing candidates were cast by foreign speaking branches; that they had "steering committees" to indicate how to vote (he almost forgot his "report" of just a few minutes before that he was sending his "representatives" to the branches to "watch" that they should vote "properly"....).

Then followed the report of National Secretary Germer. He remarked at the outset that the Russian, Lithuanian and some other foreign language Federations during the last few months were growing so rapidly, that it was simply awful, a growth very "unnatural"; the Russian Federation had grown from a couple of thousand members to eight thousand; Lithuanian, from three and a half to over six thousand ect..... And this meant nothing else but a desire on the part of the leaders of these Federations to drive into the party numbers of "heads" by the help of whom "they could size the Socialist Party of America".... Therefore he asked the committee to do something.... "to prevent the Leftwingers from taking possession of the party"....

Michigan Expelled Without Trial

After some time he presented to the N E C. the charge against the Michigan organization because it allowed the memberhip to have the referendum vote on the decision of the convention to repeal all reformistic demands in the State platform. In that charge and in supplement to it (everything in the official report!) Germer chided the Leftwingers so much that even Shiplacoff, that King of the Avanturists, advised omission of some parts as "not pertaining to the report". But the main point was this: Michigan State voted for the Left Wing candidates—several thous- remany, without paying any attention and votes. Therefore, without any regard to the fact that the motion to repeal the reformistic demands in the platform of Michigan State organization was under process of a referendum vote in the State and that it might be rejected yet, which was plainly pointed out by the members of the N. E. C. Comrades Wagenknecht and Katterfeld—this did not stop the reactionaries bent on holding the reins of the party's management in their hands at any price. They refused even to give a chance to the Comrades of Michigan state to explain or vindicate themselves,—they eliminated the entire organization by a single stroke of the pen. And only the fool can fail to understand that this elimination was directed not for the protection of the party Constitution but for the purpose of throwing out the votes undesirable to the opportunists, because the members of the N E C had admitted themselves that they had no knowledge whether the Michigan state organization would accept this amendment or not

But his is not all.

Seven members of the N. E. C., having disposed of the Michigan organization, with a chance to "be close" to the election returns, learned in some mysterious way that the elimination of Michigan state alone was not sufficient to change the results of the voting. They decided to suspend all elections on the supposed ground that some frauds had been practiced in balloting. Where was the eidence of these "frauds"? Do you suppose they were in local New York where Gerber, the "election boss" or his "representative" attended the branch meetings and watched to see that they did not vote for the candidtes opposed to the reactionary machine? Not at all! The "frauds" appeared in the fact that the Left Wing branches paid no attention to the "election bosses" and voted as a unit for the Left candidates and the master-opportunists were left without a single vote in some places and in locals even right under their own noses!

Cry of "Fraud" Only a Cloak

PARTY NEWS AND VIEWS

AN IMPORTANT REFERENDUM

The most important and by far the largest referendum ballot which Ohio members have voted upon is now in the hands of all local and branch secretaries. Every party member ought attend his next local or branch meeting to cast his vote upon the momentous questions before the party Local and branch secretaries would greatly assist in getting out a full vote if they would notify their membership that the next meeting would consider the ballots before the members as a special order of business and if they would at the same time send a ballot to each member in good standing by mail, so that the member could study it before attending the meeting.

The important ballot referred to is that which asks for the vote of the state membership upon the acts of the recent state convention. The amended sate constitution appears first upon this referendum ballot. The changes in the constitution which every member should give attention to are, first, an increase in the wages of the state secretary from $35.00 to $45.00 a week. This increase was voted by the convention, the committee on constitution holding that high cost of living made an increase imperative.

The convention abolished the use of the press stamp and if the amended constitution carries, then every member in the state will have to subscribe to the paper voluntarily. A raise in dues to the state office and for the individual member was agreed to. The dues locals are to pay to the state office were raised to 20c. per stamp. Uniform dues which members will have to pay to the local or branch were set at 35c. a month. The initiation fee was raised to 50c. per applicant half of this to be retained by the local.

A uniform municipal platform for all locals and the Left Wing Program appear upon the ballot. These should both be studied carefully for they mark an advent in party progress.

The resolutions are also worthy of several readings. Resolution No. 1, upon the party controversy, if agreed to be the membership, pledges the Ohio organization to become part of a new Socialist Party if the present stand pat officialdom of the party so manipulates the coming national convention as to make it possible for the entire party delegates to take part and for the Left Wing to control. It is conceded of course, that if the entire quota or delegates from all states including those unjustly expelled, take part, that then the Left Wing will be in full control.

Resolution 4 and 5 also have to do with the party controversy. The others of the eleven resolution passed by the convention will undoubtedly be generally agreed upon Voting upon this ballot closes August 22nd. Make sure to get your ballot at once. Take it home. Give it particular study so that you may vote intelligently.

CANTON BEGINS MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN.

T. H. Robertson writes: "We completed the work of our city convention and expect to have our campaign well under way in a couple of weeks. Beginning July 27th we shall hold weekly Sunday afternoon meetings in the open. We herewith make application for speakers."

STATE PICNIC NETS $400

A check for $400.00 arrived at the state office several days ago. It constituted the net proceeds of the state picnic, held at Coney Island, Cincinnati, June 29th.

The picnic was under the direction of Local Cincinnati. Otto Hoefer acted as chairman of the picnic committee. The report he submitted of receipts and expenses is complete in every detail and much credit is due him and the committee for its painstaking work

The state convention cost the party nearly $1,000.00. The $400.00 net proceeds will help considerably to fill the void left by the big outlay for railroad fares.

One hundred copies of our paper go forward to Vestaburg, Pa., "because it takes the right position."

The Socialist Party of Oregon will hold a state convention before Aug. 30th to instruct its delegates to the national convention to be held upon that date.

Local Fremont demands that the Ohio Socialist continue to print the truth about the party controversy and orders a bundle for its membership to keep them informed.

Tom Clifford filled several dates in Louisvilley, Ky., lately.

New Polish branches have organized in Adena, Youngstown, Fair Point and Maynard, Ohio

"Fall will soon be here and we will need talent to explain Socialism in many Ohio towns. How about a speaker's school?" C. V. Ulrich.

Local Rochester, N. Y., sent a vigorous protest to the national office for holding up the referendum initiated by Local Cuyahoga county. This motion for national referendum has now been seconded by locals and branches representing more than 12,000 members and was meant to recind the autocratic acts of the N. E. C. is throwing 40,000 members out of the party.

Much demand has been made lately for literature in foreign languages. May G. Waters of East Liverpool inquires about Italian and Slavish literature and papers. Comrade Waters also reports a very successful July 4th picnic under the direction of her local. Speeches, games, races and good things to eat made the day a big one.

Local Tonawanda, N. Y., enters our bundle list with an order for 100 a week. Come on, Ohio locals,—get busy.

The Akron picnic at Riverview Park at which Chas. Baker was the principle speaker, netted $30.00 for the party owned printing plant fund.

TWO THOUSAND TO BELLEVILLE, ILL.

An order for $2,000 copes of the Ohio Socialist for locals and branches in the vicinity of Belleville, Ill., is one result of the dastardly acts of the old N. E. C. The Belleville comrades want to know and let others know of the attempt to wreck the party by the officialdom that is playing the game of the Czar.

KENMORE NOMINATES TICKET

Local Kenmore has placed a full Socialist ticket in the field. Four of the candidates are returned soldiers. A. Lasken heads the ticket as candidate for mayor. Other candidates are: For councilmen, J. C. Artley, F. Regers. John V. Nice, Ray Bartchey, H. Bachtel, C. Edwards. For clerk, Fred W. Seibert. For treasurer, Peter Balty. For marshall, Henry Olson. For board of public affairs, Fiber, Brown and Bissel. For school board, Mrs. F. W. Seibert, Chas. Bancher, J. Perry. Constable, A. Aggus. Justice of the peace, E. F. Koenig.

The Ohio Socialist would like to publish the names of other municipal candidates. Send them in.

FROM OKLAHOMA.

"We like your stand and your paper. We simply will not stand for autocracy in the party. Stand by your convictions if it takes everything. The local thinks that now is the time to use the recall on that bunch of seven on the N. E. C." Mrs. Jeff Sinnett, Glencoe.

THE COLUMBUS PICNIC

We had a very good report of the Columbus local picnic, written by the picnic committee. Due to the inconvenience of having to print the Ohio Socialist in Dayton, this report seems to have gone astray. We shall make an attempt to locate it in the Dayton plant. The picnic was a very successful one despite the fact that the owner of the grounds which the comrades rented, refused to permit the picnic to take place upon "his" land. The picknickers adjourned to one of the public parks and spent a very pleasant day.

"Having a prison term confronting you, it seems as tho you are going to depend on the capitalist class for help and will do all you can to hinder the working class to express its will, as it seems very evident they wish to do by actions taken in recent elections.

Granting, that some things are "unconstitutional" as you claim—it is evident that we cannot fight "new battles with old wornout weapons".

It is very evident that if the workers desire anything they must be the ones to get it, and should rule their party from the "bottom up" instead of from the "top down."

From your action, and actions of the N E. C., it seems as tho a "few higher ups" know better what is kood for the "many lower down" than they do themselves.

We desire a change, we demand a change, and in the end we will have a change.

"Those who are not with us are surely against us"—"no man can serve to masters."

Those who serve us' we will serve in a great and glorions couse, and by so doing we will get justice in the end.

Those who serve us we will serve a just condemnation.

Join your hand and heart with those Revolutionary Socialists whose hearts never beat a retreat.

Respectfully,
HERBERT BORING,
(SIGNED) Local Sec.

A Correction

Permit me to correct a mistaken impression of Comrade Dillon, State Secretary, New Mexico.

Dillon places MacDonald in the same list as Rosa Luxembourgh and Karl Liebknecht. This is far from being true MacDonald is a Right Winger. In fact he recently visited Italy with a view to swinging the Italian Socialists back to the Berne Conference. In the London Morning Post, June 11, he stated in an interview: —"He went to Italy to get the BOLSHEVIK WAVE STOPPED."

MacDonald is a pacifist and a social reformer, who believes that you can legislate capitalism out of business.

Yours to the Left,
JACK CARNEY,
Editor "TRUTH".

Portsmouth write National Office

Portsmouth, Ohio,
July 18-19

Natn'al Office Soc. Party,
220 So. Ashland Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.

Comrade Sec'y:—

I have been instructed by Portsmouth Local to enter another protest and to write condemning your action taken in the matter of holding up the referendum, proposed by Local Cuyahoga County.

You surely haven't the interest of the workingclass very much at heart when you or the N. E. C. take such actions as you have in the past and are doing at present.

And this is the whole secret of the "frauds". In reality these "frauds" were the cloak of the hideous purpose of the officials: to remain in power beyond the time allowed by the Constitution (July 1st). And for the solution of the "great crisis in the party" the decided to call the National convention which will "decide the truthfulness" of the charges. This "truthfulness" will be reported to the convention by Opportunists appointed by Opportunists — "the investigation committee", as they call it. But even this is not the end of the dirty work of the seven reactionists.

When they suspended the party election they noticed, that plenty of Left elements were in the party who might seriously examine the truthfulness of the elections even at the party convention. This was evident to them from election returns, which were nearly complete. Suppose the branches sent to the convention a majority of delegates who did not belong to the machine of the master-officials? Would it not be necessary for the seven reactionary members of the N. E. C. to suspend themselves?

Think of it! These men have brains! They reason coolly! All this was said most plainly by George Goebel—the Thirty Year Socialist—when the time came for so-called discussion of the protest of seven language Federations against the elimination from the party of the branches belonging to those Federations by the New York local and state executive committees because they adopted the program of the Left Wing. Instead of discussing what was to be done to the New York reactionaries, committeeman Kreft,—that man "who has done nothing and was imprisoned" as was very truly stated by his friends James Oneal, made a motion to suspend the seven Federations "until further notice." And when Comrades Wagenknecht and Katterfeld pointed out the silliness of such "procedure", Goebel said: "I would feel far better if at the present moment... I were not a member of the N. E. C. But if we do not suspend them (the Federations) they will crowd the convention with their delegates and seize the Socialist Party of America"....

Suspend Seven Socialist Federations

And therefore in order that their "glorious work".... of "protecting the party from ruin and disintegration" should not be in vain; in order that the coming convention might surely adopt their resolution by which they eliminated the Michigan State organization and suspended the entire election of the party; in order to arrange matters before hand so that the convention might be attended by a majority of the kind of delegates desired by the reactionaries,—they suspended seven Federations with over thirty thousand membership because they favored the Left Wing.

That these politicians knew that the Left Wing had been in existence for over two years was frankly admitted by Goebel, who said that he kept on his files a copy of each manifesto, program and paper of the Left Wingers. It is evident therefore that the Left Wing was tolerated so long as it did not treaten the control of the reactionary machine; so long as their programs were not considered as "offense" against the party law. Only when the Left Wing touched the nest of the Opportunists did it become a "violation of the party Constitution."

In connection with the suspension of the language federations let me say that the National Constitution says that the language branches under no circumstances shall act contrary to the platforms and constitutions of local and state organizations. I asked this reactionary committee: how do they know that the branches of language Federations concur with the resolution of the Michigan state convention to repeal the reformistic demands in the platform of the state? They may be obeying it under COMPULSION, because the National Constitution compels them to obey. Are these branches to be eliminated because they OBEY the National Constitution?

So-called "Protectors" Split the Party

Thus the "protectors of the unity of the party" have split the party. But are they sure that they will be able to dominate in the coming convention? No. After the session was over I chanced to speak with Goebel, Holt and Germer. To my question: "What are they going to do with those locals of the Left Wing which they 'forgot' to eliminate", they replied: that they would see about it; the intended to eliminate the Boston and Cleveland locals and if necessary all the Leftwingers". Therefore one thing is sure: they will keep on eliminating until there will be no one in the party to oppose them.

Shiplacoff, who "believes in left wing socialism" (so he said), was continually repeating the question: "If there is any other way out.... if there is any.... show it to us!" I did show it to him: "keep your noses out of the party's affairs which can be solved ONLY by the convention and the referendum vote, and that will be the best way out. But if that is unpleasant to you, there is another way: go to the Labor Party, which Stedman said he was not afraid to join, and leave the Socialist Party in peace. It will take care of its own interests and will find the way out."

These gentlemen evidently intand to do this. Because they decided to incorporate even the party's building so that in case the "fanatics" should win at the convention that building "should not come into the hands of the party or one of its factions but it should be a socialist institution for the benefit of the American Socialism" (!) (statement by Goebel). And for this "benefit of American Socialism" the building bought for the party with money donated by the membership is given by these seven persons to nine directors (three of whom are appointed for nine years) who cannot be controlled by the party membership at all even the N. E. C. itself will have no power to recall the majority of the board directorate during a period of two years! Why has the N. E. C. abridged their own "rights"? Was this also "in the interest of the party"? No. It is evident that they fear that in case they lose their "ground" at the coming convention it will not be possible for them to regain the control of the party machinery for at least two years!

This shows that the Right Wing is bent on controling also the party's paoperty. And if the membership of the party is not quick enogh to expel these dictators of the Kolchak type we may expect the realization of Stedman's plan: The "Socialist" Party will unite with "Labor Party".

The Left Wing Socialists must organize, gather their forces for the final battle, to take the party machinery from the hands of reactionaries and place it in the ranks of the communist parties of Europe, or to organize a new party in which there will be no place for the yellow friends of Scheidemann and Martov!

Down with the fakers of the working class, the pseudo-socialists, misleaders! Long live to the Left Wing!

(Editors Note: The Ohio Socialist and the Socialist Party of Ohio firmly believe that the Left Wing will capture the Socialist Party at the coming National Convention, August 30, and that there will be no need of organizing a new party.)

Doings Among Sub Boosters

Comrade Jno Rehm of Springfield, O., is still at it, still making socialist hay wherever a chance permits. Three subs from him attest to this fact.

Local Dola, O., is doing fine thank you. Six more subs for as many new members, a fine showing.

A check for $1.50 for three subs from comrade J. H. Harvitt, of Newark, O., shows that he has not forgotten the needs of the day.

Our old booster comrade Jas. Shafor of Hamilton, O., has been busy as two yearlies from him proves.

Comrade T. H. Robertson, of Canton also sends us two yearlies. Comrades should remember that every subscription secured means another fighter for freedom, not only for Debs and political prisoners, but for the whole working-class.

A hustler for subs is comrade Bird of Fairmont, W. Va. Three more added to his record makes us grateful. Comrade Bird is one among the most active comrades who devote their efforts to the promulgation of revolutionary socialism.

Comrade H. S. Coats is a live wire [illegible] Ohio Socialist [illegible] real [illegible] proves he's on the [illegible] list.

Dr. C. [illegible] of Toledo has been active again. This time it is three yearlies that he sends us. Every subscriber helps to free Debs remember.

Preparing for a future crop of socialists is what comrade Anton Kukovich of St. Louis is preparing for. Two subcriptions and an order for 50 copies weekly shows that he is after them.

Complimenting us upon our ambition to own a printing plant of our own, comrade Lee A. Forman, of Morgantown, W. Va. helps us out, not only with his cheerful letter but with what is just as necessary, a renewal and a yearly sub to accompany it.

After reading a few copies comrade Stanley Marshall of Cincinnati, finds the Ohio Socialist is a "real paper". He send us a dollar for a year.

Comrade John Foelster of Davenport, Ia. is present again with two more for the list.

Comrade Wm. Wiesman keeps at it in Hamilton. Four more he sends in. Comrade Wissman is a constant booster for a bigger circulation for the O. S.

That eternal booster, comrade H. M. Kohr of Ulrichsville, O. is here again. This time he brings seven subs. Comrade Kohr is a regular Jimmie Higgins in all socialist enterprises.

Comrade T. Vuorela of Cleveland sends 7 subscriptions. Thanks comrade.

Again he comes. Who? Why comrade R. O. Sellers of Moline, Ill. And what is more he brings two with him. That's more isn't it?

And then came a letter from an adviser. We hav'nt attempted to follow his advice yet for we are not workers of miracles. Read it.

Hubbard, O., July 14, 1919.

The Ohio Socialist,
Cleveland, O.

Dear Sirs:—I have never subscribed for your paper and do not want it. Some one has been sending it to me contrary to my wishes. Please discontinue sending it. Socialism is as wrong as "Capitalism." The great human need is the Gospel of Jesus Christ in human hearts. Not simply church membership but real Christianity as taught in the New Testament. Get on the New Testament basis if you want to solve great human problems.

Sincerely yours,

DANIEL D. CANFIELD.

WORK, SAVE, PAY!

Bernard M. Baruch, banker, has a three word remedy for the world's troubles. Interviewed in Paris, Mr. Baruch said, "There is but one program for Germany and the rest of the world—work, save, pay." (New York Times.)

Pay! Pay whom? Why the bankers, of course, and the landlords, the bond-holders, the stock-holders, the trust magnates,—in short, the rich.

Does not that seem a little odd? Men have been told that the old world is dead; that tyranny is no more; that despotism has been destroyed and that a new world has been born, yet the same money-grabbers are singing the same song that they sang before the war,—"work, save, pay—us."

There are many who believed that there would be a new song in the new day that dawned with the overthrow of militarism. They looked for some such refrain as "work, peace, liberty." Banker Baruch says no! Speaking for a triumphant and unrepentant capitalism, Mr. Baruch tells the workers that the future, for them, is a future of "work, save, pay."

This formula applies not only to the vanquished. The Allies won a victory but "for Germany and the rest of the world" it is a case of "work, save, pay."

There is one place, Mr. Baruch, and only one, in which your formula is outlawed, where the workers have overthrown capitalism; where there is in truth a new world, they are singing,—"work, use, enjoy."

THE TREASURE CHESTS

Pierre Brizon, Deputy of France, writes in a recent issue of "La Vague":

"'Grow rich'—said Guizot to them.

"And throughout the century the bourgeoisie have grown rich. Their Policy was:

"Fill up the treasure chest!

"The treasure chests have been filled up. Not by the bourgeoisie alone, but by the millions of peasants, of workers, of employes, of miners, of sailors, of colonials, who, in the country, in the workshops, in the stores, and in the banks, in the depths of the mines, upon the ocean, in the colonies have worked for them.

"And now that the treasure chest is full, this is the policy of our parvenus:—We must save the treasure chest!

"That is the voice of the 'gilded bellies'! It is showy—it is tinsel. It is vulgar. It is 'nouveau riche'. But it is the program of the day."

That is the program of the old day, and the new day is at hand. Heed again the vocie of warning;—"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth!"

The police who protected the treasure chests in the old days are organized in unions. The soldiers behind whose bayonets they were sheltered have their soldiers councils. The contents of the treasure chests, taken by economic force from the workers, are to be returned to the workers from whom originally they came. The old day is passing; the new day is at hand when the world's treasures will be the vigorous bodies, alert minds, warm hearts and strong souls of the men and women and children who compose the human race.

MOBILIZATION

Forty years ago German industry began to mobilize for the conquest of world markets. British and French industry also mobilized. The economic struggle continued for a generation; then came the military mobilization of August, 1914.

Today American industry is for the conquest of world markets. Export corporations are being formed; banks are opening foreign branches; the Department of Commerce is studying foreign markets; exports are growing; loans are being made. The same thing is happening,—in Italy, France, Japan. The industrial masters of Great Britain are particularly active. According to a recent dispatch published in the financial columns of the New York Times:

"To capture the world for British trade is the program of the newly formed overseas organization of the Federation of British Industries, including in its membership something like 17,000 manufacturing and producing firms in Great Britain."

The Organization plans to have its agents in all of the commercial centres of the world. Already representatives have been appointed in Greece, Spain, Portugal, Africa, and other centres of German pre-war trade.

The armies of the world are demobilizing. The bankers, manufacturers and traders are turning again to the task of economic mobilization with multiplied enthusiasm. How many years will pass before economic mobilization gives way once more to military mobilization; to another August, 1914; to the whirlwind of war, famine, disease; to tears, anguish, and torrents of blood? Or have the people learned their lesson?

IMMIGRANTS.

They are Immigrants—Dagoes, Hunkies, Polaks, Bolsheviskies, and Wops.

They are not wanted. General Leonard Wood does not want them. The Department of Justice does not want them. The American Federation of Labor does not want them.

They are suspected, hounded, persecuted, exploited, oppressed, because the are "foreigners".

Since 1562 a stream of human beings has flowed silently and steadily into the land that is now the United States. At first they came by dozens and scores, then by ten and hundreds of thousands. The year 1907 saw the high record in immigration 1,285,349,—929,976 of them men; 1,100,771 of them in the prime of life, between 14 and 15 years of age. The number of immigrants for 1914 was only a little under the 1907 record—1,218,480. Then came the war and with it an immense drop in immigration;—in 1915 there were 326,700 arrivals; in 1917 there were 295,403. In March 1919 only 14,105 aliens came into the country, while 16,019 left it. The stream of emigration has almost stopped.

The leaders of the American Federation of Labor wish to stop immigration entirely for a time—to stop it by law. They aim to put up a barrier which will prevent their European fellow-workers from entering this land of freedom and opportunity.

Think a moment, labor men!

You, or your ancestors were immigrants from Europe. You and your ancestors have produced the wealth that exists today in the United States.

Immigrants have done the rough work of America's expanding industrial life in the past. They will continue to do it in the future. All signs point to a period of prosperity in the United States. If this prosperity comes, capital will want labor, and capital will get labor. Immigrants are now coming from Europe, but if that supply fails the masters have Mexico, India, Japan and China to draw on.

Workers will be found, by the exploiters, so long as exploitation is possible. Shall they be home seekers from Europe or bond servants from Asia?

Comrade E. C. Wolfe sends in two more subs to keep his record bright.

And we presume that comrade Tony Battlovich of Dilles Bottom, O. wants to keep up his good record. He also rustles a pair of new ones.

From Mangum, Okal., comes a list from comrade Lewis W. Sweet. We are more than glad to make the acquaintaince of the comrades of Mangum and hope that we may travel together the straight and narrow path that leads to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

"All hands to the plow and turn them under—the capitalist class." So writes comrade F. A. Bucey of Rayland O. He sends in five yearlies which is plowing some we would say.

Comrade Carl Laetsch of Hamilton is again with us. This time his "bit" consists of three subs. Come again comrade.

"Received the sample copies. Don't see any thing unjust about it. Am sending you one dollar for subscription. I like the paper fine." S. C. Patrick, Flemingsburg, Ky.

Many Locals Boost Press Fund. Last Week's Record Smashed by Big Gain

If last week's press fund receipts were gratifying, how shall we describe this week's gain? We are so happy over the great gain shown in the compilation below that we are unable to find a proper adjective to describe our feelings. Elation and jubilation come as near anything we can think of toward expressing the feeling that has constantly mounted higher as we went thru the larger than ever list of donations this week.

PRESS FUND BOOSTERS GETTING RIGHT DOWN TO IT.

That the Party members and readers of the Ohio Socialist are getting right down to the business of establishing a printing plant for the Party and the paper is certainly thrown on the screen in a vivid manner by the great gain of this week, not only in the more than usual individual contributions but also in the many donations from Locals and Branches of the Party. The Press Fund is growing fast. Comrades are manifesting a greater interest in it as the sum mounts toward the top and all feel the elation that results from success. The establishing of a printing plant for the Party in this state is recognized as one of the most momentuous advances ever attempted by the Party.

Everybody is for it as receipts show.

LOCALS ACTIVE WITH LISTS.

More locals are circulating Press Fund Lists. Steadily the number of Locals taking up the work of circularizing lists among the workers increases as the efficiency of this method is seen. Notably among the Locals sending in receipts this week on lists is Local Canton, O.

Thru comrade Ernest Sykes this Local remits $105.75 which the comrades have secured by circularizing these lists. Comrade Sykes says he wants to see that $100 colum filled up. He wants to see Local Canton occupy a "place in the sun." Well it certainly deserves such a place and the comrades are proven to be a live bunch. Comrade Sykes avers that they are not finished yet in the good work of boosting the Press Fund. The names of the contributors are seen in the respective columns. Local Canton's subscription is the largest yet sent in on lists. The names of comrades who circulated the lists are T. H. Robertson $11, Carl Guillod, $16.25, John Cassidy, $17.75, B. Kush, $14.25, John Coulter, $16, J. L. Hammond, $27.25, Ernest Sykes, $4.

Local Columbus, O., also has been busy with lists. Fin. Sec. H. Welchers remits the sum of $31, which comrades of this Local have gathered for the Press Fund The many names on these lists are to be found in their respective coluns. Lists were circulated by these comrades: Geo Althouser, $9.25, G. H. Fries, $3.00, C. E. Reed, $18.75.

Individual comrades too, have been busy on their own book getting funds on lists for the press. One comrade who does not wish his name mentioned sends in $4. Comrade Dale of Wise, Va., sends $9.50, Comrade Pete Stefanich of Warren has been very successful in this work, as has also comrade Wm. Adler of Lorain, O.

LOCALS MAKE DONATIONS DIRECT FROM TREASURIES.

More Locals are making contributions to the Press Fund right out of their treasuries. Among them this week are, Locals Martins Ferry, O., and New Bremen. These locals each donate $10. The German Branch of Alliance comes to the front with $5. and the same generous amount is subscribed by Herwegh Mannerchor of Cincinnati, O.

Local Irondale, O., sends in $21. which the Local comrades and sympathizers have donated. We are not in receipt of the names of the comrades who have done this good work so we must give credit to the Local only.

Another organization which rendered splendid service for the Press Fund this week was the Lorain Ohio Socialist Boosters Club. Perhaps some comrades have never made the acquaintance of this live wire crowd. Well, we never did either before this week but we must say that our meeting with them was one of the most pleasant experences we have had lately. This Club remits thru one of its members the most liberal sum of $30. Long live this Booster Club, we say and may their numbers grow and grow.

AND THEN THERE ARE PICNICS.

Yes, it's picnic time. Every Local should have one, the sooner the better.

Locals are making it a point to make their picnics this summer not only profitable in the way of increased interest in Party affairs but also as a method to add more dollars to the Press Fund.

One Local which has made such large success in this way is the South Slavic Branch of Youngstown, O. Thru comrade Martin Kovach, secretary, we are in receipt of $50; collected at the picnic given by the Branch recently.

AND NOW TO KEEP GOING.

We have raised one fourth of the $10,000 for the Press Fund. We feel extremely well pleased with the generous response which comrades and readers have given us in answer to this call to put the Ohio Socialist upon its own feet by giving the Socialist Party of Ohio a printing plant of its own.

Receipts at this accounting show are $2,594.42 Slightly over one quarter of the amount needed. What we have done, we must do again and again until this fund is raised. And we can do it, of course we can do it. Thousands of comrades, readers, have not yet done their share of this work. We know that they will. Many Locals have as yet, done nothing for this fund. But we know they intend to and we know they will fulfil their intentions. The Socialist Party of Ohio asissted by the generous help of hundreds of comrades out side the state are going to do the job. Of that we are convinced. So comrades, we just say, keep on going. Add your bit to that already subscribed. Get others to do so. Keep up the agitation. Never let it slacken. Think Press Fund, talk it, and best of all act upon this suggestion—get subscriptions for it. And thus make every week what this week has been—an increase in receipts over the last one.

Below are the contributions of comrades for this week.

AND 30,000 MINE WORKERS SAY — "RELEASE HIM AT ONCE"

"RELEASE HIM AT ONCE!"

Yes, we can hear the determined voices of the 30,000 Indiana mine workers speaking their demand as one man— "RELEASE HIM AT ONCE!"

Do you hear them? Is your ear atuned to justice for Debs and all political prisoners? Does your heart beat in sympathy for the 63 year old prisoner in the Atlanta penitentiary, who has labored diligently for forty years so that the working class might come into its own?

LISTEN!

Toil begrimed mine workers, black with coal dust from head to foot, sentenced by the capitalist system to work away their lives in dark coal pits, come forth to the light, look the "democratic" administration squarely in the face and shout—

"RELEASE DEBS AT ONCE!"

THEY MEAN IT! And Debs WILL be released, for the demand of these 30,00 wage slaves will become the demand of the 30,000,000 wage slaves of this "land of the free."

Nothing shall stop, nothing can stop the swiftly gathering forces of the working class as they join by the thousands the ARMY LIBERATORS, pledged to labor day and night that the cell dors and prison gates might swing open and Debs and all other political prisoners step forth FREE MEN AND WOMEN.

Now then—HERE'S A JOB FOR YOU.

You members of Labor Unions—ATTENTION!

Take the resolution passed by the convention of Indiana miners, which is printed elsewhere in this issue, to the next meeting of your union. Under the proper order of business arise, and read the resolutions and make a motion for their adoption.

DO THIS—PLEASE.

And then send the OHIO SOCIALIST a line or two, informing us of the adoption of the resolution by your union. and telling us how many members it contains.

We shall compile a roster of the unions and the membership they represent.

We shall mobilize these hundreds of thousands of workers into a compact army, ready to insist that their demand for Debs freedom be complied with.

THE POSSIBILITIES ARE GREAT!

Standing shoulder to shoulder, invincible and determined, there are already nearly half a million workers unyielding in their insistance that Debs be freed.

HERE THEY ARE—the workers who have voted that the champion of the slave class shall again be placed into the protecting arms of labor:

Chicago Federation of Labor, representing	250,000
Mine Workers, Indiana, 11th District,	30,000
Federated Shop Employes, Denver,	8,000
Socialist Party membership,	100,000

Hundreds of smaller worker's organization, of which we have no record, have called for the release of Debs. Send us their names and membership if you know of any who have joined this ever-increasing demand for freedom for Debs.

WE WANT TO REGISTER THEM ALL.

Numbers count. There is nothing which open prison doors quicker that an army united upon a single issue.

AND NOW—ALL TOGETHER!

There's no time to lose.

Let's lose no time. Even if you are not a member of a Labor Union, YOU ARE NEEDED JUST THE SAME.

There will be hundreds of thousands of leaflets to distribute. There will be posters to post. And first of all, there will be a call made upon you to assist in collecting a LIBERATION FUND.

AND NOW—WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS?

We announced this campaign for Debs' freedom two weeks ago. We followed our own device—WE LOST NO TIME in preparing copy for the printers, in engaging an artist for special drawings, in placing an order with a photo engraver for illustrations.

EVERYTHING WAS ALL SET, READY FOR OUR FIRST OFFENSIVE, when, after nearly a week had passed we were blandly informed by the capitalist engraving concern THAT THEY WOULD NOT UNDERTAKE THE WORK WE HAD PLACED WITH THEM.

THEY TOO WANT TO KEEP DEBS IN JAIL!

We hurried to another engraving company. This concern also accepted the job. When we called for it three days later, we were given back our photos of Debs, of the prison gate, of the steel cells—and politely told to go elsewhere.

THERE YOU HAVE IT!

A conspiracy as complete as any ever concocted, to MAKE DEBS DIE IN A PRISON CELL.

There is no other interpretation.

THE EMPLOYING CLASS IS ORGANIZED TO KEEP DEBS IN!

YOU MUST ORGANIZE TO GET DEBS OUT!

We must join forces AT ONCE to beat the inhumanity of the class that knows it can only keep up its game so long as the workers remain in darkness.

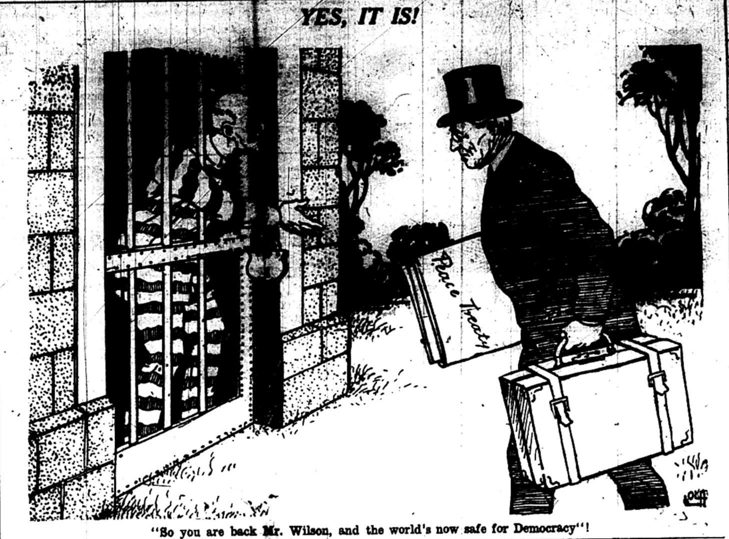
DEBS IS A TORCH-BEARER! He enlightens workers. He is dangerous to the shirkers. He threatens their graft, the ceaseless flow of surplus value in their already overfilled money chests.

The forces of DARKNESS will do all they can to rout the forces of ENLIGHTENMENT.

IT'S FOR YOU TO SAY WHICH WILL WIN!

JOIN THE ARMY OF LIBERATORS.

HELP!



"So you are back Mr. Wilson, and the world's now safe for Democracy"!

"RELEASE DEBS AT ONCE"

CONVENTION REPRESENTING 30,000 INDIANA MINERS PASS STRONG RESOLUTIONS FOR DEBS' FREEDOM

We, the delegates of the Twenty-seventh Consecutive and Fourth Biennial Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, representing approximately 30,000 miners of the 11th District, realizing that eternal vigilance is the pride of liberty, adopt the following resolutions.

Whereas, Eugene V. Debs, a most beloved citizen of Terre Haute, who has devoted his gifted life most unselfishly to the cause of labor, and who while organizing the West Virginia miners almost a score of years ago, in the face of extreme danger of assassination at the hands of thugs and gunmen, suffered a severe sunstroke, which condition renders him unable to endure extreme heat, and

Whereas, He has been recently mysteriously transferred from Moundsville, W. Va., where he was originally committed to serve a ten years' sentence, to the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Georgia, in the hottest zone in the United States, and at the age of 64 years has been set to hard, exhausting labor in the prison factory making clothes, compelling him to scab not only against the union principles to which he has devoted his life, but against the splendid Garment Workers' Union itself, and

Whereas, This fearless humanitarian and faithful fighter for the working class is now caged in a five-by-ten iron barred cell for fourteen hours after each day's work and permitted only twenty minutes in the fresh air, and

Whereas, A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General of the United States, inhumanly takes the position that as far as he is concerned Eugene V. Debs shall remain for the entire ten years, suffering under these tyrannical conditions, stating that if Eugene V. Debs were released he would continue his agitation against our free government and in favor of general strikes, and

Whereas, We are led to infer that the sole reason for his confinement and brutal treatment is to break the spirit of this undaunted fighter for the working class, which to us, knowing this man as we do, is equivalent to a death penalty.

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That we demand that the President of the United States remove A. Mitchell Palmer from the high office of Attorney General for the good reason that Mr. A. Mitchell Palmer establishes his true character as being un-American, arbitrary, tyrannical, despotic and typical of the inhuman Czars, Kaisers and Kings of Europe.

Be it further Resolved, That if the late war was fought to make the world safe for democracy, this principle must be applied, and we therefore demand that the mask of hypocrisy be removed from the public officials who clearly manifest they are the enemies of democracy, insomuch that the profiteers of this country have been and are immune from prosecution, proving conclusively their unjust discrimination between capital and labor, and we further demand the immediate release of Eugene V. Debs from prison, and

Be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States, the Attorney General of the United States and to the press.

COURT DISMISSES RAND SCHOOL CASE

NEW YORK.—The complaint filled by Attorney General Newton of New York state in proceedings instituted at the request of the joint legislative committee investigating radical activities to have revoked the charter of the Rand School of Social Science in this city was dismissed to day by Supreme Court Justice McAvoy.

Deputy Attorney General Berger asked for adjournment until October, asserting that he wished to serve an amended complaint setting forth "certain additional allegations against the defendants," and that he would seek authority to have a commission examine witnesses outside New York state.

Samuel Untermyer declared in behalf of the school that the institution has about 5,000 students and that the time for opening its fall season is approaching.

Justice McAvoy declined to grant the request for delay by Mr. Berger, and the deputy attorney general then asked for dismissal without prejudice. The motion was granted.

Attorney General Newton announced later that he proposed to renew the action to annul the charter of the school and "to present to the courts of the state the entire facts in relation to the business of the corporation as soon as they can be properly prepared."

No News of Debs Permitted to Reach Outside World

July 24th, 1919.

A. WAGENKNECHT,
3207 CLARK AVENUE,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Dear Comrade Wagenknecht:—

Your favor of the 19th is received and I should have made earlier reply but I have been away from the office for a couple of days. I note with satisfaction that the Ohio Socialist is to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for the release of political prisoners, but I am afraid that I can be of little help to you in getting anything from Gene. Personally I have been unable to get anything to him. On three separate occasions I have mailed packets to him, none of which found their way into his hands. I had Mrs. Debs make inquiry, as Gene's writing privilege is limited to one letter a week, on a single sheet of paper, and that to his family, and in reply he told her that he had received nothing and especially requested that nothing more be sent.

Under prison rules Gene can give no interview nor can he give out anything for publication. Quite recently a Pittsburgh paper made a request similar to your own which was denied. No member of the family has yet visited Atlanta and other than what has appeared in the press do we know of the conditions that exist in the prison. Letters from Gene to his wife pass through the hads of the prison censor and a copy of each made for the prison files so you may well understand that his letters contain little of real conditions. We have received letters from a number of friends and comrades that called at the prison, all of whom were denied admission. So far as we have been abel to learn the same treatment is accorded to Gene as to all other prisoners, that is, the same rigid rules apply to all alike, no exception being made in his case. This is probably due to the fact that in our democracy —so-called—no distinction is made between criminals and political offenders. That the administration places the latter in the former class is evidenced by the statement of Attorney General Palmer to the effect that he saw no difference between Gene and a Georgia boot-legger.

I am quite certain that Gene will never stultify his manhood by asking for any special privilege, or favor of any kind as long as he in the Atlanta prison.

Yours fraternally,

THEODORE DEBS.

British Workers on Verge of Revolution

UNSYMPATHETIC TO LABOR, GOVERNMEN FACES DISSOLUTION IN FACE OF GROWING DISCONTENT AND PROBABLE REVOLUTION.

LONDON—Joseph E. Herbert, labor expert for the Times, has written an analysis of the labor situation in the United Kingdom as follows:

The labor issues maturing in the next few weeks are bigger than any Great Britain has yet had to face. The labor organizations are bigger than they were before the war. Labor ideas are bigger. On the one hand we have the organized workers and on the other, the employers' organizations, never better financed or better consolidated.

Left to themselves a terrific conflict would be inevitable and would be fought as a war of extermination by each side.

It probably would end in the exhaustion of both sides, but there is a third party vitally interested in keeping peace, namely, the general public, whose trustees are the government.

RESTS ON GOVERNMENT.

The question of a destructive industrial war or peaceful industrial reconstruction will be determined by the action of the government. The present cabinet has not yet shown anything like a broad, sympathetic progressive policy towards labor.

Whether the government will have foresight and courage to do its duty is Premier Lloyd George's secret. The outcry against the state to purchase coal mines and the indecision of the ministers on this test question of democratic good will create a strong suspicion that without drastic changes in the composition of the cabinet, the government will fail to satisfy labor.

WAIT CABINET CHANGES.

Labor therefore will await eagerly the foreshadowed reshuffling of the cabinet before taking extreme steps.

The danger in the present situation is the increasing want of confidence, among the workers, in the government and in Parliament. The majority of the British trade unionists still retain some trust in the House of Commons and the ministers, but unless the House and the Cabinet produce convincing evidence that they intend to give workmen all they can legitimately claim, respect for the existing system of government will inevitable disintegrate.

If, and when, that happens we Britishers shall find ourselves staring into the face of revolution.

COULD CALL ELECTION.

Mr. Lloyd George might decide that the present House of Commons is too one-sided to carry out real progressive measures The shrewdest course would be to dissolve Parliament and give the working class electors a clear field in new elections.

Of the 20,000,000 British electors, at least 14,000,000 are workmen [illegible] workmen's wives. Labor, therefor [illegible] if it chooses, can control the existi [illegible] constitutional machine. This is [illegible] surest safeguard against a viol [illegible] revolutionary outburst by any la [illegible] body of British workmen.

Only when baulked by the Cabi [illegible] and flouted by Parliament will [illegible] workers attempt drastic action. [illegible] while the public must expect [illegible] militant and [illegible] strikes. They are the growing [illegible] of the labor movement.

No Hope in Russia For Financial Pirates.

STRENGTH OF SOVIET GOVERNMENT SEEN IN FAILURE OF ANTI-FORCES TO MAKE HEADWAY; ALLIES FEAR TO SEND TROOPS.

Russia is absolutely in the hands of the Bolsheviki The world financial pirates have signally failed in their every attempt to foist upon Russia an army of allied powers for the overthrowing of the Red army of the Soviets. Just how hopeless for capitalist exploitation Russia is viewed by the capitalist financial interests is shown in the following cable dispatch from the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

LONDON.—The Bolshevists, or the Bolos, as they have been dubbed by the British troops on the Archangel front, have got Russia.

It is of no use longer to mince words. Russia is Bololand. How far German intrigue and German military genius figure in the problem must be left to conjecture. The fact remains that Russia has passed out of the calculation of the entente.

The exclusive information from Robert Wilton, London Times correspondent with the retreating army of the Omsk government, combined with the detailed data brought to London in person by Andrew Soutar, novelist and war correspondent, who has been representing the London Times service with the British troops south of Archangel, demonstrates that the situation in Russia is grave, almost hopeless for the plans of the international financial interests seeking the downfall of the Bolshevists.

REVEAL PLIGHT OF ARMIES.

Although many hundreds of miles apart, these two have been first to reveal to the world the desperate plight of the mixed armies which had been biting feebly into the outer edges of the Red territory.

The Russian situation at this moment is a source of deep concern to the cabinet and to the financiers of Great Britain and France and to such the Russian upper classes who have Withdrawal of the 5,000 British managed to reach a friendly haven. troops to Archangel and the collapse of the 23,000 anti-Red Russian forces under Gen. Ironside, was almost a foregone consequence of the disjointed allied military policy, and the Americans are lucky to have got off from northern Russian before the crash of plans came.

Take a map of Russia and run a finger southeast of Archangel until the name Kotlas is reached. This was to have been the objective of Gen. Ironsides' Russo-British army. Now jump the finger to Perm and trace a course along the railway to Glazov, which designates the advanced limits reached by the Omsk forces under Gen. Dietrichs.

BIG SPACE NOT COVENED.

Span fingers across the distance between Glazov and Kothas, several hundred miles, and realize the hiatus which was not covered by the army of the southeast. Span the distance between Kotlas and Troitski on the Dvina River, the present outpost of Gen. Ironsides' army about a hundred miles, and contemplate what the army of the northwest failed to accomplish.

The probable persence of large numbers in the armies arrayed against the Reds of male inhabitants of the Oloentz, who are pure blood Russians, was the basis at that time of the refusal to consider Mannerheim's proposal.

Hence, Petrograd was lost to those who desire Russia out of Bolshevist hands.

CONTROLLED BY REDS.

Summed up, Russia today rests [illegible] control of the Reds. The Dead Weight of Iron

BY ANISE

''I looked at the big building
Which housed
In its neat steel cells
Some 2,300 men,''
Said Winthrop D. Lane,
Investigator of prisons,
''And a barracks officer
Approached me.
He said: 'Do you see
That BUILDING
Of brick and iron!
There's too much BROODING
Goes on there.
They ought to PLAY more.
Athletic games
And friendly competition.
They ought to be TURNED OUT
Some place where TREES are,
And GRASS and growing things,
Those men are carrying Around all day
A weight of stone and iron,
A DEAD WEIGHT
Under which no man can grow
We ought to encourage
INTEREST in world affairs,
Post the NEWS at breakfast,
Have REAL LECTURES
Instead of this weekly
Religious stuff all year.
Let them have hobbies,
A prison BAND
And SOLOS:
Encourage INVENTIONS,
Give them a chance
To PUTTER ROUND
In the machine shops;
Why, half a dozen men there
Are writing scenarios
For the MOVIES,
But they keep it dark,
Being AFRAID
To proclaim it.
These things should be ENCOURAGED
Openly in the light,
Anything that will strengthen
LIFE and GROWTH
For the dead weight
Of IRON and STONE
Is KILLING
The MIND OF MAN.'
He turned and left me,
And I went out of the jail.
In front of me was a man
Just DISCHARGED,
Strong in the prime of life.
He was AFRAID
To cross the STREET
For half a block away
A small horse-wagon
With a load of bricks
Was coming slowly toward him.
His mind was too SLUGGISH
To ADJUST itself
To the UNEXPECTEDNESS
Of that horse and wagon,
Because he had so long
OBEYED ORDERS
And made NO MOTIONS at all
By his OWN WILL!''

[illegible] WE CALL UPON YOU TO HELP SAVE DEBS' LIFE. He must not die in a prison. He must be restored to activity among the working class.

Join the ARMY OF LIBERATORS. Become one of this legion which will do duty night and day in behalf of Debs and all the rest. Up to the present not one persistent, well organized attempt has been made to work and organize for Debs' freedom. Most of us have salved ourselves with the thought that they DARE NOT keep Debs in jail very long.

If you have read what the United States Attorney General had to say upon this matter then you know that THEY DARE DO ANYTHING—UNLESS THE WORKERS AWAKEN AND ACT. It is now rumored that Debs may be released by fall. LET'S MAKE THE RUMOR COME TRUE. Let's show enough activity, power, determination between now and fall to make the rumor an actuality.

We have the means to print leaflets agitating for Debs' liberation by the million. We have at our disposal the OHIO SOCIALIST, which has the largest circulation of any party owned paper in America. We have equipment which will make it possible to carry on circularization work and can mail 10,000 letters a day if necessary. We can have posters printed and other publicity matter. We are in a position to tour our speakers to Labor Unions to request their support.

ALL WE NEED IS A BIG ARMY OF LIBERATORS WHO WILL HELP SECURE A LIBERATION FUND TO BE USED FOR THE PURPOSES ABOVE ENUMERATED.

ARE YOU WITH US? Will you join your activity and your dollars with ours in ONE BIG DRIVE FOR DEBS' LIBERATION? Answer by signing the application blank below.

Debs Goes to Prison

BY DAVID KARSNER

IN THREE CHAPTERS
CHAPTER ONE

Unguarded and unescorted, save for the company of a few friends, Eugene Victor Debs, four times candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist party ticket, on Saturday, April 12, 1919, left his home in Terre Haute, Indiana, on the ten o'clock train over the Big Four Route for Cleveland, Ohio, to surrender himself to the federal authorities who would take him to prison for ten years for having excercised his constitutional right of free speech, thereby violating the Espionage Law, a war time statute, enacted June 15th, 1917

Debs had made a speech under the auspices of the Ohio State Socialist convention at Canton, Ohio, June 16th, 1918, in which he reiterated the Socialist Party's opposition to the war, denounced the profiteers, paid tribute to the Bolsheviki of Russia, and all the struggling forces in the world that were making for the emancipation of the workers. For this speech Debs was tried on September 9, 1918, in the Federal Court at Cleveland before Judge D. C. Westenhaver, and was found guilty by a jury on September 12th. On Friday, September 14th, 1918, he was sentenced to serve ten years at the Moundsville, West Virginia, State Penitentiary, which has a contract with the government to receive 250 federal prisoners a year.

It was about 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 12, 1919, when the telephone in Debs' home rang. Debs himself answered. It was District Attorney Wertz on the other end of the line. ''Yes.'', said Gene. ''Good morning. What can I do for you?''

Wertz told Debs that he would not send deputy marshal to Terre Haute to escort him to Cleveland, but that Debs should leave at the earliest possible moment of his own accord.

''Thank you, Mr. Wertz; I'll be right along. Good-by.''

From that moment until 9:30 o'clock in the evening Debs was busying himself at home packing up a few of his things for the journey to the penitentiary. Mrs. Kate Debs, his wife, helped him with this and that, reminding him to write that little note before he went away, and ''Don't you think you should attend to this?''

All day along telegrams and special delivery letters poured into his home in 8th Street. They were from his friends in all corners of the continent.

''What a wonderful demonstration of love,'' said 'Gene as he opened another telegram that arrived while he and I were seated in his parlor. He signed the message, patted the little messenger boy on the head and called a loving ''Good-by'' as the astonished youngster tripped down the porch and off the wooden steps.

It was just before 2 o'clock that I arrived in Terre Haute. There were crowds at the station, and I thought surely that Debs must have just gotten away. A newsboy thrust a local paper in my hand, and I read it eagerly for the first word of Debs' movement.

On the first page was a little item to the effect that District Attorney Wertz had told Debs to come to Cleveland.

I hailed a taxi. ''Take me to Debs' home'', I urged. A moment later it occured to me that maybe the driver did not know where Debs lived. I told him. The chauffeur smiled. ''I wish I had a dollar for every man I've driven to Debs' house. Why, more people in Terre Haute know where 'Gene Debs lives than they know the location of City Hall.'' In a few minutes we are at Debs' home.

Some moments elapsed before the door was opened. A tall, mantronly woman, with gentle face and kindly mien, opened the door. There was a slight hesitancy in her manner. I sensed the situation at once. Persons coming into that home that day were nothing less than intruders, interlopers, and embarassment overwhelmed me. Yes, Debs was at home, she said, but very busy. ''He is upstairs writing some letters now.'' Then the door opened wider and she bade me come in. I stepped into the parlor. Footsteps were heard on the steps above and 'Gene was coming down.

Debs appeared to be in much better health than when he was on trial in Cleveland last September. His shoulders are less stooped. His eye is clear and his voice is firm, sweet and resonant. We sat a few moments in his parlor. It was a wonderful spring day down there in southern Indiana. Everywhere one sensed the budding and bursting of new life. Debs felt it.

''What a splendid day, and did you notice out there on the lawn the leaves are coming out?'' he said.

The bell rang. It was another telegram from some one far away sending last greetings of love and good will.

''I am going at 10 o'clock to-night,'' Debs said. Then he told me of the conversation with District Attorney Wertz. ''Well, I am all ready. Yes, I am ready to go to prison. I am ready to pay the ultimate penalty for speaking what to me was the truth. I said in court at Cleveland that I had not one word to retract, I have not anything to retract now.''

I asked Debs if he would tell me his own feelings in connection with his going to prison. He smiled. I knew at once that I had asked a foolish question, for the answer to it was flashed to me in his smile, his wonderful, confident smile. We chatted about this and that. Names bobbed up in the conversation frequently. To every name mentioned, Debs would say, ''Give him my love when you go back to New York,'' or ''Tell the dear Comrade that it is allright; everything works out for ultimate good.''

''What about a pardon? I don't know anything about one. I have asked for none. Nor shall I.

''I stand on the threshold of going to prison with malice toward none, and with perfect faith in the rectitude of my course and an absolute confidence in the justice and inevitable triumph of the cause to which I have gladly given my life. To ask a pardon would be to confess guilt.''

Debs' eyes were flashing fire, and a steely glint came into them. He told of the wonderful meetings he had been having in northern Ohio.

''The other night at Lima,'' he said, ''we had a great meeting in the street. The Chamber of Commerce had shut up all the halls to us. Well, we didn't need their halls. The streets hold more people than halls. Then the fire department came, evidently with the intention of squirting the hose on us. I told those crowds the firemen would dare to turn the hose on them. Why, had they done so, that crowd would have turned their carts upside down.''

'Gene slapped his leg a whack, as the thought flashed across his mind of this attempted petty denial of free speech.

Debs said that he thought the dark forces of reaction, as epitomized in District Attorney Wertz, truly thought that Bolshevism was rapidly spreading throughout the United States, and that, if they could cut out its tongue, they would then have killed it.

''There is no doubt,'' he said, ''but that they want to put me in jail.''

He thought it not altogether unlikely that President Wilson might intervene. ''Wilson has a vision,'' said Debs. ''There is some light on his horizon, however much it may be obscured by the clouds that hover over and arround him. He sees that the liberties of the people cannot be crushed by repressive measures. But there are tremendous forces behind the President, or before him, I don't know which, that won't let him be free.'' Debs made it very clear to me that, so far as he was concerned, he was willing to go to prison, if prison be the price of truth, conscience and one's respect for the integrity of one's own soul.

As we talked those few moments, not more than a half hour altogether, Mrs. Debs reminded him that there were many little duties he had yet to perform before he began his journey to prison.''Yes, dear; I'll be right along.'' I knew I was intruding on these sacred premises.

''Well, I have got many little things to do this afternoon. I have to write a note or two, then there are some relatives I must see here in town before I go away. And there is an old man and his wife I must go to see; they are both sick and neither is able to leave the house. They have been my neighbors for many years. I must see them.''

Only a few persons in Terre Haute, the town in which Debs has made his home for these many years, and which has become famous through its connection with his name, knew that he was leaving that night for the last time. Perhaps Debs wouldn't come back any more. Maybe he would have to serve his full 10 years after all. Maybe the capitalists would exact from him the full pound of flesh. At the station there was only a little group to see him off, some of those upon wohm 'Gene had called to bid a last farewell that afternoon.

These town folk, who love him and know him for what he is and for what he has done for humanity, were arranging a huge demonstration for him. Debs requested them to call it off. He did not want it. ''I just want to slip out quitly now. When I come back, I told them, that will be the time.''

A little way down the street from his two-story frame dwelling two children, about 10 years old, were playing with a kitten. I had just left Debs' home, but as an experiment, I asked one bright-eyed youngster where 'Gene Debs lived.

''Right in that second house from the corner there, two doors below Sycamore street. You can't miss him; he's the man with the kind face.'' Then the little girl chirped up:

''Yes, the other day he patted me on my head and told me not to hurt my kitten, and I have not squeezed it since.'' The little one pressed the kitten close to her body.

I had no special way in which to occupy my time during the remainder of the afternoon so I decided to talk about 'Gene Debs to whomever I chanced to meet.

Down on the railroad tracks near the station where I had just come in was a watchman's shanty. I looked in and there was a watchman, an old man, looking to be about 60 years. His face was red and weather beaten. His eyes were red, too, from the wind and cinders. He was reaching his arm through the little window to dip a cup into a pail of water that was placed on an upturned box.

''Do you happen to know where Debs lives?'' I asked.

''Well, I gues I oughta,'' replied the railroad watchman in an all-knowing manner. He directed me to the house which I had just left.

''I guess you know they're taking him away to-day to prison,'' I ventured.

''Yes, I know it.'' A fierce glint tempered with sadness stole into the eyes of the old railroader who hastily gulped down the water he had dipped from the pail.

NOTE:—This story of Debs' journey to prison can be had in pamphlet form at 25c. a copy. Address, Socialist Party of Ohio, 3207 Clark Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

''As long as I can spear a dollar or two I shall send it in for the Press Fund.'' Comrade Walter Dearolf, Rittman, O.

And the same as above comes from comrade Jno R. Veney of East Liverpool, O.

ANOTHER GOOD LIST.

Comrade S. B. Bryant of Akron has been very succesful lately as his list of press fund contributors shows. Nine dollars is the amount he got. We thank you comrade Bryant. You have shown others how to do it.

Comrade Wallace B. Watson of Grand Rapids sends in his dollar on pledge for July.

Another hustler for the press fund is comrade C. D. Hunt of Salineville, O. His list contains five names and the amount sent in five dollars—one each. A good showing. We hope more comrades will do as well.

PARTY NEWS AND VIEWS

Warren Tells How

I have just received a latter from our very good State Secretary, A. Wagenknecht, urging me to write up the means by which we have become ''such a prosperous local, whereas last fall we were almost a 'dead one.' ''

Well, comrades, it is only a short story: I have just looked over the minutes and find that from Oct. 13th to Dec. 22, 1918 we had no meetings for lack of program, which occasionally happened before. At our meeting June 6th there were six members present also comrade E. A. Smith who rejoined the party. Ways and means were discussed to advance the cause in Warren, but no definite action was taken. Dues paid $3.00; the collection, which, we take at all meetings, was 60 cents and our treasury contained about $16.00.

At our next meeting January 12th we decided to buy twenty copies of Trotzky's book ''Bolsheviki and World Peace''; they were soon all sold leaving a profit of $5.00 in our treasury. It was also decided to have a Debs meeting, believing it would cheer up the ''despondent'' comrades and also enable others to ''see the light.''

At this meeting the dues collected amounted to $5.00 and collection $34.80, thanks to comrade Smith. At the next meeting the collection and dues amounted to $14.50.

On January 26th, Debs was with us and we had a splendid meeting in every way, leaving us a net balance of $70.00; and at the next meeting, February 2—''ground-hog day''— we had twelve members present, about twice the usual number, with a collection of $6.10 and dues paid $17.00. We had another Debs meeting on March 29th. This being a Saturday afternoon meeting was not so well attended but was good propaganda for us; we made $8.50 above the expenses. We have had several other speakers that have done much good and were big contributing factors to our success. Last but not least was our picnic Sunday, July 20th. Comrade Baker the main speaker was at his best; a program of local talent performed their duties well. The Ashtabula Finnish Band was with us all day and the crowd was estimated at [illegible]00 people. It was the first socialist gathering of the kind that my wife ever attended; she said she never saw such a jolly, happy bunch before. The net financial result of this picnic was $92.00. It was arranged and managed by our City Central Committee. Much credit must be given to our Finnish comrades, who constituted nearly half the crowd for knowing how to make it a success. A member of Italian and Roumanian comrades were also in attendance and seemed much interested.

For several months we have been distributing 400 ''Ohio Socialists'' weekly, besides other papers and pamphlets. We have probably done as well proportionately, considering that our English section has only thirty six members—speaking of what it has done—as any in the state. We have paid $60 toward purchasing the national office home; have put $67.00 into the O. S. press fund; $20 to the National Defense fund; $25.00 to the State Defense fund for Ruthenberg and others; also $25.00 to J. B. Ferguson for Left Wing cause. In all $[illegible]7.00 besides the individual contributions. We still have $30 or more in our treasury.

How do we do it? It is a ''business proposition''. We get busy and ''dig in'' both for money and propaganda [illegible]. We are not adverse to giving the necessary sweat of the brow in distributing literature, seeing the com[illegible]. Next we have decided to [illegible] an agent to make a house to house canvass, to sell literature, collect dues, solicit membership and take names of all sympathisers and collect subscriptions. Comrades, we will have to do the work or pay for doing it. The capitalists won't do a thing for us. But they pay good salaries to see to it that their big, lying papers and magazines are kept [illegible] before the public. We [illegible] patronize them as little as possible and do all we can to get our own literature before the people, especially the workers. Somewhat different conditions are found in every community, and in some respects different tactics may be necessary, but the main holds good in all: GET BUSY!

Sincerely your comrade to the 'Left'
J. F. DENISON, sec'y.

Thank You!-Thank You!

We have never made a final report upon our campaign to make the OHIO Socialist a bi-weekly. You remember, of course, the letter we sent you several months ago, telling you that if we could secure 20,000 subcribers, we could issue this paper twice a week.

The campaign for 20,000 subcribers was the most successful subscription campaign we ever launcher, thanks to our 800 boosters and other supporters. Subscriptions came in, very often at the rate of five to six hundred a week. Our subscription list grew from about 6,000 to 13,000. We did not reach the 20,000 mark. BUT WE MORE THAN DOUBLED OUR SUBCRIPTION LIST, more than doubled the influence of our paper—your paper.

For the good work which the supporters of the OHIO SOCIALIST did in this campaign we express our appreciation. But it must be remembered that the campaign for 20,000 subcribers and a bi-weekly was only the start of our campaign for a daily. We will have a daily—we MUST have a daily.

Then came May 1st. We were denied the use of Cleveland printing plants. We had to have our paper printed in Dayton, Ohio. This brought a new problem. A PARTY OWNED PRINTING PLANT was now the first essential—in fact, our very existance depended upon owning our own plant. We campaigned for a Printing Press Fund. Reports published weekly have told you of its success.

As soon as we are in a position to purchase a printing plant we will also BE EQUIPPED TO PRINT A DAILY. It is not our intention to buy out-of-date and inerficient machinery. We shall buy the latest improved printing press, which will print 3,500 papers an hour, folded and ready for mailing and sale. Everything we purchase will be MODERN.

To this new campaign, the campaign for a Party Owned Printing Plant, we want every party member and supporter to lend assistance. Yes, we know—there are many other things to do. Debs must be released. Socialist agitation must be carried on. Your local must be supported. But BE A MAN CAPABLE OF DOING MANY THINGS.

RIGHT NOW we call upon you NOT TO FORGET to keep up your efforts to secure subscribers for the OHIO SOCIALIST. Subscriptions have been VERY SLOW lately. Our boosters have taken a well earned rest—that's our interpretation. How about a spurt for this month. Come now—GET BUSY!

A letter from comrade Carl Maurer of Liberty Center, O. states that a showing will be made form unorganized territory in the very near future. He says: we expect to open up on the press fund this week. He also orders five sub cards sent him. Looks like business!

ANOTHER LOCAL DONATES

This time it is Local Robins, O., which donates to the press fund. Has your Local got in its blows yet? 'Bout ime isn't it, comrade.

POET OPENS UP ON PRESS FUND

The O. S. needs your money
To buy that press.
And comrades need their's too,
If we both get ours
It will sure be fine.
But if you get yours
And hold it too,
What in the world
Is the O. S. going to do?
Think it over.

CHAS. HAMES, Toledo, O.

PRESS FUND BOOSTERS SAY-

WILL MAKE SURE OF $1,000 OFFER

''Please find enclosed $5 for the press fund. About one month age I sent in a pledge envelope with one dollar in it, stating that I would pay the balance in four months, making five dollars.

But after reading comrade Brown's offer, I decided to send the full amount rigt away and throw in the one I sent for good measure and make sure of that $1,000 of comrade Brown's

If you should not happen to raise the full amount right away you can expect to hear from me again in the near future.''—W. S. Owens, Columbiana, O.

Letters like the above show that the comrades are surely not going to let the offer of comrade Brown go unchallenged.

DONATION BOX STILL WORKING.

The ''Donation Box'' that Local Zanesville keeps in the headquarters is still on the job catching the stray nickels, dimes and quarters that the comrades can spare. By a decision of the comrades all moneys which flow into this box are to be sent to help pay for the Party press and printing plant.

The third payment was received from this local this week. As you will see by reading in the columns, it amounts to $5.76. A neat little sum, and proves that the Zanesville comrades are doing their share in the meritorious work of getting our own press.

Comrade Frank Conrad, of Hamilton, O., sends in a subscription for comrade Chas Aebi and one fifty for him for the press fund.

From the steel city of Gary, Ind. comes a dandy list containing $6.00 which was secured by our comrade Steve Heinezl.

Every list sent in should be a reminder to other comrades to use this method of securing donations to the press fund. Many, many comrades will readily give for this purpose if asked to, who might delay otherwise. The quicker we get the money the sooner will the Ohio Socialist be printed on its own press. Let's get the price NOW.

PAYS AGAIN AND PLEDGES MORE

A letter from comrade Jas. Dartnall, of Norwood is filled with the spirit that makes great progress in our Movement. Sending a dollar for the press fund and pledging a dollar monthly, he says that he is anxious for the time to come when we shall have a daily and not need to buy the capitalist papers. And we are convinced that a great step will have been taken toward that day when our own press is installed. Help do it comrades as does this comrade.

THE RIGHT SORT OF DYNAMITE.

Sending two dollars for the press fund, comrade Chas F. Leatherman of Wadsworth, O., writes, ''I would urge the comrades to hurry up und not make a long drawn out affair of it. Quick action is needed, so we can get that press busy turning out mental dynamite to jar the workers out of their dreams.''

WHERE IS THIS GUY?

We are still waiting to hear from the comrade who has an argument against the Party owning its own printing plant Presumably we are all for it. Therefore, and we say it with emphasis, SINCE WE ARE ALL FOR IT, LETS DO IT—RIGHT NOW!

Three subs and a dollar for press fund comes from comrade W W. Lusk of Cedar Grove, W. Va.

Comrade A. Van Doesburg, of Holland, Mich. is another comrade who sends in subs as well as press fund money. One sub and two dollars is containing in his letter of recent date.

Mind Your Own Business

By Ruby Herman,
NUMBER ONE
Acting State Secretary of Washington.

Three years' experience in the state office has taught me many things. During the many months in which the responsibility to the affairs of the office has devolved upon me, I have tried, in every way open to me, to pass on the knowledge thus required to the membership—where it belongs. My most serious handicap in this work has been the very thing which, if I were inclined to use it for my own individual ambitious gain, would be the greatest help to me in attaining my selfish ends, namely. THE MENTAL LAZINESS OF THE MEMBERS.

Now this may seem un-called for harshness of terminology; but I am convinced that no other pharse can so well describe it. It is not that the members of our organization are incapable of understanding, for the Socialist party ''rank and file'' contain minds far above the average in almost every way. If this were not true they would hardly have been attracted, so soon, by the Socialist philosophy. How else, then, can one explain the universal ignorance of the affairs of the Organization than by attributing it to the MENTAL LAZINESS OF THE MEMBERS?

It is the business of each member of the Socialist party to provide himself with copies of the state and national constitutions and become familiar with their provisions, yet—Every day brings letters to the state office containing questions, which are clearly answered in our constitutions; and it would require no greater part of their time to look the matter up there than to write the letter, and if they did so they would save postage for not to mention the time of the state both themselves and the state office, not to mention the time of the state secretary. Why don't they do that? Really, doesn't it seem, to you, that they must be afflicted with MENTAL LAZINESS?

Each issue of our paper contains valuable information of the affairs of the organization. I try to overcome the deplorable mental laziness of those for whom the information is prepared by rendering it just as attractive as the nature of the matter will admit of. I am perfectly well aware of the fact that the Roll Call Summaries, the S. E. C. Minutes, in fact all of the official matter even to the announcements, contain, not only valuable information, but real litrary merit; they are ''easy to read.'' But those things savor too much of actual work—of RESPONSIBILITY—hence the average party member ''shies''' like a skittish ''filly'' from anything of that sort; ''just glances over'' the S. E. C, minutes, ''reads the most of'' the Roll Call Summary (with not even a glance at the Roll Call itself!) and hurries past the financial statement as though it were some terrible, infectious disease.

And yet the same members pride themselves upon their ''radicalism,'' and grumble because ''The Socialist Party doesn't seem to be doing anything much.'' WHO IS THE SOCIALIST PARTY? Comrades, it is YOU.

To ''take an interest in the organization'' does not, necessarily, mean that one must FIND FAULT with the work of those who are in official positions. Often a careful investigation will show that these officials are doing wonderfully good conscientious work for the organization, handicapped though they are by the MENTAL LAZINESS OF THE MEMBERS.

Comrades the SOCIALIST PARTY ORGANIZATION belongs to YOU. Its business is YOUR BUSINESS. Its welfare and success depends upon just this—that YOU MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

''You will hear from us again'' says comrade McKinley Toler of Cedar Grove, W. Va. He sends two dollars. We hope to meet him again.

''I am a revolutionary socialist and ready to quit trading with the enemy.'' Thus writes comrade Louis Rohrback of St. Marys, O., and he sends a dollar to prove his words.

Profiteer and Profit-taker

And now it is the food profiteer that has fallen under the ban of public opinion as expressed by the daily press Judging by the amount of newspaper space given the matter, and the number of pronouncements made by the officials (every one a stunch supporter of the principle of profit-taking), some sort of war, real or camouflaged, is to be put across to reduce the ability of the food hogs to extort an "unreasonable" profit from the public who must eat.

If profiteering is stopped in this country short of a revolution or something very akin to it, then we may say that a miracle has been wrought. But our faith in miracles has been in eclipse for some years and our faith in the capitalist upholders of profit-taking to work them has also long ago subsided into a mere memory. Profit-taking and profiteering are divided by an undescernible line of demarkation. Where the first leaves off and the latter begins has long been a source of controversy for those who sought to keep the good ship "profit" from floundering in the seas of popular discontent. The old theological puzzle as to how many human souls could be poised upon the point of a needle is a plain as daylight compared to it.

Consider the stupenduous hoax of the whole diabolical game. Here we have the capitalist system of wealth production based upon profit-taking. Profit-taking in the form of labor exploitation. Profit-taking in every line of human endeavor, pervading every field of man's efforts upon this globe. Below and beneath all man's associations and relations is the ever question of profits. Profit is the first deep laid foundation stone of the capitalist arch and it too, is the key stone as well. Undermine that foundation, disturb it and the whole shebang trembles ready to topple over.

Profiteering is the legitimate child of profit-taking. A logical son of father it is bound to him by every natural tie. Profiteering is profit-taking with a double chance. We can't have one without the other. They go together They're mates wedded for all time and neither God nor man can put them asunder. Twin products of a system based upon profit we shall have them with us as long as we tolerate the system.

Should the proposed war upon the food profiteer realy amount to something and his powers be curbed a bit, what have we gained? We have gained nothing. The profit system still remains. The profit-taker sits firmly in the saddle, ready to swoop down upon "the public" at every opportunity. And he will swoop down and grab off his pound of flesh at every opportunity.

The question for the working-class to decide is: why in the name of common sense should the profit-taking system be tolerated at all? Why should the workers carry upon their backs a system that feeds upon their flesh and blood from cradle to the grave? Why tolerate the possibility of being exploited at all to say nothing of being robbed a bit "extra" for good measure? This is the question before the workers. None other should be allowed to take precedence over it. It is THE question that must me solved—eventually. Let the camouflagers fuss amoung themselves as to how much the game is likely to be "quecered" by a too heavy laying on of the lash of profit-taking, our job is to dump the whole obnoxious mess overboard and to stand up in the world FREE MEN.

Board Members --1919

The Public Schools should well begin the training of our boys and girls for successful leadership and intelligent fellowship. As an institution of such character, they should by all means foster a spirit of "fair play." They should aim to teach the truth. Especially, as a public institution, should they teach the truth with regard to social and industrial conditions and concerning the affairs which involve a discussion of politics and government. A deplorable setting aside of these worthy functions, however, is all too common an ailment.

The remedy? Listen! A new type of members on the Boards of Education will help a great deal. And we Socialists have the "new type" of members that's needed. Let's get our nominations made, and then get busy doing personal work. It ought not be difficult in the least to convince people (the women as well as the men may vote on school issues, in Ohio) of our healthy interest in the Schools and of the fact that our candidates are the ones to be prefrarred in replacing the outgoing Board members this fall.

Just a word, however, concerning the matter of "qualifications"—It is not the duty of any Board member to "run the school". Far from it! Superintendent and teachers are paid (tho, to be sure, their salaries are anything but munificent) for doing that. Never theless, some of the very best informed candidates for places on the Board of Education.

Anyone who is not truly interested in the Schools, or one who does not know school conditions pretty thoroly, has not the proper qualifications and ought not be made a candidate. The fact that others have failed as Board members is no reason for our putting up weak candidates and having them likewise fail. Others have made their reputation a poor one: we have got to make a reputation of any kind. But ours can be altogether good, if we give the schools our best. Let's do it!

Two dozen and a half dead in Chicago race riots. War's aftermath. Now that the negro, having soldiered, has learned how to shoot, he seems to be objecting to some kind of de-man to "put it over" on him. We ma nto "put it over" on him. We make a good guess that he does not at all care to be lynched and burned to death.

The papers are making a big fuss about the high cost of living. Know why? Well, just to keep your nose away from the trail that will lead you to the right solution.

By [illegible]

In an article sent out thru the National Office [illegible] Oneal claims that in our recent Party elections the old National Executive Committee wasn't repudiated at all, at all.

He admits the figures published in the Ohio Socialist as correct, but alleges that "these figures show a VERY SMALL vote in the states as a whole, which confirms the charge that the Left Wing through a campaign of terrorism has driven many party members from the Locals in sheer disgust". In this article he bases his whole argument upon the assertion that the vote was much lower than in other Party referendums and that therefore the fact that the Left Wing received a majority of the votes cast does not mean repudation of the old N. E. C.

Even if it was true that a very small vote was cast in the recent referendums, that would not justify the old N. E. C. in suppressing the referendum results. But it is not true. Let the records speak.

Oneal says:—"This report shows a TOTAL of a little more than 16,000 votes cast for the referendum." The fact is that it shows 20,674 votes for the 26 States included in the Ohio Socialist tabulation. Left Wing candidate John Reed received 16074, and the leading Right Winger Victor Berger, received only 4465, while James Oneal, "our" present International Delegate was "endorsed" by the magnificent total of 1726.

Oneal alleges that the vote was much smaller than is usually recorded in Party elections. The fact is that it is one of the largest ever polled in any party referendum. In the election for N. E. C. one year ago 17310 votes were cast, of which only 10,811 were in the 26 states that we tabulated. This year those same 26 states give 20,674 or nearly TWICE AS MANY as least year.

If the states that have so far suppressed their referendum returns show the same increases as those already tabulated, the vote this year may actually surpass the "high water mark". Here are some figures from the official reports of the National Office: The spirited contest over the St. Louis program brought out 22,345 votes for the majority and 2752 for the minority report, total 25,097. The total vote in the 1917 election to fill a vacancy on the N. E. C. was 17,125. The 1916 referendum to elect International delegates showed only 14,219 Comrades voting. Berger was elected at that time with only 4655 votes.

The highest vote ever cast on any referendum in the Party's history was in 1912 on the question of holding our national convention in Indianapolis instead of Oklahoma City, a little ove 34,000. In that same year John Work received the highest vote ever polled by any individual in the Party, 22,081 against 6440 for J. O. Bentall for National Secretary. When we consider that at that time the Party had about 20,000 more members than at present, and that this year several thousand good standing party members were prevented from voting because reactionary party officials refused them the ballots, we must conclude that actually a larger percentage of our membership voted in this year's referendum elections than ever before.

In view of these facts, what becomes of Oneal's assertions and allegations? I commend these figures to our would-be "historian" James Oneal. Was he ignorant of these facts, or did he deliberately lie in his efforts to defend the defeated and discredited party officialdom and to prejudice the membership against the Left Wing and Revolutionary Socialism?

The fact that he misrepresented so outrageously a fact so easily proved as the above shows how much we must discount other emanations coming from this man, who seems to be the spokesman for the old N. E. C.

Local Coshocton does not mind the warm weather. Subcriptions and an order for dues stamps attest to this. Roy Hall is the financial secretary and he makes it his business to KEEP THEM PAID UP.

A BOOST FROM LITITZ

Many thanks for sample copies of the OHIO SOCIALIST. Judging by these your paper has the right "pep". It has the ring of genuine Socialist paper and is not one of the weak kneed variety often found among the so-called working class papers, the kind that tries to favor all classes.

It is not only a duty, but should be a pleasure for all real Socialists to stand by a paper that has the moral courage to publish the truth about the activities of the former national executive committee, showing their shortcomings, which seem to be numerous, indeed. This committee seems to be getting too big for its breeches and needs toning down badly, It will get it.

Seven Hundred and Seventy-five Million Dollars

Adopt the league of nations, say the peacemakers. It will prevent future wars. And in the next breath they demand larger armies, navies, the latest death dealing implements devised by man. Stupenduous sums, representing the value of millions of men's labor is called for, for the purpose of developing and making ready to hand the dread engines of death for use in future wars. It would seem that the actions of the "leagomaniacs" belie their words as to the benefits for peace which the league of nations promises to shower upon a sorrow stricken world.

On July 2nd, thru Congress, $775,000,000 was appropriated for the coming year's expenses of the army. That's a lot of money to spend uselessly—if the league is all it is claimed. Quite a lot of money—for war, for murder, for destruction, for lies, for graft, for corruption. Quite a lot of money. Let's see what could be done with that huge sum to alleviate some of the miseries that afflict the people of these United States.

We hear a good deal about rent profiteering in this country. There are not enough homes. People are too crowded in the cities. And because of it epidemics are rampant, disease is sown; immorality results and family life is broken up. This $775,000,000 if put toward the erection of decent homes for the people to live in WOULD BUILD 155,000 MODERN HOMES costing $5,000 each. THAT would make for living, not for death.

And then there is the question of illiteracy. Hundreds of thousands of school children are under fed, under clothed, under educated, in this, glorious land of opportunity. If put to the purpose of educating the nation's children so that they would become useful and intelligent citizens of the country and the world, this sum would clothe, feed, and school for one year 1,500,000 of them, figureing the cost at $500 each. That would help some toward making for future peace.

Good roads. Millions of American citizens, the best quality in the country, are shut off from markets, from centers of population, from their neighbors for months at a time for lack of passable roads. How many miles of roads could be built and put in shape for travel with $775.000.000? A good many hundreds of thousands of them. And their building would make farther for the safety of the country and the pride of the citizens in their country than this squandering of millions upon militarism.

There's the question of uncleared land and undrained land in this country that lies by the millions of acres, awaiting the hand of man to put it in tillable shape for homes and farms.

Thousands of young men and women are finding it impossible to think of marriage and a home of their own. Tennatry and its evils are growing by leaps. The nation is becoming a nation of renters, in both city and rural sections. This $775,000,000 would go a long way toward alleviating these conditions. Rightly spent in this direction it would place in the hands of thousands of young men and women now alienated from a deep interest in the country the certainty that they had a stake in the country instead of a mere existence without hope or future before them.

..Yes, we can name several ways in which we think this one year's appropriation for the expenses of the United States army could be better used for the people's good than wantonly squandering it in maintining mad militarism.

Every Socialist Must Respond to the Call of the Revolution. One Way is to Build the Press Fund.

Press fund receipts for the past six days have been something what smaller than usual. However, the big receipts of the last two weeks make up a very healthy average. We should not feel a bit discouraged at the slump this week, probably it was merely a slight lull before another big plunge ahead. No doubt the coming weeks will show that the comrades are still on the firing line showing all the determination of seasoned fighters in their work of establishing a printing plant for the Ohio Socialist.

THESE DAYS CALL FOR SUPREME EFFORTS OF REAL SOCIALISTS

As the weeks fly by the shadow of the coming change can plainly be discerned growing upon the world. Russia, from a doubtful security, both from counter bourgeois revolutions within and military aggression on the part of the allies, has emerged within the past few weeks triumphant over all obstacles. Her Red Army victorious, with every possible effort being made to secure the wellbeing and happiness of her workers, bending every resource of her genius for reconstruction in the face of every sort of heckling of the allies, she is in a more dominant and secure position then ever before. Russia, can not be saved for capitalism. World financiers have ceased counting upon a future exploitation of Russia. The allies fear to keep their soldiers upon Russian soil. Revolution in the home lands looms larger with each rising sun.

England, slow, conservative, cool, methodical England is this moment on the brink of a revolution that will loosen in America all the forces of revolt that now lie dormant and quiet. Wth the greatest strikes ever experienced in England, occuring one after another, and the "triple alliance" now voting upon the question of "direct action" to force the government to a greater consideration of labor's demands, the next few weeks will turn up results directly in line with the progress of the proletarian revolution that is sweeping the entire capitalist world. In the projected upheaval in Great Brittain, there is ground for tremendous rejoicing on the part of American socialists. America will be guided largely by events in England as to the progress of the Great Change.

After two weeks of rumors that Bela Kuhn had been ousted from power in Hungary, it is now admitted that he retains the leadership of the Soviets. From making threats against the Hungarian Soviets implying an invasion of Hungary for the purpose of setting up a (capitalist) democracy, the little gentleman at Paris now beseech Bela Kuhn to set up a "moderate" socialist government instead of a dictatorship of the proletarist. It may safely be said that Hungary is now safe from military aggression of the "democratic" governments of the allies.

And all this means just one thing, comrades; and that is that the proletarian revolution is making enormous advances. It is standing upright and taking giant strides upon a path that encircles the globe.

Truly, it is no time to lay down nor to feel a moment's discouragement. Socialists should feel elated with the progress of our movement. They should resolve to get into a frame of mind that can view these matters in their true ligth. More than that, they should be up and doing their very best to profit by the examples of our European comrades.

To be more specific. There is work for every socialist to do in his immediate vicinity. Socalist sentiment is brewing and thriving in every locality. It should be harnassed and put to work. There is wide spread discontent, even enmity against the capitalist press. Its reputation for untruthfulness is generally recognized.

The ascendancy of the socialist press is just beginning. Its future is all before it. The needs of the immediate future, yes, even the present, demand that every socialist and sympathiser stand loyally by our press and develop it to its fullest powers.

The socialist press justly claims the unquilified support of every comrade. It is your weapon against capitalism—the best you have. You will need it and need it badly in the future. It is needed now as it never has been. Stand by it. Help us sever our dependence upon our enemies for the printing of the millions of papers, leaflets, pamphlets which we MUST print if the day is to be won for industrial democracy.

Let your dollars roll in for our own press. Keep up the gait you have set and the press will soon be at work for socialism and a better day for the working-class. Below are the names of comrades who have contributed to the press fund this past week.

New National Executive Committee Meets

REINSTATE MICHIGAN, MASSACHUSETTS AND SEVEN SUSPENDED LANGUAGE FEDERATIONS—ISSUES STATEMENT TO MEMBERSHIP

The newly elected National Executive Committee met at the Hotel Bradley, Chicago, July 26 and 27th. The actions of the committee were marked by a [illegible] attempt to bring back under the banner of the Socialist Party [illegible], all elements suspended or expelled by the former moderate National Executive Committee, whose term of office ended July 1st.

A statement was issued to the membership upon the present party situation and the coming emergency National Convention. National Executive Secretary, Adolph Germer was requested to attend the sessions of the new committee to turn the national office over to it. This he refused to do, whereupon Alfred Wagenknecht was elected National Executive Secretary temporarily. The new National Executive Committee will, until the national convention takes place, consider the state office of the Socialist Party of Ohio, 3207 Clark ave., Cleveland, Ohio, as national headquarters, from where such essential business as is important between now and the convention, will be transacted.

The first act of the new committee was to canvass the returns of state tabulations sent in by state secretaries upon national referendum "C", 1919, which pertained to the election of a new National Executive Committee and International Delegates. This canvass showed Louis C. Fraina, Edward Lindgren, N. I. Hourwich, C. E. Ruthenberg, Marguerite Prevey, Fred Harwood, Dennis E. Batt, John Keracher, Wm. Bross Lloyd, Dan Hogan, Mary R. Millis, Patrick Nagle, L. E. Katterfeld, Kate Greenhalgh and H. M. Wicks elected National Executive Committee and John Reed, Louis C. Fraina, C. E. Ruthenberg and Alfred Wagenknecht elected as International Delegates.

The minutes in full follow. Every party member is advised to read them carefully and to give the statement to the membership by the new National Executive Committee especial study.

MINUTES OF THE National Executive Committee

The meeting was called to order at the Bradley Hotel, Chicago, at 11 A. M., July 26th.

It was unanimously agreed to elect a committee to visit the National Headquarters at 220 South Ashland Boulevard to request the attendance of National Executive Secretary, Adolph Germer at the meeting and to further request him to turn over the national headquarters to the new National Executive committee.

(A motion was made by L. E. Katterfeld of the committee, several weeks before the date of this meeting, instructing Secretary Germer to call a meeting of the new National Executive Committee. Germer refused to place this motion before the committee. The first meeting of the newly elected committee was subsequently called by agreement of eight of the fifteen committeemen, a majority.)

Fred Harwood, C. E. Ruthenberg, Louis Fraina, L. E. Katterfeld were elected the commitee to visit the national headquarters.

The following letter was addressed to National Executie Secretary Germer:

Chicago, Ill., July 26th, 1919.

Adolph Germer, Executive Sec.
220 Ashland Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrade:—

We, the undersigned members of the National Executive Committee, representing a majority of the Committee consisting of shown to be elected in the recent referendum of the membership, hereby demand that the National Office of the Party be turned over to the Committee and that this committee be recognized as the controlling committee of the Party, as provided by the constitution, and that you meet in session with the committee at 2. P. M. on this date.

Fraternally yours,

(SIGNED)

L. E. KATTERFELD
C. E. RUTHENBERG
LOUIS C. FRAINA
FRED HARWOOD
For the National Executive Committee

To this letter Germer replied as follows:

Chicago, Ill., July 26th, 1919

Louis C. Fraina,
L. E. Katterfeld,
Fred Harwood,
C. E. Ruthenberg.

Dear Comrades:—

Replying to your favor of the 26th inst., ordering me to turn over the National Office to what you term the National Executive Committee, allow me to say that I do not recognize you as controlling committee of the Socialist Party.

On account of the gross and admitted fraud committed in the recent party referendum, the National Executive Committee has ordered the election methods investigated and that the vote be not tabulated. The result of this investigation will be submitted to the National Emergency Convention to be held on Aug. 30th where the properly elected delegates will determine the further course to be pursued.

There is nothing in the constitution that empowers anyone to tabulate the referendum vote for the National office except the National Office itself and any tabulations that have been made are inofficial and cannot be recognized.

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) ADOLPH GERMER,
Executive Secretary.

Emergency National Convention

SOCIALIST PARTY

CONVENES SATURDAY AUG. 30

AT 10 A. M.

Machinists' Union Hall

113 So. Ashland Boulevard CHICAGO, ILL.

Take Van Buren street car west to South Ashland Blvd., or Madison street car west to to Ogden.

This convention will positively take place upon the above date. Postponement is now impossible. The old national executive committee has ceased to function. The national constitution provides that the term of office of this committee SHALL END July 1, 1919. See Article 3, section 3. This former committee can not now longer delay this convention. The new National Executive Committee, which met in Chicago, July 26 and 27, has renewed the call for this convention and now takes full charge. The new National Executive Committee is pledged to obey the mandates of the membership. All delegates should confer with it when reaching Chicago.

SEND ROSTER OF YOUR DELEGATES TO NEW NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

We caution you to PLAY SAFE. Send a roster of delegates elected to attend the national convent on from your state to the recently elected National Executive Committee, 3207 Clark Avenue, Cleveland, O.

Past actions of the old national executive committee have lost them every bit of confidence the membership had in them. We do not now know but what they will attempt to usurp power, even tho the national constitution specifically states that their term ended July 1st. This old committee may attempt to postpone the national convention, or so manipulate it that only those are seated who are fellow-moderates of theirs.

In such case you must make sure that your delegation is protected. It will be protected if a roster of your delegates, together with their full adresses, is sent to the new National Executive Committee, elected by national referendum by the Socialist Party membership.

Remember—as soon as your delegates are elected, send their names and adresses to the National Executive Committee, 3207 Clark ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

APPORTIONMENT OF NATIONAL DELEGATES TO THE AUGUST 30th CONVENTION

The number of delegates apportioned to each state follows: Arkansas 2, California 6, Colorado 2, Connecticut 4, Delaware 1, District of Columbia 1, Illinois 21, Indiana 6, Iowa 3, Kansas 3, Kentucky 2, Maine 2, Maryland 2, Massachusetts 14, Michigan 6, Minnesota 7, Missouri 4, Montana 1, Nebraska 2, New Hampshire 2, New Jersey 9, New York 32, Ohio 16, Oklahoma 6, Oregon 4, Pennsylvania 17, Rhode Island 2, Texas 1, Utah 2, Washington 5, West Virginia 2, Wisconsin 11, Wyoming 2.

LOCALS—HOLD MEETINGS

No method should be overlooked by which money can be secured with which to pay the fare of the 200 delegates who will attend the coming National Convention. Locals in harmony with the new National Executive Committee and its attempt to restore the party to the membership are called upon to hold SPECIAL meetings for the purpose of taking special collections with which to help pay party convention expenses.

A WORD ABOUT NATIONAL CONVENTION ASSESSMENT STAMPS.

Members of the party are asked to make generous purchases of the special assessment stamps, issued to help defray the expenses of the national convention, to be held in Chicago, August 30th.

Do not purchase only one stamp. Buy two, three or four. National conventions cost money. Delegates attending MUST BE ASSURED OF THEIR FARE. Conventions must be paid for by the party, and the party is the membership. The thousands of dollars needed can be easily secured if EVERY member will be liberal in his purchase of assessment stamps. Ask your local or branch secretary about them.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIALIST LEAGUES CALLED UPON FOR HELP

All branches of the Young People's Socialist League are called upon to assist in financing the National Convention.

We know of dozens of leagues which have hundreds of dollars in their treasuries. This money can not be used in a better way than by contributing it to help finance the most important Convention in the party's history.

There are few leagues that uphold moderate Socialism or stand by the moderate former officialdom of the party. Most leagues favor affiliation with the Communist Party of Russia and the Communist Labor Party of Germany. All leagues which are for Lenin Socialism as against Scheidemann Socialism are called upon to send what money they can to the temporary national executive secretary. Help pay for the convention which will make of our party the kind of party you want. Make a contribution. Make a loan. Request your members to donate.

Bundle Orders are Still Growing

Ever try distributing a bundle of Ohio Socialists each week among the unenlightened? Best work you can possibly do for Socialism. You can't expect the workers to endorse socialism if they learn nothing about it. Give them the chance to see the light. Order a bundle of Ohio Socialists for free distribution. A bundle will be sent to you weekly at the rate of only one half cent per copy.

Sending a dollar, comrade Edwin F Ehrendahl of Muskegon, Mich., orders a bndle of ten a week for three months. In most every city and town there is some comrade who sees the necessity of keeping plenty of ammunition on the firing line. Comrade Ehrendahl is one of them.

Helping to reach more Party members with our paper is what comrade Nels Erickson of Sioux City, Ia, is doing. He orders a bundle of ten a week for ten weeks.

Comrade C. E. Styles of Kingsville, Tex., orders a bundle of ten each week. He will use them in his work of organizing a local. Here's hoping to those for each local is or should be at least, an outpost of socialist agitation and prpaganda.

And from Tacoma, Wash., comes an order for 25 copies a week. Comrade Franz Bostrom, former State Secretary of Wash., orders them. Comrade Bostrom writes cheering news. He states that the State is completely left Wing and is with the Left Wing to a man.

Comrade S. B. Cole of Kenova, W. Va., orders a bndle of five copies weekly for several comrades in various parts of the country. Also subscription cards. His entire order amounted to ten dollars. Comrade Cole is always on the firing line ready to do a comrade's full share.

One thousand Ohio Socialists to Battle Creek, Mich., last week. We are beginning to believe that O. S. is a pretty good paper. What say you?

"Debs Goes To Prison." A booklet containing the story of this historical trip. Buy a copy. Read it and you'll want everybody to read it. One copy 25c. Ten or more at 15c. each.

Comrade Karl J. Malmstrom of Moline, Ill. sends us $1.50 for two new ones. He states that he is on the trail of others.

On the Firing Line

Here comes a regular booster. Comrade Edwin Blank of Lima, O. [illegible] hand we see 24 months sub cards all filled out and ready to go on the list. We've grown to expect comrade Blank about ever so often to do something like this and we are seldom disappointed.

Comrade Henry Geiger of Tiffin is responsible for these subscriptions we see, by the sub cards coming in. That's a good start and appreciated very, very much.

Two yearlies from comrade C. H. Werner of Barberton, O., reminds us of the many others lists of subs he has sent us.

Comrade V. Popov distributed 300 copies of the Ohio Socialist at a socialist Picnic in St. Louis, Mo., on July 4th. Three subscriptions from him seems to prove that he kept on working afterward.

Comrade Joe of Shelby, Mich. is at good work again. Five more from him proves it.

Two yearlies from comrade Frank Litz of Sandusky helps along. Comrade Litz is often present with a bunch of subs when the roll is called. A constant booster he.

Down at Havener, N. Mexico lives comrade J. E. Ledbetter. He's a booster for the Ohio Socialist. We can prove it because we have the goods on him. He sent in three yearlies just lately. We take our hat off to him.

Why stop at a year, thinks comrade Alex Van Gundy. He gets subcribers for a year and a half each, and three of them. Of course he's one of our regular hustlers.

Comrade Carl Wolters of Hamilton. Mich. says he hopes to get the paper on Sunday so that he can enjoy the day reading it. We hope he gets it then. Now that we have overcome some of the difficulties in getting it out regularly, comrades will get their papers earlier in the next week.

"I got these (there were four subscriptions) at the celebration on July 4th" writes comrade J. B. West of Mannington, W. Va. Well, if every socialist had celebrated half as much to the same purpose, what a list of readers we would have now!

A tribute to the Little Bolsheviki Club of Ringo, Kans.

Hurrah for the Kansas Bolsheviks! What a fine contrast, these children who make such noble sacrifices and refuse to sell capitalist papers, and those so-called socialists who do not support their own Party press and buy capitalist papers. Shamed by their heroic action. I hereby pledge four dollars more to the Press Fund." W. M. Rieder, Niles, Mich.

Comrade E. Curtis Ilkenhans of Hamilton remits $3 on his weekly pledge.

To help the defender of the working men and women, is the way comrade Vucic of Lorain puts it. His remittance for the Party press is for $2. Thank you comrade Vucic, we appfeciate to your good letter.

THREE REFERENDUMS CALLING YOU.

There are three referendums before the Ohio state membership. All of the BEST members in the state will go to their next local meeting and VOTE. Join the BEST class. You belong there.

PIKNIK—begin right now to make arrangements for a picnic of your local members and friends. Every local that has held a picnic this summer has reported SUCCESS. Get busy, decide when to have it, decide where to have it, get a speaker, place an order for literature, arrange for games and entertainment—ADVERTISE—and the trick is done. NOW!

By the way, if you hold a picnic make sure the financial secretary attends with a goodly supply of dues stamps. No time and place better that at a picnic to induce members to PAY UP.

And Van Buren Township Local greets us with a BIG dues stamp order. H. T. Owens must intend making the rounds and waking them up.

An order for literature from Herbert Knecht calls for an assortment which will give the Gournsey County comrades great choice in reading for weeks to come.

Setting an example that is worthy of emulation by every local in the country is that of Local Masaillou, O. Comrade Nick Weltlich, sends in a list of 21 names of donars totaling $28. which was collected on lists circulated by the comrades. The circulation of the Press Fund Lists should be pushed by every local. Give every one a chance to help.

Proposes to Use Blackjack

Former N. E. C. member Goebel earnestly defends old N. E. C. method.

(Reported verbatim from the N. E. C. meeting).

Katterfeld (protesting against holding up referendum elections):

"But the party constitution prohibits you from interfering with the process of the membership. You have no right to suppress a referendum. You can not do this thing."

Goebel (justifying the N. E. C.):

"Oh, yes we can. It may not be constitutional, but WE'VE GOT THE POWER."

Katterfeld: "You may assume the power here on this Committee, but you CAN'T GET AWAY WITH IT before the membership."

Goebel: "We've been attacked, and I for one propose to use the BLACKJACK."

Katterfeld: "And I for one propose to see to it that every time you use the blackjack it will prove to be a BOOMERANG."

Comrades of the Socialist Party, will you submit to this N. E. C. "blackjack", or will you make it a boomerang to knock these official usurpers off their despotic perch? Arouse every member of every Local and elect delegates to the national convention who will obey the mandates of the membership and recognize the regularly elected national executive committee, which held its first meeting in Chicago, July 26 and 27.

Instruct your delegates to the coming Party Convention to prove once and for all that no little Executive Committee can violate the will of this Pary's membership and GET AWAY WITH IT.

In the Day's News

The British triple alliance of labor has made all England echo with the ery "bring the boys home from Russia." It is generally conceded that England is right now in the throes of a labor revolt.

At 4 P. M. on July 29 the street car men of Chicago went on strike. The papers tell us that the radicals are in control of the union. Wm. D. Quinlan, head of the union and a conservative, who has refused Chicago Socialists the rental of the large street carm men's auditorium was howled down in the union's meeting which declared the strike. He suggested compromising. The street car men's answer was "to hell with the public. Get off the stage before we mob you."

A 50 per cent wage increase is demanded by Cleveland city employes. A 77 per cent increase is demanded by Chicago street car men. Won't be long before they demand the full product of their labor power.

Wilson is stirred by European unrest. Wants signing of treaty hurried. He has admitted to callers that he dreads to pick up the paper in the morning for fear of reading that the climax has been reached, What climax?

Fremont still busy. Inquires about a speaker for August 9th.

An order amounting to $36.40 from Alois Hawelka, Belmont County, proves that we have a few Socialists in the state paying dues. We say this in this manner because sales of dues stamps have been very slow lately. Hot weather is blamed. But state office refuses to admit that most of our members are cold weather Socialists.

"Received your budle. Enclosed find three subs. Will try to get more." Linville Dellinger, Lititz, Pa Ohio comrades, please follow suit. GET SUBS.

Orders for literature keep on pouring from all parts of the country. Quite a number of literature agents have become active and are prosecuting a steady sale of pamphlets. Lay in a stock. Sell them at your local meetings.

Attention Locals

Before circulating lists calling for contributions for one purpose or another, write the state office and secure information as to the nature and legitimacy of these calls for money. Locals and branches, as well as members of the party should not become active in campaigns for funds which do not originate with the party until endorsed by the party.

Be sure to tabulate the ballots on referendums before mailing them to State office. Read directions at bottom of ballot. Then follow them thruout.

Toil is a curse to none but slaves. It is high time that the theological pulpit pounders were forced to stop preaching the foolishly accepted doctrain that toil is a curse placed upon making by an Almighty God, because man had sinned.

READ THIS

The national constitution of the Socialist Party contains the following provision: Article 3, Section 3 (a)—The call for the regular election of members of the National Executive Committee shall be issued on the first day of January, 1918, and on January first of each odd numbered year thereafter. MEMBERS ELECTED IN 1918 SHALL RETIRE JULY 1, 1919.

If the constitution is to be obeyed, then the former national executive committee went out of office on July 1st. The new National Executive Committee, realizing the danger of leaving the national administration in the hands of former executive secretary Germer, has taken over the conduct of the party until the Emergency National Convention, to be held August 30th, convenes. The new National Executive Committee renews the call for this convention, takes full charge of preliminaries and has instructed the temporary national executive secretary to call it to order.

All delegates to this convention should take note of this.

AN OPEN LETTER TO YOU, MR. PRESIDENT--WHAT'S YOUR ANSWER?......

By JOSEPH W. SHARTS

Who was one of counsel for Eugene V. Debs in his trial at Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. President: I do not put this in form of petition for two reasons. One is, I doubt if it will ever reach you on your golden throne in France as you administer democracy to a crouching world. The other is, I do not think there is anything within your gift great enough or small enough for me to accept, since you allowed your underlings to sentence Eugene V. Debs to ten years in a felon's cell.

You were born in Staunton, Virginia, in 1856, Mr. President. Two years later you moved with your family to Augusta, Ga. Your father, Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, became one of the most prominent preachers of the South. And to one who understands historical materialism, this is equivalent to saying, your father (altho originally from Ohio) was a staunch advocate of chattel slavery;—he could not otherwise have retained his pulpit or popularity in the South at that particular time.

When the Slaveholders' Rebellion burst out, and armed rebels marched against the Stars and Stripes, your father, we are informed by your biographer, was a strong upholder of the Confederacy.

If this means anything it means your father, Mr. President, openly advocated and urged the overthrow of the government of the United States, openly encouraged men to take guns and shoot down American soldiers who were defending the Stars and Stripes.

What would that be under the present Espionage Act?

Debs never did that, Mr. President. I sat on the platform when he made that Canton speech and heard every word. He said nothing about the war; he scored the plutocrats and their politicians; the unjust conviction of Tom Mooney, Rose Pastor Stokes, and Kate Richards O'Hare; he dared to defend the I. W. W. from the infamous libels of the capitalist press, and to express his sympathy for the Bolsheviki of Russia. It was for this—not for any incitement to defy the mandates of the government—that he was marked for punishment by your subordinates.

If Gene Debs deserved ten years in prison for what he said about the United States in wartime,—what should your own father have received, Mr. President?

If Mr. Haywood and his hundred I. W. W.'s deserved sentences at ten, fifteen and twenty years at Leavenworth,—where should your father have spent his declining years?

If Mollie Stimer and those other four children were justly given fifteen and twenty years in the slow poison of the penitentiary, for passing handbills in favor of peace—was it just that your father's old age should be spent under the blessed sun, breathing the sweet air of freedom, unscathed by prison stripes?

Speaking of children, Mr. President, you yourself were a boy nine years of age when the war closed. Often and often you must have tossed up your cap and yelled with delight when the soldiers of the Confederacy marched past. Yes, and very boylike, you must have breathed the wish that you, too, could shoulder a gun and march away to kill Yanks.

What sort of offense would that be now, under the Espionage Act? Ask Judge Clayton, or any of these other federal judges or district attorneys who have been so zealously executing upon radicals, what they believe to be your wish.

Among your boyhood recollections, I find, is one of seeing Jefferson Davis riding by, on his way to prison at Fortress Monroe, under guard of federal soldiers.

Jefferson Davis, once Secretary of War and late a U. S. Senator, had become the chief organizer of armed rebellion against the United States; he had labored night and day to put armies in the field to destroy the government of the United States, he and his co-conspirators had caused the death of hundreds of thousands of loyal men.

Compared to the disloyalty of Jefferson Davis, what do you say of the "disloyal" remarks, of acts of Socialists, I. W. W.'s, or anarchists during the recent war?

What was the punishment of Jefferson Davis, this arch-traitor, this arch-rebel? He was confined a few months in Fortress Monroe—and then released. He was never indicted, he was never tried. He was set free!

Compare that magnanimous treatment with your administration's treatment of its critics! Are you not the equal in magnanimity of Andrew Johnson?

Has the government of the United States any reason to regret its magnanimity towards the traitors and rebels? You should know better than I—you lived your boyhood and youth among the Democratic beneficiaries of that magnanimity.

Here in our little city of Dayton lived and flourished during the Civil War a distinguished member, like your father and yourself of the Democratic Party. His name was Clement L. Vallandingham. He, like thousands of other Democrats in the North, did not approve of the war. He particularly disapproved of the Draft Act. And when President Lincoln, in apprehension of armed invasion and an uprising of Northern Democrats of the South, suspended the privilige of the writ of habeas corpus, Mr. Vallandingham denounced it. He spoke at a Democratic rally at Mt. Vernon, Ohio—just as Gene Debs, 56 years later, spoke at a Socialist rally at Canton, Ohio. There was only this difference: Vallandingham openly denounced President Lincoln as a tyrant and usurper—whereas Debs did not criticize you or your war measures at all.

For this Vallandingham was arrested at his First street residence, one night, here at Dayton, and taken to Cincinnati. He was tried, found guilty—and sentenced to be confined during the war!

Compare that with your administration's handling of its present-day critics!

Later President Lincoln, calling him a "wily agitator," commuted this sentence to transportation into the Confederate lines.

Your administration has been trying its hand at deportation lately. We are informed you contemplate shipping away several thousand radicals, snatched suddenly and often secretly from their wives, little ones, and friends, to be sent penniless into other lands across the sea, where many of them will be hung.

Perhaps you feel that Lincoln was too "easy" in dealing with his public opponents.

But now, Mr. President, in calling your attention to these matters I have been stirred by the thought that you, as a student of history, yourself a writer of history, must know that the Iron Heel is an anachronism; is a clumsy makeshift generally discredited ever since Bismarck made his stupendous effort and stupendous failure to crush Socialism in Germany. For every radical you clap into jail you make twenty who feel that such martyrdom is indicative of a great and vital truth. For every radical you deport, you stir up a hundred who recognize in that the typical tactics of czars and despots of all ages and of all lands.

May I not suggest that, with the red wave rolling so tremendously westward from Russia, already inundating Austria, Roumania, Germany, breaking into Italy, into France, into England—and the Allied governments already breathless and bankrupt from the world-war, it might be more statesmanlike, more prudent, more conducive to the health and safety of the capitalist class and middle-class in the perilous days to come, if you were to throw wide open the prison doors and bid all these political prisoners and exiles to come forth where the warm sunlight and fresh breezes may cleanse from their minds the miasma of revenge and hatred.

Crush Foreign Invasion then Unite All Workers is aim of Soviets, says Lenine

RUSSIA WILL PAY DEBTS IF REAL PEACE IS GUARANTEED. 1,000,000,000 FAVOR SOVIET CONSTITUTION.

By EDWARD BING

BUDAPEST.—Premier Lenine today gave his first bona fide interview. He replied by wireless to my questions wirelessed to Moscow from Budapest.

Following are the questions and answers as transmitted by wireless:

Question—What is your political attitude toward the United States and Japan?

Answer—With reference to the United States and Japan, our first political aims are to repel their shameless, criminal, bandit-like invasion of Russia that serves only to enrich their capitalists.

Many times we have offered peace to these states, but they have not even answered, and continue to war upon us, helping Denekin and Kolchak, plundering the Murman and Archangel regions and devastating especially in eastern Siberia, where the Russian peasants offer the most heroic resistance to the brigands of capitalistic Japan and America.

Fear to Publish Bullitt Report.

Our further economic aim is a single fraternal union of workers and toilers of all countries, Japan and the United States included.

Question—Under what conditions would you conclude peace with Kolchak and Mannerheim?

Answer—They have been exposed many times. For example, William Bullitt conduced negotiations with us and with me personally in Moscow in the name of the United States government, also in our letter to Nansen. It is not our fault if the United States and other governments fear to publish these documents and conceal the truth from the people.

I will remind you of one of our fundamental conditions—we are ready to pay all debts to France and other states, provided there will be real peace; namely, paece signed formally and confirmed by the governments of England, France, the United States, Japan and Italy, since Denekin, Kolchak, Mannerheim and others are simply in the hands of the Odessa governments.

Soviet Program Unchanged.

Question—Has the Soviet program undergone reforms or changes since the establishment of your government?

Answer—The Soviet government did not have a reformist governmental program, but a revolutionary one. Reforms are secured from the dominating class while the latter's domination continues; consequently, a reformist program consists generally of many points in detail.

Our revolutionary program consisted generally speaking, of one point—overthrow of the landowners' and capitalists' yoke, wresting the power from them and liberating the working masses from their exploiters.

This program we have never altered. Separately, various measures aiming at the realization of our program have often been subject to alterations, enumeration of which would occupy a colume.

I will point out only one point in our governmental program regarding which there were probably the greatest number of alterations, namely, crushing the resistance of exploiters following the revolution of July 17, 1917.

Did Not Close Capitalist Papers.

We did not even close the capitalist papers, and there was not even talk of terror. We not only freed many Kerenski ministers, but also released Krassboff, who made war. It was only after the capitalist exploiters began developing their resistance that we began to crush their resistance, applying even terror.

It was the proletariat's answer toward such action from the bourgeoisie, just as springs conjointly from the German, English, French, American and Japanese capitalistic efforts to restore exploiters to power in Russia. The Czecho-Slovaks are supported by Anglo-French money, while Mannerheim has German-French funds.

The unsuccessful conspiracy aimed at the surrender of Petrograd by officers was made possible by the Swiss Legation participating in the conspiracy, using English and French capital to employ many Russian employes.

Indorsed by 1,000,000,000 Persons.

Question—What is the real character of the activities which the Russian Soviet government is carrying on in Afghanistan and India, as well as other Mohammedan countries?

Answer—These activities are the same as ours among the non-Russian people within Russia. We made it possible for a lower people to create their autonomous republic within Russia.

We help all independent free development of every nationality to increase and spread, for which we offer the most heroic resistance toward the brigands and capitalists of Japan and the United States.

Our further political aims are to promote knowledge regarding our own Soviet Constitution, which has the misfortune to please more than a billion inhabitants of the earth belonging to the colonial, subjected and oppressed rightless nationalities more than do western European or American constitutions of the bourgeoisie "democratic" states, which try to strengthen the yoke of the few "civilized" capitalistic countries over the hundreds of millions of masses in Asiatic and African colonies.

"Guilty"! with "Mercy"

The trial of Thos. Hammerschmitt, Lotta Burke, Chas. Thiemann, Alfred Welker, Walter Gregory, John Sahn, Frank Reis, Wm. Gruber, Fred Schneider, Philip Rothenbush, A. J. Feldhaus, Arthur Tredtke and Jos. Geier, all Socialists of Cincinnati, on a charge of "conspiracy to defraud" the government by interfering with the draft act, culminated in the federal district court a compromise verdict of "guilty, with mercy."

The jury, with the characteristic carelessness of American juries in dealing out the cards of fate, decided to end a three-hour struggle in the jury-room by "passing the buck" to the judge.

There had been, it is rumored, an almost even decision of opinion at one time, at least upon certain of the defendants. The foreman, a Georgetown Republican editor named Remele, a man of dominating personality, had shown himself from the beginning of the trial prejudiced against the defendants; he had in fact admitted his unfavorable opinions of Socialism and Socialists when examined for jury service, but had insisted he would not let the prejudice interfere with an impartial verdict. Subsequent developments of the trial, however, led the defendants and their lawyers to believe that Remele was not going to keep his word. It was probably due more to Remele's aggressive attitude in the jury room than to any other one cause, that the resistence of the sticklers for a verdict of acquittal was finally broken down to where they agreed to leave it to the tender "mercy" of Judge Hollister.

They wanted to get home; it was near train time; and the jury room was hot.

So they made it "guilty with mercy," although convinced the 13 were not guilty.

It is thus the liberty of indicted Socialists can be lightly juggled with, when they face a jury of reactionary, hide-bound Republicans and Democrats.

The jury was as good a one as could be picked from the 100 names and more on the three venires issued. But the system is so constructed that under no circumstances could a jury favorably inclined towards Socialists is drawn for jury service, it is a mistake approximating a calamity. Two jury commissioners are apointed, one of whom must be a Republican and the other a Democrat, and these two "select" names to be put into the jury box. Such a system is a guaranty that no Socialist will be drawn.

These jurors were average men; they identified "patriotism" with "pro-war" sentiment; only two had received more than a common schooling; but they all, with two exceptions, owned considerable property. Several were farmers with large farms, one was a banker; one a retired merchant; one a veterinary surgeon. Almost without exception they had read nothing about Socialism but what they had seen in the newspapers; only one or two had ever met a live Socialist before.

With all the instinctive aversion of ignorance these 12 men were suddenly called upon to sit in judgement on 13 working people who declared allegiance to Socialism. They were called upon to pass judgement upon the Socialist party activities of those 13 in opposition to the war and to the draft act.

The surprising thing is, that they were able to bring in a recommendation of "mercy"—especially after the closing harangue of District Attorney Bolin, who for three hours appealed to every partisan prejudice and passion.

The bonds of the defendants were continued for the present, pending the motion for new trial and motion in arrest of judgement.

Sentences have not yet been meted out to these 13 Cincinnati Socialists, convicted for being true to themselves and the principles they stand for. Judge Hollister is away on a vacation. When he returns, sometime in September, his "mercy" will be made evident by the sentences he imposes.

An appeal will be taken and Attorney Sharts predicts that this case will be a live issue for another year.

One thousand dollars are needed to further fight for the freedom of the 13 convicted comrades. Members of the Socialist Party are called upon to help up this amount. The state office will soon issue a special circular calling attention to the need for funds.

Socialists Lose Street Fight

The fight of Bellaire, O. socialists for free speech on the streets struck a snag last week in the ruling of Atty. Gen Price, who ruled the referendum petitions circulated against the city ordinance prohibiting public speaking, illegal, and therefore a vote upon the ordinance could not be held this fall.

Atty. Price held that the petitions were illegal because they were not submitted to the auditor as the law provides.

AKRON PLANS MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN.

The first step in planning its municipal campaign was taken by the Socialists of Akron when they rented the largest hall at 550 South Howard street for regular Sundar afternoon campaign meetings.

These meetings will begin in September and many state and out of state speakers will be engaged. The campaign committee also plans to distribute from 1,000 to 10,000 Ohio Socialists weekly.

NEW PHONE FOR OHIO SOCIALIST AND STATE OFFICE.

Comrades desiring to reach the state office of the Socialist Party by telephone are requested to call Harward 3639. This is the new phone number of the state office. It will appear regularly hereafter in the editorial column, above the editorials.

THE DAWN

The down of Labor's day is now more a distant dream.
The soviet world is being built within the old regime;
And being born the golden age of which all thinkers dream.

The Russ has forged the radiant way;
and Europe follows fast behind.
When peace and freedom light the road, who fail to follow but the blind?
And only where the workers rule, fair peace and freedom do we find.

A CAPITALIST COURT

Ding-dong, ding-dong, 'tis the courthouse bell,
A bluff at fine ju[illegible] and work done well;
With solemn demeanor and a brief
exhort,
"God save the state and this honorable court."
The judge takes his bench and lawyers assemble,
And this bold little farce to make people tremble
Is grinding away from early till late Saving the nation for a few of the great.

Belleville Miners Call for General Strike

DEMAND FREEDOM FOR ALL CLASS-WAR PRISONERS AND BUILD WAY FOR SOVIET CONTROL OF INDUSTRY.

A district mass meeting was called by the miners of Nigger Hollow Mines, 1 and 2, located near Belleville in St. Clair County, Ill., Sunday August 3, at Priester's Park, Belleville, Ill. History was made at this meeting for no more progressive unionists exist than these in this vicinity. Two thirds of them kept faith with Mooney and struck for the alloted number of days, beginning July 4th.

Due to the existing "penalty clause" they have now been fined for not going to work. The miners protest against this fine, claiming that their strike for Mooney was not an industrial strike but a political strike and that the United States constitution gave them the "right to petition congress for a redress of grievences." Any joint regulation prescribing penalties which conflicts with the right guaranteed by the United Sattes constitution is null and void, the miners claim.

While this matter was under discussion by the immense mass meeting the labor fakir was given his just dues. One miner defined a labor fakir as one who is not willing to take the medicine he hands out. When the discussion reverted to the responsibility for the penalty clause as between the labor fakir and the mine owner one miner remarked: "I do not care in whose coop the egg was hatched. It was a rotten egg."

After a thoro discussion about four fifths voted to strike. It was then decided not to make this only a local strike but that all miners in the United States be called upon to come out on strike. Socialization of mines was demanded. A better union was one of the essentials to greater success against the coal barons, so the meeting decided. Democratic control and ownership of the tools of production and distribution by the workers was voiced, thereby building the way for the soviet. And a resolution for the immediate freedom of all class war and industrial prisoners was passed.

F. J. Nebgen, county secretary of the Socialist Party, writes that the St. Clair County convention of the Socialist Party was held that same day and that after adjournment the members attended the district mass meeting of the miners, many of the Socialist Party members also being members of the miner's union.

IN THE WEEK'S NEWS.

Haig claims the British army won the war. In Italy the Italian army won the war. In France the French army won the war. In this country our army won the great war. Shall we now have a scrap just to settle this important question of "who won the war?"

Thirty policemen sworn in for special duty resigned because of sympathy with the striking mill workers of Rome, N. Y.

Olaf Finnestad, who was deported from Seattle on the "Red Special" last winter to Ellis Island and then sent to Norway at his own request, reports that he is busy in Socialist agitation work in the land of his birth.

The Kansas City Star is disappointed because the several regiments of soldiers sent to Leavenworth Military Prison to quell the strike of several thousand prisoners did not turn the machine guns upon these unarmed inmates and mow them down.

We are still busy, it seems, trying to stamp out the "red terror" in Russia. Why don't the sentimentalists stick their noses into the "black and white terror" in this country? Our race riots ought to keep them busy "doing good" at home.

Adolph Germer, in a special interview granted the capitalist Christian Science Monitor, states that the Left Wing of the Socialist Party is loosing ground. He claims that the reason the American working class is not ready for the Soviet form of government is because it is too higly paid.

August 3rd dispatches stated that Liverpool, England, was in the grip of a mob. Stores were looted and soldiers called to the scene refused to shoot the rioters. Reading between the lines gives us to understand that this "mob" was composed of starving workers and their families, who even went so far in their desperation as to board American steamers and carry off provisions. Part of the dispatch reads: "After daylight dispersed most of the rioters, children carried on the work of pillage. They rooted about in the dismantled shops and carried off anything that had been overlooked. They climbed thru windows and cut clothes and bodies on jagged glass, but emerged with big parcels of sweetmeats. There was no one on guard and they reaped a rich harvest. They stuffed themselves with candy, and even offered it for sale in the streets." To all of which we can only say—POOR KIDS!

Congressman Fess wants to revive the four-minute speakers plan in order to carry on effective propaganda against the growing [illegible] towards Bolshevism.

What is Socialist Propaganda?

Written for the O. S.
by W. E. REYNOLDS of Michigan

The June issue of the Eye Opener is before me and in it I notice three signed articles by Adolph Germer, National Secretary of the Socialist Party. A signed article by the national secretary ought not to excite a great deal of comment, but since the present secretary took office, how many articles of propaganda nature have you noticed from the pen of National Secretary? All of the articles in the June issue were propaganda articles, but the question of interest to a class conscious proletaire socialist is, were they SOCIALIST propaganda?

No. Most decidedly and decisively, no!

They were evasive, factional, political.

There ARE factions in the socialist party.

There have been factions in the party ever since it was organized as a party. There will be factions in the socialist party, as long as the forces seeking legislative reforms and the forces seeking social revolution are kept together in one organization. Why should we shut our eyes to such an obvious fact?

It would be to the best interests of all concerned to face the issue honestly, fearlessly and squarely and define the different positions, then each may support the party which in his best judgement seems most adapted to the purposes which is sought to be accomplished.

To a revolutionist, familiar with the wages-system, knowing what it is that determines wages, the contents of the Eye-Opener for June, are sufficient proof that a new alignement is absolutely necessary.

The very first or cover page article, "Food for all, but it is held in cold storage by the profiteers!", being given the front cover of the official organ of the party must be taken to represent the National Office's idea of what is good propaganda. The article in question states that the real reason the working people of America can not get "square meals" is because the profiteers have the food in cold storage and have forced the prices so high that wage-earners can not "afford" to buy the food. To a revolutionist, this is not SOCIALIST propanganda at all, but, just plain lies told with a view of misleading the ill-informed.

The fact that vast quantities of food are held in cold storage by big corporations has nothing at all to do with the poverty of the masses. We are fighting, not for cheap food, but for control of the food producing industries. We are fighting, not to lower the prices of the commodities which we need to live; we are fighting for a system which will enbale the producer of commodities to receive the FULL social value of the products of his labor.

There is the key to the whole squabble.

The National Office ignores it. Always has ignored it. Always will ignore it, until people who know something of the socialism of Marx, Engels and other scientific, socialist writers are placed in charge of affairs.

Understand this right. The fight of the revolutionary socialist is not for cheap prices, or higher wages but the the abolition of the entire wages-system. We are not robbed by profiteers, we ARE robbed by the system of selling our labor power upon a competetive market, where our wages are determined by the lowest standard of living the wage-earner can be forced to accept.

This condition of affairs can not be remedied by legislative reform, hence all energies wasted upon such legislative reform, are wasted energies. This condition can be remedied only by a social revolution. If that statement is true, then the ONLY propaganda worth while will be such propaganda as will enable the worker better to understand his class position thus making him more ready and willing to work and fight for the abolition of the wages-system.

In the same Eye Opener, Germer's article entitled "The Left Wing, and How it Handles the Truth", the issue is evaded. If nobody has yet informed him, let us do so now, namely; there are two classes in society, proletaire and bourgeoisie, and their interests are not identical but opposed, and this holds true whether within or without the socialist party. Why does Germer constantly ignore this fact?

In the article referred to, Germer calls the Michigan convention the Keracher Convention. Keracher is amply able to speak for himself, but we just have to remark that, isn't it a fine bunch of sheep-like followers we are over here in Michigan when one man can lead six-thousand of us around however and wherever he chooses? I have more than a suspiciou that if we were that kind of socialists over here the N. O. would not have thrown us out, but have welcomed us with open arms—for Germer and Co. to lead around.

Michigan has had more SYSTEMATIC STUDY CLASS WORK carried on amongst the members of the socialist party than any other state in the union. Possibly that fact may account for the stand that Michigan took, and not the personality of any one man no matter what his name may be. Besides, Keracher is not the only man in Michigan who "tries to see to it that the proper delegates are elected". Any socialist who is a sure enough socialist ought to try to see to it that SOCIALISTS and not humanitarians, pacificists, hole-and-corner-reformers of every kind, are elected delegates.

If only Socialist delegates had been sent to the various delegate conventions, Germer and the despotic seven (plus the invisible two) would never have been elected to positions of high office in the party.

If the time and energies of the party were used in an effort to get the so-called socialists throughout the country to undertsand the principles upon which the socialist movement rests, instead of a will-o-the-wisp chasing after "profiteers" and "food hogs" we could not be so far behind our European Comrades and much nearer the ultimate goal. To get an understanding of those underlying principles, one will fare much better if he studies the works of Marks rather than Germer.

Every socialist should be familiar with the Communist Manifesto by Marx and Engels, because in this book the causes underlying the interplay of social forces are analyzed and explained. One should know "Value, Price and Profit." Not merely know that the book exists, but BE FAMILIAR with its contents. One should know "Socialism, Utopian and Scientific," by Engels.

These books, and articles about these books and articles/embodying the principles embodied in these books and other books of a similar nature, these are socialist propaganda.

What they have Learned by War

GEO. H. PARSONS

The working class of the world have in every age and nation been the world's slaves. They have fought every war, they have produced everything that the masters might revel in luxury, all this they have done yet they are in poverty. They have never yet risen to the dignity of real manhood, nor yet knows the true meaning of life, they have never enjoyed the real blessing of life and freedom.

But now after having struggled through this war for Democracy in degrading murder and slaughter of the working class, a glimmer of class-consciousness has dawned upon them for the first time in all history, at last they are coming to realize their power as a class and to dream of their coming freedom.

The revolutionary movement in Russia and Germany is the concrete expression of their dreams, it is developing the workers into organizations, they have learned to educate and organize themselves, they have learned that no other can do this for them, they have decided to organize for the purpose of overthrowing the despotic power that oppresses them and holds them in bondage.

They have learned by this war that they must cease to be divided into wrangling factions, they have learned to get together regardless of race, natonality or creed, and make a common cause in this great struggle that is destined to shake every monarch from his throne and banish slavery of every form in every country upon earth.

They have learned by this war that they must get together both industrially and politically and be brothers in fact in every country and nation; they have fallen together and they must rise together, that when they stand together united, develop the power of solidarity, only than can they shake off their fetters, rise to manhood and freedom, they then will become the sovrein rulers of the world.

They fought for democracy and got it not. They see their Comrades jailed, they see the heavy hand of despotism. They want free speech, free press and the right of free assemblage. They want universal democracy, not Wall Street democracy, the world is on fire, the revolution is coming. Take warning, you oppressors, your day is coming your doom is sealed, the yoke of bondage must fall from the toiling class, they must have their freedom, they must have the right to live and enjoy the fruits of their toil.

Thru comrade Genevieve Zrn, the comrades of South Slavic Br. No. 11 of Wyandotte, Mich. send a list containing seven dollars. Our South Slavic comrades are among the most generous contributors to the press fund. They KNOW we must have that press to fight our battles. And they act upon that knowledge

"Never too late to do a good deed" writes comrade Joe DeFelippo of Fairmont, W. Va. He sends two dollars for himself and his comrade wife.

Among Locals in other states, none have been more heartily in sympathy with us than Local Bellville, Ill. Several thousand copies of the Ohio Socialist have been sent to this Local in the past and we are in receipt of an order for three thousand copies of this weeks issue. A letter from comrade F. J. Nebgen, County Sec'y contains a ten dollar donation to the press fund. Such generous assistance from comrades out of state simply proves that we MUST get that press, right away.

Another local sent in a fine contribution last week is Local Dola, O. Locals which have not yet gotten started to work on the press fund should take a hint from Local Dola.

Inspiring Notes fom Press Fund Letters.....

OUT AND AT IT AGAIN

Comrade T. E. Bendergrass, of Deming, N. Mex., who has just been released from prison after serving a sentence of several months for alleged anti-war offences, writes us a letter that ought to make every comrade's socialist heart beat a little faster, and fill them to the brim with energy and enthusiasm.

Comrade Pendergrass writes as follows: "There has been no diminution, but an increasy in my revolutionary propensities. Thus again, as ever, has persecution defeated its purpose. I now propose to continue the fight until capitalism is at least arrested and incarcerated—it has already been tried and convicted. Strange to say, I am drawing a pension from the capitalistic government—a result of a former outbreak of foolishness—patriotism. If my young-old friend J. C. Kimmons, of Corono N. Mex., can spare a dollar for the apprehension of the fugitive, capitalism, surely I can spare two dollars of that pension each month so long as it comes or till the press fund is raised, or till have been alloted my six feet of soil. Inclosed find first installment.

Greetings and good cheer to all, especially to those on the inside looking out."

Five dollars and a promise of more comes from comrades Herman Pagel and wife of Newark, O.

A comrade who wishes his name witheld shows how easy it is to get press fund contributions. A list of three names he sends us and the amount is $8. YOU can do as well perhaps. Try it and reap a lot of satisfaction.

Another Local which has sprung into life again is Dover. O. Secretary H. L. Ricker remits $43.05, $35.25 of which is for the press fund. This amount was secured on press fund lists circulated by comrades H. L. and R. C. Ricker and Geo. Krebs.

The ten dollar donation of comrade Wm Stewart of Leetonia, O. which was published in last week's issue surely shows how generous some comrades can be and how clearly they see the necessity of the workers owning their own means of publicity.

Ten dollars comes in from comrade Pauline Graf of Hamilton. This amount was pledged at the state picnic.

MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL

A press is the most important of all. I urge every comrade to dig and dig and then dig some more, and I'll assure you we will get there.—E. W. Doewes, Cincinati, O.

WILL DO MORE

Comrade Jno Jackman of Kent, O remits a dollar for the press fund and says he is sorry that he cannot do more just now but expects to later on.

A second installment, $2 comes from comrade Bojin Gligoroff, of Zanesville, O. Like many other comrades he watches the progress of the press fund.

The comrades of Columbus, O. are showing a very determined effort to boost the press fund away up. From the Local comes a donation of $15 and from the German Br. $5. Thanks, comrades of Columbus.

Comrade K. W. Boring of Wellsville, O. remits 8 dollars. Three are his pledge for August, four for comrade Paul Mikulin of Vanport, Pa. for the press fund and a years sub. That makes a dandy little sum. Some booster, comrade Boring and comrade Mikulin comes a close second.

Eugene Bogg of North College, Hill, O., is not a Party member, but that does not prevent him from giving a dollar to the press fund. Such good socialists outside the Party shows there is still plenty of good material waiting for the little red card.

State Secretary Dillon of New Mex. gives a dollar and pledges seven more. He wishes us good luck.

-Now Then- To the Front

The first offensive in the big drive to FREE DEBS and ALL political prisoners is on.

NOW THEN—TO THE FRONT!

Mails going out of Cleveland are loaded down with calls to action.

We are mobilizing and army of 15,000 LIBERATORS.

We are placing before each of these prospective soldiers who will participate in the campaign to FREE DEBS an opportunity such as comes only once in a life-time.

Your name will be revered by your children and all children of men IF YOU SHOW THE COURAGE NEEDED TO PLACE YOURSELF ON THE SIDE OF DEBS. GO OUT TO YOUR FRIENDS AND FELLOW WORKERS AND REQUEST THEIR ASSISTANCE in this fight to liberate the champion of American workers and his prison mates.

A contribution list has been sent you. You are one of the 15,000 addressed. Begin your DUTY AT ONCE. Send for another list as soon as the first one is filled with generous donations. Never say quits until the LIBERATION FUND contains enough thousands of dollars to make the haters of Debs understand that we mean business.

NOW THEN—UP AND AT IT!

Debs Goes to Prison

By DAVID KARSNER

"I suppose you are going up to say good-by to him before he goes."

"Oh, 'Gene Debs never goes out of Terry Hut but what he comes by this shanty and yells in, 'So long Bob, see you again.' He'll come by here to-night before he goes away. He won't be gone long, I'll bet."

That night just before train time, 'Gene Debs, his brother, Theodore, and I, were walking slowly to the station from Debs' home.

"Just a minute, boys," said Debs. "I want to stop at that shanty over there and say 'so lon' to Bob."

Strolling down Seventh street towards the center of the city's heart (Wabash avenue) an elderly man hove into sight. He looked to me as though he might be a retired wage worker, too old now, maybe, to work at whatever had been his trade. A butt of a cigar was gripped between his teeth, and a battered light felt hat dipped over one eye. His clothes hung upon his slender frame in a manner resembling nothing so much as a scarecrow's. I put the same questions to him. With some show of city pride after the manner of an elder citizen who has a speaking acquintance with all the local celebrities, my friend owned that he knew 'Gene Debs very well.

"I once worked for him," he vouchsafed, swelling up just a little. I asked what he had done for Debs.

"Oh, I tinkered round his porch and painted her up. Well, so 'Gene is leaving Terry Hut to-night for prison! Well, I'll be damned. That's tough, ain't it? Well, now, there was Don Roberts! Don laid these bricks in this street. Yes sir, he paved all this street you see here, and what did he get for it? Why, he got six years, that's what he got for it. Six years. Times ain't changed none, the more you do for people the more they soak you. Ain't it so? Yes, sir, Don Roberts 'done' six years at the 'pen.' That's what he got for paving these streets."

I now remembered that Don Roberts had been the mayor of the city some while back and was involved in, or said to be, in a graft scandal. He had served his term.

"What does Mr. Roberts think of 'Gene Debs?" I inquired.

"Fingers and toes with him," replied the old fellow. "You'll find Don down ther standing 'round the Terry Hut House, they all stand 'round there Saturday afternoons. Now I'll bet you anything that when 'Gene Debs come out of prison he and Don'll be thicker than ever."

"Do you know", I said, "some day Terre Haute will honor itself by erecting a huge monument to the memory of Debs?"

"Well, I dont know. Now we ain't much on monuments in Terru Hut. Did you see the Soldiers and Sailors monument down there in the park on your way up. Ain't that a hell of a looking thing? No, we don't go in much for monuments here in Terry Hut. This is a frontier town. We used to be wide open here, everything in full blast. By the way, mister, where do you come from?" I told him I had just arrived from New York. His eyes opened wider and he took a little gasp.

"Well, that must be a great city, eh? Wide open, I guess. What kind of politics have you got down there now?" I told him Tammany controlled the city.

"Oh! Wide open town, eh?" No, I said, the politicians were trying to make some show of respectability.

"Just like it is here in Terry Hut," he said with disgust.

"Well, you'll see Don down there hanging 'round the Terry Hut House. He'll tell you all you want to know about 'Gene Debs. I'll just go 'round and say good-by to 'Gene before he goes." The old wage worker slowly ambled off toward Debs' home to take his parting farewell.

Down at the Terre Haute House some leading citizens and politicians were standing in groups out on the pavement. Several iron rods that were holding up the awning that extended to the curb were bent in just about up to a man's shoulder, and several leading citizens were settled snugly against them. I went in the bar. It was crowded.

The man next to me was drinking slowly from a glass of beer. He wore striped trousers that were frayed at the heels, and a black coat that was green and shiny in the back and elbows. A greenish black braid ran all around it and on the cuffs. A high piccadilly collar with soiled flaps pinched his neck. He had a professional air about him.

We struck up a conversation about 'Gene Debs.

"Well, I should say I do know him! For twenty years, sir."

"What does Terre Haute think about Debs going to prison?" I ventured.

"Well, now, speaking for myself," he began, "I have known Debs for many years. I like him personally, but he's certainly got some cranky notions in his head." He gulped down the rest of his beer and ordered another.

"I'll tell you, I hope Debs goes to prison, and I hope he s-e-r-v-e-s—twenty-four hours." I was surprised.

"But why the twenty-four hours?"

"Just to prove to him and his followers that the law is bigger than he is." Some one nudged the doctor's arm and they strolled away to a stall in the bar room.

At the Terre Haute Tribune office I interviewed Mr. House, the city editor.

"Everybody in Terre Haute loves Debs," he said with feeling, "but many think he was mighty foolish to make that speech when he did. He had no right to do that. I guess the feeling in Terre Haute about Debs is somethink like this. Ninety-five per cent of the people here don't like his ideas, but they worship the man. They all love him. But there probably is not one man or woman in that ninety-five per cent but who would go to jail for 'Gene Debs if they could."

Further down on Wabash avenue where 'Gene and Theodore have their offices I came up to the janitor of the building.

"'Gene Debs ain't been here today," he said. "He's going to prison to-day. Didn't you see it in the papers? He'll be back soon, though, I guess." The last expression rang true with sincerity and hope for the future of Debs.

"I am not going to prison, but to victory," said Debs to me just before I left him in the afternoon.

In spite of the fact that on Saturday afternoon a committee representing the Terre Haute local of the Socialist Party and a delegation from the Terre Haute Central Labor Union called on him to get his permission to hold a demonstration that night, which Debs would not permit, there were at the Big Four railroad station more than 200 of the old guard, the faithful Comrades who would not let their 'Gene go away from them without a farewell and a last handshake.

Shortly after 9 o'clock Saturday night I went to the Debs home on 8th street, near Sycamore. Lights were shining throug the side windows of his sitting room. For some minutes I sat on the porch, not wishing to intrude before the moment Debs had requested me to come. Persons coming from the movies passed his home, and each said something in inaudible tones. Frequently I heard people say, "There is 'Gene Debs' home. They are taking him away to-night."

In the sitting room, furnished like any ordinary American home, sat Debs in an ample rocking chair, smoking a cigar. He might have just returned from a campaign trip. There was good nature everywhere, and Debs seemed to be the one least affected by the ordeal through which he was to pass in the few hours and days to come. Around him sat his brother, Theodore, Mrs. Debs, Arthur Bauer and Mrs. Bauer and daugter, Mrs. Debs' mother and one or two neighbors. On a table was placed a huge bunch of American Beauty roses. Mrs Flynn, an old washer-woman, had bought them out of the hard earned money received for washing clothes of the neighborhood.

Debs saw me looking at the flowers. He told me something about Mrs. Flynn.

"She is a Catholic," said Debs, "and every morning for many years she has prayed for me." The great and simple man blew a ring of smoke and smiled rather sadly.

"The back of the house resembles a horticultural hall," said Mrs. Debs, as she showed me the myriad flowers that had been brought to the house all day and evening. They were the gifts of Debs' neighbors, many of whom do not share his ideas, but who worshiped the man.

"Right up the street", said Debs, "lives a rich overall manufacturer. He has a big factory. Of course, he doesn't like the things I say about capitalism, and does not sympathize in any way with our views, but he is a splendid neighbor and was here to-day to say good-by."

"Over in that corner house," Debs moved from his chair and, going to the window, pointed across the street, "live the two Douglas girls, with their mother. Those girls have wept all day because I am going to prison." All the while Debs spoke impersonally. He might have been speaking of Bill Haywood or Emma Goldman, or any other individual in hard luck, yet loved by his fellow man.

"Well, Eugene, we had better start," said Mrs. Debs, rising to go.

"Yes, we don't want to miss our train," replied Debs, rising.

Theodore, who has been closer than a brother to Eugene, like Jonathan to David, went to the hat rack and helped 'Gene with his coat. Mrs. Debs' aged mother was weeping softly. 'Gene went over to her and patted her cheek. "It is all right, mother," he said with infinite tenderness, "it will come out all right in the end."

In front of the house there was an automobile to take the party to the station. Debs said he would rather walk, so Theodore and myself escorted him. It was five minutes' walk. Gathered on the sidewalk in front of the depot was the faithful old guard. They were miners, factory workers, some well dressed business men, all together there on the street, scarcely lighted, all talking and feeling in their hearts a sorrow which they could not fully express. 'Gene strolled right into the crowd. Instantly he was surrounded by a large group. Those who could not edge their way right up to Debs reached over the heads of the more fortunate ones and clutched at the coat sleeves.

Debs went from one to the other, speaking words of love and cheer. They represented, typically so, the great American labor movement. They were the ones who would gladly have gone to prison to serve Debs' sentence for him.

One big raw-boned miner worked through the crowd. He trust his gnarled hand into that of Debs' and tears flowed freely from his eyes. "We're with you, 'Gene," he sobbed, "by God, we're with you to the last man."

"I know it," said Debs, patting his cheek; "until the last drop we'll stand together, all of us. You know only by standing together can we win. You boys take care of the outside and I'll take care of the inside."

"Debs Goes to Prison" can be had for 25c in phamphlet form.—Order of Socialist Party of Ohio, 3207 Clark Ave, Cleveland, O.

NEED OF STRAIGHT THINKING

An editorial in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of August 6th, entitled "Time for Straight Thinking" is a ludicrous example of the sort of 'straight thinking' that is done for the workers by capitalist hirelings and peddled to the workers daily in the press.

"America is in the midst of events so fraught with momentous possibilities that it behoves every one to take a firm grip on his judgement lest it go dangerously astray"—is the first three lines of this editorial. Having thought in a straight line thus far, the writer proceeds to flounder in a maze of exceedingly crooked lanes of reasoning.

Continuing, he says "There is nothing fundamentally unsound in conditions as they exist." The necessity for 'adjustments', he states are uquestionably in order.

So we have it from the hand of our master's hired men of the press. Of course no one is a sane state of mind supposes such editorial piffle is intended for the consumption of any except the workers. Editors of capitalist papers hold their jobs thru their ability to color the news of the day and to write such twaddle as this for the benefit of wages slaves. The bosses don't need such advise and counsel. They know their interests. They know that things as they are perfectly satisfactory to them.

"Nothing fundamentally unsound in conditions as they exist". No indeed, a mere "adjustment" is all that is needed. Let's take a little survey of America today and see if mere adjustmnts will remedy the evils that exist.'

Today, there are 100 strikes on in New York City alone and in almost every industrial center there are from one to ten. The number is growing daily.

Today, there are 5,000,000 underfed school children in the country.

Today, the entire stocks of food of the nation are held in the grip of giant corporations for speculation against the needs of the people.

We have just passed thru two of the most serious race wars in our history and the end is not yet.

Twenty-five hundred political prisoners are held in the capitalist bastiles, while daily the number of those demanding their release grows—and their demands fall upon deaf ears.

Capital and labor are girding on the armour of a coming conflict that shall make all previous one seem like a Sunday school picnic in comparison.

....All the necessities of life and happiness in this country are held by a small class of capitalist dictators who release them only at extortionate profits.

For twenty years the attempt has been made to curb the power of the robber class to exploit the people. Well meaning reformers of every hue have attempted by mere 'adjustments' to prevent and to break the hold of corporate greed. They have failed. Absolutely and utterly failed. Greater and greater combinations of capital have grown each year until today we have reached the point where revolution must take place of 'adjustments' that fail.

The need is for entirely different deal. The things which the people need, the people must control. All power of the capitalist class to exploit the people must be taken from them. All machinery of production and all natural resources must be placed in the hands of the producers for their use and enjoyment. In short, the world for the workers is the need of the day and that need must and will be fulfilled before the restless currnts of social life are stilled. No 'adjustments' are possible. Revolution alone, will satisfy the people.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

They are still in jail. Debs, Kate O'Hare and hundreds of other class was prisoners.

Why? There is just one answer. Because the democratic officials, meaning President Wilson and his advisers want them there. No possible excuse exists for their remaining longer in prison. No good cause is served thereby, no ends of justice or security are advanced.

It is within the power of President Wilson to set them free whenever he wishes. True, Wall Street has spoke. It has stated plainly that any consideration shown Debs would be looked upon as bearish upon the situation. Wall Street considers Debs a bad labor leader. And so he is for Wall Street.

Perhaps President Wilson has heard the voice of Wall Street. Perhaps he does not dare to act against its spoken will. Perhaps he feels that Debs ought to be set free, but lacks the courage to say the word.

This is the feeling that is developing in the country. Whether is is true or not, it is gaining headway. There is but one way in which it can be satisfactorily disclamed. That is for President Wilson to say the word that shall swing open the prison doors.

It will require courage to do that, we are aware—in the face of Wall Street. Has Mr. Wilson the courage? The responsibility for Debs remaining in jail is upon Mr. Wilson's shoulders.

A HEALTHY SIGN.

One of the healthiest signs of the times is the inclination of large groups of labor to break the leading strings that bind them to their 'leaders'. In a number of instances the rank and file have broken with their officials and walked out on strike without the consent of the union officials. Its and old story of union officials holding the members in check, attempting to keep them in leash. Lately it seems the rank and file are growing weary of their burdens and attempt to cut themselves clear at the first opportunity.

It's a healthy sign. It means that the workers are learning to do their own thinking independent of their officials who in many instances are out of touch with the workers. Of course the bosses howl about the sacredness of contracts etc. To our minds, the welfare of the worker is a damned sight more sacred than any contracts with his exploiter. The boss naturally wants several months notice of a coming strike, so he can prepare to defeat it. Of course he will feel peeved if his workers fail to give him advance notice.

Also there is a lesson in these manifestations which is clearly discernible. Conditions for the worker are becoming unbearable. Labor is growing desperate. The dilatory methods of the usual run of union officials are growing obnoxious. The rank and file are learning what they want and they choose the shortest cut to it.

STILL TIME

Don't miss hitting sledge hammer blows at capitalism by failing to place a municipal ticket in the field. There is still time. Every Ohio Local should make a campaign this fall such as will make it feared by all retainers of the master class.

Tom Clifford adressed a mass meeting at Steubenville last Sunday, held under the direction of the Russian branch.

$20.25 literature order from Moline, Ill., attests to the popularity of the Ohio movement.

H. A. Hedden is busy organizing in Minnesota. He is also busy taking subcriptions for the Ohio Socialist.

Local Frement has made a definate application for a speaker. A new local but an exceedingly busy one, is Fremont.

Scott Wilkins spoke for Local Canton at Nimisilla Park last Sunday.

A letter from L. E. Conaway, formerly secretary of Local Crooksville enlivened the days' duties recently. Local Crooksville has been inactive for some months. Comrade Conaway will act as the alarm clock to the sleeping comrades — with plenty of repeats.

"Crimes of the Bolsheviki" still continues a popular pamphlet. Hundreds of them still leaving this office. 20 for a dollar.

But "Debs Goes to Prison" would be just as popular, if the comrades would only try a sample. Send for a copy. Each 25c. Ten or more at 18c. each.

One hundred "Crimes" to E. C. Showers of Mansfield. The only way. Everybody buys them.

Baltimore, Md., enters our hive of busy bees with a substantial literature order.

U. G. [illegible] of Columbus suggests that we cease selling literature at a profit. He wants all literature sold at cost of production. What do you think about it?

Local Findlay is staging a "come back." A. P. Kuhn is laboring diligently to reorganize.

Dues stamps sales are better, thank you. Shows that locals are going after their members in bad standing. Next—your local.

A thousand copies of the Ohio Socialist a week is an order Local Akron contemplates placing with us as soon as they begin the campaign, states John C. Chase.

WRITE THEM TODAY

We have three Ohio comrades in prison. Write them a letter. Send them a postal card. Address them as follows: A. L. Hitchcock, Federal Penitentiary, Atlanta, Ga. A. A. Hennacy, County Jail, Delaware, Ohio. A. Schwartzenfeld, Stark County Workhouse, Canton, Ohio.

E. R. Gebhart of Local Van Buren is making things hot in his community. He has challenged a preacher to debate. In fact he is a perpetual debater and no job of conversion is to large or too small for him to tackle.

The Socialist Party in Springfield has nominated candidates for the City Commission. Springfield workers should vote for workers' candidates. The two workers' candidates are:

Alex Connell.
John A. Rehm.

Polish comrades at Fairpoint and Maynard, O. have just organized locals of six charter members each. All members subscribe for the O. S. for three months each. Good luck to the new locals.

Comrade Anton Zilich, of Bulger, Pa. is responsible for the receipt of two yearlies from that city recently. We hope there are still good prospects for subs there.

With a renewal and also a new one comrade F. D. Lowe makes his regular visit this week. His chief stamping grounds appear to be Buena Vista and Riverside, Va.

Comrade Geo. H. Shepp of E. Liverpool, O. keeps the comrades on the mailing list. Two is the number this week.

Comrade Steckel of Tiffin remits four dollars and a half for subs this week. Comrade Steckel is always at it.

Local Neffs, O. takes in five new members who now receive the O. S. for a regular weekly visitor.

Max Hauswalt of Joliet, Ill., former Clevelander, remits $3.50 for four subs. Our Joliet list is growing very satisfactorily.

Comrade M. J. Courtney keeps our Penns Creek, Pa. list growing. This is a new town on our list and we are proud of the start we have made.

And still another new town on our list is Phelps, Wis. Thanks to comrade Matt Sallman two subs starts us up in business in this city.

Comrade Geo. F. Parson sends in two subs from Beckley, W. Va.

Comrade Paul Luhn of Cincinnati, O. sends in three subs for a half year each.

Now we know what's going to happen. Comrade A. C. Holloway of Akron remits ten dollars for as many yearly sub. cards. Of course they are for sale to the unlightened. Comrade Holloway will see to that.

In the Trenches

Comrade [illegible] is again at the front with a list of five subs.

Twelve yearlies from comrade D. D. Harper of Huntington, W. Va. causes us to sit up and take notice that some comrades are still popping away with the same vigor as ever. They are to help get the capitalist goat, he says.

Comrade Mrs. W. P. Calkins of Weed, N. Mex., sends another sub for 6 months. She states that one at a time seems to be her limit but she never lets a prospect pass without a challenge Sticking to it always wins in the end.

Two yearlies from comrade C. C. Bazard of Youngstown, O., shows he is keeping up a constant fire upon the enemy lines.

Comrade O. C. Whitehead of Wabash, Ind sends in a dollar for a years trial of the O. S. We hope he likes the first dose.

The Ohio Socialist will be a weekly visitor to the headquarters of the So. Slavic Br. at Greensburg, Pa. hereafter.

After reading the O. S. for 6 months comrade Fred Meyer of Lorain renews and sends another new one. Good scheme. Try it comrade.

Comrade Mary Miller of Columbus, O. sends in two half yearlies.

A trial sub is what comrade Geo. A. Prindle of Hermiston, Ore. requests. We accept the challenge.

Again we welcome comrade J. Rehm of Springfield, O. Two yearlies for him.

Another booster at Springfield is comrade F. O. Mechlin. One yearly adds another to his record.

Comrade Daniel Birgers of Chicago joins the Boosters. Three new ones is his first effort in behalf of the O. S. We invite him to keep up the pace.

Two subs from Ft. Dodge, Ia. this week. Nothing pleases us as much as breaking into a new town. We hope our readers there, comrades Jordison and Gradara, will help the list to grow in their town.

Comrades Frank of Beardstown, Ill. are to hand with two yearlies.

Another new town on our list is Dalbo, Minn. Comrade Mrs. Swan Anderson is responsible for this. She sends in two yearly subs as a start.

Comes again a booster who is never at it. He's comrade Alex Sherbin if Sun. Va. Three yearlies makes us warm to this place.

Comrade Edwin Blank is on the job again. Eight half yearlies keeps the rust from gathering on his record.

Comrade Mary G. Waters of E. Liverpool, O., sends in five new ones.

We have received more single subscriptions of late weeks than usual. Just why, we can't say, but it proves that when a copy of the Ohio Socialist falls into new hands it results in a new reader. So we say to our boosters, keep up the work of passing around the O. S. Show it to those who are not readers. Then get their subs. Eventually they must get acquinted with socialism. Why not now? Yes, why not BETTER now?

Mind Your Own Business

By [illegible]

No. II.

The article printed under this head in the last issue has caused much comment—of which I am exceedingly glad. The only adverse criticism was to the effect that the "title was too abrupt and severe." Well, I have always found that a sleeping person is more readily aroused by an abrupt noise than by soft soothing sound of a slumber song. Moreover, the title says just what is means—MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

To all members of the Socialist Organization the SOCIALIST MOVEMENT is—or should be!— the main business of life. And it must be regarded as BUSINESS. Too many are prone to regard it as an agreeable substitute for what we are pleased to term "religion;" a sort of pleasurable, emotional exaltation to be indulged in on stated occasions. And when the euthusiasm generated by a particularly appealing speech or article "wears off" they lapse into inactivity until the next dose of stimulant is administrated.

Any organization, even that of the most primitive form of church organization, must maintain some sort of machinery of organization. To do this requires the sustaining force of human energy. The application of this force must be in time labor,—and that which, at present, to a certain extent represents both—money.

Read that over again: Time, Labor and Money. And this sustaining force in—a democatic—or socialistic organization must be supplied as large a degree as possible, by EACH MEMBER OF THE ORGANIZATION.

One Local of which I know has a nominal, dues paying membership of several dozen—And a business meeting of this Local is considered "fine" if there are as many as EIGHT present! (A quorum is five.) Another Local reports a membership of quite a bit over a hundred—And the average attendance at business meetings is TWELVE; and not more than one fourth of the "goodstanding" membership comes out to a propaganda meeting! And the only time these "Socialists" come out of their lethargy is when some exitement is started right under their noses by some disappointed would-be "boss" accusing some succesful would-be "boss" of having accomplished his purpose of becoming "boss!" Then some smooth one quiets the troubled waters with the old, hullaby,—"It's only a matter of personalities," and they all go back to sleep.

Is there any place for a "boss" in a genuine Socialist Organization?

A Salary Raise

To the members of the Socialist Party of Ohio.

Comrades: In last week's Ohio Socialist appeared an article by the State Secretary informing the membership of the referendum on the State Convention's proceedings. We are told in this article that of the two most important measures to be voted upon, one is the question of raising the State Secretary's salary to $45.00 per week. Now, I think myself that this is an important measure and should be given a most thoro consideration by every member before he votes upon it.

I have discussed this matter with several comrades and the only reasons so far advanced by those who favor the raise, are (1) A mechanic gets as much or more than $45 per week. (2) A man can not support a family on less than this amount.

Let us examine the first reason advanced. The modern union work week is 44 hours. This means that for a mechanic to receive $45 per week, he must get above $1.00 per hour. How many do? Let us see. In the building trades the masons and bricklayers do, but,—they work about eight months in a year. Carpenters get 85 cents and work about the same time. Plumbers get a dollar an hour and more sometimes, but their work is never steady. Machinists are getting 60c to 80 cents. The best electricians, if they work steadily thru the year average more than $45 per week. Printers, who are highly skilled mechanics, only get $35 to $40. Railroad engineers, the aristocracy of the railroad industry, don't average $45 per week without putting in a great deal of overtime, and their lives are in constant jeopardy. It is very evident, when one examines the facts, that it is only the very highest skilled workers who receive an average of $45 per week throout the year. Many may receive it part of the time, but strikes, lockouts, over supply of labor, etc. always cut down the average.

On the other hand a large majority of the Socialist Party members are not more than semiskilled and many are non-skilled workers. They are receiving from twenty to thirty dollars per week. And a large number of them are supporting families, too. If they can support their families on $30 per week and less, why can't the State Secretary support his, on $35. By what law of ethics are the members of the Socialist Party bound to give greater attention to, and feel more solicitude for the family of an official than their own receive.

Again, a well paid, comfortable, officialdom makes for conservation and reaction. An official who feels secure in his employment, whose children are well fed and generally well cared for, NATURALLY loses touch with the rank an file who are constantly worried by all the vexations that harass the life of a wage slave. There is within their lives a constant cause for a desire to overthrow the existing order. Therefore, they remain revolutionary, while their well paid officials become conservative and reactionary, for the fundamental cause, for the desire to change has been removed from their lives. This is the history of all the reactionary unions. It is the history of the Socialist Party of New York, where the organization has been rent asunder by the life and death struggle of the rank and file against the reactionary officialdom. The Algernon Lees and the Morris Hillquits lived and waxed fat on the life blood of the rank and file. They constructed a machine to prevent the rank and file from expressing themselves. This worked for a time, but the Russian Revolution came along and the slumbering membership awoke and found that they were absolutely powerless to function as a revolutionary organization and carry their message to the workers. After seven months of organized fighting against the officialdom they are not yet able to function as they should.

Comrades, take a lesson from the bitter experience of the Socialists of New York. Don't set the precedent by raising the State Secretary's salary. If you raise one official above yourselves, they'll all demand it. Soon you will have built up an officialdom which will be a barrier to your own progress.

Let the reward of your officials be the joy they get from the feeling that they are working for the cause. If they are sincere Socialists, that's all they'll ask. If they're not, we don't want them.

Over in Russia, struggling Russia, where international capitalist imperialism is hurling all of the forces at its command against our comrades who are so bravely strivng to establish the workers' commonwealth, no official, not even Lenine or Trotzky gets more than the man who uses a pick and showel. They could get more but they don't ask it. They are real revolutionists. They mean always to be with the rank and file—to live, to fight, to suffer and die as the masses do. When they sign "Yours in Comradeship" it has a meaning, and that meaning is expressed in their actions.

Is our state secretary worth moer to us than Lenine or Trotzky are to our Russian oComrades? If not, then why should we raise him above ourselves? Comrades, vote against this proposition Cast a vote to keep your officialdom on your level. Cast a vote for a revolutionary organization.

Here's to your wisdom

John W. Marshall.

BY THE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE — SOCIALIST PARTY

This meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party occurs under extraordinary circumstances. Elected by the votes of the membership—overwhelmingly— it is compelled to meet without the co-operation of the old party administration.

The old N. E. C., overwhelmingly repudiated on referendum, usurped power and attempted to prevent the new N. E. C. from functioning. This usurpatory action, together with the expulsion and suspension of more than 35,000 revolutionary comrades from the party, is a desperate move to retain control of the party for moderate, counter-revolutionary Socialism.

The old N. E. C. is dead; it throttled the will of the revolutionary masses in the party; you comrades, must act; we meet simply to provide you the opportunity to act and assert your supremacy.

At this moment of crisis—of crisis in the world Capitalism and of Socialism—action is imperative. Action is imperative against Capitalism and against moderate Socialism in the party.

Your N. E. C., accordingly, acting under mandate of the party membership convened in session at Chicago, July 26-27.

It met to rally our revolutionary forces for the struggle against Capitalism.

It met to rally the party members for the definite assertion of Communist Socialism in the American movement.

It met as a revolutionary N. E. C. expressing the revolutionary sentiments in the party.

Your N. E. C., by unanimous decision of the members in session decided:

1.—To oust National Executive Secretary Germer, who refuses to recognize your N. E. C. as the organ of the party.

2.—To re-instate the expelled State organizations of Michigan and Massachusetts, and the suspended Language Federation restoring to the party, with all rights, more than 35,000 comrades.

3.—To re-organize the Socialist Party as a Communist Party, in harmony with our affiliation with the Communist International.

4.—To call upon the members, regardless of the party-wrecking old N. E. C., to rally to the support of the class war prisoners.

5.—To consider seriously and comprehensively problems of organization shamefully neglected by the old party administrations.

6.—To request the co-operation of the National Council of the Left Wing Section, Socialist Party (and its official organ, "The Revolutionary Age") as an organized expression of the revolutionary sentiments of the party.

7.—To assume full control of the Emergency National Convention on August 30, the old N. E. C. and its executive secretaries leaving no authority to organize or postpone this Convention. We will shortly inform you of the place where the Convention will meet, together with the roster of delegates. Our temporary executive secretary will call the convention to order.

The purpose of the old N. E. C. is to retain control for moderate petty bourgeois Socialism as against the proletarian Socialism of the Left Wing. It sabotaged the election; it expelled and suspended more than 35,000 members (and threatens to expel more) in order to control the Convention. This must be prevented; and your N E C., accordingly, assumes full control of this Convention—the most important in the party's history—in order that it shall actually become an expression of the revolutionary Socialism in party. No postponment of the Convention by the old N. E. C. must be recognized by the party; no pleas of lack of money must be accepted; your N. E. C. assumes full financial responsibility. At this moment of crisis in the world of Capitalism and of Socialism, to abandon the Convention is treason to the revolutionary proletariat.

On the issues of the Convention, your N. E. C. adopts the following declaration:

The movement which culminated in the calling of the Emergency National Convention of August 30 did not have its origin in a conflict over administrative actions of the party executive committee; its origin was a demand by large sections of the party membership for a reformulation of the party tactics and a restatement of its principles in harmony with the revolutionary Socialist practice of the Bolsheviki of Russia.

Local after local, in resolutions and demonstrations urged the National Executive Committee to call a convention, great masses of the membership declared their adherence to the new revolutionary principles, but the National Executive Committee, the representative of moderate Socialism—the Socialism of Scheidemann and Kerensky—acting as self-appointed guardians of this party, refused to accede to the demand of the membership for a convention.

It was only after the membership itself had taken the matter out of the hands of the National Executive Committee and had endorsed the convention by an overwhelming vote, that the convention was finally called.

In their effort to maintain their rule of the party the moderate Socialist of the Party National Executive Committee did not hesitate to disrupt the organization. Members have been expelled and suspended wholesale in order to influence the vote of the referendum election, and to give the old National Executive Committee and moderate Socialism control of the convention and the party. These reactionary and treacherous acts have injected into the present party situation a bitter struggle for control of the party organization and the danger exists that this factional struggle over democracy against autocracy within the organization may overshadow the original purpose of the call for a national convention—to reorganize the Socialist Party of the U. S. on the basis of the Communist Socialism which is sweeping through the ranks of the Proletarian movement of the world and everywhere bringing new inspiration and courage to the workers in their struggle for emancipation. The old National Executive Committee consciously inspired this process by attempting to refer to the convention the controversial questions over administrative actions, which its disruptive tactics engendered.

Recognizing this danger we call upon the membership to elect representatives to the Emergency National Convention, not merely on the basis of settling questions arisen out of the reactionary administrative action of the old National Executive Committee—the issue is not party democracy as against party autocracy, but Revolutionary Socialism against Moderate Socialism—but on the basis of reorganization the party for the achievement of Communist Socialism.

The action of the membership in this question has already been indicated in the overwhelming and all but unanimous endorsement be referendum vote of affiliation with the Communist Party (Bolsheviki) of Russia and the Communist Labor Party (Spartacans) of Germany and other Communist parties of Europe. The work of the Emergency National Convention of August 30, will be to re-organize the Socialist Party on the basis of the Communist Socialist principles and tactics outlined in the declaration of the Communist International. Out of the Emergency National Convention come the Communist Party of the United States.

"To carry out this purpose we adopt the following program:

I.—We re-affirm the call for the Emergency National Convention to be held on August 30, in Chicago, and call upon all party units to send delegates irrespective of any action which the usurping members of the former National Executive Committee may take.

II.—The convention will be held under the direction of this committee and the Executive Secretary elected by it will make up the roster of delegates and will call the convention to order.

III.—We call upon all sections of the party expelled or suspended by the reactionary Executive Committee and re-instated by this committee, to send delegates as provided in the rules [illegible] of party procedure.

IV.—We call upon all party units expelled by state or local organizations to take such action, in accordance with their local rules, as will insure their representation.

The Left Wing is simply the expression of revolutionary Socialism in our party. It is a legitimate movement expressing the mass revolutionary sentiment of the party—legitimately organized to awaken the members to the necessity of Communist Socialism.

The party has, in referendum, (also suppressed by the old N. E. C.) overwhelmingly accepted affiliation with the Communist International.

This acceptance of the Bolshevik-Spartacan Communist International imposes the obligation for transforming the principles and tactics of the Socialist Party in accord with the Communist International—to build the Communist Party of the United States, the constituent elements of which are the revolutionary masses in our party.

You cannot, comrades, brook any compromise of this issue. You must act, and act uncompromisingly as an integral part of the Communist International.

The Communist Party in every nation is rallying the revolutionary proletariat against Capitalism and Imperialism. Hearkening to the inspiration of the Communists of the First International and of the Paris Commune, and answering the call of the Communists of Russia, Hungary and Germany, the Communist Party calls the proletariat to the final struggle.

Comrades, history calls to you! We must challenge Capitalism; we must rally the proletariat for the Communist struggle, in accord with our own conditions.

The Socialist Party is hampered in its activity. But August 30, in the Chicago Convention, will mark the end of the Left Wing controversy. Revolutionary Socialism will control. You will crush the moderates. You will act! You will transform our party into a Communist Party, to express the mass struggle of the proletariat.

Then—action! Then—the revolutionary struggle!

We must go to the proletariat. We must build our movement anew We must get the masses in our party—and answer the Communist call for action.

There are 30,000,000 American wage-workers—the force of potential revolution. Our chief task is to awaken and organize these proletarian masses, wage the working class struggle.

It is our determination—as it is yours, comrades—to act on problems of organization. We shall, as conditions allow, develop and unify our means of action; we shall systematically develop our press under party ownership, establish a party-owned publishing house, a party school for agitators, and a comprehensive lecture bureau. We shall develop the necessary technique to get your call for revolutionary action to the masses of the American proletariat.

The final struggle is coming. Our deeds in the days to come shall proletarian history. Comrades—prepare!

ALFRED WAGENKNECHT,
Executive Secretary Pro. Tem.

Comrade J. W. Sprigg of Weston, W. Va. has hit upon a scheme to make the press fund grow that works both ways. He sells socialist pamphlets and turns the profit into the press fund. Just now he is disposing if the second order of Crimes of the Bolsheviki. Can you beat that? You're invited to try.

Local Seneca County, O. makes remittance of eleven dollars, being the second one from this Local and totalling $27.00 in all. Local Seneca County is using the Press fund lists in the work of collecting funds. Perhaps that is one reason the comrades get such generous lists.

A [illegible]

[illegible] capitalism in the saddle by any means, be it the law, the courts or militarism.

I had been successful and the league was in fine working order. We had the entire Capitalist Press back of us from the big city daily to the smallest country weekly, as well as all the leading magazines from the Saturday Evening Toast and Lady's Home Journal to the Literary Digest. Some we had to pay hard cash to; others saw the point and were patriotic enough to do their duty to themselves free of charge while a few had to be whipped into line by one of the various means at our disposal. I saw to it personally that we had agents in every labor organization as well as in the lodges of secret orders, two of which orders were under our entire control, namely the National Motory Club and the Ancient Order of Hod Carriers.
